We will our youth lead on to higher fields,
And draw no swords but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested.
And everything lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength;
And pause us till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

War. Both which we doubt not but your majesty Shall soon enjoy.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son of Gloster,
Where is the prince your brother?

P. Humph. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

K. Hen. And how accompanied?

P. Humph. I do not know, my lord.

K. Hen. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?

P. Humph. No, my good lord, he is in preservation here.

Cla. What could my lord and father?

K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother? [Thomas; He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thou hast a better place in his affection Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy; And noble offices thou mayst effect Of mediation, after I am dead, Between his greatness and thy other brethren: Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love, Nor lose the good advantage of his grace By seeming cold or careless of his will; For he is gracious if he be observ'd: He hath a tear for pity, and a hand Open as day for melting charity:
Yet notwithstanding, being meens'd, he's fiant; As humours as winter, and as sudden As flaws concealed in the spring of day.

His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd: Chide him for faults, and do it reverently, When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth; But, being moody, give him line and scope, Till that his passions, like a whale on ground, Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends, A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in, That the united vessel of their blood, Mingled with venom of suggestion,—
As, force perforce, the age will pour it in,— Shall never leak, though it do work as strong As aconitum or rash gunpowder.

Cla. I shall observe him with all care and love.

Cla. He is not there to-day: he dines in

K. Hen. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that?

Cla. With Poins, and other his continual followers.

K. Hen. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;
And he, the noble image of my youth, Is overspread with them: therefore my grief
Stretch'd itself beyond the hour of death:
The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape,
In forms imaginary, the unguided days
And rotten times that you shall look upon
When I am sleeping with my ancestors.
For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,
When rage and hot blood are his counsellors
When means and lavish manners meet together,
O, with what wings shall his affections fly
Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay!

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite:
The prince but studies his companions Like a strange tongue; wherein, to gain the language,
'Tis needful that the most immodest word Be look'd upon and learn'd; which once attain'd,
Your highness knows, comes to no further use
But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,
The prince will, in the perfectness of time, Cast off his followers; and their memory Shall as a pattern or a measure live, By which his grace must rate the lives of others, Turning past evils to advantages.

K. Hen. 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb
In the dead carrion,—

Enter Westmoreland.

Who's here? Westmoreland?

West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness

Added to that that I am to deliver! [hand:

Prince John, your son, doth kiss your grace's
Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings, and all,
Are brought to the correction of your law;
There is not now a rebel's sword unsheathed,
But peace puts forth her olive everywhere:
The manner how this action hath been borne
Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular.

K. Hen. O, Westmoreland, thou art a summer bird,
Which ever in the haunch of winter sings
The lifting-up of day. Look, here's more news.

Enter Harcourt.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty.
And, when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of!
The Earl Northumberland and the Lord Bardolph,
With a great pow'r of English and of Scots,
Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown;
The manner and true order of the fight
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?
Will fortune never come with both hands full,
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach, and no food,—
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast,
And takes away the stomach,—such are the rich,
That have abundance, and enjoy it not.
I should rejoice now at this happy news;
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddily:
O me! come near me, now I am much ill.

P. Humph. Comfort, your majesty!
Cla. O my royal father!

West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself, look up.

War. Be patient, princes; you do know,
These fits are with his highness very ordinary.
Send from him, give him air; he'll straight be
No, no: he cannot long hold out these pangs:
The incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the mure, that should confine it in,
So thin, that life looks through, and will break

P. Humph. The people fear me; for they do observe Unfather'd heirs and loathly births of nature:
The seasons change their manners, as the ear
Had found some months asleep, and leapt' them over.

Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb be-
And the old folk, time's dotting chronicles,
Say it did so a little time before
That our great grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died.

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.

P. Humph. This apoplexy will certain be his
K. Hen. I pray you, take me up, and bear me hence

Into some other chamber: softly, pray.

[They convey the King into an inner part of the room, and place him on a bed.

Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room.

K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow:
Here.

Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?
Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

P. Hen. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!
How doth the king?

P. Humph. Exceeding ill.

P. Hen. Heard he the good news yet?
Tell it him.

P. Humph. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.

P. Hen. If he be sick
With joy, he will recover without physic.

War. Not so much noise, my lords;—sweet prince, speak low;
The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.

Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room.
War. Will't please your grace to go along with us?

P. Hen. No; I will sit and watch here by the king.

[Exeunt all but P. HENRY.

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?
O polish'd perturbation! golden care!
That keepest the ports of slumber wide
To many a watchful night!—sleep with it now!
Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet
As he whose brow with homely biggin bound Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!
When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
That sounds with safety. By his gates of breath
There lies a downy feather which stirs not:
Did he suspi're, that light and weightless down
Pe'reforce must move.—My gracious lord! my father!
This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep
That from this golden rigour hath divorc'd
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood.
Which nature, love, and filial tenderness
Shall, O dear father, pay thee plenteously:
My due from thee is this imperial crown,
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me. Lo, here it sits,—

[Putting it on his head.

Which God shall guard: and put the world's whole strength
Into one giant arm, it shall not force
This lineal honour from me: this from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit.

K. Hen. Warwick! Gloster! Clarence!
Re-enter Warwick and the rest.

Cla. Doth the king call?
War. What would your majesty? how fares your grace?
K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone?
Cla. We left the prince my brother here, my liege,
Who undertook to sit and watch by you.
K. Hen. The Prince of Wales! Where is he?
He is not here.
War. This door is open; he is gone this way.
P. Humph. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.
K. Hen. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?
War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.
K. Hen. The prince hath ta'en it hence:— go, seek him out.
Is he so hasty that he doth suppose
My sleep my death?—[hither.
Find him, my Lord of Warwick; chide him
[Exit Warwick.

This part of his conjoins with my disease,
And helps to end me.—See, sons, what things you are!
How quickly nature falls into revolt
When gold becomes her object!
For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleep with thoughts, their brains with care,
Their bones with industry;
For this they have engrossed and pil'd up
The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arts and martial exercises:
When, like the bee, tolling from every flower
The virtuous sweets, [pack'd,
Our thighs with wax, our mouths with honey
We bring it to the hive: and, like the bees,
Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste
Yield his engrossments to the ending father.

Re-enter Warwick.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?
War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,
Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks;
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow,
That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.
K. Hen. But wherefore did he take away
the crown?

Re-enter Prince Henry.

Lo, where he comes.—Come hither to me,
Harry.—
Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.
[Exeunt Clar., P. Humph., Lords, &c.
P. Hen. I never thought to hear you speak again.
K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought:
I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.
Dost thou so hunger for my empty chair
That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine honours
Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee.
Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind
That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.
Thou hast stolen that which, after some few hours,
Were thine without offence; and at my death
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:
Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.
Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,
To stab at half an hour of my life.
What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?
Then, get thee gone, and dig my grave thyself;
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear,
That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.
Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head;
Only compound me with forgotten dust.
Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;
For now a time is come to mock at form:—
Harry the fifth is crown'd:—up, vanity!
Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors,
hence!
And to the English court assemble now,
From every region, apes of idleness! [sum:
Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your
Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,
Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more;
England shall double-gild his treble guilt,— England shall give him office, honour, might;
For the fifth Harry from curl'd license plucks
The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog
Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent.
O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!
When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
O, thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants!

_P. Hen._ O, pardon me, my liege! but for my tears, [Kneeling.]
The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke
Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your crown;
And He that wears the crown immortally
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more Than as your honour and as your renown,
Let me no more from this obedience rise,—
Which my most inward and true duteous spirit
Teacheth,—this prostrate and exterior bended!
God witness with me, when I here came in,
And found no course of breath within your majesty,
How cold it struck my heart! If I do feign
O, let me in my present wildness die,
And never live to show the incredible world
The noble change that I have purpos'd!
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,—
And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,—
I spake unto the crown as having sense, [ing
And thus upbraided it: _The cure on thee depend,
Hath fed upon the body of my father;_
Therefore, thou, best of gold, art worst of gold.
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,
Preserving life in medicine potable; [now'd,
But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most re-Hart eat thy bearer up. Thus, my most royal liege,
Accusing it, I put it on my head,
To try with it,—as with an enemy
That had before my face murder'd my father,—
The quarrel of a true inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with joy,
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did with the least affection of a welcome
Give entertainment to the might of it,
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest vassal is,
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!

_K. Hen._ O my son,
God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou might'st win the more thy father's love,
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it!
Come hither, Harry; sit thou by my bed;
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,
By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways
I met this crown; and I myself know well
How troublesome it sat upon my head:
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation;
For all the soil of the achievement goes
With me into the earth. It seem'd in me
But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand;
And I had many living to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances;
Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed,
Wounding supposed peace; all these bold fears
Thou see'st with peril I have answered;
For all my reign hath been but as a scene
Acting that argument: and now my death
Changes the mode; for what in me was purchas'd,
Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
So thou the garland wear'st successively.
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;
And all my friends, which thou must make thy
friends,
I have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out;
By whose fell working I was first advanc'd,
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displac'd: which to avoid,
I cut them off; and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land,
Lest rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course to busy giddy minds [out,
With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne
May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so,
That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
Now I came by the crown, O God forgive;
And grant it may with thee in true peace live!

_P. Hen._ My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
Then plain and right must my possession be;
Which I with more than with a common pain
'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

_K. Hen._ Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.

_Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Warwick, Lords, and others._

_P. John._ Health, peace and happiness to my royal father!

_K. Hen._ Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John;
But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
From this bare wither'd trunk: upon thy sight,
My worldly business makes a period.—
Where is my Lord of Warwick?

_P. Hen._ My Lord of Warwick!

_K. Hen._ Doth any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?

_War._ 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.

_K. Hen._ Land be to God!—even there my life must end.
It hath been prophesied to me many years, I should not die but in Jerusalem; Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land:— But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie; In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—GLOUCESTERSHIRE. A Hall in Shallow’s House.

Enter Shallow, Falstaff, Bardolph, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night.—What, Davy, I say!
Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow.
Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused.—Why, Davy!

Enter Davy.

Davy. Here, sir.
Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy,—let me see, Davy; let me see,—yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.
Davy. Marry, sir, thus;—those precepts cannot be served: and, again, sir,—shall we sow the headland with wheat?
Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook:—are there no young pigeons?
Davy. Yes, sir,—Here is now the smith’s note for shoeing and plough-irons.
Shal. Let it be cast, and paid.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.
Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had:—and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William’s wages about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?
Shal. He shall answer it.—Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.
Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?
Shal. Yea, Davy, I will use him well: a friend i’ the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.
Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.
Shal. Well conceited, Davy:—about thy business, Davy.
Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.
Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend’s request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.
Shal. Go to; I say, he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come, off with your boots.—Give me your hand, Master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.
Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph:—and welcome, my tall fellow [to the Page].—Come, Sir John.
Fal. I’ll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. [Exit Shallow.] Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exit Bardolph and Page.]

If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermits’ staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men’s spirits and his: they, by observing of him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man: their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants. It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore, let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions,—which is four terms, or two actions,—and he shall laugh without intervallums. O, it is much that a lie with a slight oath, and a jest with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders! O, you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up!

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!
Fal. I come, Master Shallow; I come, Master Shallow. [Exit.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

SCENE II.—Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter, severally, Warwick and the Lord Chief Justice.

War. How now, my lord chief-justice! whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the king? [ended.

War. Exceeding well; his cares are now all

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature;
And to our purposes he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would his majesty had call'd me
with him:
The service that I truly did his life
Hath left me open to all injuries. [you not.

War. Indeed I think the young king loves

Ch. Just. I know he doth not; and do arm my self,
To welcome the condition of the time;
Which cannot look more hideously upon me
Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead
Harry:
O that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen!
How many nobles then should hold their places,
That must strike still to spirits of vile sort!

Ch. Just. O God, I fear all will be overturn'd.

Enter Prince John, Prince Humphrey,
Clarence, Westmoreland, and others.

P. John. Good-morrow, cousin Warwick, good-morrow.

P. Humph., Cla. Good-morrow, cousin.

P. John. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument
Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

P. John. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

P. Humph. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed;
And I dare swear you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow,—it is sure your own.

P. John. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,
You stand in coldest expectation:
I am the sorrier; would 'twere otherwise.

Cla. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair;
Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour.

Led by the impartial conduct of my soul;

And never shall you see that I will beg
A ragged and forestall'd remission.
If truth and upright innocency fail me,
I'll to the king my master that is dead,
And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter King Henry V.

Ch. Just. Good-morrow; and God save your majesty! [majesty,

King. This new and gorgeous garment,
Sits not so easy on me as you think.—
Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear:
This is the English, not the Turkish court;
Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,
But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,
For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you:
Sorrow so royally in you appears
That I will deeply put the fashion on,
And wear it in my heart: why, then, be sad;
But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
Than a joint burden laid upon us all.
For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd,
I'll be your father and your brother too;
Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares:
Yet weep that Harry's dead; and so will I;
But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears,
By number, into hours of happiness.

P. John, &c. We hope no other from your majesty.

King. You all look strangely on me;—and you most; [To the Chief-Justice.

You are, I think, assur'd I love you not.

Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be meazur'd nightly,
Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

King. No!

How might a prince of my great hopes forget
So great indignities you laid upon me?
What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison
The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?
May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your father;
The image of his power lay then in me:
And, in the administration of his law,
While I was busy for the commonwealth,
Your highness pleased to forget my place,
And majesty and power of law and justice,
The image of the king whom I presented,
And struck me in my very seat of judgment;
Whereon, as an offender to your father,
I gave bold way to my authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the garland,
To have a son set your decrees at naught,
To pluck down justice from your awful bench,
To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword
That guards the peace and safety of your person;
Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image,
And mock your workings in a second body.
Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours;
Be now the father, and propose a son;
Hear your own dignity so much profan’d,
See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
Behold yourself so by a son disdain’d;
And then imagine me taking your part,
And, in your power, soft silencing your son.
After this cold consideration, sentence me;
And, as you are a king, speak in your state
What I have done that misbecame my place,
My person, or my liege’s sovereignty.

King. You are right, justice, and you weigh this well;
Therefore still bear the balance and the sword:
And I do wish your honours may increase
Till you do live to see a son of mine
Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
So shall I live to speak my father’s words
Happy am I, that have a man so bold,
That dares do justice on my proper son;
And not less happy, having such a son,
That would deliver up his greatness so
Into the hands of justice.—You did commit me:
For which I do commit into your hand
The unstain’d sword that you have us’d to bear;
With this remembrance,—that you use the same
With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit
As you have done ’gainst me. There is my hand:
You shall be as a father to my youth:
My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear;
And I will stop and humble my intents
To your well-practis’d wise directions.—
And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you;—
My father is gone wild into his grave,
For in his tomb lie my affections;
And with his spirit sadly I survive,
To mock the expectation of the world,
To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
Hath poignantly flow’d in vanity till now:
Now doth it turn, and ebb back to the sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of floods,
And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
Now call we our high court of parliament:
And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
That the great body of our state may go
In equal rank with the best-govern’d nation;
That war or peace, or both at once, may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us;
In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.

[To the Lord Chief Justice.

Our coronation done, we will accite,
As I before remember’d, all our state.
And,—God consigning to my good intents,—
No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say,
God shorten Harry’s happy life one day.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—GLOUCESTERSHIRE. The Garden of Shallow’s House.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Silence, Bar-dolph, the Page, and Davy.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year’s pippin of my own grafting, with a dish of carraways, and so forth:—come, cousin Silence:—and then to bed.

Fal. ’Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beegars all, Sir John:—merry, good sir:—
Spread, Davy; spread, Davy: well said, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John:—by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper:—a good varlet.
Now sit down, now sit down:—come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quoth-a,—we shall Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer,

[Singing.

And praise heaven for the merry year;
When flesh is cheap, and females dear,
And lusty lads roam here and there,
So merrily,
And ever amang so merrily.

Fal. There’s a merry heart!—Good Master Silence, I’ll give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Give Master Bardolph some wine, Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit [seating Bardolph and the Page at another table]; I’ll be with you anon; most sweet sir, sit.—Master Page, good Master Page, sit.—Prologue! What you want in meat, we’ll have in drink. But you must bear: the heart’s all.

[Exit.

Sil. Be merry, Master Bardolph;—and,
my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;—

[Singing.

For women are shrews, both short and tall;
’Tis merry in hall when beards wag all,

And welcome merry shrieve-tide.

Be merry, be merry, &c.

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I? I have been merry twice and once ere now.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.  [ACT V.

Re-enter Davy.

Davy. There is a dish of leather-coats for you.  [Setting them before BARD.

Shal. Davy.—

Davy. Your worship?—I'll be with you straight to BARD.]—A cup of wine, sir?

Sil. A cup of wine that's brisk and fine,

And drink unto the leman mine;

And a merry heart live long-a.

Fal. Well, said, Master Silence.

Sil. And we shall be merry;—now comes in the weet of the night.

1 Health and long life to you, Master Silence.

Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come! [Singing.

I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: if thou waintest anything, and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart.—Welcome, my little tiny thief [to the Page]; and welcome indeed too. I'll drink to Master Bardolph, and to all the cavalories about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,—

Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together,—ha! will you not, Master Bardolph?

Bard. Ye 'a, sir, in a pottle-pot.

Shal. By God's liggens, I thank thee:—the knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that: he will not out; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing: be merry. [Knocking heard.] Look who's at door there, ho! who knocks?

[Exit Davy.

Fal. Why, now you have done me right.

[To Sil., who has drunk a bumper.

Sil. Do me right, [Singing.

And dub me knight: Samingo.

Is't not so?

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why, then, say an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter Davy.

Davy. An it please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court! let him come in.

Enter Pistol

How now, Pistol!

Pist. Sir John, God save you!

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blews no man to good.—Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in the realm.

Sil. By'r lady, I think he be, but Goodman Puff of Barson.

Pist. Puff?

Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!—Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend, And helter-skelter have I rode to thee; And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys, And golden times, and happy news of price.

Fal. I pray thee now, deliver them like a man of this world. [base! Puff. A soutra for the world and worldlings I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Sil. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news? Let King Copheuia know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John, [Singing.

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicon? And shall good news be baffled? Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.

Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why, then, lament, therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir:—if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there is but two ways; either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority.

Pist. Under which king, hezonian? speak, or die.

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the fourth? or fifth?

Shal. Harry the fourth.

Pist. A soutra for thine office!—Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king; Harry the fifth's the man. I speak the truth: When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What! is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak are just.

Bard. O joyful day!

I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.

Pist. What, I do bring good news?

Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed.—Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt; I am fortune's steward. Get on thy boots: we'll ride all night:—O sweet Pistol!—away, Bardolph! [Exit BARDOLPH.]—Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and, withal, devise something to do thyself good.—Boot, boot, Master Shallow: I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man’s horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Happy are they which have been my friends; and woe unto my Lord Chief Justice!

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also! Where is the life that late I led? say they: Why, here it is;—welcome this pleasant day!

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—LONDON. A Street.

Enter Beadle, dragging in Hostess Quickly and Doll Tearsheet.

Host. No, thou arrant knave; I would I might die, that I might have thee hanged: thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

1 Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me; and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her: there hath been a man or two lately killed about her.

Doll. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on; I’ll tell thee what, thou damned tripe-visaged rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou hadst better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain.

Host. O the Lord, that Sir John were come! he would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!

1 Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me; for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat among you.

Doll. I’ll tell thee what, thou thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swung for this,—you blue-bottle rogue, you filthy famished correctioner, if you be not swung, I’ll forswear half-kirtles.

1 Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come. [might!

Host. O God, that right should thus overcome Well, of sufferance comes ease. [a justice.

Doll. Come, you rogue, come; bring me to Host. Ay, come, you starred bloodhounds.

Doll. Goodman death, Goodman bones! Host. Thou atomy, thou!

Doll. Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal.

1 Bead. Very well. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A public Place near Westminster Abbey.

Enter two Grooms, strewing rushes.

1 Groom. More rushes, more rushes.

2 Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.

1 Groom. It will be two o’clock ere they come from the coronation: despatch, despatch.

[Exeunt.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Pistol, Bar- dolph, and the Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace: I will leer upon him, as he comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight.

Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me.—O, if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you [to Shallow]. But ’tis no matter; this poor show doth better: this doth infer the zeal I had to see him,—

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection,—

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion,—

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me,—

Shal. It is most certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else, putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. ’Tis semper idem, for absque hoc nihil est: ’tis all in every part.

Shal. ’Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver, And make thee rage:

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in base durance and contagious prison; Haul’d thither By most mechanical and dirty hand:—[snake, Rouse up revenge from ebodden with fell Alecto’s For Doll is in. Pistol speaks naught but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her.

[Shouts within, and the trumpets sound.

Pist. There roar’d the sea, and trumpet-clanger sounds.

Enter the King and his Train, the Chief-Justice among them.

Fal. God save thy grace, King Hal; my royal Hal!

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy! [man.

King. My lord chief-justice, speak to that vain Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what ’tis you speak? [heart!

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee. my King. I know thee not, old man: fall to thy prayers;
How ill white hairs become a fool and jester! I have long dream'd of such a kind of man, So safe and swell'd, so old, and so profane; But, being awake, I do despise my dream. Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace; Leave gormandizing; know the grave doth gape For thee thrice wider than for other men.—Reply not to me with a fool-born jest: Presume not that I am the thing I was; For God doth know, so shall the world perceive, That I have turn'd away my former self; So will I those that kept me company. When thou dost hear I am as I have been, Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast, This tutor and the feeder of my riots: Tell thou I banish thee, on pain of death,— And I have done the rest of my misleadings,— Not to come near any person by ten mile. For competence of life I will allow you, That lack of means enforce you not to evil: And, as we hear you do reform yourselves, We will, according to your strength and qualities, Give you advancement.—Be it your charge, my lord, To see perform'd the tenor of our word.—Set on. [Exit King and his Train. Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound. Shal. Vea, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me. Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this; I shall be sent for in private to him: look you, he must seem thus to the world: fear not your advancement; I will be the man yet that shall make you great. Shal. I cannot perceive how,—unless you give me your doublet, and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand. Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard was but a colour. [Sir John. Shal. A colour, I fear, that you will die in. Fal. Fear no colours: go with me to dinner. Come, Lieutenant Pistol;—come, Bardolph:—I shall be sent for soon at night. Re-enter Prince John, the Chief-Justice, Officers, &c. Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet; Take all his company along with him. Fal. My lord, my lord,— [you soon.—Ch. Just. I cannot now speak: I will hear Take them away. [contenta. Pist. Se fortuna mi tormenta, lo sparer mi! [Exit Fal., Shal., Pist., Bard., Page and Officers. P. John. I like this fair proceeding of the king's: He hath intent his wonted followers Shall all be very well provided for; But all are banish'd till their conversations Appear more wise and modest to the world. Ch. Just. And so they are. P. John. The king hath call'd his parliament, my lord. Ch. Just. He hath. P. John. I will lay odds that, ere this year expire, We bear our civil swords and native fire As far as France: I heard a bird so sing, Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king. Come, will you hence? [Exit. EPILOGUE.—Spoken by a Dancer. First my fear; then my court'sy; last my speech. My fear is, your displeasure; my court'sy, my duty; and my speech, to beg your pardons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me: for what I have to say is of mine own making; and what, indeed, I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture.—Be it known to you,—as it is very well,—I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it, and to promise you a better. I did mean, indeed, to pay you with this; which, if, like an ill venture, it come un luckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here I promised you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some, and I will pay you some, and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely. If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment,—to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me: if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly. One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for anything I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already he be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good-night; and so kneel down before you;—but, indeed, to pray for the queen.

Chor. O for a Muse of fire, that would ascend The brightest heaven of invention! A kingdom for a stage, princes to act, And monarchs to behold the swelling scene! Then should the warlike Harry, like himself, Assume the port of Mars; and at his heels, Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword, and fire, crouch for employment. But pardon, gentle The flat unraised spirit that hath daud'm On this unworthy scaffold to king forth So great an object: can this cockpit hold The vasty fields of France? or may we cram Within this wooden O the very casques That did affright the air at Agincourt? D, pardon! since a crooked figure may Attest in little place a million; And let us, ciphers to this great account, On your imaginary forces work. Suppose within the girdle of these walls Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies, Whose high upreared and abutting fronts The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder:

Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts: Into a thousand parts divide one man, And make imaginary puissance; [them Think, when we talk of horses, that you see Printing their proud hoofs i' the receiving earth; For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our kings, Carry them here and there; jumping o'er times, Turning the accomplishment of many years Into an hour-glass: for the which supply, Admit me Chorus to this history; Who, prologue-like, your humble patience pray, Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—LONDON. AN INTER-CHAMBER IN THE KING'S PALACE.

Enter the Archibishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Ely.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you,—that self bill is urg'd, reign Which in the eleventh year of the last king's Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
But that the sembling and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question. [now?
Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
We lose the better half of our possession:
For all the temporal lands, which men devout
By testament have given to the church,
Would they strip from us; being valu’d thus,—
As much as would maintain, to the king’s honour,
Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred knights,
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;
And, to relief of lazars and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls past corporal toil,
A hundred alm-s-houses right well supplied;
And to the coffers of the king, beside, [bill.
A thousand pounds, by the year: thus runs the Ely. This would drink deep,
Cant. ’Twould drink the cup and all.
Cant. The king is full of grace and fair princes.
Ely. And a true lover of the holy church.
Cant. The courses of his youth promis’d it not.
The breath no sooner left his father’s body
But that his wildness, mortified in him,
Seem’d to die too: yea, at that very moment,
Consideration, like an angel, came,
And whipp’d the offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his body as a paradise,
To envelop and contain celestial spirits.
Never was such a sudden scholar made;
Nor did the reformation in a flood,
With such a heady current, scouring faults;
Not never Hydra-headed wildness
So soon did lose his seat, and all at once,
As in this king.
Ely. We are blessed in the change.
Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire the king were made a prelate:
Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,
You would say, it hath been all-in-all his study:
Last his discourse of war, and you shall hear
A fearful battle render’d you in music:
Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garder:—that, when he speaks,
The air, a charter’d libertine, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men’s ears,
To steal his sweet and honeyed sentences;
So that the art and practice part of life
Must be the mistress to this theoretic:
[It,
Which is a wonder how his grace should glean
Since his addiction was to courses vain;
His companies unletter’d, rude, and shallow;
His hours fill’d up with riots, banquets, sports;
And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequestration
From open haunts and popularity. [nettle.
Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the
And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best
Neighbour’d by fruit of baser quality:
And so the prince obscure’d his contemplation
Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt,
Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet crescive in his faculty.
Cant. It must be so: for miracles are ceas’d;
And therefore we must needs admit the means
How things are perfected.
Ely. But, my good lord,
How now for mitigation of this bill
Urg’d by the commons? Doth his majesty
Incline to it, or no?
Cant. He seems indifferent;
Or, rather, swaying more upon our part
Than cherishing the exhibitors against us:
For I have made an offer to his majesty,—
Upon our spiritual convocation,
And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open’d to his grace at large,
As touching France,—to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet
Did to his predecessors part withal. [lord?
Ely. How did this offer seem receiv’d, my Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty;
Save that there was not time enough to hear,—
As, I perceive’d, his grace would fain have done,—
The several and unhidden passages
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms,
And, generally, to the crown and seat of France,
Deriv’d from Edward, his great-grandfather.
Ely. What was the impediment that broke this off? [stant
Cant. The French ambassador upon that in-Cra’d audience: and the hour, I think, is come
To give him hearing: is it four o’clock?
Ely. It is.
Cant. Then go we in, to know his embassy;
Which I could, with a ready guess, declare,
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.
Ely. I’ll wait upon you; and I long to hear it. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room of State in the same.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, Bedford, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury?

Exe. Not here in presence.
K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle.
West. Shall we call in the ambassador, my liege? [resolv'd, K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin: we would be
Before we hear him, of some things of weight,
That task our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury and Bishop of Ely.

Cant. God and his angels guard your sacred throne,
And make you long become it!

K. Hen. Sure, we thank you.
My learned lord, we pray you to proceed,
And justly and religiously unfold
Why the law Salique, that they have in France,
Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim:
And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,
That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,
Or nicely charge your understanding soul
With opening titles miscrate, whose right
Suits not in native colours with the truth;
For God doth know how many, now in health,
Shall drop their blood in approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to:
Therefore take heed how you impawn our person,
How you awake the sleeping sword of war:
We charge you, in the name of God, take heed:
For never two such kingdoms did contend
Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless drops
Are every one a woe, a sore complaint
'Gainst him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords
That make such waste in brief mortality.
Under this conjunction, speak, my lord;
For we will hear, note, and believe in heart
That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd
As pure as sin with baptism.

Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign,— and you peers,
That owe yourselves, your lives, and services
To this imperial throne,—There is no bar
To make against your highness' claim to France
But this, which they produce from Pharamond,—

In terram Salicis nulli excitent
No woman shall succeed in Salique land:
Which Salique land the French unjustly gorge
To be the realm of France, and Pharamond
The founder of this law and female bar.
Yet their own authors faithfully affirm
That the land Salique is in Germany,
Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe;
Where Charles the Great, having subdu'd the Saxons,
There left behind and settled certain Franks;
Who, holding in disdain the German women
For some dishonest manners of their life,
Establish'd then this law,—to wit, no female
Should be inheritrix in Salique land:
Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
Is at this day in Germany called Meisen.
Then doth it well appear, the Salique law
Was not devised for the realm of France:
Nor did the French possess the Salique land
Until four hundred one-and-twenty years
After defunct of King Pharamond,

Ily supposed the founder of this law;
Who died within the year of our redemption
Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the Great Subdu'd the Saxons, and did seat the French
Beyond the river Sala, in the year
Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say, King Pepin, which deposed Childeric,
Did, as heir general, being descended
Of Blithild, which was daughter to King
Clothair,
Make claim and title to the crown of France.
Hugh Capet also,—who usurp'd the crown
Of Charles the Duke of Lorraine, sole heir male
Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great,—
To line his title with some show of truth,—
Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,— Convey'd himself as heir to the Lady Liangere,
Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son
To Louis the emperor, and Louis the son
Of Charles the Great. Also King Louis the Tenth,
Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied
That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother,
Was lineal of the Lady Ermengarde,
Daughter to Charles the foresaid Duke of Lorraine:

By the which marriage the line of Charles the
Was re-united to the Crown of France.
So that, as clear as is the summer's sun.
King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim,
King Louis his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female:
So do the kings of France unto this day;
Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law
To bar your highness claiming from the female;
And rather choose to hide them in a net
Than amply to imbar their crooked titles
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

K. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!
For in the book of Numbers is it writ, —
When the man dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord,
Stand for your own; unwind your bloody flag;
Look back unto your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dread lord, to your great-grandsire's tomb,
From whom you claim; invoke his warlike spirit,
And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black Prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France,
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp
Forage in blood of French nobility.
O noble English, that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France,
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work and cold for action! [dead,
ELY. Awake remembrance of these valiant
And with your puissant arm renew their feats:
You are their heir; you sit upon their throne;
The blood and courage that renowned them
Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant liege
Is in the very May-morn of his youth,
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.
EXE. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth
Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood.
WEST. They know your grace hath cause and means and might: —
So hath your highness; never king of England
Had nobles richer and more loyal subjects,
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England,
And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.
CANT. O, let their bodies follow, my dear liege,
With blood and sword and fire to win your right:
In aid whereof we of the spirituality
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors. [French, K. HEN. We must not only arm to invade the
But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages. [reign,
CANT. They of those marches, gracious sove-Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.
K. HEN. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,
But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us;
For you shall read that my great-grandfather
Never went with his forces into France
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulness of his force;
Galling the gleaned land with hot essays,
Girding with grievous siege castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shook and trembled at the in neighbourhood.
CANT. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege;
For hear her but exemplified by herself: —
When all her chivalry hath been in France,
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended,
But taken, and impounded as a stray,
The king of Scots; whom she did send to France,
To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings,
And make her chronicle as rich with praise
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wreck and sunless treasures.
WEST. But there's a saying, very old and true,—
If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin:
For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot
Comes sneaking, and so sucks her princely eggs;
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat,
To tear and havoc more than she can eat.
EXE. It follows, then, the cat must stay at home:
Yet that is but a curs'd necessity,
Since we have locks to safeguard necessaries,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad,
The advised head defends itself at home;
For government, though high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one concent;
Congruing in a full and natural close,
Like music.
CANT. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience: for so work the honey bees;
Creatures that, by a rule in nature, teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king, and officers of sorts:
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home;
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad;
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
To the tent-royal of their emperor:
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold;
The civil citizens kneading up the honey;
Of your great predecessor, King Edward the Third.

In answer of which claim, the prince our master says, that you savour too much of your youth; And bids you be advis'd there's naught in France That can be with a nimble galiard won;—
You cannot revel into dukedoms there.

He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit,
This tum of treasure; and, in lieu of this,
Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim
Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks.

K. Hen. What treasure, uncle?

K. Hen. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us;
His present and your pains we thank you for:
When we have match'd our rakets to these balls,
We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.
Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler
That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With chases. And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them.
We never valu'd this poor seat of England;
And therefore, living hence, did give ourselves To barbarous licence; as 'tis ever common
That men are merriest when they are from home.

But tell the Dauphin, I will keep my state:
Be like a king, and show my sail of greatness,
When I do rouse me in my throne of France:
For that I have laid by my majesty,
And plodded like a man for working-days;
But I will rise there with so full a glory
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,
Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us.

And tell the pleasant prince this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones; and his soul
Shall stand sore charg'd for the wasteful vengeance
That shall fly with them; for many a thousand
Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands;

Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles
And some are yet ungot and unborn [scorn.
That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's
But this lies all within the will of God,
To whom I do appeal; and in whose name,
Tell you the Dauphin, I am coming on,
To venge me as I may, and to put forth
My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause.
So get you hence in peace; and tell the Dauphin
His jest will savour but of shallow wit; [it—
When thousands weep, more than did laugh at Convey them with safe conduct.—Fare you well.

[Exeunt Ambassador.]
Enter. This was a merry message.
K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it.

Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour
That may give furtherance to our expedition;
For we have now no thought in us but France,
Save those to God, that run before our business.
Therefore let our proportions for these wars
Be soon collected; and all things thought upon
That may with reasonable swiftness add
More feathers to our wings; for, God before,
We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door.
Therefore let every man task his thought,
That this fair action may on foot be brought.

[Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now all the youth of England are on fire,
And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies:
Now thrive the armourers, and honour's thought
Reigns solely in the breast of every man:
They sell the pasture now to buy the horse;
Following the mirror of all Christian kings,
With winged heels, as English Mercuries;
For now sits Expectation in the air;
And hides a sword from hils unto the point
With crowns imperial, crowns, and coronets,
Promis'd to Harry and his followers.
The French, advis'd by good intelligence
Of this most dreadful preparation,
Shake in their fear; and with pale policy
Seek to divert the English purposes.
O England!—model to thy inward greatness,
Like little body with a mighty heart,—
What might'st thou do, that honour would thee do,
Were all thy children kind and natural! [out
But see thy fault! France hath in thee found
A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills
With treacherous crowns; and three corrupted men,—[second,
One, Richard Earl of Cambridge; and the Henry Lord Scroop of Masham; and the third,
Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland,—
Have, for the guilt of France,—O guilt indeed!—
Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France;
And by their hands this grace of kings must die,—
If hell and treason hold their promises,—
Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton.
Linger your patience on; and well digest
The abuse of distance, while we force a play.
The sum is paid; the traitors are agreed:
The king is set from London; and the scene
Is now transported, gentle, to Southampton,—

There is the play-house now, there must you sit:
And thence to France shall we convey you safe,
And bring you back, charming the narrow seas
To give you gentler ass: fret not, if we may;
We'll not offend one stomach with our play.
But, till the king come forth, and not till then,
Unto Southampton do we shift our scene.

[Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. Before the Boar's Head Tavern, Eastcheap.

Enter, severally, Nym and Bardolph.

Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym. Good-morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends yet?

Nym. For my part, I care not: I say little; but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles;—but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight; but I will wink, and hold out mine iron: it is a simple one; but what though? it will toast cheese: and it will endure cold as another man's sword will, and there's the humour of it.

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends; and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France; let it be so, good Corporal Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell; quickly: and, certainly, she did you wrong; for you were troth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell:—things must be as they may: men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time; and, some say, knives have edges. It must be as it may: though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Bard. Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife:—good corporal, be patient here.

Enter Pistol and Hostess.

How now, mine host Pistol!
Pist. Base folk, call'st thou me host?

Now, by this hand, I swear, I scorn the term; Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Host. No, by my troth, not long; for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-nose straight. [Nym draws his sword.] O well-a-day, Lady, if he be not drawn! now we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed.

Bard. Good lieutenant,—good corporal,—offer nothing here.

Aym. Fish!

Pist. Fish for thee, Iceland dog! thou prick-ear’d cur of Iceland!

Host. Good Corporal Nym, show thy valour, and put up your sword.

Aym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus. [Sheathing his sword.]

Pist. Solus, egregious dog? O viper vile! The solus in thy most marvellous face; The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat, And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy; And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth! I do retort the solus in thy bowels; For I can take, and Pistol’s cock is up, And flashing fire will follow.

Aym. I am not Burelson; you cannot conjure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferent well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms: if you would walk off I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may: and that’s the humour of it.

Pist. O bawdy-nose and damned infamous wight!
The grave doth gape and distant death is near; Therefore exhale. [Pistol and Nym draw.

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say: he that strikes the first stroke I’ll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Pistol.

Pist. An oath of nickle might; and fury shall abate.

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give: Thy spirits are most tall.

Aym. I will cut thy threat one time or other, in fair terms: that is the humour of it.

Pist. Conte la gorge! That’s the word.—I thee defy again.

O hound of Crete, think’st thou my spouse to get?

No: to the spital go,
And from the powdering tub of infamy Fetch forth the lazar kife of Cressid’s kind.

Doll Tearsheet she by name, and her espouse: I have, and I will hold, the guenandam Quickly For the only she; and—Pauca, there’s enough. Go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master,—and you, hostess:—he is very sick, and would to bed.—Good Bardolph, put thy nose between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan. Faith, he’s very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue.

Host. By my troth, he’ll yield the crown a pudding one of these days: the king has killed his heart.—Good his hand, come home presently.

[Exeunt Hostess and Boy.

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together: why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another’s throats?

Pist. Let floods o’erswell and fiends for food howl on!

Aym. You’ll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Aym. That now I will have: that’s the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound: push home. [Pistol and Nym draw.

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust I’ll kill him; by this sword, I will.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends: an thou wilt not, why, then, be enemies with me too. Prie thee, put up.

Aym. I shall have my eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay:

And liquor likewise will I give to thee, And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood: I’ll live by Nym and Nym shall live by me;— Is not this just?—for I shall suffer be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.

Give me thy hand.

Aym. I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Aym. Well, then, that’s the humour of it.

Re-enter Hostess.

Host. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shaken of a burning quotidian terror that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Aym. The king hath run bad humours on the knight; that’s the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right: His heart is fracted and corroborate.

Aym. The king is a good king: but it must be as it may; he passes some humours and careers.

Pist. Let us condole the knight; for, lambkins, we will live. [Exeunt.
SCENE II.—SOUTHAMPTON. A Council Chamber.

Enter Exeter, Bedford, and Westmoreland.

Bed. 'Fore God, his grace is bold, to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves!

As if allegiance in their bosom sat,
Crowned with faith and constant loyalty.

Bed. The king hath note of all that they intend,
By interception which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow,
Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours,—
That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell
His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Trumpet sounds. Enter King Henry, Scroop, Cambridge, Grey, Lords, and Attendants.

"Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard.

My Lord of Cambridge,—and my kind Lord of Masham,—
And you, my gentle knight,—give me your thoughts:
Think you not that the powers we bear with us
Will eat their passage through the force of France,
Doing the execution and the act
For which we have in head assembled them?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.

K. Hen. I doubt not that; since we are well
We carry not a heart with us from hence
That grows not in a fair consent with ours,
Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish
Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and lov'd
Than is your majesty; there's not, I think, a
That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness
Under the sweet shade of your government.

Grey. True: those that were your father's enemies
Have steep'd their galls in honey, and do serve
With hearts created of duty and of zeal.

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness;
And shall forget the office of our hand
Sooner than quittance of desert and merit
According to the weight and worthiness.

Scroop. So service shall with steel'd sinews toil,

And labour shall refresh itself with hope,
To do your grace incessant services.

K. Hen. We judge no less.—Uncle of Exeter, Enlarge the man committed yesterday,
That rail'd against our person: we consider
It was excess of wine that set him on;
And on his more advice we pardon him.

Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security:
Let him be punish'd, sovereign; lest example
Breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind.

K. Hen. O, let us yet be merciful. [too.

Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish Grey. Sir, you show great mercy if you give him life,
After the taste of much correction. [of me

K. Hen. Alas, your too much love and care
Are heavy orisons against this poor wretch!
If little faults, proceeding on distemper,
Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye [digested,
When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and
Appear before us?—We'll yet enlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear care
And tender preservation of our person,
Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes:

Who are the late commissioners?

Cam. I one, my lord:
Your highness bade me ask for it to-day.

Scroop. So did you me, my liege.

Grey. And me, my royal sovereign.

K. Hen. Then, Richard Earl of Cambridge,
there is yours:— [sir knight,
There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham;—and,
Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours:—
Read them, and know I know your worthi[eter,—
My Lord of Westmoreland,—and uncle Ex.
We will aboard to-night.—Why, how now, gentlemen!

What see you in those papers, that you lose
So much complexion?—Look ye, how they change!
There
Their cheeks are paper.—Why, what read you
That hath so cowarded and clas'd your blood
Out of appearance?

Cam. I do confess my fault,
And do submit me to your highness' mercy.

Grey, Scroop. To which we all appeal.

K. Hen. The mercy that was quick in us but late
By your own counsel is suppress'd and kille:
You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy;
For your own reasons turn into your bosoms,
As dogs upon their masters, worrying you.—
See you, my princes and my noble peers,
These English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge here,—
You know how apt our love was to accord
To furnish him with all appertinents
Belonging to his honour; and this man
Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd,
And sworn unto the practices of France,
To kill us here in Hampton: to the which
This knight, no less for bounty bound to us
Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn.—

But, O,

What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop? thou
Ingrateful, savage, and inhuman creature!
Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels,
That knew'st the very bottom of my soul,
That almost mightst have coin'd me into gold, Wouldst thou have practis'd on me for thy use,—
May it be possible that foreign hire
Could out of thee extract one spark of evil
That might annoy my finger? 'tis so strange
That, though the truth of it stands off as gross
As black from white, my eye will scarcely see it.
Treason and murder ever kept together,
As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose,
Working so grossly in a natural cause
That admiration did not whoop at them;
But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason and on murder:
And whatsoever cunning fiend it was
That wrought upon thee so preposterously
Hath got the voice in hell for excellence:
And other devils, that suggest by treasons,
Do botch and bungle up damnation [fetch'd
With patches, colours, and with forms being
From glistening semblances of piety;
But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand up,
Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason,
Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor.
If that same demon that hath gull'd thee thus
Should with his lion gait walk the whole world,
He might return to vasty Tartar back,
And tell the legions, I can never win
A soul so easy as that Englishman's.
O, how hast thou with jealousy infected
The sweetness of affiance! Show men dutiful?
Why, so didst thou: seem they grave and learned?
Why, so didst thou: come they of noble family?
Why, so didst thou: seem they religious?
Why, so didst thou: or are they spare in diet;
Free from gross passion, or of mirth or anger;
Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood;
Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement;
Not working with the eye without the ear,
And but in purged judgment trusting neither.
Such and so finely bolted didst thou seem:

And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot,
To mark the full-fraught man and best indu'd
With some suspicion. I will weep for thee;
For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like
Another fall of man.—Their faults are open:
Arrest them to the answer of the law;—
And God acquit them of their practices!

Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge.
I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry Lord Scroop of Masham.
I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland.

Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath dis-cover'd;
And I repent my fault more than my death;
Which I beseech your highness to forgive,
Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me,—the gold of France did not seduce;
Although I did admit it as a motive
The sooner to effect what I intended:
But God be thanked for prevention;
Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice,
Beseeming God and you to pardon me.

Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice
At the discovery of most dangerous treason
Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself,
Prevented from a damned enterprise:
My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.

K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! I hear your sentence.
You have conspir'd against our royal person, Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers
Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death;
Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter,
His princes and his peers to servitude,
His subjects to oppression and contempt,
And his whole kingdom into desolation.
Touching our person seek we no revenge;
But we our kingdom's safety must so tender,
Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws
We do deliver you. Get you, therefore, hence,
Poor miserable wretches, to your death:
The taste whereof God of his mercy give you
Patience to endure, and true repentance
Of all your dear offences!—Bear them hence.

[Exeunt Conspirators, guarded.

Now, lords, for France; the enterprise whereof
Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.
We doubt not of a fair and lucky war:
Since God so graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous treason, lurking in our way
'to hinder our beginnings, we doubt not now
But every rub is smoothed on our way.
Then, forth, dear countrymen: let us deliver
Our puissance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.
Cheerily to sea; the signs of war advance:
No king of England, if not king of France.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—London. The Hostess’s House in Eastcheap.

Enter Pistol, Hostess, Nym, Bardolph, and Boy.

Host. Prythee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn,— Bardolph, be blithe;—Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins;—for Falstaff lie
Boy, bristle thy courage up;—for Falstaff lie
And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, wheresoever he is, either in heaven or in hell!

Host. Nay, sure, he’s not in hell: he’s in Arthur’s bosom, if ever man went to Arthur’s bosom. ‘A made a finer end, and went away, an it had been any christom child; ’a parted even just between twelve and one, even at the turning of the tide: for after I saw himumble with the sheats, and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers’ ends, I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and ’a habbled of green fields. If now, Sir John! quoth I: what, man! be o’ good cheer. So ’a cried out—God, God, God! three or four times.
Now I, to comfort him, bid him ’a should not think of God; I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So
’a bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that ’a did.

Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that ’a did not.

Boy. Yes, that ’a did; and said they were devils incarnate.

Host. ’A could never abide carnation; ’twas a colour he never liked.

Boy. ’A said once, the devil would have him about women.

Host. ’A did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talked of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember, ’a saw a flea stick upon Bardolph’s nose, and ’a said it was a black soul burning in hell?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintained that fire: that’s all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog? the king will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let’s away.—My love, come,
look to my chattels and my moveables:
Let senses rule; the word is, Pitch and pay;
Trust none.

For oaths are straws, men’s faiths are wafer-cakes,
And holocaust is the only dog, my duck:
Therefore care not be thy counsellor.
Go, clear thy crystals.—Yoke-fellows in arms,
Let us to France; like horse-leeches, my boys.
To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that is but unwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her.

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; but, adieu.

Pist. Let housewifery appear: keep close, I thee command.

Host. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—France. A Room in the French King’s Palace.

Flourish. Enter the French King, attended, the Dauphin, the Duke of Burgundy,
the Constable, and others.

Fr. King. Thus come the English with full power upon us;
And more than carefully it us concerns
To answer royally in our defences.
Therefore the Dukes of Berri and of Bretagne,
Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make forth,—
And you, Prince Dauphin,—with all swift despach,
To line and new repair our towns of war
With men of courage and with means defendant;
For England his approaches makes as fierce
As waters to the sucking of a gulf.
It fits us, then, to be as provident
As fear may teach us, out of late examples
Left by the fatal and neglected English
Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father,
It is most meet we arm us ’gainst the foe:
For peace itself should not so dulle a kingdom,— Though war, nor known quarrel, were in question,—
But that defences, musters, preparations,
Should be maintain’d, assembled, and collected,
As were a war in expectation.
Therefore, I say, ’tis meet we all go forth
To view the sick and feeble parts of France:
And let us do it with no show of fear;
No, with no more than if we heard that England
Were busied with a Whitsun morris-dance:
For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd,
Her sceptre so fantastically borne
By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth,
That fear attends her not.

Con. O peace, Prince Dauphin!
You are too much mistaken in this king:
Question your grace the late ambassadors,—
With what great state he heard their embassy,
How well supplied with noble counsellors,
How modest in exception, and withal
How terrible in constant resolution,
And you shall find his vanities forespent
Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,
Covering discretion with a coat of folly;
As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots
That shall first spring and be most delicate.

Dauphin. Well, 'tis not so, my lord high-constable;
But though we think it so, it is no matter:
In cases of defence 'tis best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems:
The proportions of defence are fill'd;
Which, of a weak and niggardly projection,
Doth like a miser spoil his coat with scanting
A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we King Harry strong;
And, princes, look you strongly arm to meet him.
The kindred of him hath been flesh'd up on us;
And he is bred out of that bloody strain
That haunted us in our familiar paths:
Witness our too-much memorable shame
When Cressy battle fatally was struck,
And all our princes captiv'd by the hand
Of that black name, Edward Black Prince of Wales;

[standing,
Whiles that his mountain sire,—on mountain
Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun,—
Saw his heroic seed, and smil'd to see him,
Mangle the work of nature, and deface
The patterns that by God and by French fathers
Had twenty years been made. This is a stem
Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
The native mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of England
Do crave admittance to your majesty.
Fr. King. We'll give them present audience.
Go, and bring them.

[Exit Mess., and certain Lords.
You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends.

Dauphin. Turn head and stop pursuit; for coward dogs

Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten Runs far before them. Good my sovereign,
Take up the English short; and let them know
Of what a monarchy you are the head:
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with Exeter and Train.

Fr. King. From our brother England?
Exe. From him; and thus he greets your majesty.
He wills you, in the name of God Almighty,
That you divest yourself, and lay apart
The borrow'd glories that by gift of heaven,
By law of nature and of nations, long
To him and to his heirs; namely, the crown,
And all wide-stretched honours that pertain
By custom and the ordinance of times,
Unto the crown of France. That you may know
'Tis no sinister nor no awkward claim,

[Days, Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd
Nor from the dust of old oblivion raked,
He sends you this most memorable line,

[Give a paper.

In every branch truly demonstrative;
Willing you overlook this pedigree:
And when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd of famous ancestors,
Edward the Third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him the native and true challenger.

Fr. King. Or else what follows?

Exe. Bloody constraint: for if you hide the Even in your hearts, there will be rife for it:
Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming,
In thunder and in earthquake, like a Jove,—
That if requiring fail, he will compel:—
And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown; and to take mercy
On the poor souls for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head
Turns he the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
The dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans,
For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers,
That shall be swallow'd in this controversy.
This is his claim, his threatening, and my message:
Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further:
To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our brother England.

Dauphin. For the Dauphin,
I stand here for him: what to him from England?
KING HENRY V.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—FRANCE. Before Harfleur.

Alarums. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Gloster, and Soldiers, with scaling-ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more; Or close the wall up with our English dead! In peace there's nothing so becomes a man As modest stillness and humility: But when the blast of war blows in our ears, Then imitate the action of the tiger; Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood, Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage; Then lend the eye a terrible aspect; Let it pry through the portage of the head Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm it As fearfully as doth a galled rock O'erhang and jutty his confounded base, Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean. Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide; Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit To his full height!—On, on, you noble English, Whose blood is set from fathers of war-proof!— Fathers that, like so many Alexanders, Have in these parts from morn till even fought, And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument:— Dishonour not your mothers; now attest That those whom you call'd fathers did beget you! Be copy now to men of grosser blood, And teach them how to war!—And von. good yeomen,
Whose limbs were made in England, show us here
The mettle of your pasture; let us swear
That you are worth your breeding: which I doubt not;
For there is none of you so mean and base,
That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.
I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start. The game’s afoot:
Follow your spirit; and upon this charge
Cry—God for Harry! England! and Saint George!

[Exeunt. Alarum, and chambers go off, within.]

Enter Nym, Bardolph, Pistol, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay: the knocks are too hot; and, for mine own part, I have not a case of lives: the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song of it.

Pist. The plain-song is most just; for humours do abound:
Knocks go and come; God’s vessels drop and die—
And sword and shield
In bloody field
Doth win immortal fame.

Boy. Would I were in an alehouse in London! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.

Pist. And I:
If wishes would prevail with me,
My purpose should not fail with me,
But thither would I die.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly,
As bird doth sing on bough.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Up to the preach, you dogs! avault, you fellows! [Driving them forward.

Pist. Bemerciful, great duke, to men of mould! Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage! Abate thy rage, great duke! [chuck! Good bawcock, bate thy rage! use lenity, sweet Nym. These be good humours!—your honour wins bad humours.

[Exeunt Nym, Pistol, and Bardolph, followed by Fluellen.

Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three swashers. I am boy to them all three: but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for, indeed, three such antic do not amount to a man. For Bardolph,—he is white-livered and red-faced; by the means whereof ’a faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol,—he hath a killing tongue and a quiet sword; by the means whereof ’a breaks words and keeps whole weapons. For Nym,—he hath heard that men of few words are the best men; and therefore he scorns to say his prayers lest ’a should be thought a coward: but his few bad words are matched with as few good deeds; for ’a never broke any man’s head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal anything, and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching; and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel: I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men’s pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers: which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another’s pocket to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service: their villainy goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up.

[Exit.

Re-enter Fluellen, Gower following.

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines; the Duke of Gloster would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines! tell you the duke it is not so goot to come to the mines; for, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war: the concavities of it is not sufficient; for, look you, th’athversary,—you may discuss unto the duke, look you,—is digt himself four yard under the countermines; by Chesu, I think ’a will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gow. The Duke of Gloster, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman,—a very valiant gentleman, i’ faith.

Flu. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gow. I think it be.

Flu. By Chesu, he is an ass, as in the 'orld: I will verify as much in his peard: he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Gow. Here ’a comes; and the Scots captain, Captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous falorous gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in the ancient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions; by Chesu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the 'orld, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.
Enter Macmorris and Jamy, at a distance.

Jamy. I say good-day, Captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, good Captain Jamy.

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! have you quit the mines? have the pioneers given o'er?

Mac. By Chrish la, tish ill done: the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and by my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over: I would have blew up the town, so Chrish save me, la, in an hour: O, tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline; that is the point.

Jamy. It shall be very good, gud feith, gud captains hath: and I shall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that shall I, mary.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me: the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukers: it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet call us to the breach; and we talk and, by Chrish, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all: so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still: it is shame, by my hand: and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done: and there is nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la.

Jamy. By the mess, cre theise eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, ale do gud service, or aile lig i' the grund for it; ay, or go to death: and aile pay't as valorously as I may, that sail I suerly do, that is the breff and the long. Mary, I bad full fain heard some question 'twixt you twav.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation,—

Mac. Of my nation! What ish my nation? what ish my nation? Who talks of my nation ish a villain, and a basterd, and a knave, and a rascal.

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as goot a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of war and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Chrish save me, I will cut off your head.

Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jamy. Au! that's a foul fault.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so pold as to tell you I know the disciplines of war; and there is an end. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. Before the Gates of Harfleur.

The Governor and some Citizens on the walls, the English Forces below. Enter KING HENRY and his Train.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town?

This is the latest parley we will admit:
Therefore, to our best mercy give yourselves;
Or like to men proud of destruction,
Defy us to our worst: for as I am a soldier,—
A name that, in my thoughts, becomes me best,—
If I begin the battery once again,
I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur
Till in her ashes she lie buried.
The gates of mercy shall be all shut up;
And the flesh'd soldier,—rough and hard of heart,—
In liberty of bloody hand shall range
With conscience wide as hell; mowing like grass
Your fresh-fair virgins and your flowering infants.
What is it then to me if impious war,—
Array'd in flames, like to the prince of fiends,—
Do, with his smirk'd complexion, all fell feats Enlink'd to waste and desolation?
What is't to me when you yourselves are cause,
If your pure maidens fall into the hand
Of hot and forcing violation?
What rein can hold licentious wickedness
When down the hill he holds his fierce career?
We may as bootless spend our vain command
Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil,
As send précepts to the Leviathan [fleur,
To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Har—
Take pity of your town and of your people.
Whilest yet my soldiers are in my command;
Whilest yet the cool and temperate wind of grace
O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds
Of heady murder, spoil, and villany.
If not, why, in a moment look to see
The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand
Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;
Your fathers taken by the silver beards,
And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls;
Your naked infants spitted upon pikes,
While the mad mothers with their bowls confus'd
Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry
At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen.
What say you? will you yield, and this avoid?
Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gov. Our expectation hath this day an end:
The Dauphin, whom of succour we entreated,
Returns us that his powers are not yet ready
To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great king,
We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy.
Enter our gates; dispose of us and ours;
For we no longer are defensible. [Exeter,
K. Hen. Open your gates.—Come, uncle
Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain,
And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French:
Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle,
The winter coming on, and sickness growing
Upon our soldiers,—we will retire to Calais.
To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest;
To-morrow for the march are we ad-rest.

[Flourish. The KING, &C., enter the Town.

SCENE III.—ROUEN. A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter KATHARINE and ALICE.

Kath. Alice, tu as été en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage.
Alice. Un peu, madame.
Kath. Je te prie, m'enseignes; il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appellez-vous la main en Anglais?
Alice. La main? elle est appelée de hand.
Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?
Alice. Les doigts? ma foi, j'oublie les doigts; mais je m'en souviendrai. Les doigts? je pense qu'ils sont appelés de fingres; oui, de fingres.
Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingres. Je pense que je suis le bon âtolier; j'ai gagné deux mots d'Anglais vitément. Comment appellez-vous les ongles?
Alice. Les ongles? les appelons de nails.
Kath. De nails. Écoutez, dites-moi, si je parle bien: de hand, de fingres, et de nails.
Alice. C'est bien dit, madame; il est fort bon Anglais.
Kath. Dites-moi l'Anglais pour le bras.
Alice. De arm, madame.
Kath. Et le coude?
Alice. De elbow.

Kath. De elbow. Je m'en fais la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à présent.
Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.
Kath. Excusez-moi, Alice; écoutez: de hand, de fingres, de nails, de arm, de bilbow.
Alice. De elbow, madame.
Kath. O Seigneur Dieu, je m'en oublie! de elbow. Comment appelez-vous le cot?
Alice. De neck, madame.
Kath. De nick. Et le menton?
Alice. De chin.
Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick; le menton, de sin.

Alice. Oui. Sans votre honneur, en vérité, yous prononcez les mots aussi droit que les nains
d'Angleterre.
Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre, par la grace de Dieu, et en peu de temps.
Alice. N'avez-vous pas déjà oublié ce que je vous ai enseigné?
Kath. Non, je reciterai à vous promptement:
de hand, de fingres, de nails,—
Alice. De nails, madame.
Kath. De nails, de arm, de elbow.
Alice. Sans votre honneur, de elbow.
Kath. Ainsi dis-je; de elbow, de nick, et de sin. Comment appelez-vous à pied et la robe?
Alice. De foot, madame; et de cown.
Kath. De foot et de cown! O Seigneur
Dieu! ce sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'usier; je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France pour tout le monde. Il faut de foot et de cown n'aimois.
je reciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble:
de hand, de fingres, de nails, de arm, de elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, de cown.
Alice. Excellent, madame!
Kath. C'est assez pour une fois: allons-nous da diner.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—THE SAME. ANOTHER ROOM IN
THE SAME.

Enter the French King, the Dauphin,
Duke of Bourbon, the Constable of France, and others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain he hath pass'd the river Somme.
Con. And if he be not tought withal, my lord,
Let us not live in France; let us quit all,
And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.
Dau. O Dieu vivant! shall a few sprays of us,
The emptying of our fathers' luxury,
Our seions, put in wild and savage stock,
Spurt up so suddenly into the clouds,
And overlook their grafters?
Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans,
Norman, bastard!

_Mort de ma vie!_ if they march along
Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom
To buy a slubberby and a dirty farm
In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.

Con. _Dieu de batailles!_ where have they this mettle?
Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull;
On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale,
Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water,
A drench for sur-rein’d jades, their Lazley-Direct their cold blood to such valiant heat?
And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine,
Seem frosty? O, for honour of our land,
Let us not hang like roping icles
Upon our houses’ thatch, whilsts a more frosty people
Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich
Poor we may call them in their native lords!

_Diu._ By faith and honour,
Our madams mock at us, and plainly say
Our mettle is bred out, and they will give Their bodies to the lust of English youth
To new-store France with bastard warriors.

_Bour._ They bid us to the English dancing-schools,
And teach lavoltes high and swift corantes;
Saying our grace is only in our heels,
And that we are most lofty runaways.

_Fr. King._ Where is Montjoy, the herald?
Speed him hence:
Let him greet England with his sharp defiance.
Up, princes! and, with spirit of honour edg’d
More sharper than your swords, lie to the field:
Charles De-la-bret, high-constable of France;
You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berri,
Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy:
Jacques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont,
Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Faucenber.
Foix, Lestrade, Bouicault, and Charolois;
High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights, Shames.
For your great seats, now quit you of great
Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land
With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur.
Rush on his host as doth the melted snow
Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat
The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon:
Go down upon him,—you have power enough,—
And in a captive chariot into Rouen
Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great.

Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His soldiers sick, and famish’d in their march;
For I am sure, when he shall see our army,
He’ll drop his heart into the sink of fear,
And for achievement offer us his ransom.

_Fr. King._ Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy;
And let him say to England that we send
To know what willing ransom he will give.—
Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.
_Diu._ Not so, I do beseech your majesty.

_Fr. King._ Be patient; for you shall remain with us.
Now forth, lord constable and princes all,
And quickly bring us word of England’s fall.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The English Camp in Picardy.

Enter, severally, Gower and Fluellen.

_Gow._ Hark you, Captain Fluellen! come you from the bridge?

_Flu._ I assure you there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.

_Gow._ Is the Duke of Exeter safe?

_Flu._ The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my uttermost power: he is not,—God be praised and blessed,—any hurt in the world: but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an ancient there at the bridge,—I think in my very conscience he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the world; but I did see him do as gallant service.

_Gow._ What do you call him?

_Flu._ He is called Auncient Pistol.

_Gow._ I think now him not.

_Flu._ Here is the man.

_Enter Pistol._

_Pist._ Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours: The Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

_Flu._ Ay, I praise Got; and I have merited some love at his hands. [heart,

_Pist._ Bardolph, a soldier, firm and sound of Of buxom valour, hath by cruel fate
And giddy Fortune’s furious fickle wheel,—
That goddess blind,
That stands upon the rolling restless stone,—

_Flu._ By your patience, Auncient Pistol. Fortune is painted plind, with a muller afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is plind; and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and tion: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon aspherical stone, which rolls, and rolls and rolls.
In good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent moral.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him; [be,--
For he hath stol'n a pax, and hanged must 'a
A damned death!
Let gallows gape for dog; let man go free,
And let not hemp his windpipe suffocate:
But Exeter hath given the doom of death
For pax of little price. [voice:
Therefore, go speak,—the duke will hear thy
And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut
With edge of penny cord and vile reproach:
Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee re-quite.

Flu. Ancient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.
Pist. Why, then, rejoice therefore.
Flu. Certainly, Ancient, it is not a thing to rejoice at: for if, look you, were my brother
I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be used.
[friendship!
Pist. Die and be damn'd! and fico for thy
Flu. It is well.
Pist. The fig of Spain!
[Exit.
Flu. Very good.

Gov. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal;
I remember him now; a bawd, a cutpurse.

Flu. I'll assure you, 'a uttered as prave 'ords at the pridge, as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve

Gov. Why, 'twas a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself, at his return into London, under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names: and they will learn you by rote where services were done;—at such and such a sconce, at such a breach, at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood o...;
and this they con perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths:
and what a beard of the general's cut, and a horrid suit of the camp, will do among foaming bottles and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvelously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower, I do perceive he is not the man that I.e would gladly make show to the 'orld he is: if I find a hole in his coat I will tell him my mind. [Drum within.] Hark you, the king is coming; and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, and Soldiers.

Got bless your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen! cam'st thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the pridge: the French is gone off, look you: and there is gallant and most prave passages: marry,
'th'athverse was have possession of the pridge;
but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pridge: I can tell your majesty the duke is a prave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th'athverse hath been very great, reasonable great: marry, for my part,
I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church,— one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man:
'tis face is all bubuckles, and weels, and knols, and flames of fire; and his lips plows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes blue and sometimes red; but his nose is executed and his fire's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off:—and we give express charge that in our marches through the country there be nothing compiled from the vill'ges, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainful language; for when lently and crueley pl' for a kingdom the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket sounds. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well, then, I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king:—Say thou to Harry of England: Though we seemed dead day we did but sleep; advantage is a better sol-tion than rashness. Tell him we could have rebioked him at Harleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe;— now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him, therefore, consider of his ransom; which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which, in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace his own person, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To add this defiance; and tell him, for conclusion, his hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced. So far my king and master; so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy Mont. Montjoy. [thlee back,

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn
And tell thy king, — I do not seek him now;
But could be willing to march on to Calais
Without impeachment: for, to say the sooth,
Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much
Unto an enemy of craft and vantage,—
My people are with sickness much enfeebled:
My numbers lessen'd; and those few I have Almost no better than so many French:
Who, when they were in health, I tell thee
herald,
I thought upon one pair of English legs: [God,
Did march three Frenchmen. — Yet, forgive me,
That I do brag thus! — this your air of France
Hath blown that vice in me; I must repent.
Go, therefore, tell thy master here I am:
My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk;
My army but a weak and sickly guard:
Yet, God before, tell him we will come on,
Though France himself, and such another neighbour, [Montjoy.
Stand in our way. There's for thy labour,
Go, bid thy master well advise himself;
If we may pass. — will; if we be hinder'd,
We shall your tawny ground with your red blood
Discolour: and so, Montjoy, fare you well.
The sum of all our answer is but this:
We would not seek a battle as we are;
Nor as we are, we say, we will not shun it:
So tell thy master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness. [Exit.

Glo. I hope they will not come upon us now.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.

March to the bridge; it now draws toward
Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves;
And on to-morrow bid them march away.

[Exit.

SCENE VI. — The French Camp near Agincourt.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord
Ramusures, the Duke of Orleans, the Dauphin, and others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world.—Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My Lord of Orleans and my lord high-constable, you talk of horse and armour,—

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Dau. What a long night is this! — I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ca, ha! he bounds from the earth as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volant, the Pegasus, qui a les narines de feu!

When I bestride him I soar, I am a hawk: he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg.

Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him: he is indeed a horse; and all other jades you may call beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey: it is a theme as fluent as the sea; turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all: 'tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world,—familiar to us and unknown,—to lay apart their particular functions and wonder at him. I once write a sonnet in his praise, and began thus: Wonder of nature, —

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I composed to my courser: for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress.

Con. Nay, for methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So, perhaps, did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. 0, then, belike she was old and gentle; and you rode like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off and in your straw strollers.
Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dau. Be warned by me, then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs.
I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears her own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that if I had a saw to my mistress.

Dau. Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la true vibe au bourbier: thou maketh use of anything.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress; or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars or sun upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superflously, and t'were more honour some were away.

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. Would I were able to load him with his desert!—Will it never be day?—I will trot tomorrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be faced out of my way: but I would it were morning; for I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard eri you have them.

Dau. 'Tis midnight; I'll go arm myself.

[Exit.

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is, simply, the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity; and he will still be doing.

Orl. He never did harm that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that by one that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he?

Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said he cared not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue in him.

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never anybody saw it but his lackey: 'tis a hooded valour;
and when it appears it will hate.

Orl. Ill-will never said well.

Con. I will cap that proverb with—'There is flattery in friendship.

Orl. And I will take up that with—Give the devil his due.

Con. Well placed: there stands your friend for the devil: have at the very eye of that proverb with—A pox of the devil.

Orl. You are the better at proverbs by how much—A fool's bolt is soon shot.

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord high-constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents.

Con. Who hath measured the ground?

Mess. The Lord Grandpree.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman.
Would it were day!—Alas, poor Harry of England! he longs not for the dawning as we do.

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension
they would run away,

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatch-able courage.

Orl. Foolish curs, that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crushed like rotten apples! You may as well say, that's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming-on, leaving their wits with their wives: and then give them great meals of beef, and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm? come, will we about it?
Orl. It is now two o'clock: but, let me see,—by ten
We shall have each a hundred Englishmen.

[Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murmur and the poring dark
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night
The hum of either army stillly sounds,
That the fixd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch:
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each battle sees the other'sumber'd face:
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs
Piercing the night's dull ear: and from the tents
The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Gave dreadful note of preparation:
The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll,
And the third hour of drowsy morning name.
Proud of their numbers and secure in soul,
The confident and over-lustily French
Do the low-rated English play at dice;
And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night,
Who, like a soul and ugly witch, doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned
English,
Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently, and inly ruminate
The morning's danger; and their gesture sad
Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats
Presenteth them unto the gazing moon [hold
So many horrid ghosts. O, now, who will be
The royal captain of this ruin'd band [tent,
Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent
Let him cry, I arise and glory on his head
For forth he goes and visits all his host;
Bids them good-morrow with a modest smile.
And calls them brothers, friends, and countrymen.
Upon his royal face there is no note
How dread an army hath enrounded him;
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour
Unto the weary and all-watched night;
But freshly looks, and over-bears attain
With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty:
That every wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks:
A largess universal, like the sun,
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear. Then, mean and gentle all,
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the night:

And so our scene must to the battle fly;
Where, — O for pity! — we shall much disgrace
With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
Right ill-dispos'd in brawl ridiculous.
The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see;
Minding true things by what their mockery be.

[Exit.

ACT IV.

Scene I.—France. The English Camp at Agincourt

Enter King Henry, Bedford, and Gloucester.

K. Hen. Gloster, 'tis true that we are in great danger;
The greater therefore should our courage be.—
Good-morrow, brother Bedford. — God Almighty!
There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distil it out;
For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthful and good husbandry:
Besides, they are our outward consciences
And preachers to us all: admonishing
That we should dress us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter Erpingham.

Good-morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good soft pillow for that good white head
Were better than a churlish turf of France.

Erp. Not so, my liege: this lodging likes me better,
Since I may say, Now lie I like a king.

K. Hen. 'Tis good for men to love their present pains
Upon example: so the spirit is eas'd:
And when the mind is quicken'd, out of doubt
The organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move
With casted slough and fresh legerity.
Both, lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas.—Brothers
Commend me to the princes in our camp;
Do my good-morrow to them; and anon
Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glo. We shall, my liege.

[Exeunt Gloster and Bedford.

Erp. Shall I attend your grace?

K. Hen. No, my good knight;
Go with my brothers to my lords of England:
I and my bosom must debate awhile,
And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble Harry!

[Exit.
K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart! thou speak'st cheerfully.

Enter Pistol.

Pist. Qui va là?

K. Hen. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me; art thou officer?

Or art thou base, common, and popular?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Trail'st thou the puissant pike?

K. Hen. Even so. What are you?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the emperor.

K. Hen. Then you are better than the king.

Pist. The king's a bawcock and a heart of gold,

A lad of life, an imp of fame:

Of parents good, of fist most valiant:

I kiss his dirty shoe, and from my heart-strings

I love the lovely bully.—What is thy name?

K. Hen. Harry le Roi.

Pist. Le Roy! a Cornish name: art thou of Cornish crew?

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen?

K. Hen. Yes. [his pate

Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his leek about

Upon Saint Davy's day.

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about yours.

Pist. Art thou his friend?

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The fic for thee, then!

K. Hen. I thank you: God be with you!

Pist. My name is Pistol called. [Exit.

K. Hen. It sorts well with your fierceness.

Enter Fluellen and Gower, severally.

Gow. Captain Fluellen!

Flu. So! in the name of Cheshu Christ, speak fewer. It is the greatest admiration in the universal world when the true and ancient prerogative and laws of the wars are not kept: if you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle-taddle nor pibble-pabble in Pompey's camp: I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise.

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you hear him all night.

Flu. If the enemy is an ass, and a fool, and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass, and a fool, and a prating coxcomb,—in your own conscience, now?

Gow. I will speak lower.

Flu. I pray you and peseech you that you will. [Execut GOWER and FLUELEN.

K. Hen. Though it appear a little out of fashion,

There is much care and valour in this Welshman.

Enter Bates, Court, and Williams.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder?

Bates. I think it be: but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there?

K. Hen. A friend.

Will. Under what captain serve you?

K. Hen. Under Sir Thomas Erpingham.

Will. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman: I pray you, what thinks he of our estate?

K. Hen. Even as men wrecked upon a sand, that look to be washed off the next tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the king?

K. Hen. No; nor it is not meet he should. For though I speak it to you, I think the king is but a man as I am; the violet smells to him as it doth to me; the element shows to him as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions: his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet, when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are: yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army.

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will; but I believe, as cold a night as this, he could wish himself in the Thames up to the neck,—and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here.

K. Hen. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king: I think he would not wish himself anywhere but where he is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone; so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved.

K. Hen. I dare say you love him not so ill, to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this, to feel other men's minds: methinks I could not die anywhere so contented as in the king's company,—his cause being just and his quarrel honourable.

Will. That's more than we know.
Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after; for we know enough if we know we are the king's subjects: if his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us.

Will. But if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make when all those legs and arms and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the Later day and cry all, We died at such a place; some swearing; some crying for a surgeon; some upon their wives left poor behind them; some upon the debts they owe; some upon their children rawly left. I am afeared there are few die well that die in a battle; for how can they charitably dispose of anything when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it; who to disobey were against all proportion of subjection.

K. Hen. So if a son, that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him: or if a servant, under his master's command, transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers, and die in many irreconciled iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation:—but this is not so: the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant; for they purpose not their death when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers: some peradventure have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some making their wars their bulwark that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men they have no wings to fly from God: war is his beadle, war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished for before-breach of the king's laws in now the king's quarrel: where they feared the death they have borne life away; and where they would be safe they perish: then if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed,—wash every mole out of his conscience: and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained: and in him that escapes it were not sin to think that, making God so free an offer, he let him outlive that day to see his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head,—the king is not to answer for it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say he would not be ransomed.

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully: but when our throats are cut he may be ransomed, and we never the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it I will never trust his word after.

Will. You pay him then! That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch! you may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! come, 'tis a foolish saying.

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round: I should be angry with you if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou darest acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove: give me another of thine.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, This is my glove, by this hand I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it I will challenge.

Will. Thou darest as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it though I take thee in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends: we have French quarrels now, if you could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders: but it is no English treason to cut French crowns: and to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper.

[Exit Soldiers.]
SCENE I.]

KING HENRY V.

Upon the king!—let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, our children, and Our sins lay on the king! We must bear all. O hard condition, twin-born with greatness, Subject to the breath of every fool, [ing! Whose sense no more can feel but his own wringing What infinite heart's-ease must kings neglect That private men enjoy!

And what have kings that privates have not too, Save ceremony,—save general ceremony? And what art thou, thou idol ceremony? What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers? What are thy rents? what are thy comings-in? O ceremony, show me but thy worth! What is thy soul of adoration? Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form, Creating awe and fear in other men? Wherein thou art less happy being fear'd Than they in fearing. What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet, But poison'd flattery? O, be sick, great greatness, And bid thy ceremony give thee cure! Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out With titles blown from adulation? Will it give place to flexure and low bending? Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee, Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream, That play'st so subtly with a king's repose: I am a king that find thee; and I know 'Tis not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball, The sword, the mace, the crown imperial, The intertissued robe of gold and pearl, The farced title running 'fore the king, The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp That beats upon the high shore of this world,— No, not all these, thrice gorgeous ceremony, Not all these, laid in bed majestical, Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave Who, with a body fill'd and vacant mind, Gets him to rest, cram'd with distressful bread; Never sees horrid night, the child of hell; But, like a lackey, from the rise to set Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night Sleeps in Elysium; next day, after dawn, Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse; And follows so the ever-running year, With profitable labour, to his grave: And but for ceremony, such a wretch, Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep, Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king. The slave, a member of the country's peace, Enjoys it; but in gross brain little wots

What watch the king keeps to maintain the peace Whose hours the peasant best advantages.

Enter Erpingham.

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence, Seek through your camp to find you.

K. Hen. O good old knight, Collect them all together at my tent: I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my lord. [Exit.

K. Hen. O God of battles! steel my soldiers' hearts: Possess them not with fear; take from them now The sense of reckoning, if the opposed numbers Pluck their hearts from them!—Not to-day, O Lord, O, not to-day, think not upon the fault My father made in compassing the crown! I Richard's body have interred new, And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears Than from it issu'd forced drops of blood: Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay, Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do; Though all that I can do is nothing worth, Since that my penitence comes after all, Imploring pardon.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. My liege!

K. Hen. My brother Gloster's voice?—Ay; I know thy errand, I will go with thee:— The day, my friends, and all things stay for me. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The French Camp.

Enter Dauphin, Orleans, Kambures, and others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour; up, my lords!

Fan. Montez à cheval!—My horse! varlet, l'apais! ha!

Orl. O brave spirit!

Dau. Via!—les eaux et la terre,—

Orl. Rienfrais? l'air et le feu,—

Dau. Ciel! cousin Orleans.

Enter Constable.

Now, my lord constable!

Con. Iark, how our steeds for present service reign!
KING HENRY V. [ACT IV.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattled, you French peers.

Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight to horse! Do but behold you poor and starved band, And your fair show shall suck away their souls, Leaving them but the shanks and husks of men. There is not work enough for all our hands; Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins To give each naked curtle-axe a stain, That our French gallants shall to-day draw out, And sheathe for lack of sport: let us but blow on them, The vapour of our valour will o’erturn them. 'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords, That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants,— Who in unnecessary action swarm About our squares of battle,—were enow To purge this field of such a hilding foe; Though we upon this mountain’s basis by Took stand for idle speculation, — But that our honours must not. What’s to say? A very little little let us do, And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound The tucket-somance and the note to mount: For our approach shall so much dare the field That England shall crouch down in fear and yield.

Enter Grandpree.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France? Yond island carriions, desperate of their bones, Ill-favouredly become the morning field: Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose, And our air shakes them passing scornfully: Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar’d host, And faintly through a rusty beaver percs: The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks, With torch-staves in their hand; and their poor jakes Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips, The gum down-roping from their pale-dead eyes, And in their pale dull mouths the gimbel-bit Lies foul with chew’d grass, still and motionless; And their executors, the knavish crows, Fly o’er them, all impatient for their hour. Description cannot suit itself in words To demonstrate the life of such a battle In life so lifeless as it shows itself.

Con. They have said their prayers and they stay for death. [fresh suits, Dau. Shall we go send them dinners and And give their fasting horses provender, And after fight with them? [field!— Con. I stay but for my guidon:—to the I will the banner from a trumpet take, And use it for my haste. Come, come, away! The sun is high, and we outwear the day. [Exeunt, SCENE III.—The English Camp.

Enter the English Host; Gloster, Bedford, Exeter, Salisbury, and Westmoreland.

Glo. Where is the king?

Bed. The king himself is rode to view their battle.

West. Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand. [fresh.

Exe. There’s five to one; besides, they all are Sal. God’s arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful oids.

God b’ wi you, princes all; I’ll to my charge: If we no more meet till we meet in heaven, Then joyfully,—my noble Lord of Bedford,— My dear Lord Gloster,—and my good Lord Exeter,— And my kind kinsman,—warriors all, adieu! Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee! [day: Exe. Farewell, kind lord; fight valiantly to— And yet I do thee wrong to mind thee of it, For thou art fram’d of the firm truth of valour. [Exit Salisbury.

Bed. He is as full of valour as of kindness;Princefully in both.

West. O that we now had here

Enter King Henry.

But one ten thousand of those men in England That do no work to-day!

K. Hen. What’s he that wishes so? My cousin Westmoreland?—No, my fair cousin: If we are mark’d to die, we are enough To do our country loss; and if to live, The fewer men the greater share of honour. God’s will! I pray thee, wish not one man more. By Jove, I am not covetous for gold; Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost; It yearns me not if men my garments wear; Such outward things dwell not in my desires: But if it be a sin to covet honour, I am the most offending soul alive.
K. Hen. Why, now thou hast unwish'd five thousand men;
Which likes me better than to wish us one.—
You know your places; God be with you all!

Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee,
King Harry,
If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound,
Before thy most assured overthrow:
For certainly thou art so near the gulf
Thou needs must be engulfed. Besides, in mercy,
The constable desires thee thou wilt mind
Thy followers of repentance; that their souls
May make a peaceful and a sweet retire
From off these fields, where, wretches, their poor bodies
Must lie and fester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now?
Mont. The constable of France. [back:

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer
Bid them achieve me, and then sell my bones.
Good God! why should they mock poor fellows thus?
The man that once did sell the lion's skin
While the beast liv'd was kill'd with hunting him.

A many of our bodies shall no doubt
Find native graves; upon the which, I trust,
Shall witness live in brass of this day's work;
And those that leave their valiant bones in France,

Hills, Dying like men, though buried in your dung-They shall be fam'd; for there the sun shall greet them,
And draw their honours reeking up to heaven,
Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime,
The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.

Mark, then, abounding valour in our English,
That, being dead, like to the bullet's grazing,
Break out into a second course of mischief,
Killing in relapse of mortality.
Let me speak proudly:—tell the constable
We are but warriors for the working-day;
Our gayness and our gilt are all besmitch'd
With rainy marching in the painful field;
There's not a piece of feather in our host,—
Good argument, I hope, we will not fly,—
And time hath worn us into slovenry:
But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim;
And my poor soldiers tell me yet ere night
They'll be in fresher robes; or they will phleg
The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads, [his,—
And turn them out of service. If they do

No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England:
God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour,
As one man more, methinks, would share from
For the best hope I have. O do not wish one more!
Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my
That he which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart; his passport shall be made,
And crowns for convoy put into his purse;
We would not die in that man's company
That fears his fellowship to die with us.
This day is call'd the feast of Crispian:
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.
He that shall live this day, and see old age,
Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours,
And say, To-morrow is Saint Crispian:
Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,
And say, These wounds I had on Crispin's day.
Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot,
But he'll remember with advantages [names,
What feats he did that day: then shall our Familiar in their mouths as household words,—
Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloster,—
Be in their flowring cups freshly remember'd.
This story shall the good man teach his son;
And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by,
From this day to the ending of the world,
But we in it shall be remembered,—
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers;
For he to-day that sheds his blood with me
Shall be my brother: be he ne'er so vile,
This day shall gentle his condition:
And gentlemen in England now a-bed [here,
Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not
And hold their manhoods cheap while any speaks
That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

Re-enter Salisbury.

Sal. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself with speed:
The French are bravely in their battles set,
And will with all expedition charge on us.

K. Hen. All things are ready if our minds be so.

West. Perish the man whose mind is backward now!

K. Hen. Thou dost not wish more help from England, coz?

West. God's will! my liege, would you and I alone,
Without more help, could fight this royal battle!
As, if God please, they shall,—my ransom then Will soon be loved. Herald, save thou thy labour;
Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald:
They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints,—
Which if they have as I will leave 'em them,
Shall yield them little, tell the constable.

Mont. I shall, King Harry. And so, fare thee well:
Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.

K. Hen. I fear thou wilt once more come again for ransom.

Enter the Duke of York.

York. My Lord, most humbly on my knee
I beg
The leading of the vaward.

K. Hen. Take it, brave York.—Now, soldiers, march away;—
And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Field of Battle.

Pist. Yield, cur!
Fr. Sol. Je pense que vous êtes le gentilhomme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Quality! Callino, castore me! art thou a gentleman? what is thy name? discuss.

Fr. Sol. O Seigneur Dieu!

Pist. O, Signeur Dew should be a gentleman:—
Perpend my words, O Signeur Dew, and mark;—
O Signeur Dew, thou diest on point of fox,
Except, O Signeur, thou do give to me
Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O prenez miséricorde! ayes pitié de moi!

Pist. May shall not serve; I will have forty moys;
Or I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat
In drops of crimson blood.

Fr. Sol. Est-il impossible d'échapper la force de ton bras?

Pist. Brass, cur!
Thou damned and luxurious mountain-goat,
Offer'st me brass?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez-moi! [moys?—

Pist. Say'st thou me so? is that a ton of Come hither, boy; ask me this slave in French
What is his name.

Boy. Écoutez: comment êtes-vous appelé?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.
Boy. He says his name is Master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and firk him, and ferret him:—discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firk.

Pist. Bid him prepare; for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur?
Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous faiissz vous prêt; car ce soldat ici est disposé tout d'hui de couper votre gorge.

Pist. Qui, coupe la gorge, par ma foi, pesant,
Unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns;
Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O, je vous supplie, pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonnez! Je suis gentilhomme de bonne maison: gardez ma vie, et je vous dencrois deux cents écus.

Pist. What are his words?
Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house: and for his ransom he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il?
Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier, néanmoins, pour les écus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franchissement.

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux je vous donne mille remerciements; et je m'estime heureux que j'suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks; and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one,—as he thinks,—the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show.—Follow me! [Exit.

Boy. Suivez-vous le grand capitaine. [Exit.

French Soldier.] I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart: but the saying is true,—the empty vessel makes the greatest sound. Bardolph and Nym had ten times more valour than this roaring devil 't the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger; and they are both hanged; and so would this be if he durst steal anything adventurously.
I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us if he knew of it; for there is none to guard
it but boys. [Exit.
SCENE V.—Another part of the Field of Battle.

ALARUMS. Enter Dauphin, Orleans, Bourbon, Constable, Rambures, and others.

Con. O diable!
Orl. O seigneur! le jour est perdu, tout est perdu!

Dau. Mort de ma vie! all is confounded, all! Reproach and everlasting shame [tune!—Sits mocking in our plumes.—O méchante for-do not run away. [A short alarum.

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.
Dau. O pernurable shame!—let’s stab ourselves.

Be these the wretches that we play’d at dice.
Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom? [but shame!

Bour. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing.
Let us die in honour: once more back again;
And he that will not follow Bourbon now,
Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand,
Like a base pander, hold the chamber-door
Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog,
His fairest daughter is contaminated. [now!

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil’d us, friend us
Let us on heaps go offer up our lives
Unto these English, or else die with fame.

Orl. We are now yet living in the field
To smother up the English in our throats,
If any order might be thought upon.

Bour. The devil take order now! I’ll to the throng:
Let life be short, else shame will be too long. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Another part of the Field.

ALARUMS. Enter King Henry and Forces, Exeter, and others.

K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice-valiant countrymen: [field.
But all’s not done; yet keep the French the Exe. The Duke of York commends him to your majesty.

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle? thrice within this hour
I saw him down; thrice up again, and fighting;
From helmet to the spur all blood he was.

Exe. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie
Larding the plain; and by his bloody side,— Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,—
The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies.
Suffolk first died: and York, all haggled over,
Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteelp’d,
And takes him by the beard; kisses the gashes
That bloodyly did yawn upon his face,

And cries aloud, Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk!
My soul shall thine keep company to heaven;
Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly a-breast;
As in this glorious and well-foughten field
We kept together in our chivalry!
Upon these words I came and cheer’d him up:
He smil’d me in the face, caught me his hand,
And, with a feeble grip, says, Dear my lord,
Commend my service to my sovereign.
So did he turn, and over Suffolk’s neck
He threw his wounded arm, and kiss’d his lips;
And so, espous’d to death, with blood he seal’d
A testament of noble-ending love.
The pretty and sweet manner of it forc’d
Those waters from me which I would have stopp’d;
But I had not so much of man in me,
And all my mother came into mine eyes,
And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not;
For, hearing this, I must performe compound
With mistful eyes, or they will issue too,—

ALARUM.

But, hark! what new alarum is this same?
The French have reinforce’d their scatter’d men:
Then every soldier kill his prisoners;
Give the word through. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another part of the Field.

ALARUMS. Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Flu. Kill the poys and the luggage! ’tis expressly against the law of arms: ’tis as amant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offered; in your conscience, now, is it not?

Gow. ’Tis certain there’s not a boy left alive; and the cowardly rascals that ran from the battle have done this slaughter: besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king’s tent; wherefore the king, most worthy, hath caused every soldier to cut his prisoner’s throat. O, ’tis a gallant king!

Flu. Ay, he was born at Monmouth, Captain Gower. What call you the town’s name where Alexander the pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the Great.

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig great? the pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnificent, are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations.

Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon: his father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is born. I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the field, I warrant you shall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth: it is called Wye at Monmouth; but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well; for there is figures in all things. Alexander,—Got knows, and you know,—in his rages, and his furies, and his wrathes, and his choleris, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his pest friend, Clytus.

Gouv. Our king is not like him in that: he never killed any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: as Alexander is kill his friend Clytus, being in his ales and his cups; so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his gout judgments, turned away the fat knight with the great pelly-doublet: he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveris, and mocks; I have forgot his name.

Gouv. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he:—I can tell you there is good men porn at Monmouth.

Gouv. Here comes his majesty.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY, with a part of the English forces; Warwick, Gloster, Exeter, and others.

K. Hen. I was not angry since I came to France

Until this instant.—Take a trumpet, herald;
Ride thou unto the horsemen on yond hill:
If they will fight with us, bid them come down,
Or void the field; they do offend our sight:
If they'd do neither, we will come to them,
And make them skirr as swift as stones
Enforced from the old Assyrian slings:
Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have;
And not a man of them that shall take
Shall taste our mercy:—go and tell them so.

Exe. Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to Enter Montjoy.

K. Hen. How now! what means this, herald?
Know'st thou not

That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom?

Com'st thou again for ransom?

Mont. No, great king:
I come to thee for charitable license,
That we may wander o'er this bloody field
To book our dead, and then to bury them;
To sort our nobles from our common men;
For many of our princes,—woe the while!—
Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood;
So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs
In blood of princes;—and their wounded steeds
Fret fetlock deep in gore, and with wild rage
Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,
Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great king,
To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies!

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald,
I know not if the day be ours or no;
For yet a many of your horsemen peer
And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength,
For it!—

What is this castle call'd that stands hard by?

Mont. They call it Agincourt.

K. Hen. Then call we this the field of Agin-Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, ift
Please your majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the Black Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most brave pattle here in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true: if your majesties is remembered of it, the Welshmen did gout service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps; which, your majesty knows, to this hour is an honourable padge of the service; and I do pe-

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour;
For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh plood out of your pody, I can tell you that: Got pless it and preserve it as long as it pleases his grace and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Cheshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the world: I need not be ashamed of your majesty, praised be Got, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep me so!—Our heralds go
Bring me just notice of the numbers dead
On both our parts.—Call yonder fellow hither.

Points to Will. Exeunt Mont. and others.
Ext. Soldier, you must come to the king.
K. Hen. Soldier, why wearest thou that glove in thy cap?
Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.
K. Hen. An Englishman?
Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night; who, if alive and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear: or if I can see my glove in his cap,—which he wore, as he was a soldier, he would wear if alive,—I will strike it out soundly.
K. Hen. What think you, Captain Fluellen? is it fit this soldier keep his oath?
Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience.
K. Hen. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.
Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath: if he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack sauce as ever his plack shoe trod upon God's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la.
K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meetest the fellow.
Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.
K. Hen. Who servest thou under?
Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege.
Flu. Gower is a good captain, and is good knowledge and literated in the wars.
K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.
Will. I will, my liege. [Exit.
K. Hen. Here, Fluellen: wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap: when Alençon and myself were down together I pluck'd this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost love me.
Flu. Your grace does me as great honours as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man that has but two legs that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once, and please God of his grace that I might see it.
K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?
Flu. He is my dear friend, an please you.
K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.
Flu. I will fetch him. [Exit.
K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick and my brother Gloster, Follow Fluellen closely at the heels:
The glove which I have given him for a favour
May haply purchase him a box o' the ear;
It is the soldier's; I, by bargain, should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick:
If that the soldier strike him,—as I judge
By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,—
Some sudden mischief may arise of it;
For I do know Fluellen valiant,
And, touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury: [them.—
Follow, and see there be no harm between Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exit.

Scene VIII.—Before King Henry's Pavilion.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Got's will and his pleasure, captain, I pensech you now, come apace to the king: there is more goot toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of.
Will. Sir, know you this glove? [glove.
Flu. Know the glove! I know the glove is a
Will. I know this; and thus I challenge it. [Strikes him.
Flu. 'Sblood, an arrant traitor as any's in the universal world, or in France, or in England!
Gow. How now, sir! you villain!
Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?
Flu. Stand away, Captain Gower; I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.
Will. I am no traitor.
Flu. That's a lie in thy throat.—I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him: he's a friend of the Duke Alençon's.

Enter Warwick and Gloster.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?
Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is,—praised be Got for it!—a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day.—Here is his majesty.

Enter King Henry and Exeter.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter?
Flu. My liege, here is a villain and a traitor, that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.
Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promised to wear it in his cap: I promised to strike him if he did: I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your majesty hear now,—saving your majesty's manhood,—what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is: I hope your majesty is bear me testimony and witness, and will avouchment, this is the glove of Alençon that your majesty is give me, in your conscience, now.

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier: look, here is the fellow of it.
'Twas I, indeed, thou promisedst to strike; And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. An please your majesty, let his neck answer for it if there is any martial law in the world.

K. Hen. How canst thou make me satisfac-

Will. All offences, my liege, come from the heart; never came any from mine that might offend your majesty.

K. Hen. It was myself thou didst abuse.

Will. Your majesty came not like yourself: you appeared to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your lowness; and what your highness suffered under that shape I beseech you take it for your own fault, and not mine: for had you been as I took you for, I made no offence; therefore, I beseech your highness, pardon me.

K. Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns,
And give it to this fellow.—Keep it, fellow;
And wear it for an honour in thy cap
Till I do challenge it.—Give him the crowns:
And, captain, you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his belly:—hold, there is twelve pence for you; and I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prattles, and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissensions, and, I warrant you, it is the better for you.

Will. I will none of your money.

Flu. It is with a goot will; I can tell you it will serve you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so pashful? your shoes is not so goot: 'tis a goot silling, I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter an English Herald.

K. Hen. Now, herald,—are the dead number'd?

Her. Here is the number of the slaughter'd French.

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle?

[Delivers a paper.]

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle?

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to the John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Boucicault:

Of other lords and barons, knights and squires, Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French number,
That in the field lie slain: of princes, in this And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead One hundred twenty-six: added to these, Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen, Eight thousand and four hundred; of the which Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights: So that, in these ten thousand they have lost, There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries; The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, squires,
And gentlemen of blood and quality.
The names of those their nobles that lie dead,—
Charles De-la-bret, high-constable of France;
Jaques of Chatillon, admiral of France;
The master of the cross-bows, Lord Rambures;
Great-master of France, the brave Sir Guiscard Dauphin;
John Duke of Alençon; Antony Duke of Bra-
The brother to the Duke of Burgundy;
Here was a royal fellowship of death!—
Where is the number of our English dead?

[Herald presents another paper.]
Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk, Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam, esquire:
None else of name; and of all other men
But five-and-twenty.—O God, thy arm washere; And not to us, but to thy arm alone,
Ascribe we all!—When, without stratagem, But in plain shock and even play of battle, Was ever known so great and little loss On one part and on the other?—Take it, God, For it is none but thine!

Exe. 'Tis wonderful!

K. Hen. Come, go we in procession to the village:
And be it death proclaimed through our host To boast of this, or take that praise from God Which is his only.

Flu. Is it not lawful, an please your majesty, to tell how many is killed?

K. Hen. Yes, captain; but with this acknowledgment,

That God sought for us.

Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great goot.

K. Hen. Do we all holy rites:
Let there be sung Non nobis and Te Deum;
The dead with charity enclos'd in clay:
We'll then to Calais; and to England then;
Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happy men.

[Exeunt.]
Enter Chorus.

Chor. Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story,
That I may prompt them: and of such as have,
I humbly pray them to admit the excuse
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper life
Be here presented. Now we bear the king Toward Calais: grant him there; there seen,
Heave him away upon your winged thoughts
Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach
Pales in the flood with men, with wives, and boys,
Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd sea,
Which, like a mighty whiffler, 'fore the king
Seems to prepare his way: so let him land;
And solemnly see him set on to London.
So swift a pace hath thought that even now
You may imagine him upon Blackheath;
Where that his lords desire him to have borne
His bruised helmet and his bended sword
Before him through the city: he forbids it,
Being free from vainness and self-glorious pride;
Giving full trophy, signal, and ostent,
Quite from himself to God. But now behold,
In the quick forge and working-house of thought,
How London doth pour out her citizens!
The mayor and all his brethren, in best sort,—
Like to the senators of the antique Rome,
With the plebeians swarming at their heels,—
Go forth, and fetch their conquering Caesar in:
As, by a lower but by loving likelihood,
Were now the general of our gracious empress,—
As in good time he may,—from Ireland coming,
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword,
How many would the peaceful city quit
To welcome him! much more, and much more cause,
Did they this Harry. Now in London place him;—
As yet the lamentation of the French
Invites the King of England's stay at home;
The emperor's coming in behalf of France,
To order peace between them;—and omit
All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd,
Till Harry's back-return again to France:
There must we bring him; and myself have play'd
The interim, by remembering you his past.
Then brook abridgment; and your eyes advance,
After your thoughts, straight back again to France.

Exit.

ACT V.

Scene I.—France. An English Court of Guard.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you, as my friend, Captain Gower:—the rascal, scald, peggarly, lousy, praging knave, Pistol,—which you and yourself, and all the 'orld, know to be no petter than a fellow, look you now, of no merits,—he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and pid me eat my leek: it was in a place where I could not preed no contention with him; but I will be so pold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks.

Enter Pistol.

Got pless you, Auncient Pistol! you scurvy, lousy knave, Got pless you!

Pist. I ha! art thou bedlam? dost thou thirst, base Trojan,
To have me fold up Parca's fatal web?
Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurvy, lousy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek: because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites, and your digestions, does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his goats.

Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him.] Will you be so goot, scald knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave,—when Got's will is: I will desire you to live in the meantime and eat your victuals: come, there is sauce for it. [Striking him again.] You called me yesterday mountain-squire; but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to: if you can mock a leek you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain: you have astonished him.
Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days.—Pite, I pray you; it is goot for your green wound and your ploody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt, and out of question too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge: I eat, and eke, I swear—

Flu. Eat, I pray you: will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel; thou dost see I eat.

Flu. Much goot do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away; the skin is goot for your proken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is goot:—hold you, there is a goot to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a goot!"

Flu. Verily and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy goot in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you anything I will pay you in cudgels: you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God b' wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate.

[Exit.

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of deceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel: you find it otherwise; and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well.

[Exit.

Pist. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me now?

News have I that my Nell is dead i' the spital Of malady of France; And there my rendezvous is quite cut off. Old I do wax; and from my weary limbs Honour is cudgel'd. Well, bawd will I turn, And something lean to cutpurse of quick hand. To England will I steal, and there I'll steal: And patches will I get unto these scars, And swear I got them in the Gallia wars.

[Exit.

Scene II.—Troyes in Champagne.

An Apartment in the French King's Palace.

Enter at one door, King Henry, Bedford, Gloster, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and other Lords; at another, the French King, Queen Isabel, the Princess Katharine, Lords. Ladies, &c., the Duke of Burgundy, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met! Unto our brother France, and to our sister, Health and fair time of day;—joy and good wishes [ine;—

To our most fair and princely cousin Kathar-And,—as a branch and member of this royalty, By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,— We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy:—

And, princes French, and peers, health to you all! [your face,

Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold Most worthy brother England; fairly met:— So are you, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England, Of this good day and of this gracious meeting As we are now glad to behold your eyes; Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them Against the French, that met them in their bent, The fatal balls of murdering basilisks: The venom of such looks, we fairly hope, Have lost their quality; and that this day Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love.

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear. Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.

Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love.

Great Kings of France and England! That I have labour'd With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeav-To bring your most imperial majesties Unto this bar and royal interview, Your mightiness on both parts best can witness. Since then my office hath so far prevail'd That face to face and royal eye to eye You have congregated, let it not disgrace me If I demand, before this royal view, What rub or what impediment there is Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace, Dear nurse of arts, plenty, and joyful births, Should not, in this best garden of the world, Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage? Alas, she hath from France too long been chas'd! And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps, Corrupting in its own fertility. Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart, Unpruned dies: her hedges even-pleach'd,
Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twigs; her fallow leas
The damel, hemlock, and rank linitory
Doth root upon, while that the couler rusts,
That should decerinate such savagery;
The even mead, at first brought sweetly forth
The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover,
Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank,
Conceives by idlenesse, and nothing teems
But hateful docks, rough thistles, keckies, burrs,
Losing both beauty and utility, [hedges,
And as our vineyards, fellow, teads, and
Defective in their natures, grow to wildness,
Even so our houses and ourselves and children
Have lost, or do not learn for want of time,
The sciences that should become our country;
But grow, like savages, as soldiers will,
That nothing do but meditate on blood,—
To swearing and stern looks, diffus'd attire,
And everything that is unnatural.
Which to reduce into our former favour
You are assemb'd: and my speech entreats
That I may know the lea why gentle Peace
Should not expel these inconveniences,
And bless us with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If, Duke of Burgundy, you would the p. see
Whose want gives growth to the imperfections
Which you have cited, you must buy that peace
With full accord to all our just demands:
Whose tenors and particular effects
You have, enschedul'd briefly, in your hands.

Bur. The king hath heard them; to the which as yet
There is no answer made.

K. Hen. Well, then, the peace
Which you before so urg'd lies in his answer.

Fr. King. I have but a cursory eye
O'erglance'd the articles: pleaseth your grace
To appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us once more, with better heed
To re-survey them, we will suddenly
Pass our accept and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall.—Go, uncle
Exeter,— [Gloster,—
And brother Clarence,—and you, brother
Warwick,—and Huntingdon,—go with the king;
And take with you free power to ratify,
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see advantageable for our dignity.
Anything in or out of our demands;
And we'll consign thereto.—Will you, fair sister,
Go with the princes or stay here with us?

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with
them;
Haply a woman's voice may do some good
When articles too nicely urg'd be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here with us:
She is our capital demand, compris'd
Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[Exeunt all but K. Hen., Kath, and Alice.
K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair!
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms
Such as will enter at a lady's ear,
And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me; I cannot speak your England.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonnez-moi, I cannot tell vat is like me.

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel.

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable à les anges?

Alice. Oui, vraiment, sauf votre grace, ainsi dit-il.

K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine; and I must not blush to affirmit.

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies.

K. Hen. What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Alice. Oui, dat de tongues de de mans is be full of deceits.—dat is de princess.

K. Hen. The princess is the better Englishwoman. I'faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for your understanding: I am glad thou canst speak no better English; for if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say I love you; then, if you urge me further than to say, Do you in faith? I wear ant my suit. Give me your answer, I'faith, do; and so clap hands and a bargain: how say you, lady?

Kath. Sans votre honneur, me understand vell.

K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me: for the one I have neither words or measure, and for the other I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my lack, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife.
Or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off.
But, before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly, nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation; only downright oaths, which I never use till urged, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun-burning, that never looks in his glass for love of anything he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook.
I speak to thee plain soldier: if thou canst love me for this, take me; if not, to say to thee that I shall die is true,—but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and un-coloured constancy; for he performes must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places: for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours,
they do always reason themselves out again.
What! a speaker is but a prater; a rhyme is but a ballad. A good leg will fall; a straight back will stoop; a black beard will turn white; acurled pate will grow bald; a fair face will wither; a full eye will wax hollow: but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon; or, rather, the sun, and not the moon,—for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me; and take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king: and what sayest thou, then, to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible dat I should love de enemies of France?

K. Hen. No; it is not possible you should love the enemies of France, Kate: but in loving me you should love the friend of France; for I love France so well that I will not part with a village of it; I will have it all mine: and, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French; which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Quand fais la possession de France, et quand vous avez la possession de moi,—let me see, what then?
Saint Denis be my speed!—donc, votre est France et vous estienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom as to speak so much more French: I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Save votre honneur, le Français que vous parlez est meilleur que l'Anglais que je parle.

Hen. No, faith, it's not, Kate: but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly false, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English,—Canst thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell,
Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me: and at night, when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me mercy-fully; the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou best mine, Kate,— as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt,—I get thee with scambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder:
shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? shall we not?
what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce?

Kath. I do not know dat.

K. Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy; and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, là plus belle Katharine du monde, mon très
défie et divin dessus?

Kath. Your majesté ave fainse French enough to deceive de most sage damoisele dat is en
France.

K. Hen. Now, fie upon my false French!
By mine honour, in true English, I love thee,
Kate: by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now, beshrew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me: therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that when I come to woo ladies I fright them.
But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax the better
I shall appear: my comfort is that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better:—and therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me?
Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand and say,—Harry of England, I am thine: which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal but I will tell thee aloud, England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine; who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shall find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music,—for thy voice is music and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English,—wilt thou have me?
Kath. Dat is as it sall please de roi mon père.
K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate,
it shall please him, Kate.
Kath. Den it sall also content me.
K. Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen.
Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez:
ma foi, je ne veux point que vous abaissez votre grandeur en baisant la main d'une votre indigne serviteur; excusez-moi, je vous supplie, mon très puissant seigneur.
K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.
Kath. Les dames et demoiselles pour être baisées devant leur noces, il n'est pas le coutume de France.
K. Hen. Madam, my interpreter, what says
she?
Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France,—I cannot tell vat is baiser en English.
K. Hen. To kiss.
Alice. Your majesty entendre bettre que moi.
K. Hen. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?
Alice. Oui, vraiment.
K. Hen. O Kate, nice customs court'sy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's fashion: we are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouth of all fand-faults,—as I will do yours for upholding the nice fashion of your country in deny me a kiss: therefore, patiently and yielding. [Kissing her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner per suade Harry of England than a general peti tion of monarchs.—Here comes your father.

Enter the French King and Queen, Burgundy, Bedford, Glos	ter, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and other
French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty! my royal cousin,
Teach you our princess English?
K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English.

Bur. Is she not apt?
K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her that he will appear in his true likeness.

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her you must make a circle; if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked and blind. Can you blame her, then, being a maid yet rosed-over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign
to.

K. Hen. Yet they do wink and yield; as love is blind and enforces.

Bur. They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do.
K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.
Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for maids well summered and warm kept are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

K. Hen. This moral ties me over to time and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.
K. Hen. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way.

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them per spectively, the citics turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls that war hath never entered.

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?
Fr. King. So please you.
K. Hen. I am content; so the maiden citics you talk of may wait on her: so the maid that stood in the way of my wish shall show me the way to my will.

Fr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

K. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?
West. The king hath granted every article:—
His daughter first; and, in sequel, all,
According to their firm proposed natures.
Exe. Only, he hath not yet subscribed this:—Where your majesty demands that the King of France, having any occasion to write
That never may ill office or fell jealousy,
Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage,
Thrust in between the paction of these kingdoms,
To make divorce of their incorporate league;
That English may as French, French Englishmen,
Receive each other!—God speak this Amen!

All. Amen! [which day, K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage:— on My Lord of Burgundy, we’ll take your oath,
And all the peers’, for surety of our leagues.
Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me;
And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be! [Exit.

ACT I.

Scene I.—Westminster Abbey.

Dead March. Corpse of King Henry the Fifth, in state, is brought in, attended on by the Dukes of Bedford, Gloster, and Exeter, the Earl of Warwick, the Bishop of Winchester, Heralds, &c.

Bed. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!
Comets, importing change of times and states,
Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky,
And with them scourge the bad revolting stars
That have consented unto Henry's death!

Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long:
England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.
Oho. England ne'er had a king until his time.
Virtue he had, deserving to command:
His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams;
His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings;
His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire,
More dazzled and drove back his enemies
Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces.
What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech:
He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered.
Exe. We mourn in black: why mourn we not in blood?
Henry is dead, and never shall revive:
Upon a wooden coffin we attend;
And death's dishonourable victory
We with our stately presence glorify,
Like captives bound to a triumphant car.
What! shall we curse the planets of mishap,
That plotted thus our glory's overthrow?
Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,
By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

Win. He was a king bless'd of the King of kings,
Unto the French the dreadful judgment-day
So dreadful will not be as was his sight.
The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought:
The church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glo. The church! where is it? Had not church-men pray'd,
His thread of life had not so soon decay'd:
None do you like but an effeminate prince,
Whom, like a school-boy, you may overawe.

Win. Gloster, whate'er we like, thou art protector,
And lookest to command the prince and realm.
Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe
More than God or religious churchmen may.

Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh;
And ne'er throughout the year to church thou
Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease these jars and rest your minds in peace!

Let's to the altar!—heralds, wait on us:
Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms;
Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead. —
Posterity, await for wretched years,
When at their mother's moisten'd eyes babes shall suck;
Our isle be made a marsh of salt tears,
And none but women left to wail the dead.

Henry the Fifth! thy ghost I invoke;
Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils!
Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
A far more glorious star thy soul will make
Than Julius Caesar or bright

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all!
Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture:
Guinette, Champaigne, Rheims, Orleans,
Paris, Guyors, Poictiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead
Henry's corse?
Speak softly; or the loss of those great towns
Will make him burst his head and rise from death.

Glo. Is Paris lost? is Rouen yielded up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again,

These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost? what treachery was

Mess. No treachery but want of men and money,
Among the soldiers this is muttered,—
That here you maintain several factions;
And whilst a field should be despatch'd and fought,
You are disputing of your generals:
One would have lingering wars, with little cost;
Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings;
A third man thinks, without expense at all,
By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.
Awake, awake, English nobility!
Let not sloth dim your honours, new-begot:
Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;
Of England's coat one half is cut away.

Exe. Were our tears wanting to this funeral,
These tidings would call forth her flowing tides.

Bed. Me they concern; regent I am of France.—

Enter a second Messenger.

2 Mess. Lords, view these letters, full of bad mischance.
France is revolted from the English quite,
Except some petty towns of no import:
The Dauphin Charles is crown'd king in Rheims;
The Bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;
Reignier, Duke of Anjou, doth take his part;
The Duke of Alençon flieth to his side.

Exe. The Dauphin crowned king! all fly to him!
O, whither shall we fly from this reproach?

Glo. We will not fly, but to our enemies' throats:

Bedford, if thou be slack I'll fight it out.

Bed. Gloster, why doubt'st thou of my forwardness?
An army have I musterd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is overrun.

Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My gracious lords,—to add to your laments,

Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's
I must inform you of a dismal fight
Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What! wherein talbot overcame? is't so?

3 Mess. O, no; wherein Lord Talbot was o'er-
The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last this dreadful lord, Retiring from the siege of Orleans, Having full scarce six thousand in his troop, By three-and-twenty thousand of the French Was round encompassed and set upon. No leisure had he to enrank his men; He wanted pikes to set before his archers; Instead whereof, sharp stakes, pluck'd out of hedges, They pitched in the ground confusedly, To keep the horsemen off from breaking in. More than three hours the fight continued; Where valiant Talbot, above human thought, Enacted wonders with his sword and lance: Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand him; Here, there, and everywhere, enrag'd he flew; The French exclaim'd the devil was in arms; All the whole army stood agaze'd on him: His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit, A Talbot! a Talbot! cried out amain, And rush'd into the bowels of the battle. Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up If Sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward: He, being in the vaward,—place'd behind, With purpose to relieve and follow them,— Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke. Hence grew the general wreck and massacre; Enclosed were they with their enemies: A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's grace, Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back: Whom all France, with their chief assembled strength, Durst not presume to look once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slain? then I will slay myself, For living idly here in pomp and ease, Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid, Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd.

3 Mess. O no, he lives: but is took prisoner, And Lord Scales with him, and Lord Hungerford: Most of the rest slaughter'd or took likewise.

Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay: I'll have the Dauphin headlong from his throne,— His crown shall be the ransom of my friend; Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours,— Farewell, my masters; to my task will I; Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make, To keep our great Saint George's feast withal! Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take, Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake. [sieg'd]

3 Mess. So you had need; for Orleans is be- The English army is grown weak and faint: The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply, And hardly keeps his men from mutiny. Since they, so few, watch such a multitude.

Exe. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn, Either to quell the Dauphin utterly, Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it; and here take my leave,

To go about my preparation. [Exit.

Glo. I'll to the Tower, with all the haste I can, To view the artillery and munition; And then I will proclaim young Henry king. [Exit.

Exe. To Eltham will I, where the young king is, Being ordain'd his special governor; And for his safety there I'll best devise. [Exit. Scene closes.

Scene II.—France. Before Orleans.

Enter Charles, with his Forces; Alençon, Reignier, and others.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens, So in the earth, to this day is not known: Late did he shine upon the English side; Now we are victors, upon us he smiles. What towns of any moment but we have? At pleasure here we lie near Orleans; Otherwhiles the famish'd English, like pale ghosts, Faintly besiege us one hour in a month.

Aren. They want their porridge and their fat bull-eeves: Either they must be dieted like mules, And have their provender tied to their mouths, Or piteous they will look, like drowned mice.

Reig. Let's raise the siege: why live we idly here? Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear: Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury; And he may well in fretting spend his gall,— Nor men nor money hath he to make war.

Char. Sound, sound alarum! we will rush on them.

Now for the honour of the forlorn French!— Him I forgive my death that killeth me, When he sees me go back one foot or llee. [Exeunt.
Alarums; excursions; afterwards a retreat.
Re-enter Charles, Alençon, Reignier, and others.

Char. Who ever saw the like? what men have I!—
Dogs! cowards! dastards! I would ne'er have fled
But that they left me midst my enemies.

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide;
He fighteth as one weary of his life,
The other lords, like lions wanting food,
Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alen. Froissart, a countryman of ours, records,
England all Oliver's and Rowlands bred
During the time Edward the Third did reign.
More truly now may this be verified:
For none but Samsons and Goliasses
It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten!
Lean raw-bon'd rascals! who would e'er suppose
They had such courage and audacity?

Char. Let 'e leave this town; for they are hair-brain'd slaves,
And hunger will enforce them to be more eager:
Of old I know them; rather with their teeth
The walls they'll tear down than forsake the siege.

Reig. I think, by some odd gimmers or device,
Their arms are set, like clocks, still to strike on;
Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do.
By my consent, we'll even let them alone.

Alen. Be it so.

Enter the Bastard of Orleans.

Bast. Where's the Prince Dauphin? I have news for him. [Ins.

Charr. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer appal'd:

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?
Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand:
A holy maid bitherto with me I bring,
Which, by a vision sent to her from heaven,
Ordained is to raise this tejious siege,
And drive the English forth the bound-of France.
The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,
Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome:
What's past and what's to come she can descry.
Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words,
For they are certain and infallible.

Char. Go, call her in. [Exit Bastard.] But first, to try her skill, Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place:
Question her proudly; let thy looks be stern:
By this means shall we sound what skill she hath.
[Retires.

Re-enter the Bastard of Orleans, with La Pucelle.

Reig. Fair maid, is 't thou wilt do these wondrous feats?
Puc. Reignier, is 't thou that thinkest to beguile me?— [behind:
Where is the Dauphin?—Come, come from
I know thee well, though never seen before.
Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me:
In private will I talk with thee apart.—
Stand back, you lords, and give us leave awhile.

Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash. [daughter,
Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's
My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.
I heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd
To shine on my contemptible estate:
Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs,
And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,
God's mother deigned to appear to me,
And in a vision full of majesty
Wilt'd me to leave my base vocation,
And free my country from calamity:
Her aid she promis'd and assur'd success:
In complete glory she reveal'd herself:
And whereas I was black and swart before,
With those clear rays which she infus'd on me,
That beauty am I bless'd with which you see.
Ask me what question thou canst possible,
And I will answer unpremeditated:
My course try by combat if thou dar'st,
And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex.
Resolve on this,—thou shalt be fortunate
If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms:
Only this proof I'll of thy valour make.—
In single combat thou shalt buckle with me;
And if thou vanquished, thy words are true:
Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Puc. I am prepar'd: here is my keen-edg'd sword,
Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each side;
The which at Touraine, in Saint Katherine's churchyard,
Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char. Then come, o' God's name; I fear no woman.

Puc. And while I live I'll ne'er fly from a man. [They fight.

Char. Stay, stay thy hands! thou art an Amazon,
And fightest with the sword of Deborah.

Puc. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak. [heal me;

Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must Impatiently I burn with thy desire;
My heart and hands thou hast at once subdued.
Excellent Lucelle, if thy name be so,
Let me thy servant and not sovereign be:
’Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus.

Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love,
For my profession’s sacred from above:
When I have chased all thy foes from hence,
Then will I think upon a recompense.

Char. Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.

Alen. Doubtless he shrews this woman to her smock;
Else neither could be so long protract his speech.

Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean?

Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do know:
These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reig. My lord, where are you? what devise you on?

Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Puc. Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants!
Fight till the last gasp: I will be your guard.

Char. What she says I’ll confirm: we’ll fight it out.

Puc. Assign’d am I to be the English scourge.

This night the siege assuredly I’ll raise:
Expect Saint Martin’s summer, halcyon days,
Since I have entered into these wars.
Glory is like a circle in the water,
Which never... to enlarge itself,
Till by broad spreading it disperse to naught.
With Henry’s death the English circle ends;
Dispersed are the glories it included.
Now am I like that proud insulting ship
Which Caesar and his fortune bare at once.

Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?

Thou with an eagle art inspired, then.
Helen, the mother of great Constantine,
Nor yet Saint Philip’s daughters, were like thee.

Bright star of Venus, fall’n down on the earth,
How may I reverently worship thee enough?

Alen. Leave off delays, and let us raise the siege.

Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours;
Drive them from Orleans, and be immortaliz’d.

Char. Presently we’ll try:—come, let’s away about it:—
No prophet will I trust if she prove false.

[Exeunt.

Scene III.—London. Before the Gates of the Tower.

Enter the Duke of Gloster, with his Serving-men in blue coats.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day:
Since Henry’s death, I fear, there is convey-Where be these warders, that they wait not here? Open the gates: Gloster it is that calls.

[Servants knock.

1 Ward. [Within.] Who’s there that knocks so imperiously?

1 Serv. It is the noble Duke of Gloster.

2 Ward. [Within.] Whoe’er he be, you may not be let in.

[Protector?

1 Serv. Villains, answer you so the lewd protectors?

1 Ward. [Within.] The Lord protect him! so we answer him:

We do no otherwise than we are will’d.

Glo. Who willed you? or whose will stand but mine?

There’s none protector of the realm but I.—
Break up the gates, I’ll be your warrantize:
Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

[Gloster’s Servants rush at the Tower-gates.

Wood. [Within.] What noise is this? what traitors have we here?

Glo. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear?
Open the gates; here’s Gloster that would enter.

Wood. [Within.] Have patience, noble Duke; I may not open;
The Cardinal of Winchester forbids:
From him I have express commandment
That thou nor none of thine shall be let in.

Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him for me,—

Arrogant Winchester? that haughty prelate
Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne’er could brook?

Thou art no friend to God or to the king:
Open the gates, or I’ll shut thee out shortly.

1 Serv. Open the gates unto the lord protector, [Quickly.

Or we’ll burst them open if that you come not [Gloster’s Servants rush again at the Tower-gates.

Enter Winchester, with his Serving-men in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey! what means this?

Glo. Peel’d priest, dost thou command me to be shut out?
Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor,
And not protector of the king or realm.

Glo. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator,
Thou that contriv'st to murder our dead lord;
Thou that giv'st whomes indulgences to sin:
I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat,
If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Win. Nay, stand thou back; I will not budge a foot:
This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain,
To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt. [back:

Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee
Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing-cloth
I'll use to carry thee out of this place.

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I hear thee to thy face.

Glo. What! am I dar'd, and bearded to my Draw, men, for all this privileged place;
Blue-coats to tawny-coats. — Priest, beware your beard;
I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly:
Under my feet I'll stamp thy cardinal's hat;
In spite of pope or dignities of church,
Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.

Win. Gloster, thou wilt answer this before the pope.

Glo. Winchester goose! I cry, a rope! a Now beat them hence, why do you let them stay?—

Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array.—

Out, tawny-coats! — Out, scarlet hypocrite!

Gloster and his Servants attack the other Party. In the tumult, enter the Mayor of London and Officers.

May. Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,
Thus contumeliously should break the peace!

Glo. Peace, mayor! thou know'st little of my wrongs:
Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor king,
11ath here distraint the Tower to his use.

Win. Here's Gloster, too, a foe to citizens:
One that still motions war, and never peace,
O'ercharging your free purses with large fines;
That seeks to overthrow religion,
Because he is protector of the realm;
And would have armour here out of the Tower,
To crown himself king and suppress the prince.

Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows. [Here they skirmish again.

May. Naught rests for me, in this tumultuous strife,
But to make open proclamation:—
Come, officer, as loud as e'er thou canst.

OFF. [Reads.] All manner of men assembled here in arms this day against God's peace and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death.

Glo. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law;
But we shall meet and break our minds at large.

Win. Gloster, we'll meet, to thy dear cost,
he sure:
Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work.

May. I'll call for clubs if you will not away:—
This cardinal's more haughty than the devil.

Glo. Mayor, ... well: thou dost but what thou mayst.

Win. Abominable Gloster! guard thy head;
For I intend to have it ere long.

[Execut severally, Glo. and Win., with their Servants.

May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.—
Good God, these nobles should such stomachs bear!
I myself fight not once in forty year. [Execut.

SCENE IV.—FRANCE. Before Orleans.

Enter, on the walls, the Master-Gunner and his Son.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd,
And how the English have the suburbs won.

Son. Father, I know; and oft have shot at
them,
However, unfortunate, I missed my aim.

M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou ruled by me:
Chief master-gunner am I of this town;
Something I must do to procure me grace.
The prince's espials have informed me
How the English, in the suburbs close intrench'd, Wont, through a secret grate of iron bars
In yonder tower, to overpeer the city,
And thence discover how with most advantage
They may vex us with shot or with assault.
To intercept this inconvenience,
A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;
And even these three days have I watch'd if I Could see them.
Now do thou watch, for I can stay no longer.
If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word;
And thou shalt find me at the governor's.

Exeunt.

Son. Father, I warrant you; take you no care;
I'll never trouble you if I may spy them.
Enter, in an upper Chamber of a Tower, the Lords Salisbury and Talbot, Sir William Glansdale, Sir Thomas Gargrave, and others.

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd! How wert thou handled being prisoner? Or by what means gott'st thou to be releas'd? Discourse, I pr'ythee, on this turret's top.

Tal. The Duke of Bedford had a prisoner Call'd the brave Lord Ponton de Santraillies: For him I was exchang'd and ransomed. But with a baser man of arms by far. Once, in contempt, they would have barter'd me: Which I, disclaiming, scorn'd; and craved death Rather than I would be so vile-esteeem'd.

In line, redeem'd I was as I desir'd. [heart! But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my Whom with my bare fists I would execute If I now had him brought into my power.

Sal. Yet tell'st thou not how thou wert entertained.

Tal. With scoffs, and scorns, and contumelious In open market-place produc'd they me, To be a public spectacle to all: Here, said they, is the terror of the French, The scarecrow that affrights our children so. Then broke I from the officers that led me, And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground To hurl at the beholders of my shame: My grisly countenance made others fly; None durst come near for fear of sudden death. In iron walls they deem'd me not secure: So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel, And spurn in pieces posts of adamant: Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had, That walk'd about me every minute-while; And if I did but stir out of my bed, Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd; But we will be reveng'd sufficiently. Now it is supper-time in Orleans: Here, through this grate, I can count each one, And view the Frenchmen how they fortify: Let us look in; the sight will much delight thee. —

Sir Thomas Gargrave and Sir William Glansdale. Let me have your express opinions Where is best place to make our battery next.

Gar. I think at the north gate; for there stand lords.

Glan. And I here, at the bulwark of the bridge.

Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd, Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Shot from the town. Sal. and Sir Thomas Gargrave fall.

Sal. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sinners!

Gar. O Lord, have mercy on me, woeful man!

Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath cross'd us? — Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst speak; How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men? One of thy eyes and thy cheek's side struck off! —

Accursed tower! accursed fatal hand That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy! In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame; Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the wars; Whilst any trump did sound or drum struck up, His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field. — Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? though thy speech doth fail, One eye thou hast, to look to heaven for grace: The sun with one eye vieweth all the world. — Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands! — Bear hence his body; I will help to bury it. Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life? Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to him. — Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort; Thou shalt not die whiles — He beckons with his hand, and smiles on me, As who should say, When I am dead and gone, Remember to avenge me on the French. — Plantagenet, I will; and like thee, Nero, Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn: Wretched shall France be only in my name. [Thunder heard; afterwards an alarum. What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens? Whence cometh this alarum, and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord, the French have gather'd head: The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,— A holy prophetess new risen up,— Is come with a great power to raise the siege. [Sal. lifts himself and groans.

Tal. Hear, hear how dying Salisbury doth groan! It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd. — Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you: — Pucelle or puzzle, dolphin or dogfish, Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels, And make a quagmire of your mingled brains. —
Convey me Salisbury into his tent,
And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.

[Exeunt, bearing out the bodies.

Scene V. — The same. Before one of the Gates.

[Alarum, skirmishings. Enter Talbot, pursuing the Dauphin, drives him in, and exit; then enter Joan la Pucelle, driving Englishmen before her, and exit after them: then re-enter Talbot.

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
A woman clad in armour chaseth them.
Here, here she comes.

Enter Joan la Pucelle.

I'll have a bout with thee;
Devil or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee:
Blood will I draw on thee, — thou art a witch, —
And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Puc. Come, come, 'tis only I that must disgrace thee.
[They fight.

Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?

My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet.
[They fight again.

Puc. [Retiring.] Talbot, farewell: thy hour is not yet come:
I must go victual Orleans forthwith.
O'er take me if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men;
Help Salisbury to make his testament:
This day is ours, as many more shall be.

[Joan enters the town with Soldiers.

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel:
I know not where I am nor what I do:
A witch by fear, not force, like Hannibal
Drives back our troops, and conquers as she lists:
So bees with smoke and doves with noisome stench
Are from their hives and houses driven away.
They call'd us, for our fierceness, English dogs;
Now like to whelpes we crying run away.
[A short alarum.

Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight
Or tear the jons out of England's coat.

Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:
Sheep run not half so timorous from the wolf,
Or horse or oxen from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.

[Alarum. Another skirmish.

It will not be: — retire into your trenches:
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.
Pucelle is enter'd into Orleans,
In spite of us or aught that we could do.
O, would I were to die with Salisbury!
The shame hereof will make me hide my head!

Flourish. Enter on the walls, Pucelle, Charles, Reigner, Alençon, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls:
Rescue'd is Orleans from the English: —
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.

Char. Divinest creature, Astarte's daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this success?
Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.
France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess! —
Recover'd is the town of Orleans:
More blessed hap did ne'er befal our state.

Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud throughout the town?
Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires,
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy
When they shall hear how we have play'd the men.

Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won;
For which I will divide my crown with her;
And all the priests and friars in my realm
Shall in procession sing her endless praise.
A statelier pyramid to her I'll rear
Than Rhodope's of Memphis ever was:
In memory of her, when she is dead,
Her ashes, in an urn more precious
Than the rich jewel'd coffer of Darius,
Transported shall be at high festivals
Before the kings and queens of France.
No longer on Saint Denis will we cry,
But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
Come in, and let us banquet royally,
After this golden day of victory.

[Flourish. Exeunt.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—Before Orleans.

Enter to the Gate a French Sergeant and two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant:
I: any noise or soldier you perceive
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.
1 Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergeant.]

Thus are poor servitors,
When others sleep upon their quiet beds,
Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, and Forces, with scaling-ladders; their drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord regent and redoubted Burgundy,—
By whose approach the regions of Artois,
Wallon, and Picardy are friends to us,—
This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banqueted:
Embrace we, then, this opportunity,
As fitting best to quittance their deceit,
Contriv'd by art and baseful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France!—how much he wrongs his name,
Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,
To join with witches and the help of hell.

Bur. Traitors have never other company.—
But what's that Pucelle whom they term so pure?

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid! and be so martial!

Bur. Pray God she prove not masculine ere long.

If underneath the standard of the French
She carry armour, as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse
With spirits:

God is our fortress, in whose conquering name
Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow thee.

Tal. Not all together: better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways;
That, if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed: I'll to yon corner.

Bur. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount or make his grave.—

Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear
How much in duty I am bound to both.
[The English scale the walls, crying St. George! A Talbot! and all enter the Town.

Sent. Arm! arm! the enemy doth make assault!

The French leap over the walls in their shirts.

Enter, several ways, Bastard, Alençon,
Reignier, half ready and half unready.

Bast. Unready! ay, and glad we 'scape'd so

Reign. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,
Hearing alarums at our chamber-doors,

Alen. Of all exploits since first I follow'd arms,
Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprise
More venturous or desperate than this.

Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reign. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour him. [he sped

Alen. Here cometh Charles: I marvel how

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Enter Charles and La Pucelle.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,
Make us partakers of a little gain,
That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike?
Sleeping or waking, must I still prevail,
Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?

Improv'd soldiers! had your watch been good
This sudden mischief never could have fall'n.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default,

Puc. That, being captain of the watch to-night,

Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept
As that whereof I had the government,

We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reign. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And, for myself, most part of all this night,

Within her quarter and mine own precinct
I was employ'd in passing to and fro,

About relieving of the sentinels:

Then how or which way should they first break in?

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the
How or which way; 'tis sure they found some place.
Scene II.—Orleans. Within the Town.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, a Captain, and others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled,
Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.
Here sound retreat, and ease our hot pursuit.

[Talbot sounds.]

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury,
And here advance it in the market-place,
The middle centre of this cursed town.
Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;
For every drop of blood was drawn from him,
There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night.
And that hereafter ages may behold
What ruin happen'd in revenge of him,
Within their chiefest temple I'll erect
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd:
Upon the which, that every one may read,
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans,
The treacherous manner of his mournful death,
And what a terror he had been to France.
But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,
I muse we meet not with the Dauphin's grace,
His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc,
Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,
Rous'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds,
They did, amongst the troops of armed men,
Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bur. Myself,—as far as I could well discern
For smoke and dusky vapours of the night,—
Am sure I scar'd the Dauphin and his trull,
When in arm they both came swiftly running,
Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves,
That could not live asunder day or night.
After that things are set in order here,
We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! Which of this princely train
Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts
So much applauded through the realm of France?
Tal. Here is the Talbot: who would speak with him?

[Auvergne,]

Mess. The virtuous lady, Countess of
With modesty admiring thy renown, [safe
By me entreats, great lord, thou wouldst vouch,
To visit her poor castle where she lies,
That she may boast she hath beheld the man
Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then I see our wars
Will turn unto a peaceful comic sport,
When ladies crave to be encounter'd with.
You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of men
Could not prevail with all their oratory,
Yet hath a woman's kindness overruled:
And therefore tell her I return great thanks,
And in submission will attend on her.

Will not your honours bear me company?

Bed. No, truly; it is more than manners will:
And I have heard it said, unbidden guests
Are often welcomed when they are gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,
I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.—
Come hither, captain. [Whispers.] You perceive my mind?

Capt. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly.

[Exit.]

Scene III.—Auvergne. Court of the Castle.

Enter the Countess and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge;

[me.

And where you have done so, bring the keys to Port. Madam, I will.

[Exit.

Count. The plot is laid: if all things fall out

I shall as famous be by this exploit
As Scythian Tomyris by Cyrus' death.
Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,
And his achievements of no less account:
Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears,
To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and Talbot.

Mess. Madam,
According as your ladyship desir'd,
By message crav'd, so is Lord Talbot come.
Scene III. — First Part of King Henry VI.

Count. And he is welcome. What is this the man?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France?

Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad
That with his name the mothers still their babes?
I see report is fabulous and false:
I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas, this is a child, a silly dwarf!
It cannot be this weak and writhed shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you;
But since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you. [Going.

Count. What means he now?—Go ask him whether he goes.

Mess. Stay, my Lord Talbot; for my lady craves
To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord;
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.
Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,
For in my gallery thy picture hangs:
But now the substance shall endure the like;
And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,
That hast by tyranny these many years
Wasted our country, slain our citizens,
And sent our sons and husbands captive.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall turn to moan.

Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond
To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow
Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal. I am indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself:
You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;
For what you see is but the smallest part
And least proportion of humanity:
I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your roof were not sufficient to contain it.

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce;
He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can these contrarieties agree?
I have, perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment;
But in these nice sharp quillots of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw. [Aside:
Plan. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance!
The truth appears so naked on my side
That any purblind eye may find it out.
Som. And on my side it is so well appareld,
So clear, so shining, and so evident,
That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.
Plan. Since you are tongue-tied and so loth to speak,
In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts:
Let him that is a true-born gentleman,
And stands upon the honour of his birth,
If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,
From off this brier pluck a white rose with me.
Som. Let him that is no coward nor no flatterer,
But dare maintain the party of the truth,
Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.
War. I love no colours; and, without all colour
Of base insinuating flattery,
I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet. [Aside:
Suf. I pluck! this red rose with young Somerset,
And say withal, I think he held the right.
Ver. Stay, lords and gentlemen, and pluck no more Till you conclude that he upon whose side
The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree
Shall yield the other in the right opinion.
Som. Good Master Vernon, it is well objected:
If I have fewest I subscribe in silence.
Plan. And I. [Aside,
Ver. Then, for the truth and plainness of the
I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,
Giving my verdict on the white rose side.
Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,
Lest, bleeding, you do paint the white rose red,
And fall on my side so, against your will.
Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt,
And keep me on the side where still I am.
Som. Well, well, come on; who else?
Law. Unless my study and my books be false,
The argument you held was wrong in you;
[To Som.
In sign whereof I pluck a white rose too.
Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?
Som. Here in my scabbard; meditating that Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red.
Plan. Meantime your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;
For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our side.
Som. No, Plantagenet,  'Tis not for fear, but anger that thy cheeks blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses,
And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.
Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?
Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?
Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;
Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.
Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses,
That shall maintain what I have said is true,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.
Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand,
I scorn thee and thy faction, pcevish boy.
Suf. Turn not thy scorns this way, Plantagenet.
Plan. Proud Poole, I will; and scorn both him and thee.
Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.
Som. Away, away, good William De-La-Poole!
We grace the yeoman by conversing with him.
War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him, Somerset;
His grandfather was Lionel Duke of Clarence,
Third son to the third Edward King of England:
Spring crested yeomen from so deep a root?
Plan. He bears him on the place's privilege,
Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.
Som. By him that made me, I'll maintain my words
On any plot of ground in Christendom.
Was not thy father, Richard Earl of Cambridge,
For treason executed in our late king's days?
And by his treason stand'st not thou attainted,
Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?
His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood;
And till thou be restor'd thou art a yeoman.
Plan. My father was attach'd, not attainted;
Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;
And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,
Were growing time once ripen'd to my will.
For your partaker Poole, and you yourself,
I'll note you in my book of memory,
To scourge you for this apprehension:
Look to it well, and say you are well warn'd.
Som. Ay, thou shalt find us ready for thee still;
And know us by these colours for thy foes,—
For these my friends, in spite of thee, shall wear.
Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose,
As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,
Will I for ever, and my faction, wear,
Until it flourish with me to my grave,
Or flourish to the height of my degree.
SCENE V. — The same. A Room in the Tower.

Enter Mortimer, brought in in a chair by two Keepers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himself. —
Even like a man new-haled from the rack,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment;
And these gray locks, the pursuivants of death,
Nestor-like aged, in an age of care,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer. [spent,— These eyes,—like lamps whose wasting oil is Wax dim, as drawing to their exsanguin: [grief;
Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening
And pithless arms, like to a wither’d vine
That droops his sapless branches to the ground:
Yet are these feet,—whose strengthless stay is numb,
Unable to support this lump of clay,—
Swift-winged with desire to get a grave,
As witting I no other comfort have. —
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?
I Keep. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come:
We sent unto the Temple, to his chamber;
And answer was return’d that he will come.

Mor. Enough: my soul shall then be satisfied.

Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal mine.
Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,—
Before whose glory I was great in arms,—
This loathsome sequestration have I had;
And even since then hath Richard been obscour’d,
Depriv’d of honour and inheritance.
But now the arbitrator of despairs,
Just death, kind umpire of men’s miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence:
I would his troubles likewise were expir’d
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter Richard Plantagenet.

I Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he?

Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us’d,
Your nephew, late-despised Richard, comes.

Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck,
And in his bosom spend my latter gasp:
O, tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks,
That I may kindly give one fainting kiss.—
And now declare, sweet stem from York’s great stock,
Why didst thou say of late thou wert despis’d?

Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm;
And, in that case, I’ll tell thee my disease.
This day, in argument upon a case,
Some words there grew ’twixt Somerset and me;
Among which terms he us’d his lavish tongue,
And did upbraid me with my father’s death:
Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,
Else with the like I had required him.
Therefore, good uncle, for my father’s sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet,
And for alliance sake, declare the cause
My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison’d me,
And hath detain’d me all my flowering youth
Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,
Was cursed instrument of his decease. [was

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that
For I am ignorant, and cannot guess.

Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit,
And death approach not ere my tale be done.
Henry the Fourth, grandfather to this king,
Deprived his nephew Richard,—Edward’s son,
The first-begotten, and the lawful heir
Of Edward king, the third of that descent:
During whose reign the Percies of the north,
Finding his usurpation most unjust,
Endeavour’d my advancement to the throne:
The reason mov’d these warlike lords to this
Was, for that,—young King Richard thus removed,
Leaving no heir begotten of his body,—
I was the next by birth and parentage;
For by my mother I derived am
From Lionel Duke of Clarence, the third son
To King Edward the Third; whereas he
From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,
Being but fourth of that heroic line.
But mark: as in this haughty great attempt
They laboured to plant the rightful heir,
I lost my liberty, and they their lives.
Long after this, when Henry the Fifth,
Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign,
Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd
From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York,
Marrying my sister, that thy mother was,
Again, in pity of my hard distress,
Levied an army, weening to redeem
And have install'd me in the diadem:
But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the title rested, were suppress'd.

Plan. Of which my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True; and thou seest that I no issue have,
And that my fainting words do warrant death:
Thou art my heir; the rest I wish thee gather:
But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me:
But yet methinks my father's execution
Was nothing less than bloody tyranny.

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic;
Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster,
And, like a mountain, not to be remov'd.
But now thy uncle is removing hence;
As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd
With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O uncle, would some part of my young years
Mify, but redeem the passage of your age!

Mor. Thou dost then wrong me,—as the slaughterer doth
Which giveth many wounds when one will kill.
Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good;
Only, give order for my funeral:
And so, farewell; and fair be all thy hopes,
And prosperous be thy life in peace and war.

[Dies.

Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul!
In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,
And like a hermit overpass'd thy days.—
Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast;
And what I do imagine, let that rest.—

Keepers, convey him hence; and I myself
Will see his burial better than his life.—

[Exeunt Keepers, bearing out the body of Mor.

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,
Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort:—
And for those wrongs, those bitter injuries,
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,
I doubt not but with honour to redress;
And therefore haste I to the Parliament,
Either to be restored to my blood,
Or make my ill the advantage of my good.

[Exit.

ACT III.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Gloster, Warwick, Somerset, and Suffolk; the Bishop of Winchester, Richard Plantagenet, and others. Gloster offers to put up a bill; Winchester snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,
With written pamphlets studiously devis'd,
Humphrey of Gloster? if thou canst accuse,
Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge,
Do it without invention, suddenly:
As I with sudden and extemporal speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest! this place commands my patience,
Or thou should'st find thou hast dishonour'd me.
Think not, although in writing I prefer'd
The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,
That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen:
No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,
Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentsuous pranks,
As very infants prattle of thy pride,
Thou art a most pernicious usurer;
Froward by nature, enemy to peace;
Lascivious, wanton, more than well beseems
A man of thy profession and degree;
And for thy treachery, what's more manifest,—
In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life,
As well at London bridge as at the Tower?
Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,
The king, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt
From envious malice of thy swelling heart.

Win. Gloster, I do defy thee. — Lords, vouchsafe
To give me hearing what I shall reply.
If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse,
As he will have me, how am I so poor?
Or how hap's it I seek not to advance
Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling?
And for dissension, who preferreth peace
More than I do,—except I be provok'd?
No, my good lords, it is not that offends;
It is not that that hath incensed the duke:
It is because no one should sway but he;
No one but he should be about the king;
And that engenders thunder in his breast,
And makes him roar these accusations forth.

But he shall know I am as good—

Glo. Thou art reverent

Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life.

Win. Rome shall remedy this.

War. Roam thither then.

Som. My lord, it were your duty to forbear.

War. Ay, see the bishop be not overborne.

Som. Methinks my lord should be religious,

And know the office that belongs to such.

War. Methinks his lordship should be humbler;

It fitteth not a prelate so to plead.

Som. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.

War. State holy or unhallow'd, what of that?

Is not his grace protector to the king?

Plan. Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue,

Lest it be said, Speak, sirrah, when you should;

Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords?

Else would I have a fling at Winchester.

[Aside.

K. Hen. Uncles of Gloster and of Winchester,
The special watchmen of our English weal,
I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,
To join your hearts in love and amity,
O, what a scandal is it to our crown
That two such noble peers as ye should jar!
Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell
Civil dissension is a vipers worm
That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth.

[A noise within, "Down with the tawny coats."

What tumult's this?

War. An uproar, I dare warrant,

Begin through malice of the bishop's men!

[A noise again, "Stones! Stones!"

Enter the Mayor of London, attended.

May. O, my good lords,—and virtuous

Henry,—

Pity the city of London, pity us!
The bishop and the Duke of Gloster's men,
Forbidden late to carry any weapon,
Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble stones,
And, banding themselves in contrary parts,
Do pelt so fast at one another's pate, [out:
That many have their giddy brains knock'd
Our windows are broke down in every street,
And we, for fear, compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter, skirmishing, the Retainers of Gloster and Winchester, with bloody pates.

K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourselves, [peace.—

To hold your slaught'ring hands, and keep the

Pray, uncle Gloster, mitigate this strife.

1 Serv. Nay, if we be Forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.

2 Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.

[Skirmish again.

Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish broil,

And set this unaccustomed'd fight aside. [man

3 Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a

Just and upright; and for your royal birth

Inferior to none but to his majesty:

And ere that we will suffer such a prince,

So kind a father of the commonweal,

To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate,

We, and our wives and children, all will fight,

And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes.

1 Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails

Shall pitch a field when we are dead.

[Skirmish again.

Glo. Stay, stay, I say!

And if you love me, as you say you do,
Let me persuade you to forbear awhile.

K. Hen, O, how this discord doth afflict my soul!—

Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold

My sighs and tears, and will not once relent?

Who should be pitiful if you be not?

Or who should study to prefer a peace,

If holy churchmen take delight in broils?

War. Yield, my lord protector;—yield,

Winchester;—

Except you mean, with obstinate repulse,

To slay your sovereign and destroy the realm.

You see what mischief, and what murder too,

Hath been enacted through your enmity;

Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.
Glo. Compassion on the king commands me stoop;
Or I would see his heart out, ere the priest
Should ever get that privilege of me. [duke
War. Behold, my Lord of Winchester, the Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,
As by his smoothed brows it doth appear:
Why look you still so stern and tragical?
Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.
K. Hen. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach
That malice was a great and grievous sin;
And will not you maintain the thing you teach,
But prove a chief offender in the same?
War. Sweet king!—the bishop hath a kindly girl.

For shame, my Lord of Winchester, relent!
What, shall a child instruct you what to do?
Win. Well, Duke of Gloster, I will yield to thee;
Love for thy love and hand for hand I give.
Glo. Ay, but, I fear me, with a hollow heart.—
See here, my friends and loving countrymen;
This token serveth for a flag of truce
Betwixt ourselves and all our followers:
So help me God, as I dissemble not!
Win. So help me God, as I intend it not!

K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind Duke of Gloster,
How joyful am I made by this contract!—
Away, my masters! trouble us no more;
But join in friendship, as your lords have done.
1 Serv. Content: I'll to the surgeon's.
2 Serv. And so will I.
3 Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

[Exeunt Servants, Mayor, &c.
War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign;
Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to your majesty.
Glo. Well urg'd, my Lord of Warwick;—for,
sweet prince,
An if your grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right;
Especially for those occasions
At Eltham Place I told your majesty. [force:
K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is
That Richard be restored to his blood.
War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;
So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd.
Win. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester.
K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that alone,
But all the whole inheritance I give

That doth belong unto the house of York,
From whence you spring by lineal descent.
Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience
And humble service till the point of death.
K. Hen. Stoop, then, and set your knee against my foot;
And in reguardon of that duty done
I girt thee with the valiant sword of York:
Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princely Duke of York. [fall!
Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy foes may
And as my duty springs, so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty!
All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty Duke of York!

Som. Perish, base prince, ignoble Duke of York! [Aside.
Glo. Now will it best avail your majesty
To cross the seas, and to be crown'd in France:
The presence of a king engenders love
Amongst his subjects and his loyal friends,
As it disanimates his enemies.
K. Hen. When Gloster says the word, King
Henry goes;
For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.
Glo. Your ships already are in readiness.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but Exeter.
Exe. Ay, we may march in England or in France,
Not seeing what is likely to ensue.
This late dissension grown betwixt the peers
Burns under feigned ashes of farg'd love,
And will at last break out into a flame:
As fester'd members rot but by degree,
Till bones and flesh and sinews fall away,
So will this base and envious discord breed.
And now I fear that fatal prophecy
Which in the time of Henry named the Fifth
Was in the mouth of every sucking babe,—
That Henry born at Monmouth should win all,
And Henry born at Windsor should lose all:
Which is so plain that Exeter doth wish
His days may finish ere that hapless time.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—FRANCE. Before Rouen.
Enter LA PUCELLE, disguised, and Soldiers dressed like Countrymen, with sacks upon their backs.
Puc. These are the city-gates, the gates of Rouen,
Through which our policy must make a breach:
Take heed, be wary how you place your words;
Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men
That come to gather money for their corn.
Scene II.

FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI.

583

If we have entrance,—as I hope we shall,—
And that we find the slothful watch but weak,
I'll by a sign give notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

1 Sol. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city,
And we be lords and rulers over Rouen;
Therefore we'll knock.

Guard. [Within.] Qui est là?

Puc. [Knocks.

Guard. [Opening the gates.] Enter, go in; the market-bell is rung.

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground.

[LA PUCELLE, &c., enter the Town.

Enter CHARLES, BASTARD OF ORLEANS,
ALÉNÇON, and Forces.

Char. Saint Denis bless this happy stratagem!
And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen.

Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle and her practitioners;
Now she is there, how will she specify
Where is the best and safest passage in?

Alén. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower; which, once discern'd, shows that her meaning

No way to that, for weakness, which she enter'd.

Enter LA PUCELLE, on a battlement, holding out a torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy wedding-torch
That joyneth Rouen unto her countrymen,
But burning fatal to the Talbotites.

Bast. See, noble Charles, the beacon of our friend;
The burning torch in yonder turret stands.

Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,
A prophet to the fall of all our foes!

Alén. Defer no time, delays have dangerous ends;
Enter, and cry The Dauphin! presently,
And then do execution on the watch.

[They enter. Exit LA PUCELLE above.

Alarum. Enter, from the Town, TALBOT and English Soldiers.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears,
If Talbot but survive thy treachery.—

Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress,
Hath wrought this hellish mischief unawares,
That hardly we escap'd the pride of France.

[Exeunt into the Town.}

Alarum: excursions. Enter, from the Town, BEDFORD, brought in sick in a chair, with TALBOT, BURGUNDY, and the English Forces.

Then enter on the walls LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, BASTARD, ALÉNÇON, and others.

Puc. Good-morrow, gallants! want ye corn for bread?
I think the Duke of Burgundy will fast
Before he'll buy again at such a rate:
'Twas full of darnel;—do you like the taste?

Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend and shameless courtzan!

I trust ere long to choke thee with thine own,
And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.

Char. Your grace may starve, perhaps, before that time.

Bed. O let no words, but deeds, revenge this

Puc. What will you do, good gray-beard? break a lance,
And run a tilt at death within a chair? [spite,

Tal. Foul fiend of France, and hag of all de-
Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours!
Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age,
And twit with cowardice a man half dead?
Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again,
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puc. Are you so hot, sir?—Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace;
If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.

[TALBOT and the rest consult together.

God speed the parliament! who shall be the speaker?

Tal. Dare ye come forth and meet us in the

Puc. Belyke your lordship takes us then for fools,
To try if that our own be ours or no.

Tal. I speak not to that raving Hecate,
But unto thee, Alénçon, and the rest;
Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out?

Alén. Signior, no. [France I

Tal. Signior, hang!—base muleteers of Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls,
And dare not take up arms like gentlemen.

Puc. Away, captains! let's get us from the walls;
For Talbot means no goodness, by his looks.—
God b' wi' you, my lord! we came but to tell you
That we are here.

[Exeunt LA PUC., &c., from the walls.

Tal. And there will we be too; ere it be long,
Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame!—

Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house,—

Prick'd on by public wrongs sustain'd in

France,—

Either to get the town again or die;
And I,—as sure as English Henry lives,
And as his father here was conqueror;
As sure as in this late-betrayed town
Great Ceur-de-Lion's heart was buried,—
So sure I swear to get the town or die. [vows.

_Bur._ My vows are equal partners with thy _Tal._ But ere we go, regard this dying prince,
The valiant Duke of Bedford.—Come, my lord,
We will bestow you in some better place,
Fitter for sickness and for crazy age.

_Bed._ Lord Talbot, do not so dis honour me;
Here will I sit before the walls of Rouen,
And will be partner of your weal or woe. [you.

_Bur._ Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade _Bed._ Not to be gone from hence; for once I read
That stout Pendragon, in his litter, sick
Came to the field, and vanquished his foes:
Methinks I should revive the soldiers' hearts,
Because I ever found them as myself.

_Tal._ Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!—
Then bettso:—heavens keep old Bedford safe!—
And now no more ado, brave Burgundy,
But gather we our forces out of hand,
And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exit into the Town, _Bur., Tal., and Forces, leaving _Bed._ and others.

_Alarum: excursions._ Enter _Sir John Fastolfe, and a Captain._

_Cap._ Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste? [flight:

_Fast._ Whither away! to save myself by
We are like to have the overthrow again. [bot?

_Cap._ What! will you fly, and leave Lord Tal-

_Fast._ Ay, all the Talbots in the world, i: save my life.

_Cap._ Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee! [Exit.

_Retreat: excursions._ Re-enter, from the town,
_La Pucelle, Alençon, Charles, &c., and excurs flying.

_Bed._ Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven
please,
For I have seen our enemies' overthrow.
What is the trust or strength of foolish man?
They that of late were daring with their scoofs
Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

_Dies, and is carried off in his chair.

_Alarum._ Re-enter _Talbot, Burgundy, and others._

_Tal._ Lost and recover'd in a day again!
This is a double honour, Burgundy:
Yet heavens have glory for this victory!

_Bur._ Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy
Enshrines thee in his heart; and there erects
Thy noble deeds, as valour's monuments.

_Tal._ Thanks, gentle duke. But where is _Pucelle now?
I think her old familiar is asleep:
Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks? [grief
What, all a-morn? Rouen hangs her head for
That such a valiant company are fled.
Now will we take some order in the town,
Placing therein some expert officers;
And then depart to Paris to the king,
For there young Harry with his nobles lie.

_Bur._ What wills Lord Talbot pleaseth Burgundy.

_Tal._ But yet, before we go, let's not forget
The noble Duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,
But see his exequies fulfilled in Rouen:
A braver soldier never couched lance,
A gentler heart did never sway in court;
But kings and mightiest potentates must die,
For that's the end of human misery. [Exeunt.

_SCENE III._—The Plains near Rouen.

Enter _Charles, the Bastard, Alençon, La
Pucelle, and Forces._

_Puc._ Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered:
Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied.
Let frantic Talbot triumph for awhile,
And like a peacock sweep along his tail;
We'll pull his plumes and take away his train,
If Dauphin and the rest will be but ruled.

_Char._ We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy cunning had no diffidence:
One sudden toil shall never breed distrust.

_Bast._ Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous throughout the world.

_Alen._ We'll set thy statue in some holy place,
And have thee reverence'd like a blessed saint:
Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our good.

_Puc._ Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devisc:
By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words,
We will entice the Duke of Burgundy
To leave the Talbot and to follow us. [that,
_Char._ Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do
France were no place for Henry's warriors;
Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
But be extirped from our provinces.

_Alen._ For ever should they be expuls'd from France,
And not have title of an earldom here.
Puc. Your honours shall perceive how I will work
To bring this matter to the wished end.

[Drums heard.]

Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive
Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

An English March. Enter, and pass over at a distance, Talbot and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread.
And all the troops of English after him.

A French March. Enter the Duke of Burgundy and his Forces.

Now in the rearward comes the duke and his;
Fortune in favour makes him lag behind.
Summon a parley; we will talk with him.

[A parley sounded.]

Char. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy?

Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words.

Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France!

Bur. Speak on; but be not over-tedious.

Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France,

And see the cities and the towns defac'd
By wasting ruin of the cruel foe!
As looks the mother on her lovely babe
When death doth close his tender dying eyes.
See, see the pining malady of France:
Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds,
Which thou thyself hast given her woeful breast!
O, turn thy edged sword another way;
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not them that help!

One drop of blood drawn from thy country's Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore:
Return thee, therefore, with a flood of tears,
And wash away thy country's stained spots.

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words,
Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Puc. Besides, all French and France exclaims on thee,
Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.
Who Join'st thou with but with a lordly nation
That will not trust thee but for profit's sake?
When Talbot hath set footing once in France,
And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill,

Who then but English Henry will be lord,
And thou be thrust out like a fugitive?
Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof,—

Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe?
And was he not in England prisoner?
But when they heard he was thine enemy,
They set him free, without his ransom paid,
In spite of Burgundy and all his friends.
See, then, thou fight'st against thy countrymen;
And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-men.
Come. come, return: return, thou wand'rest lord:

Charles and the rest will take thee in their arms.

Bur. I am vanquished; these haughty words
Of hers have bated me like roaring cannon-shot,
And made me almost yield upon my knees.—
Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen!
And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace:
My forces and my power of men are yours:
So, farewell, Talbot: I'll no longer trust thee.

Puc. Done like a Frenchman,—turn, and turn again!

Char. Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth he get new courage in our

Amen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part

And doth deserve a coronet of gold.

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers:

And seek how we may prejudice the foe.

[Exeunt.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, and other Lords, Vernon, Basset, &c. To them Talbot and some of his Officers.

Tal. My gracious prince,—and honourable peers,—

Hearing of your arrival in this realm,
I have awhile given truce unto my wars,
To do my duty to my sovereign:
In sign whereof, this arm,—that hath reclaim'd
To your obedience fifty fortresses,
Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,
Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem,—

Let's fall his sword before your highness' feet,
And with submissive loyalty of heart
Ascribes the glory of his conquest got
First to my God and next unto your grace.

K. Hen. Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle Gloster,
That hath so long been resident in France?
Glo. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege.
K. Hen. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord!
When I was young,—as yet I am not old,—
I do remember how my father said
A stouter champion never handled sword.
Long since we were resolved of your truth,
Your faithful service, and your toil in war;
Yet never have you tasted our reward,
Or been reguern'd with so much as thanks,
Because till now we never saw your face:
Therefore, stand up; and for these good deserts
We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury;
And in our coronation take your place.
[Exeunt K. Hen., Glo., Tal., and Nobles.
Ver. Now, to you, that were so hot at sea,
Disgracing of these colours that I wear
In honour of my noble Lord of York,—
Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou spak'st?
Bas. Yes, sir; as well as you dare patronage
The envious barking of your saucy tongue
Against my lord the Duke of Somerset.
Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is.
Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as York.
Ver. Hark ye; not so: in witness, take ye that.
[Strikes him.
Bas. Villain, thou know'st the law of arms is such
That whoso draws a sword 'tis present death,
Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood.
But I'll unto his majesty, and crave
I may have liberty to venge this wrong;
When thou shalt see I'll meet thee to thy cost.
Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you;
And, after, meet you sooner than you would.
[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—PARIS. A Room of State.
Enter King Henry, Gloster, Exeter, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Winchester, Warwick, Talbot, the Governor of Paris, and others.

Glo. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.
[exection
Win. God save King Henry, of that name the Glo. Now, governor of Paris, take your oath,— [Governor kneels.
That you elect no other king but him;
Esteem none friends but such as are his friends,
And none your foes but such as shall pretend
Malicious practices against his state:
This shall ye do, so help you righteous God!
[Exeunt Gov. and his Train.

Enter Sir John Fastolfe.
Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais,
To haste unto your coronation,
A letter was deliver'd to my hands,
Writ to your grace from the Duke of Burgundy.
Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy and thee!
[next,
I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee
To tear the garter from thy craven's leg,— [Plucking it off.
Which I have done,—because unworthy
Thou wast install'd in that high degree.—
Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest:
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,
When but in all I was six thousand strong,
And that the French were almost ten to one,—
Before we met, or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire, did run away:
In which assault we lost twelve hundred men;
Myself, and divers gentlemen beside,
Were there surpris'd and taken prisoners.
Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss;
Or whether that such cowards ought to wear
This ornament of knighthood, yea or no.
Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous,
And ill becomng any common man,
Much more a knight, a captain, and a leader.
Tal. When first this order was ordain'd, my lords,
Knights of the garter were of noble birth,
Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,
Such as were grown to credit by the wars;
Not fearing death nor shrinking for distress,
But always resolute in most extremes.
He, then, that is not furnish'd in this sort
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight,
Profaning this most honourable order,
And should,—if I were worthy to be judge,—
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.
K. Hen. Stain to thy countrymen, thou hear'st thy doom!
Be packing, therefore, thou that wast a knight:
Henceforth we banish thee, on pain of death.
[Exit Fastolfe.
And now, my lord protector, view the letter
Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy.
Glo. What means his grace, that he hath chang'd his style?
[Viewing the superscription.
No more but, plain and bluntly, To the King!
Hath he forgot he is his sovereign?
Or doth this churlish superscription
Pretend some alteration in good-will?
What's here?—[Reads.]—I have, upon especial cause,—
Mold'd with compassion of my country's wreck,
Together with the pitiful complaints
Of such as your oppression feeds upon,— Forsook your pernicious faction, [France.
And joind with Charles, the rightful King of O monstrous treachery! Can this be so,—
That in alliance, amity, and oaths,
There should be found such false dissembling
guile?
K. Hen. What! doth my uncle Burgundy
Glo. He doth, my lord; and is become your foe.
[contain?]
K. Hen. Is that the worst this letter doth
Glo. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.
K. Hen. Why, then, Lord Talbot there shall talk with him,
And give him chastisement for this abuse:—
How say you, my lord, are you not content?
Tal. Content, my liege! yes; but that I am prevented, [ploy'd.
I should have begg'd I might have been emi-
K. Hen. Then gather strength, and march unto him straight:
Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason,
And what offence it is to flout his friends.
Tal. I go, my lord; in heart desiring still
You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exit.

Enter Vernon and Basset.

Ver. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign! [too!
Bas. And me, my lord, grant me the combat York. This is my servant: hear him, noble prince! [him!
Som. And this is mine: sweet Henry, favou-K. Hen. Be patient, lords; and give them leave to speak.—
Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim?
And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom?
[wrong.
Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me
Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me wrong.
K. Hen. What is that wrong whereof you both
First let me know, and then I'll answer you.
Bas. Crossing the sea from England into
France,
This fellow here, with envious carping tongue,
Upbraided me about the rose I wear;
Saying the sanguine colour of the leaves
Did represent my master's blushing cheeks
When stubbornly he did repugn the truth

About a certain question in the law
Argu'd betwixt the Duke of York and him;
With other vile and ignominious terms:
In confusion of which rude reproach,
And in defence of my lord's worthiness,
I crave the benefit of law of arms.
Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord:
For though he seem with forged quaint conceit
To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know, my lord. I was provok'd by him;
And he first took exceptions at this badge,
 Pronouncing that the palkeness of this flower
Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.
York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?
Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out,
Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it.
K. Hen. Good Lord, what madness rules in brainsick men,
When for so slight and frivolous a cause
Such factions emulations shall arise!—
Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,
Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.
York. Let this dissension first be tried by light,
And then your highness shall command a peace.
Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;
Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then. [set.
York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somer-
Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.
Bas. Confirm it so! mine honourable lord.
Glo. Confirm it so! Confounded be your strife!
And perish ye, with your audacious prate!
Presumptuous vassals, are you not ashamed
With this immodest clamorous outrage
To trouble and disturb the king and us?—
And you, my lords,—methinks you do not well
To bear with their perverse objections:
Much less to take occasion from their mouths
To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves:
Let me persuade you take a better course.
Exe. It grieves his highness:—good my lords, be friends.
[combatants:
K. Hen. Come hither, you that would be Henceforth I charge you, as you love our favour,
Quite to forget this quarrel and the cause.—
And you, my lords, remember where we are;
In France, amongst a fickle wavering nation:
If they perceive dissension in our looks,
And that within ourselves we disagree,
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
To wilful disobedience, and rebel?
Beside, what infamy will there arise,
When foreign princes shall be certified
That for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henry's peers and chief nobility [France!
Destroy'd themselves and lost the realm of
O, think upon the conquest of my father;
My tender years; and let us not forgo
That for a trifle that was bought with blood!
Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife.
I see no reason, if I wear this rose,

[Putting on a red rose.]

That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset than York:
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both:
As well they may upbraid me with my crown,
Because, forsooth, the King of Scots is crown'd.
But your discretions better can persuade
Than I am able to instruct or teach:
And therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let us still continue peace and love.—
Cousin of York, we institute your grace
To be our regent in these parts of France:—
And, good my Lord of Somerset, unite
Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot;
And like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,
Go cheerfully together, and digest
Your angry choler on your enemies.
Ourself, my lord protector, and the rest,
After some respite, will return to Calais:
From thence to England; where I hope ere long
To be presented, by your victories,
With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.

War. My Lord of York, I promise you, the king
Prettily, methought, did play the orator.
York. And so he did; but yet I like it not,
In that he wears the badge of Somerset.
War. Tush, that was but his fancy, blame him not;
I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no harm.
York. An if I wist he did,—but let it rest;
Other affairs must now be managed.

[Execut York, War., and Ver.

Exe. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice:
For had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I fear we should have seen decipher'd there
More rancorous spite, more furious raging broils,
Than yet can be imagin'd or supposed.
But howsoe'er, no simple man that sees
This jarring discord of nobility,
This shouldering of each other in the court,
This factious handling of their favourites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.
'Tis much when sceptres are in children's hands;
But more when envy breeds unkind division;
There comes the ruin, there begins confusion.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. —FRANCE. Before Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter:
Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a parley. Enter, on the walls, the General of the French Forces, and others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry King of England;
And thus he would,—Open your city gates;
Be humble to us; call my sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects;
And I will withdraw me and my bloody power:
But if you frown upon this proposer's peace
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire;
Who, in a moment, even with the earth
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror and their bloody scourge!
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant man,
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit!
This is the latest glory of thy praise
That I, thy enemy, due thee withal;
For ere the glass that now begins to run
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

[Drum afar off.

Hark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul;
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

[Exit General, &c. from the Walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy:—
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.—
O, negligent and heedless discipline!
How are we park'd and bounded in a pale,—
A little herd of England’s timorous deer,
Maz’d with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be, then, in blood;
Not rascal-like to fall down with a pinch,
But rather, moody-mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends.—

God and Saint George, Talbot and England’s
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.

Enter York, with Forces; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return’d again,
That dogs’d the mighty army of the Dauphin?
Mess. They are return’d, my lord; and give it out
That he is march’d to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot: as he march’d along,
By your espials were discovered
Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led,
Which join’d with him, and made their march for Bourdeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply
Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid;
And I am louted by a traitor villain,
And cannot help the noble chevalier:
God comfort him in this necessity!
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength,
Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron,
And hemm’d about with grim destruction:
To Bourdeaux, warlike duke! to Bourdeaux,
York! [honour.

Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England’s York. O God, that Somerset,—who in proud heart
Doth stop my cornets,—were in Talbot’s place!
So should we save a valiant gentleman
By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire and wrathful fury makes me weep,
That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.

Lucy. O, send some succour to the distress’d
lord!

York. He dies, we lose; I break my warlike
word;
We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get;

All ’long of this vile traitor Somerset.

Lucy. Then God take mercy on brave Tal-bot’s soul;
[since
And on his son, young John, who two hours
I met in travel toward his warlike father!
This seven years did not Talbot see his son;
And now they meet where both their lives are done.

York. Alas, what joy shall noble Talbot have
To bid his young son welcome to his grave?
Away! vexation almost stops my breath,
That sunder’d friends greet in the hour of death.—

Lucy, farewell: no more my fortune can,
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.—
Maine, Blois, Poitiers, and Tours are won away,
Long all of Somerset and his delay.

[Exit, with Forces.

Lucy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition
Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders,
Sleeping negligence doth betray to loss
The conquest of our scarce-cold conqueror,
That ever-living man of memory,
Henry the Fifth:—whiles they each other cross,
Lives, honours, lands, and all, hurry to loss.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Other Plains of Gascony.

Enter Somerset, with his Forces; an Officer of Talbot’s with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now:
This expedition was by York and Talbot
Too rashly plotted: all our general force
Might with a sally of the very town
Be buckled with: the over-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour
By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure:
York set him on to fight and die in shame,
That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.

Off. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me
Set from our o’er-matched forces forth for aid.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Som. How now, Sir William! whither were you sent?

Lucy. Whither, my lord! from bought and sold Lord Talbot:
Who, ring’d about with bold adversity;
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beat assailing death from his weak legions:
And whiles the honourable captain there
My tender years; and let us not forego

Yields up his life unto a world of odds:

Alencon, Reignier, compass him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Swearing that you withhold his levied horse,
Collected for this expedition. [the horse:

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had
I owe him little duty and less love;
And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot:
Never to England shall he bear his life;
But dies betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will despatch the horsemen straight:
Within six hours they will be at his aid.

Lucy. Too late comes rescue; he is ta'en or slain:
For fly he could not, if he would have fled;
And fly would Talbot never, though he might.

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot, then, adieu!

Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The English Camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for the
To tutor thee in stratagems of war,
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd
When sapless age and weak unable limbs
Should bring my father to his drooping chair.
But,—O malignant and ill-boding stars!—
Now thou art come unto a feast of death,
A terrible and unavoided danger: [horse;
Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest
And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight: come, daily not, begone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your son?
And shall I fly? O, if you love my mother,
Dishonour not her honourable name,
To make a bastard and a slave of me!

The world will say, he is not Talbot's blood
That basely fled when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John. He that flies so will ne'er return again.

Tal. If we both stay we both are sure to die.

John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly:
Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me.
Upon my death the French can little boast;
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
Flight cannot stain the honour you have won;
But mine it will, that no exploit have done;
You fled for vantage, every one will swear;
But if I bow, they'll say it was for fear.
There is no hope that ever I will stay,
If the first hour I shrink and run away.
Here, on my knee, I beg mortality,
Rather than life preserv'd with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb? [womb.

John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's

Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.

John. No part of him but will be shame in me. [lose it.

Tal. Thou never hast renown, nor canst not

John. Yes, your renowned name; shall flight abuse it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.
If death be so apparent, then both fly.

Tal. And leave my followers here to fight and die?

My age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be sever'd from your side
Than can yourself yourself in twain divide:
Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I;
For live I will not if my father die. [son,

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair
Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.
Come, side by side together live and die;
And soul with soul from France to heaven fly.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Field of Battle.

Alarum: excursions wherein Talbot's Son is hemmed about, and Talbot rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight:
The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the rage of France his sword.
Where is John Talbot?—pause, and take thy breath;
I gave thee life and rescu’d thee from death.
     John. O, twice my father, twice am I thy son!
The life thou gav’st me first was lost and done,
T’ill with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,
To my determin’d time thou gav’st new date.
     Tal. When from the Dauphin’s crest thy sword struck fire,
It warm’d thy father’s heart with proud desire
Of bold-fac’d victory. Then leaden age,
Quicken’d with youthful spleen and warlike rage,
Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescu’d thee.
The irreful bastard Orleans,—that drew blood
From thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood
Of thy first fight,—I soon encountered,
And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed
Some of his bastard blood: and, in disgrace,
Bespoke him thus,—Contaminatet, base,
And misbegotten blood I spill of thine,
Mean and right poor, for that pure blood of mine
Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy:—
Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy, [care,—
     Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father’s
Art thou not weary, John? how dost thou fare?
Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,
Now thou art seal’d the son of chivalry?
Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead:
The help of one stands me in little stead.
O, too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lives in one small boat!
If I to-day die not with Frenchmen’s rage,
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age:
By me they nothing gain an if I stay,—
’Tis but the short’ning of my life one day:
In thee thy mother dies, our household’s name.
My death’s revenge, thy youth, and England’s fame:
All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay;
All these are sav’d if thou wilt fly away.
     John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart;
These words of yours draw life-blood from my
On that advantage, bought with such a shame,—
To save a paltry life, and slay bright fame,—
Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,
The coward horse that bears me fail and die!
And like me to the pleasant boys of France:
To be shame’s scorn, and subject of mischance!
Surely, by all the glory you have won,
An if I fly, I am not Talbot’s son:
Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot;
If son to Talbot, die at Talbot’s foot. [Crete,
     Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Thou Icarus; thy life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father’s side;
And, commendable prov’d, let’s die in pride. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another part of the same.

Alarums. Excuse Soldiers and Servant, being the body of John Talbot.

     Tal. Thou antic death, which laugh’st us here to scorn,
Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,
Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,
In thy despite, shall escape mortality.—
O thou whose wounds become hard-favour’d death,
Speak to thy father ere thou yield thy breath!
Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no;
Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe.—
Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should say,
     [to-day.—
Had death been French, then death had died
Come, come, and lay him in his father’s arms:
My spirit can no longer bear these harms.
Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,
Now my old arms are young Talbot’s grave. [Dies.

Alarums. Excuse Soldiers and Servant, being the two bodies. Enter Charles, Alençon, Burgundy, Bastard, La Pucelle, and Forces.

     Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in,
We should have found a bloody day of this.
Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging-wood,
Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood!

Puc. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said,
Thou maden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid:
But, with a proud majestical high scorn,
He answer'd thus, Young Talbot was not born
To be the paladin of a gigot wench:
So, rushing in the bowels of the French,
He left me proudly, as unworthy a fight.

Bur. Doubtless he would have made a noble knight:—
See where he lies interred in the arms
Of the most bloody nursier of his harms!
Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones asunder,
Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.
Char. O, no; forbear! for that which we have fled
During the life, let us not wrong it dead.

Enter Sir William Lucy, attended; a French Herald preceding.

Lucy. Herald,
Conduct me to the Dauphin's tent, to know
Who hath obtain'd the glory of the day,
Char. On what submissive message art thou sent?

Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere French word:
We English warriors not what it means,
I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en.
And to survey the bodies of the dead,
Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? hell our prison is,
But tell me whom thou seek'st.
Lucy. But where's the great Alcides of the Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury,—
Created, for his rare success in arms, [ence;
Great Earl of Washford, Watertord, and Val-
Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchienfield, Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdin of Alton, [Sheffield,
Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Farnival of
The three victorious Lord of Falconbridge;
Knight of the noble order of Saint George,
Worthy Saint Michael, and the Golden Fleece;
Great Marshal to Henry the Sixth
Of all his wars within the realm of France?
Puc. Here is a silly-stately style indeed!
The Turk, that two-and-fifty kingdoms hath,
Writes not so tedious a style as this.—
Him that thou magnificest with all these titles,
Stinking and fly-blown, lies here at our feet.

Lucy. Is Talbot slain,—the Frenchmen's only scourge,
Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis?

O were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd,
That I, in rage, might shoot them at your faces!
O that I could but call these dead to life!
It were enough to fright the realm of France:
Were but his picture left among you here,
It would amaze the proudest of you all.
Give me their bodies, that I may bear them hence,
And give them burial as beseems their worth.
Puc. I think this upstart is old Talbot's ghost,
He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit.
Here,
For God's sake, let him have 'em; to keep them
They would but stink, and putrefy the air.
Char. Go, take their bodies hence.
Lucy. I'll bear them hence:
But from their ashes shall be rear'd
A phoenix that shall make all France afeard.
Char. So be we rid of them, do with 'em what thou will,—
And now to Paris in this conquering vein:
All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—LONDON. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, and Exeter.

K. Hen. Have you perus'd the letters from the pope,
The emperor, and the Earl of Armagnac?

Glo. I have, my lord: and their intent is this,—
They humbly sue unto your excellency
To have a godly peace concluded of
Between the realms of England and of France.

K. Hen. How doth your grace affect their motion?

Glo. Well, my good lord; and as the only
To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
And stabilish quietness on every side.

K. Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always
It was both impious and unnatural
That such immanity and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith.

Glo. Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect
And surer bind this knot of amity,
The Earl of Armagnac,—near knot to Charles,
A man of great authority in France,— Proffers his only daughter to your grace
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry.

K. Hen. Marriage, uncle! alas, my years
Are young;
And fitter is my study and my books
Scene I.—First Part of King Henry VI.

Then wanton dalliance with a paramour,
Yet, call the ambassadors; and as you please,
So let them have their answers every one:
I shall be well content with any choice
Tends to God's glory and my country's weal.

Enter a Legate and two Ambassadors, with Winchester, now Cardinal Beaufort, in a Cardinal's Habit.

Exe. What! is my Lord of Winchester install'd,
And call'd unto a cardinal's degree?
Then I perceive that will be verified
Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy,—
If once he come to be a cardinal,
He'll make his cap co-equal with the crown.
K. Hen. My lords ambassadors, your several suits
Have been consider'd and debated on.
Your purpose is both good and reasonable;
And therefore are we certainly resolv'd
To draw conditions of a friendly peace;
Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean
Shall be transported presently to France.
Glo. And for the proffer of my lord your master,
I have inform'd his highness so at large,
As, liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,
Her beauty, and the value of her dowry,
He doth intend she shall be England's queen.
K. Hen. In argument and proof of which contract,
Her the jewel [to the Amb.], pledge of my affection.—
And so, my lord protector, see them guarded
And safely brought to Dover; where, m'shipp'd,
Commit them to the fortune of the sea.
[Exeunt K. Hen., Glo., Exe., and Ambassadors.

Win. Stay, my lord legate: you shall first receive
The sum of money which I promised
Should be delivered to his holiness
For clothing me in these grave ornaments.
Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure.
[Exit.

Win. Now Winchester will not submit, I trow,
Or be inferior to the proudest peer.
Humphrey of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive
That neither in birth or for authority
The bishop will be overborne by thee;
I'll either make thee stoop and bend thy knee,
Or sack this country with a mutiny. [Exit.

Scene II.—France. Plains in Anjou.
Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alençon, La
Pucelle, and Forces, marching.

Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:
'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt,
And turn again unto the warlike French.
Alen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France,
And keep not back your powers in dalliance.
Puc. Peace be amongst them if they turn to us;
Else ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Success unto our valiant general,
And happiness to his accomplish'd friends.

Char. What tidings send our scouts? I pr'ythee, speak.

Mess. The English army, that divided was Into two parts, is now conjoin'd in one,
And means to give you battle presently. [Is;
Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning
But we will presently provide for them.

Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there:
Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.

Puc. Of all base passions fear is most accurs'd:—
[thine;
Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be
Let Henry fret and all the world repine.

Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate! [Exeunt.

Scene III.—The same. Before Angiers.

Ambassadors: excursions. Enter La Pucelle.

Puc. The regent conquers and the Frenchmen fly,—
Now help, ye charming spells and periaps;
And ye choice spirits that admonish me,
And give me signs of future accidents,—
You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
Under the lordly monarch of the north,
Appear, and aid me in this enterprise!
[Thunder.

Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quick appearance argues proof
Of your accustom'd diligence to me.
Now, ye familiar spirits that are call'd
Out of the powerful legions under earth,
Help me this once, that France may get the field.
[They walk about and speak not.

O, hold me not with silence over-long!
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood
I'll lop a member off and give it you,
In earnest of a further benefit,
So you do condescend to help me now.

[They hang their heads.

No hope to have redress?—My body shall Pay recompense if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads.

Cannot my body nor blood sacrifice
Entreat you to your wonted furtherance?
Then take my soul,—my body, soul, and all,
Before that England give the French the foil.

[They depart.

See! they forsake me. Now the time is come
That France must vail her lofty-plumed crest,
And let her head fall into England's lap.
My ancient incantations are too weak,
And hell too strong for me to buckle with:
Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.

[Exit.

Alarums. Enter French and English, fighting. La Pucelle and York fight hand to hand: La Pucelle is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast:
Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,
And try if they can gain your liberty.—
A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace!
See how the ugly witch doth bend her brows,
As if, with Circe, she would change my shape!

Puc. Chang'd to a worse shape thou canst not be.

York. O, Charles the Dauphin is a proper
No shape but his can please thy dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee!
And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd
By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York. Fell, banishing hag; enchantress, hold thy tongue!

Puc. I pray thee, give me leave to curse a—York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake.

[Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter Suffolk, leading in Lady Margaret.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.

[She gazes on her.

O fairest beauty, do not fear nor fly!
For I will touch thee but with reverent hands,
And lay them gently on thy tender side.
I kiss these fingers for eternal peace.

[She kisses her hand.

Who art thou? say, that I may honour thee.

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a king,
The King of Naples—whoso'er thou art.

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.
Be not offended, nature's miracle,
Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me
So doth the swan her downy cygnets save.
Keeping their prisoners underneath her wings.
Yet, if this servile usage once offend,
Go, and be free again as Suffolk's friend.

[She turns away as going.

O, stay!—I have no power to let her pass;
My hand would free her, but my heart says no.
As plays the sun upon the glassy streams,
Twinkling another counterfeit beam,
So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.
Pain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak:
I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind:
Fie, De-la-Poule! disable not thyself;
Hast not a tongue? is she not here thy prisoner?
Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight?
Ay, beauty's princely majesty is such, [rough.
Confounds the tongue, and makes the senses

Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk,—if thy name be so,—

What ransom must I pay before I pass?
For I perceive I am thy prisoner.

Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy Before thou make a trial of her love? [Aside.

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransom must I pay?

Suf. She's beautiful, and therefore to be
She is a woman, therefore to be won. [Aside.

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom—yea or no?
Suf. Fond man, remember that thou hast a wife;

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour?

[Aside.

Mar. I were best leave him, for he will not

Suf. There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad.

Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. I'll win this Lady Margaret. For whom?

Why, for my king: tush, that's a wooden thing!

Mar. He talks of wood: it is some carpenter.
Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
And peace established between these realms.
But there remains a scruple in that too;
For though her father be the King of Naples—
Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,
And our nobility will scorn the match. [Aside.
Mar. Hear ye, captain,—are ye not at leisure?
Suf. It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so
Henry is youthful, and will quickly yield.—
[Aside.
Madam, I have a secret to reveal. [a knight,
Mar. What though I be enthrall'd? he seems
And will not any way dishonour me. [Aside.
Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.
Mar. Perhaps I shall be rescued by the French;
And then I need not crave his courtesy. [Aside.
Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—
Mar. Tush! women have been captivates ere now.
Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose
Your bondage happy, to be made a queen?
Mar. To be a queen in bondage is more vile
Than is a slave in base servility;
For princes should be free.
Suf. And so shall you,
If happy England's royal king be free. [me?
Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto
Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen;
To put a golden sceptre in thy hand,
And set a precious crown upon thy head,
If thou wilt condescend to be my—
Mar. What?
Suf. His love.
Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.
Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am
To woo so fair a dame to be his wife,
And have no portion in the choice myself.
How say you, madam,—are you so content?
Mar. An if my father please, I am content.
Suf. Then call our captains and our colours forth!—[Troops come forward.
And, madam, at your father's castle-walls
We'll crave a parley, to confer with him.

A Parley sounded. Enter Reignier on the Walls.
Suf. See, Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner!
Reig. To whom?
Suf. To me.
Reig. Suffolk, what remedy?
I am a soldier, and unapt to weep
Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.
Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord:
Consent,—and for thy honour give consent,—

Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king;
Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto;
And this her easy-held imprisonment
Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty.
Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?
Suf. Fair Margaret knows
That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign.
Reig. Upon thy princely warrant I descend,
To give thee answer of thy just demand.
[Exit Reignier from the Walls.
Suf. And here I will expect thy coming.

Trumpets sound. Enter Reignier below.
Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories;
Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.
Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,
Fit to be made companion with a king:
What answer makes your grace unto my suit?
Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth
To be the princely bride of such a lord,
Upon condition I may quietly
Enjoy mine own, the county Maine and Anjou,
Free from oppression or the stroke of war,
My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.
Suf. That is her ransom,—I deliver her;
And those two counties I will undertake
Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy.
Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name,
As deputy unto that gracious king,
Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith.
Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly thanks,
Because this is in traffic of a king:—
And yet, methinks, I could be well content
To be mine own attorney in this case.—
[Aside.
I'll over, then, to England with this news,
And make this marriage to be solemniz'd.
So, farewell, Reignier: set this diamond safe
In golden palaces, as it becomes.
Reig. I do embrace thee as I would embrace
The Christian prince, King Henry; were he here.
Mar. Farewell, my lord: good wishes, praise, and prayers
Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. [Going.
Suf. Farewell, sweet madam: but hark you,
Margaret,—
No princely commendations to my king?
Mar. Such commendations as become a maid,
A virgin, and his servant, say to him.
Suf. Words sweetly plac'd and modestly directed.
But, madam, I must trouble you again,—
No loving token to his majesty? [heart,
Mar. Yes, my good lord,—a pure unspotted
Never yet taint with love, I send the king.
Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her.
Mar. That for thyself,—I will not so presume
To send such peevish tokens to a king.
[Execut Reig. and Mar.
Suf. O, wert thou for myself!—But, Suffolk,
stay;
Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth:
There Minotaur's and ugly treasons lurk.
Solicit Henry with his wondrous praise:
Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount,
And natural graces that extinguish art;
Repeat their semblance often on the seas,
That when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder.

Scene IV.—Camp of the Duke of York in Anjou.

Enter York, Warwick, and others.

York. Bring forth that soreceress, condemn'd to burn.

Enter La Pucelle, guarded, and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy father's heart outright!
Have I soun'd every country far and near,
And now it is my chance to find thee out
Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?
Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with
thee!

Puc. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!
I am descended of a gentler blood;
Thou art no father nor no friend of mine.
Shep. Out, out!—My lords, an please you,
'tis not so;
I did beget her, all the parish knows:
Her mother liveth yet, can testify
She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.
War. Graceless, wilt thou deny thy parentage?
York. This argues what her kind of life hath Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes.
Shep. Fie, Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle!
God knows thou art a collop of my flesh;
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:
Deny me not, I pr'ythee, gentle Joan.
Puc. Peasant, avaunt!—You have suborn'd
this man,
Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.
Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest

The morn that I was wedded to her mother,—
Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.
Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time
Of thy nativity! I would the milk [breast
Thy mother gave thee when thou suck'dst her
Had been but ratsbane for thy sake!
Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field,
I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee!
Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab?
O, burn her, burn her! hanging is too good.

York. Take her away; for she hath liv'd too long,
To fill the world with vicious qualities.

Puc. First let me tell you whom you have condemn'd:
Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
But issu'd from the progeny of kings;
Virtuous and holy; chosen from above,
By inspiration of celestial grace,
To work exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked spirits:
But you,—that are polluted with your lusts,
Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,—
Because you want the grace that others have,
You judge it straight a thing impossible.
To compass wonders but by help of devils.
No, misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been
A virgin from her tender infancy,
Chaste and immaculate in every thought;
Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd,
Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.
York. Ay, ay:—away with her to execution!
War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid,
Spare for no fagots, let there be enow:
lace barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.
Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?
Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity,
That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.—
I am with child, ye bloody homicides:
Murder not, then, the fruit within my womb,
Although ye hale me to a violent death.
York. Now heaven forbend! the holy maid with child!

War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye
Is all your strict preciseness come to this?
York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling:
I did imagine what would be her refuge. [live;
War. Well, go to; we will have no bastards Especially since Charles must father it. [his:
Puc. You are deceiv'd; my child is none of
It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.
York. Alençon! that notorious Machiavel! It dies, an if it had a thousand lives.

Pue. O, give me leave, I have deluded you: 'Twas neither Charles nor yet the duke I nam'd, But Reignier, King of Naples, that prevail'd.

War. A married man! that's most intolerable.

York. Why, here's a girl!—I think she knows not well— There were so many—whom she may accuse.

War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.

York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.— Strumpet, thy words condemne thy brat and thee: Use no entreaty, for it is in vain.

Pue. Then lead me hence;—with whom I leave my curse: May never glorious sun reflex his beams Upon the country where you make abode; But darkness and the gloomy shade of death Environ you, till mischief and despair Drive you to break your necks or hang yourselves!

York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes, Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT, attened.

Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellency With letters of commission from the king, For know, my lords, the states of Christendom, Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broils, Have earnestly implor'd a general peace Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French; And here at hand the Dauphin and his train Approacheth, to confer about some matter.

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect? After the slaughter of so many peers, So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers, That in this quarrel have been overthrown, And sold their bodies for their country's benefit, Shall we at last conclude inpatient peace? Have we not lost most part of all the towns, By treason, falsehood, and by treachery, Our great progenitors had conquer'd?— O Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a peace, It shall be with such strict and severe cove. As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, attended; ALENÇON, BASTARD, REIGNIER, and others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in

We come to be informed by yourselves What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes The hollow passage of my prison'd voice, By sight of these our baleful enemies.

Car. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus: That in regard King Henry gives consent, Of mere compassion and of lenity, To ease your country of distressful war, And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,— You shall become true liegemen to his crown: And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear To pay him tribute and submit thyself, Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him, And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Allen. Must he be, then, as shadow of him— Adorn his temples with a coronet, And yet, in substance and authority, Retain but privilege of a private man?

This prof'er is absurd and reasonless.

Char. 'Tis known already that I am pos— With more than half the Gallian territories, And therein rever'd for their lawful king: Shall I, for lute of the rest unvanquish'd, Detract so much from that prerogative As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?

No, lord ambassador; I'll rather keep That which I have than, coveting more, Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret means Us'd intercession to obtain a league, And now the matter grows to compromise Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison? Either accept the title thou usurp'st, Of benefit proceeding from our king, And not of any challenge of desert, Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reg. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy To cavil in the course of this contract: If once it be neglected, ten to one We shall not find like opportunity.

Allen. To say the truth, it is your policy To save your subjects from such massacre And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen By our proceeding in hostility; And therefore take this compact of a truce, Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

Aslde to Charles.

War. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?

Char. It shall; Only reserv'd, you claim no interest In any of our towns of garrison.

York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty, As thou art knight, never to disobey
Not be rebellious to the crown of England,—
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.

[Charles and the rest give tokens of fealty.]
So, now dismiss your army when ye please;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—LONDON. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, in conference with Suffolk; Gloster and Exeter following.

K. Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish’d me:
Her virtues, graced with external gifts,
Do breed love’s settled passions in my heart:
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven, by breath of her renown,
Either to suffer shipwreck or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.
[Suffolk. Tush, my good lord,—this superficial
Is but a preface of her worthy praise:
The chiefe perfections of that lovely dame,—
    Had I sufficient skill to utter them,—
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
    Able to ravish any dull conceit:
And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full-replete with choice of all delights,
But, with as humble lowliness of mind,
She is content to be at your command;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents.
    To love and honour Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne’er presume.
Therefore, my lord protector, give consent
That Margaret may be England’s royal queen.

Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin.
You know, my lord, your highness is betroth’d
Unto another lady of esteem:  [tract,
How shall we, then, dispense with that con—
And not deface your honour with reproach?

Suffolk. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths;
Or one that, at a triumph having vow’d
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary’s odds:
A poor earl’s daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that?
Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excels.

Suffolk. Yes, my lord, her father is a king,
The King of Naples and Jerusalem;
And of such great authority in France
As his alliance will confirm our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glo. And so the Earl of Armagnac may do,
Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

Exeater. Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower;
While Reignier sooner will receive than give.

Suffolk. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your king,
That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect love.
Henry is able to enrich his queen,
And not to seek a queen to make him rich:
So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,
As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
Marriage is a matter of more worth
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship;
Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects,
Must be companion of his nuptial bed:
And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,
It most of all these reasons bindeth us
In our opinions she should be prefer’d.
For what is wedlock forced but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife?
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace.
Whom should we match with Henry, being a king,
But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?
Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,
Approves her fit for none but for a king:
Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit,—
More than in women commonly is seen,—
Will answer our hope in issue of a king;
For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget more conquerors,
If with a lady of so high resolve
As is fair Margaret he be link’d in love, [me
Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with
That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she.

K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report,
My noble Lord of Suffolk, or for that
My tender youth was never yet attain’d
With any passion of inflaming love,
I cannot tell; but this I am assur’d,
I feel such sharp dispersion in my breast,
Such fierce alarums both of hope and fear,
As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
Take therefore shipping; post, my lord, to France;
Agree to any covenants; and procure
That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
To cross the seas to England, and be crown’d
King Henry’s faithful and anointed queen:
For your expenses and sufficient charge,
Among the people gather up a tenth.
Be gone, I say; for, till you do return,
I rest perplexed with a thousand cares.—
And you, good uncle, banish all offence:
If you do censure me by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuse
This sudden execution of my will.
And so, conduct me where, from company,
I may revolve and ruminate my grief.  [Exit.

Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.
[Execunt Gloster and Exeter.

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail’d; and thus he goes,
As did the youthful Paris once to Greece,
With hope to find the like event in love,
But prosper better than the Trojan did.
Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king;
But I will rule both her, the king, and realm.
[Exit.

Scene,—Dispersedly in various parts of England.

Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty reverend bishops,
I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd:
And humbly now, upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and her lordly peers,
Deliver up my title in the queen's [stance
To your most gracious hands, that are the sub-
Of that great shadow I did represent;
The happiest gift that ever marquis gave,
The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd.

K. Hen. Suffolk, arise.—Welcome, Queen Margaret:
I can express no kinder sign of love [life,
Than this kind kiss.—O Lord, that lends me
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness!
For thou hast given me, in this beauteous face,
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Q. Mar. Great King of England, and my gracious lord,
The mutual conference that my mind hath had,
By day, by night, waking and in my dreams,
In courtly company or at my beads,
With you, mine elder-lest sovereign,
Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms, such as my wit affords
And over-joy of heart doth minister. [speech,
K. Hen. Her sight did ravish; but her grace in Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me from wondering fall to weeping joys;
Such is the fulness of my heart's content.—
Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.
All. [Kneeling.] Long live Queen Margaret,
England's happiness!
Q. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish.
Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace,
Here are the articles of contracted peace
Between our sovereign and the French King Charles,
For eighteen months concluded by consent.
Glo. [Reads.] Imprimis, It is agreed between the French King Charles and William De-la-Poole, Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, that the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Keignier King of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem; and crown her Queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing.—Item,—That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the king her father,—
K. Hen. Uncle, how now!
Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord;
Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart,
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no
further.
K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray read on.
Car. [Reads.] Item,—It is further agreed between them that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry.
K. Hen. They please us well.—Lord marquess, kneel down:
We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the sword.—Cousin of York,
We here discharge your grace from being regent
' I' the parts of France, till term of eighteen months
Be full expir'd.—Thanks, uncle Winchester,
Gloster, York, Buckingham, Somerset,
Salisbury, and Warwick;
We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in; and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.
[Execut KING, QUEEN, and SUFFOLK.
Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state,
To you Duke Humphrey must unload his grief,—
Your grief, the common grief of all the land.
What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people in the wars?
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In winter's cold and summer's parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my brother Bedford toil his wits
To keep by policy what Henry got?
Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receive'd deep scars in France and Normandy?
Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and myself,
With all the learned council of the realm,
Studied so long, sat in the council-house
Early and late, debating to and fro [awe
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in
And hath his highness in his infancy
Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes?
And shall these labours and these honours die?
Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your deeds of war, and all our counsel die?
O peers of England, shameful is this league!
Fatal this marriage! cancelling your fame,
Blotting your names from books of memory,
Razing the characters of your renown.
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,
Undoing all, as all had never been!
Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse,
This peroration with such circumstance?
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.
Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it if we can;
But now it is impossible we should:
Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roost,
Hath given the duchy of Anjou and Maine
Unto the poor King Keignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.
Sal. Now, by the death of Him that died for all,
These counties were the keys of Normandy:—
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?
War. For grief that they are past recovery:
For were there hope to conquer them again
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears.
Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:
And are the cities that I got with wounds
Deliver’d up again with peaceful words?
Mort Dieu! [cates
York. For Suffolk’s duke, may he be suffo-
That dims the honour of this warlike isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart
Before I would have yielded to this league.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

[ACT I.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure
You do prepare to ride unto Saint Albans,
Whereas the king and queen do mean to hawk.
Glo. I go.—Come, Nell,—thou wilt ride with us? [sently.

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll follow pre-[Exeunt Gloster and Messenger.

Follow I must; I cannot go before
While Gloster bears this base and humble mind.
Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks,
And smooth my way upon their headless necks:
And, being a woman, I will not be slack
To play my part in fortune's pageant.—
Where are you there, Sir John? Nay, fear not, man,
We are alone; here's none but thee and I.

Enter Hume.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal majesty
Duch. What say'st thou? majesty! I am but grace.
Hume. But, by the grace of God and Hume's Your grace's title shall be multiplied.
Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as yet consent'd
With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch,
With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?
And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promised,—to show your highness.
A spirit rais'd from depth of under-ground,
That shall make answer to such questions
As by your grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions:
When from Saint Albans we do make return
We'll see these things effected to the full.
Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man,
With thy confederates in this weighty cause.
[Exit.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold;
Marry, and shall. But, how now, Sir John Hume!
Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum:
The business asketh silent secrecy.
Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch:
Gold cannot come amiss were she a devil.
Yet have I gold flies from another coast:—
I dare not say from the rich cardinal,
And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk;
Yet do I find it so: for, to be plain,
They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring hum-

Out, have hired me to undermine the duchess,
And buzz these conjurations in her brain.
They say,—A crafty knave does need no broker;
Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker.
Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.
Well, so it stands; and thus, I hear, at last
Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wreck,
And her attainture will be Humphrey's fall:
Sort how it will, I shall have gold for all.
[Exit.

SCENE III.—LONDON. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Peter and other Petitioners.

1 Pet. My masters, let's stand close: my lord protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.

2 Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him!

1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the queen with him. I'll be the first, sure.

Enter Suffolk and Queen Margaret.

2 Pet. Come back, fool; this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow! wouldst anything with me?

1 Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me; I took ye for my lord protector.

Q. Mar. [Glancing at the superscriptions.] To my Lord Protector! Are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them:—what is thine?

1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too! that is some wrong indeed.—What's yours?—What's here! [Reads.] Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.—How now, sir knave?

2 Pet. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What say'st thou? did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was? no, forsooth: my master said that he was; and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servants.]—Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuant presently:—we'll hear more of your matter before the king.

[Exeunt Servants with Peter.

Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protecting
Under the wings of our protector's grace,
Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Tears the petitions.

Away, base cullions!—Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone.

Q. Mar. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,
Is this the fashion in the court of England?
Is this the government of Britain's isle,
And this the royalty of Albion's king?
What, shall King Henry be a pupil still,
Under the surly Gloster's governance?
Am I a queen in title and in style,
And must be made a subject to a duke?
I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours
Thou m'st a tilt in honour of my love,
And sto'st away the ladies' hearts of France.
I thought King Henry had resembled thee
In courage, courtship, and proportion:
But all his mind is bent to holiness,
To number Ave-Maries on his beads:
His champions are, the prophets and apostles;
His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ;
His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves
Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints.
I would the college of the cardinals
Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome,
And set the triple crown upon his head:—
That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause
Your highness came to England, so will I
In England work your grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haughty protector, have we Beaufort

The imperious churchman, Somerset, Bucking.
And grumbling York; and not the least of these
But can do more in England than the king.

Suf. And he of these that can do most of all
Cannot do more in England than the Nevils:
Salsbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much
As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife.
She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies,

More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's
Strangers in court do take her for the queen:
She bears a duke's revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorns our poverty:
Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?
Contemptuous base-born callet as she is,

She vaunted 'mongst her minions t' other day
The very train of her worst wearing gown
Was better worth than all my father's lands,
Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her,
And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds
That she will light to listen to the lays,
And never mount to trouble you again.
So, let her rest: and, madam, list to me;
For I am bold to counsel you in this.
Although we fancy not the cardinal,
Yet must we join with him and with the lords,
Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.
As for the Duke of York,—this late complaint
Will make but little for his benefit.
So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Enter King Henry, York, and Somerset;
Duke and Duchess of Gloster, Cardinal Beaufort, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwick.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;
Or Somerset or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,
Then let him be denay'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be regent; I will yield to him. [no,

War. Whether your grace be worthy, yea or Dispute not that: York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters
speak.

War. The cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy betters,

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all,

Sal. Peace, son!—and show some reason,

Buckingham,
Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.

Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.

Glo. Madam, the king is old enough himself
To give his censure: these are no women's

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your
To be protector of his excellence?

Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm;
And, at his pleasure, will resign my place.

Suf. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence.
Since thou wast king,—as who is king but thou?

The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck;
The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas;
And all the peers and nobles of the realm
Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty.
  Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags
Are lank and lean with thy extortions.
  Som. Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wife's attire
Have cost a mass of public treasury.
  Buck. Thy cruelty in execution
Upon offenders hath exceeded law,
And left thee to the mercy of the law.
  Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices and towns in France,—
If they were known, as the suspect is great,—
Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.
[Exit Gloster. The Queen drops her fan.
Give me my fan: what, minion! can you not?
[Give the Duchess a box on the ear.
I cry you mercy, madam; was it you?
  Duch. Was't I? yea, it was, proud French-
woman:
Could I come near your beauty with my nails,
I'd set my ten commandments in your face.
  K. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 'twas against her will.
  Duch. Against her will! good king, look to 't She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby:
[In time;
Though in this place most master wear no
She shall not strike Dame Eleanor unreven'd.
[Exit.

  Buck. Lord cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,
And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds:
She's tickled now; her fume needs no spurs,
She'll gallop fast enough to her destruction.
[Exit.

Re-enter Gloster.

  Glo. Now, lords, my choler being over-blow'n
With walking once about the quadrangle,
I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.
As for your spiteful false objections,
Prove them, and I lie open to the law;
But God in mercy so deal with my soul
As I in duty love my king and country!
But to the matter that we have in hand:—
I say, my sovereign, York is meetest man
To be your regent in the realm of France.
  Suf. Before we make election, give me leave
To show some reason, of no little force,
That York is most unmeet of any man.
  York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am un-meet:
First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride;
Next, if I be appointed for the place,

My Lord of Somerset will keep me here,
Without discharge, money, or furniture,
Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands:
Last time, I dance'd attendance on his will Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost.
  War. That can I witness; and a fouler fact
Did never traitor in the land commit.
  Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick! [peace?
  War. Image of pride, why should I hold my Enter Servants of Suffolk, bringing in Horner and Peter.

  Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason:
Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself!
  York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?
  K. Hen. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me, what are these?
  Suf. Please it your majesty, this is the man
That doth accuse his master of high treason:
His words were these,—that Richard Duke of York
Was rightful heir unto the English crown,
And that your majesty was an usurper.
  K. Hen. Say, man, were these thy words?
  Hor. An't shall please your majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter: God is my witness, I am falsely accused by the villain.
  Pet. By these ten bones, my lords [holding up his hands,] he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my Lord of York's armour.
  York. Base dunghill villain and mechanical,
I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech.—
I do beseech your royal majesty,
Let him have all the rigour of the law.
  Hor. Alas, my lord, hang me if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me: I have good witness of this; therefore I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.

  K. Hen. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?

  Glo. This doom, my lord, if I may judge:
Let Somerset be regent o'er the French,
Because in York this breeds suspicion;
And let these have a day appointed them
For single combat in convenient place,
For he hath witness of his servant's malice:
This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom.

  K. Hen. Then be it so.—My Lord of Somerset,
We make your grace regent over the French.
  Som. I humbly thank your royal majesty.
  Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

SCENE IV.—The same. The Duke of Gloucester’s Garden.

Enter Margery Jourdain, Hume, Southwell, and Bolingbroke.

Hume. Come, my masters; the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided; will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?

Hume. Ay, what else? fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go in God’s name, and leave us. [Exit HUME.] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth;—John Southwell, read you;—and let us to our work.

Enter Duchess above, and presently Hume.

Duch. Well said, my masters; and welcome all.

To this gear,—the sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times:

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,
The time of night when Troy was set on fire:
The time when screech-owls cry, and ban-dogs howl,
And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves,—

That time best fits the work we have in hand.

Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise
We will make fast within a hallow’d verge.

[Here they perform the ceremonies appertaining, and make the circle; Bolingbroke or Southwell reads, “Conjure te,” &c.

It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.

Spir. Adsum.

M. Jourd. Asmath,

By the eternal God, whose name and power

Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask:

For, till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence. [and done!]

Spir. Ask what thou wilt: that I had said

Boling. First of the king; what shall of him become? [Reading out of a paper.

Spir. The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answers.

Boling. What fates await the Duke of Suffolk?

Spir. By water shall he die and take his end.

Boling. What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?

Spir. Let him shun castles;

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains

Than where castles mounted stand.—

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness and the burning lake!

False fiend, avoid!

[Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.

Enter York and Buckingham hastily, with their Guards and others.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash.—

Beldam, I think we watch’d you at an inch.—

What, madam, are you there? the king and commonweal
Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains:

My lord protector will, I doubt it not,

See you well guerdon’d for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England’s king,

Injurious duke, that threatest where’s no cause.

Buck. True, madam, none at all:—what call you this? [Showing her the papers.

Away with them! let them be clapp’d up close,

And kept asunder.—You, madam, shall with us.—

Stafford, take her to thee.—

We’ll see your trinkets here all forthcoming.—

All, away! [Exit, above, Duchess and Hume, guarded; below, South., Boling., &c., guarded.

York. Lord Buckingham, methinks you watch’d her well:

A pretty plot, well chosen, to build upon!

Now, pray, my lord, let’s see the devil’s writ.

What have we here? [Reads.

The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

Why, this is just,

Aio te, Atacida, Romanos vincere posse.
Well, to the rest:
Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?
By water shall he die and take his end. —
What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?
Let him shun castles;
Safier shall he be upon the sandy plains
Than where castles mounted stand.
Come, come, my lords:
These oracles are hardly attain'd,
And hardly understood.
[Albans,
The king is now in progress toward Saint
With him the husband of this lovely lady:
Thither go these news, as fast as horse can carry
them,—
A sorry breakfast for my lord protector.

But. Your grace shall give me leave, my Lord of York,
To be the post, in hope of his reward.
York. At your pleasure, my good lord.—
Who's within there, ho!

Enter a Servant.

Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick
To sup with me to-morrow night.—Away!
[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Saint Albans.

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret,
Gloster, Cardinal, and Suffolk, with Falconers hollaing.

Q. Mar. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook,
I saw not better sport these seven years' day:
Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high;
And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

K. Hen. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made,
And what a pitch she flew above the rest!—
To see how God in all his creatures works!
Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high.

Suf. No marvel, an it like your majesty,
My lord protector's hawks do tower so well;
They know their master loves to be aloft,
And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind
That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

Car. I thought as much; he would be above the clouds.

Glo. Ay, my lord cardinal, —how think you by
Were it not good your grace could fly to heaven?
K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy!
Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes and thoughts

Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart;
Pernicious protector, dangerous peer, [weal!
That smooth' st it so with king and common.

Glo. What, cardinal, is your priesthood grown peremptory?

Tantene animis celestibus ire?  [malice;
Churchmen so hot? good uncle, hide such
With such holiness can you do it?  [comes

Suf. No malice, sir; no more than well be.

So good a quarrel and so bad a peer.

Glo. As who, my lord?

Suf. Why, as you, my lord,
An't like your lordly lord-protectorship.

Glo. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence.

Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloster.

K. Hen. I pr'ythee, peace,
Good queen, and whet not on these furious peers;
For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make,
Against this proud protector, with my sword!

Glo. Faith, holy uncle, would 't were come to that!

[Aside to Car.

Car. Marry, when thou dar'st.

[Aside to Glo.

Glo. Make up no factious numbers for the matter;

In thine own person answer thy abuse.

[Aside to Car.

Car. Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st,
This evening on the east side of the grove.

[Aside to Glo.

K. Hen. How now, my lords!

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloster,
Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly,
We had had more sport.—Come with thy two-hand sword.

[Aside to Glo.

Glo. True, uncle.

Car. Are ye advis'd?—the east side of the grove?

[Aside to Glo.

Glo. Cardinal, I am with you.

[Aside to Car.

K. Hen. Why, how now, uncle Gloster!

Glo. Talking of hawking; nothing else, my lord,—

Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown for this,
Or all my fence shall fail.

[Aside to Car.

Car. Medice tepsum;

Protector, see to't well, protect yourself.

[Aside to Glo.

K. Hen. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, lords.

How irksome is this music to my heart!
When such strings jar, what hope of harmony?
I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.
Enter a Townsman of Saint Albans, crying “A Miracle!”

Glo. What means this noise? Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim?

Towns. A miracle! a miracle! [shrine, Howe's chair, VVuhin's chair, gloaming, a man that ne'er saw in his life before.

K. Hen. Now, God be praised that to believing souls
Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!
Enter the Mayor of St. Albans and his brethren; and Simcox, borne between two persons in a chair, his Wife and a multitude following.

Car. Here come the townsmen on procession,
To present your highness with the man.

K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale,
Although by his sight his sin be multiplied.

Glo. Stand by, my masters:—bring him near the king;
His highness' pleasure is to talk with him.

K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,
That we for thee may glorify the Lord.
What, hast thou been long blind and now restored?

Simp. Born blind, an't please your grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suf. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship.

Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told.

K. Hen. Where went thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your grace.

K. Hen. Poor soul, God's goodness hath been great to thee:
Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,
But still remember what the Lord hath done.

Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,
Or of devotion, to this holy shrine? [call'd Glo. God knows, of pure devotion; being
A hundred times and oftener, in my sleep,
By good Saint Alban; who said, Simcox, come,—

Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee.

Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft Myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What, art thou lame?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suf. How cam'st thou so?

Simp. A fall off a tree.

Wife. A plum-tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O, born so, master.

Glo. What, and wouldst climb a tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing

Glo. Mass, thou lovest plums well that wouldst venture so.

Simp. Alas, good master, my wife desir'd some damsons,
And made me climb, with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not serve.—

Let me see thine eyes:—wink now;—now open
In my opinion yet thou seest not well.

Simp. Yes, master, clear as day, I thank God

Glo. Say'st thou me so? What colour is this cloak of?

Simp. Red, master; red as blood.

Glo. Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of?

Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black as jet.

K. Hen. Why, then, thou know'st what colour jet is of?

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glo. But cloaks and gowns, before this day, a many.

Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?

Simp. Alas, master, I know not.

Glo. What's his name?

Simp. I know not.

Glo. Nor his?

Simp. No, indeed, master.

Glo. What's thine own name? [master.

Simp. Sauner Simcox, an if it please you,

Glo. Then, Sauner, sit there, the lyingest knife in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou mightst as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Sight may distinguish of colours; but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible.—

My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle; and would ye not think his cunning to be great that could restore this cripple to his legs again?

Simp. O master, that ye could!

Glo. My masters of Saint Albans, have you not beadlees in your town, and things called whips?

May. Yes, my lord, if it please your grace.

Glo. Then send for one presently.

May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight. [Exit an Attendant.
Glo. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. [A stool brought out.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool and run away. [alone:

Simp. Alas, master, I am not able to stand You go about to torture me in vain.

Re-enter Attendant, with the Beadle.

Glo. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs.—Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.

Bead. I will, my lord.—Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quickly.

Simp. Alas, master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

[After the Beadle has hit him once, he leaps over the stool and runs away; and the people follow and cry “A Miracle!”

K. Hen. O God, seest thou this, and bear’st so long? [run.

Q. Mar. It made me laugh to see the villain

Glo. Follow the knave; and take this drab away.

Wife. Alas, sir, we did it for pure need.

Glo. Let them be whipped through every market town, till they come to Berwick, whence they came. [Exit Mayor, Beadle, Wife, &c.

Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.

Suf. True; made the lame to leap and fly away.

Glo. But you have done more miracles than I; You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter Buckingham.

K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to un-

A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent,— Under the countenance and confederacy Of Lady Eleanor, the protector’s wife, The ringleader and head of all this rout,— Have practis’d dangerously against your state, Dealing with witches and with conjurers: Whom we have apprehended in the fact; Raising up wicked spirits from under ground, Demanding of King Henry’s life and death, And other of your highness’ privy council, As more at large your grace shall understand. Car. And so, my lord protector, by this means Your lady is forthcoming yet at London. This news, I think, hath turn’d your weapon’s edge; ’Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour. [Aside to Gloster.

Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict my heart:

Sorrow and grief have vanquish’d all my powers; And, vanquish’d as I am, I yield to thee, Or to the meanest groom. [wicked ones, K. Hen. O God, what mischief work the Heaping confusion on their heads thereby! Q. Mar. Gloster, see here the tainture of thy nest;

And look thyself be faultless, thou wilt best.

Glo. Madam, for myself to heaven I do appeal, How I have lov’d my king and commonwealth: And for my wife I know not how it stands; Sorry I am to hear what I have heard: Noble she is; but if she have forgot Honour and virtue, and convers’d with such As, like to pitch, desile nobility, I banish her my bed and company, And give her, as a prey, to law and shame, That hath dishonour’d Gloster’s honest name.

K. Hen. Well, for this night we will repose us here:

To-morrow toward London back again, To look into this business thoroughly, And call these foul offenders to their answers; And poise the cause in justice’ equal scales, Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exit.

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick, Our simple supper ended, give me leave, In this close walk, to satisfy myself, In craving your opinion of my title, Which is infallible, to England’s crown.

Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full.

War. Sweet York, begin: and if thy claim be good, The Nevils are thy subjects to command.

York. Then thus:— Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons; The first, Edward the Black Prince, Prince of Wales; The second, William of Hartsfield; and the third, Lionel Duke of Clarence; next to whom Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster; The fifth was Edmund Langley, Duke of York; The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloster; William of Windsor was the seventh and last. Edward the Black Prince died before his father; And left behind him Richard, his only son, Who, after Edward the Third’s death, reign’d as king,
SCENE II.]
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster,
The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,
Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth,
Seiz'd on the realm, depos'd the rightful king,
Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came,
And him to Pomfret,—where, as all you know,
Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously.

War. Father, the duke hath told the truth:
Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown.

York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right;
For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead,
The issue of the next son should have reign'd.

Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.

York. The third son, Duke of Clarence,—from whose line
I claim the crown,—had issue Philippine, a daughter,
Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of Edmund had issue, Roger Earl of March;
Roger had issue, Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke,
As I have read, laid claim unto the crown:
And, but for Owen Glendower, had been king.
Who kept him in captivity till he died.
But, to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne,
My mother, being heir unto the crown,
Married Richard Earl of Cambridge: who was

To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth
By her I claim the kingdom: she was heir
To Roger Earl of March; who was the son
Of Edmund Mortimer; who married Philippine,
Sole daughter unto Lionel Duke of Clarence:
So, if the issue of the elder son
Succeed before the younger, I am king.

War. What plain proceeding is more plain than this?
Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,
The fourth son; York claims it from the third.
Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign:
It falls not yet, but flourishes in thee,
And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.—
Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together:
And in this private plot we be the first
That shall salute our rightful sovereign
With honour of his birthright to the crown.

Both. Long live our sovereign Richard,
England's king!
York. We thank you, lords. But I am not your king

And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
But with advice and silent secrecy.
Do you as I do in these dangerous days:
Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence,
At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At Buckingham, and all the crew of them,
Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock,
That virtuous prince, the good Duke Humphrey:
'Tis that they seek: and they, in seeking that,
Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.

Sal. My lord, break we off; we know your mind at fall.

[Warwick

War. My heart assures me that the Earl of Shall one day make the Duke of York a king.

York. And, Neville, this I do assure myself,— Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick
The greatest man in England but the king.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—LONDON.

A Hall of Justice.

Trumpets sounded. Enter King Henry,
Queen Margaret, Gloster, York, Suffolk, and Salisbury; the Duchess of Gloster, Margaret Jourdain, Southwell, Hume, and Bolingbroke, under guard.

K. Hen. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloster's wife:
In sight of God and us, your guilt is great:
Receive the sentence of the law, for sins
Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death. —
You four, from hence to prison back again;

To Jourdain, &c.

From thence unto the place of execution:
The witch in Smithfield shall be bury'd to ashes,
And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.—
You, madam, for you are more nobly born,
Despoiled of your honour in your life,
Shall, after three days' open penance done,
Live in your country here, in banishment,
With Sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome is banishment; welcome were my death.

Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judged
I cannot justify whom the law condemns. —

K. Hen.Stay, Humphrey Duke of Gloster:
ere thou go,
Give up thy staff: Henry will to himself
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT II.

Proctor be; and God shall be my hope, My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet: And go in peace, Humphrey,—no less below'd Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Q. Mar. I see no reason why a king of years Should be to be protected like a child.— God and King Henry govern England's helm! Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff! here, noble Henry, is my staff: As willingly do I the same resign As ere thy father Henry made it mine: And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it As others would ambitiously receive it. Farewell, good king: when I am dead and gone, May honourable peace attend thy throne!

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen: And I Humphrey Duke of Gloster scarce himself, That bears so shrewd a main; two pulls at once,— His lady banish'd and a limb lopp'd off: This staff of honour raught, there let it stand Where it best fits to be,—in Henry's hand.

Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine, and hangs his sprays; Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days. York. Lords, let him go.—Please it your majesty, This is the day appointed for the combat; And ready are the appellant and defendant, The armourer and his man, to enter the lists, So please your highness to behold the fight.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

K. Hen. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit: Here let them end it; and God defend the right! York. I never saw a fellow worse bested, Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant, The servant of this armourer, my lords!

Enter, on one side, Horner and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him: at the other side, Peter, with a drum and a similar staff; accompanied by Prentices drinking to him.

1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack; and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.

2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.

3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink, and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, i' faith, and I'll pledge you all; and a fig for Peter!

1 Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee: and be not afraid.

2 Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the prentices.

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for I think I have taken my last draught in this world.—Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron:—and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer:—and here, Tom, take all the money that I have.—O Lord, bless me, I pray God! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows.—Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! what more?

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave and myself an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen: and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow!

York. Despatch:—this knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants!

[Alarum. They fight, and Peter strikes down Horner.

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason.

York. Take away his weapon.—Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine enemy in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevailed in right!

K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our For by his death we do perceive his guilt: And God in justice hath reveal'd to us The truth and innocence of this poor fellow, Which he had thought to have murder'd wrong-fully.—

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—LONDON. A Street.

Enter Gloster and Servants, in mourning cloaks.

Glo. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud; And after summer evermore succeeds Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold:
So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet.—
Sirs, what’s o’clock?

_Serv._ Ten, my lord.

_Glo._ Ten is the hour that was appointed me
To watch the coming of my punish’d duchess;
Unearth may she endure the flinty streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
The abject people gazing on thy face,
With envious looks, laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.
But, soft! I think she comes; and I’ll prepare
My tear-stain’d eyes to see her miseries.

_Enter the Duchess of Gloster in a white sheet, with papers pinned upon her back, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; Sir John Stanley, a Sheriff, and Officers._

_Serv._ So please your grace, we’ll take her from the sheriff.

_Glo._ No, stir not for your lives; let her pass
_Duch._ Come you, my lord, to see my open shame?

Now thou dost penance too. Look how they See how the giddy multitude do point,
And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on me!
Ah, Gloster, hide thee from their hateful looks,
And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame
And ban mine enemies,—both mine and thine!

_Glo._ Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

_Duch._ Ah, Gloster, teach me to forget myself!

For, whilst I think I am thy married wife
And thou a prince, protector of this land,
Methinks I should not thus be led along,
Mail’d up in shame, with papers on my back,
And follow’d with a rabble that rejoice
To see my tears and hear my deep-fet groans.
The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet;
And when I start the envious people laugh,
And bid me be advised how I tread.
Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke?
Trow’st thou that e’er I’ll look upon the world,
Or count them happy that enjoy the sun?
No; dark shall be my light and night my day;
To think upon my pomp shall be my hell.
Sometimes I’ll say, I am Duke Humphrey’s wife,
And he a prince, and ruler of the land:
Yet so he rule’d, and such a prince he was,
As he stood by whilst I, his forlorn duchess,
Was made a wonder and a pointing-stock
To every idle rascal follower.
But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame;
Nor stir at nothing, till the axe of death
Hang over thee, as sure it shortly will;
For Suffolk,—he that can do all in all
With her that hateth thee and hates us all,—
And York, and impious Beaufort, that false priest,
Have all lim’d bushes to betray thy wings,
And, fly thou how thou canst, they’ll tangle thee:
But fear not thou, until thy foot be snar’d,
Nor never seek prevention of thy foes. [awry:

_Glo._ Ah, Nell, forbear! thou almost all
I must offend before I be attained:
And had I twenty times so many foes,
And each of them had twenty times their power,
All these could not procure me any scathe,
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.
Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach?
Why, yet thy scandal were not wip’d away,
But I in danger for the breach of law.
Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell:
I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience;
These few days’ wonder will be quickly worn.

_Enter a Herald._

_Her._ I summon your grace to his majesty’s Parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month.

_Glo._ And my consent ne’er ask’d herein:
This is close dealing.—Well, I will be there,

_[Exit Herald._

_My Nell, I take my leave:—and, master sheriff,
Let not her penance exceed the king’s commissi-

And Sir John Stanley is appointed now
To take her with him to the Isle of Man. [here?

_Glo._ Must you, Sir John, protect my lady
_Stan._ So am I given in charge, may’t please your grace.

_Glo._ Entreat her not the worse in that I pray
You use her well: the world may laugh again:
And I may live to do you kindness, if
You do it her: and so, Sir John, farewell.

_Duch._ What, gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell!

_Glo._ Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak

_[Exeunt Gloster and Servants._

_Duch._ Art thou gone too? all comfort go with thee!
For none abides with me: my joy is death,—
Death, at whose name I oft have been afeard,
Because I wish’d this world’s eternity.—
Stanley, I pr’ythee go, and take me hence;
I care not whither, for I beg no favour,
Only convey me where thou art commanded.

_Stan._ Why, madam, that is to the Isle of Man;
There to be us’d according to your state.
Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach.—
And shall I, then, be us'd reproachfully?
Stan. Like to a duchess and Duke Humphrey's lady;
According to that state you shall be us'd.
Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare,—
Although thou hast been conduct of my shame.
Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me.
Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharg'd.—
Come, Stanley, shall we go? [this sheet, Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off
And go we to attend you for our journey.
Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet:
No, it will hang upon my richest robes,
And show itself, attire me how I can.
Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison.
[Execut.

ACT III.

SCENE I. — The Abbey at Bury.

Flourish. Enter to the Parliament King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort, Suffolk, York, Buckingham, and others.

K. Hen. I muse my Lord of Gloster is not come:
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.
Q. Mar. Can you not see? or will you not observe
The strangeness of his alter'd countenance?
With what a majesty he bears himself;
How insolent of late he is become, [self?
How proud, how peremptory, and unlike him.
We know the time since he was mild and affable;
And if we did but glance a far-off look
Immediately he was upon his knee,
That all the court admir'd him for submission:
But meet him now, and be in the morn,
When every one will give the time of day,
He knits his brow, and shows an angry eye,
And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,
Disdaining duty that to us belongs.
Small curs are not regarded when they grin;
But great men tremble when the lion roars,—
And Humphrey is no little man in England.
First note that he is near you in descent;
And should you fall as the next will mount.
Me seemeth, then, it is no policy,—
Respecting what a cankerous mind he bears,
And his advantage following your decease.—
That he should come about your royal person,
Or be admitted to your highness' council.
By flattering hath he won the commons' hearts;
And when he please to make commotion,
'Tis to be feard they all will follow him.
Now 'tis spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;
[garden, Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the
And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
The reverent care I bear unto my lord
Made me collect these dangers in the duke.
If it be fond, call it a woman's fear;
Which fear, if better reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe, and say I wrong'd the duke.
My Lord of Suffolk, — Buckingham, — and York, —
Reprove my allegation if you can;
Or else conclude my words effectual. [duke;
Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this
And had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think I should have told your grace's tale.
The duchess, by his subornation,
Upon my life, began her devilish practices:
Or, if he were not privy to those faults,
Yet, by reprofing of his high descent,—
As, next the king, he was successive heir,
And such high vaunts of his nobility,—
Did instigate the bedlam brainsick duchess
By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.
Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep;
And in his simple show he harbours treason.
The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb.
No, no, my sovereign; Gloster is a man
Unsound yet, and full of deep deceit.
Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
Devise strange deaths for small offences done?
York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
Levy great sums of money through the realm
For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
By means whereof the towns each day revolted.
Buck. Tut, these are petty faults to faults unknown, [Humphrey.
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke
K. Hen. My lords, at once:—the care you have of us,
To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
Is worthy praise; but shall I speak my conscience?
Our kinsman Gloster is as innocent
From meaning treason to our royal person
As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove:
The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given
To dream on evil or to work my downfall.
Q. Mar. Ah, what's more dangerous than this fond affiance?
Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
For he's disposed as the hateful raven:
Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
For he's inclin'd as is the ravenous wolf.
Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord: the welfare of us all
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter Somerset.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!

K. Hen. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories utterly bereft you; all is lost.

K. Hen. Cold news, Lord Somerset: but God's will be done! [France York. Cold news for me; for I had hope of
  As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
  Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud.
  And caterpillars eat my leaves away:
  But I will remedy this gear ere long,
  Or sell my title for a glorious grave. [Aside.*

Enter Gloster.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king!
Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long.

*Suf. Nay, Gloster, know that thou art come too soon,
  Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art:
  I do arrest thee of high treason here. [blush
  Glo.* Well, Suffolk, thou shalt not see me
  Nor change my countenance for this arrest:
  A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.
  The purest spring is not so free from mud
  As I am clear from treason to my sovereign:
  Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took Tribes of France,
  And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay;
  By means whereof his highness hath lost France.

Glo. Is it but thought so? what are they that think it?
  I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,
  Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
  So help me God, as I have watch'd the night,— Ay, night by night,—in studying good for England!

That day that e'er I wrested from the king,
Or any good I horded to my use,
Be brought against me at my trial-day!
No; many a pound of mine own proper store,
Because I would not tax the needy commons,
Have I dispersed to the garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution. [much.

Cav. It serves you well, my lord, to say so

Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me
  God!

York. In your protectorship you did devise

Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of,
That England was delam'd by tyranny.

Glo. Why, 'tis well known that, whiles I was protector,
Pity was all the fault that was in me;
For I should melt at an offender's tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fault.
Unless it were a bloody murderer, [geese
  Or foul felonious thief that fleec'd poor pass-
  I never gave them condign punishment:
  Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd
  Above the felon or what trespass else.

*Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly
  answer'd:
  But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,
  Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.
  I do arrest you in his highness' name;
  And here commit you to my lord cardinal
  To keep, until your further time of trial. [hope
  *K. Hen. My Lord of Gloster, 'tis my special
  That you will clear yourself from all suspect:
  My conscience tells me you are innocent.' [and
  Glo. Ah, gracious lord, these days are danger-Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,
  And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand;
  Foul subordination is predominant,
  And equity exil'd your highness' land.
  I know their compot is to have my life;
  And if my death might make this island happy,
  And prove the period of their tyranny,
  I would expend it with all willingness:
  But mine is made the prologue to their play:
  For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
  Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.
  Beaumont's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice,
  And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate;
  Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue
  The envious load that lies upon his heart;
  And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,
  Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,
  By false accuse doth level at my life:—
  And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
  Causeless have I'd disgraces on my head,
  And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up
  My liegest liege to be mine enemy:—
  Ay, all of you have laid your heads together,—
  Myself had notice of your conventicles,—
  And all to make away my guiltless life.
  I shall not want false witness to condemn me,
  Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt:
  The ancient proverb will be well effected,—
  A staff is quickly found to beat a dog.

Cav. My liege, his railing is intolerable:
If those that care to keep your royal person
From treason's secret knife and traitors' rage
Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT III.

And the offender granted scope of speech,
’Twill make them cool in zeal unto your grace.

Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady here
With ignominious words, though clerkly couch’d,
As if she had suborned some to swear
False allegations to o’erthrow his state?

Q. Mar. But I can give the loser leave to chide.

Glo. Far truer spoke than meant: I lose, in Before the winners, for they play’d me false!
And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Buck. He’ll wrest the sense, and hold us here all day:
Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner. [him sure.

Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and guard
Before his legs be firm to bear his body!
Thas is the shepherd beaten from thy side,
And wolves are gnarling who shall graze thee first.

Ah, that my fear were false! ah, that it were!
For, good King Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exeunt Attendants with Gloster.

K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best
Do or undo, as if ourself were here.

Q. Mar. What, will your highness leave the Parliament? [with grief,

K. Hen. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown’d
Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes;
My body round engird with misery,—
For what’s more miserable than discontent?
Ah, uncle Humphrey, in thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty!
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come
That e’er I prov’d thee false or fear’d thy faith.
What lowering star now envies thy estate,
That these great lords, and Margaret our queen,
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life?
Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man wrong:
And as the butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,
Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house;
Even so, remorseless, have they borne him hence
And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wail her darling’s loss;
Even so myself beholds good Gloster’s case
With sad unhelpful tears; and with dimm’d eyes
Look after him, and cannot do him good—
So mighty are his vowed enemies.
His fortunes I will weep; and ’twixt each groan,
Say, Who’s a traitor? Gloster he is none.

[Exit.

Q. Mar. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun’s hot beams.
Henry my lord is cold in great affairs,
Too full of foolish pity: and Gloster’s show
Beguiles him, as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
Or as the snake, roll’d in a flowering bank,
With shining checker’d slough, doth sting a child,
That for the beauty thinks it excellent.
Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,—
And yet herein I judge my own wit good,—
This Gloster should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die is worthy policy;
But yet we want a colour for his death:
’Tis meet he be condemn’d by course of law.

Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy:
The king will labour still to save his life;
The commons happily rise to save his life;
And yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust that shows him worthy death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fain as I!
York. ’Tis York that hath more reason for his death. — [Suffolk,—
But, my lord cardinal, and you, my Lord of Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,— Wer’t not all one an empty eagle were set
To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
As place Duke Humphrey for the king’s protector? — [death.

Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of Suf. Madam, ’tis true; and wer’t not madness, then,
To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who, being accus’d a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over
Because his purpose is not executed.
No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature prov’d an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain’d with crimson blood,—
As Humphrey, prov’d by reasons, to my liege.
And do not stand on quillets how to slay him:
Be it by gins, by snares, by subtlety,
Sleeping or waking, ’tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit
Which mates him first that first intends deceit.

Q. Mar. Thrice-noble Suffolk, ’tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done;
For things are often spoke and seldom meant:
But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,—
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,—
Say but the word, and I will be his priest.
Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,
Ere you can take due orders for a priest:
Say you consent, and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner,—
I tender so the safety of my liege.
Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.
Q. Mar. And so say I. [it,]
York. And I: and now we three have spoke
It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come amain,
To signify that rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the sword:
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable;
For, being green, there is great hope of help.
Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop!
What counsel give you in this weighty cause?
York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither:
'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd;
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.
Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Had been the regent there instead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France so long.
York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done:
I rather would have lost my life betimes
Than bring a burden of dishonour home,
By staying there so long till all were lost.
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin:
Men's flesh preserv'd so whole do seldom win.
Q. Mar. Nay, then, this spark will prove a raging fire
If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with:—
No more, good York;—sweet Somerset, be still:—
Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent there, Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.
York. What, worse than naught? nay, then,
a shame take all!
Som. And in the number, thee that wishest shame!
Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is.
The uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms,
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:
To Ireland will you lead a band of men,
Collected choicefly, from each county some,
And try your hand against the Irishmen?
York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.
Suf. Why, our authority is his consent;
And what we do establish he confirms:
Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.
York. I am content: provide me soldiers, lords.
Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.
Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd.
[phrey.
But now return we to the false Duke Hum-
Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him,
That henceforth he shall trouble us no more.
And so break off; the day is almost spent:
Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.
York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days
At Bristol I expect my soldiers;
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.
Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York.
[Exeunt all but York.
York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fear-ful thoughts,
And change misdoubt to resolution:
Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou art
Resign to death,—it is not worth the enjoying:
Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born man,
And find no harbour in a royal heart.
Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought;
And not a thought but thinks on dignity.
My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.
Well, nobles, well, 'tis politicly done,
To send me packing with an host of men:
I fear me you but warm the starved snake,
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.
'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them me:
I take it kindly; yet be well assur'd
You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band,
I will stir up in England some black storm
Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell;
And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.
And for a minister of my intent
I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentishman,
John Cade of Ashford,
To make commotion, as full well he can,
Under the title of John Mortimer.
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade
Oppose himself against a troop of kerns,
And fought so long till that his thighs with darts
Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porcupine;
And in the end being resolv'd, I have seen him
Caper upright like a wild Morisco,
Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells. U 2
Full often, like a slug-hair’d crafty kern,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And, undiscovered, come to me again,
And given me notice of their villainies.
This devil here shall be my substitute;
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
In face, in guilt, in speech, he doth resemble:
By this I shall perceive the commons’ mind,
How they affect the house and claim of York.
Say he be taken, rack’d, and tortured,
I know no pain they can inflict upon him
Will make him say I mov’d him to those arms.
Say that he thrive,—as ’tis great like he will,—
Away, then from Ireland come I with my strength,
And reap the harvest which that rascal sow’d;
For Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put apart, the next for me.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—BURY. A Room in the Palace.

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

1 Mur. Run to my Lord of Suffolk; let him know
We have despatch’d the duke, as he commanded.
2 Mur. O that it were to do!—What have we done?
Didst ever hear a man so penitent?
1 Mur. Here comes my lord.

Enter Suffolk.

Suf. Now, sirs, have you despatch’d this thing?
1 Mur. Ay, my good lord, he’s dead.
Suf. Why, that’s well said. Go, get you to my house;
I will reward you for this venturous deed.
The king and all the peers are here at hand:—
Have you laid fair the bed? are all things well,
According as I gave directions?
1 Mur. ’Tis, my good lord.
Suf. Away! be gone. [Execut Murderers.

Trumpets sounded. Enter King Henry,
Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort,
Somerset, Lords, and others.

K. Hen. Go, call my uncle to our presence straight;
Say we intend to try his grace to-day,
If he be guilty, as ’tis published.
Suf. I’ll call him presently, my noble lord.
[Exit.

K. Hen. Lords, take your places; and, I pray you all,
Proceed no straiter ’gainst our uncle Gloster.
Thus from true evidence, of good esteem,
He be approv’d in practice culpable.

Q. Mar. God forbid any malice should prevail
That faultless may condemn a nobleman!
Pray God he may acquit him of suspicion!
K. Hen. I thank thee, Margaret; these words content me much.—

Re-enter Suffolk.

How now! why look’st thou pale? why tremblest thou?
[Suffolk?]
Where is our uncle? what’s the matter,
Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloster is dead.

Q. Mar. Marry, God forswear! [to-night
Car. God’s secret judgment:—I did dream
The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word.
[The King swoons.

Q. Mar. How fares my lord?—Help, lords!
the king is dead.
[Suf. He doth revive again:—madam, be
K. Hen. O heavenly God!
Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord?
Suf. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious Henry, comfort!
K. Hen. What, dost my Lord of Suffolk com-
Come he right now to sing a raven’s note,
Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers;
And thinks he that the chirping of a wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
Can chase away the first conceived sound?
Hide not thy poison with such sugar’d words:
Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say;
Their touch affrights me, as a serpent’s sting.
Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight!
Upon thy eye-balls murderous tyranny
Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world.
Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding:—
Yet do not go away:—come, basilisk,
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight;
For in the shades of death I shall find joy,—
In life but double death, now Gloster’s dead.
Q. Mar. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus?
Although the duke was enemy to him,
Yet he, most Christian-like laments his death:
And for myself,—foe as he was to me,—
Might liquid tears, or heart-offending groans,
Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life,
I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,
Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking sighs,
And all to have the noble duke alive.
What know I how the world may deem of me?
For it is known we were but hollow friends:
It may be judg’d I made the duke away;
So shall my name with slander’s tongue be wounded,
And princes’ courts be fill’d with my reproach.
This get I by his death; ah me, unhappy!
To be a queen and crown’d with intamy!
  K. Hen. Ah, woe is me for Gloster, wretched man!
  Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than What, dost thou turn away, and hide thy face?
I am no leathsome leper,—look on me.
What, art thou, like the adder, waven deaf?
Le poisonous too, and kill thy forlorn queen.
Is all thy comfort shut in Gloster’s tomb?
Why, then, Dame Margaret was ne’er thy joy:
Erect his statum, and worship it,
And make my image but an alehouse sign.
Was I for this nigh wreck’d upon the sea.
And twice by awkward wind from England’s bank
Drove back again unto my native clime.
What boded this but well-forewarning wind
Did seem to say,—Seek not a scorpion’s nest.
Nor set no footing on thisankind shore?
What did I then but curs’d the gentle gusts,
And he that loocks them forth their brazen cava:
[Shore.
And bid them blow towards England’s blessed
Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?
Yet Affohus would not be a murderer,
But left that hateful office unto thee:
The pretty-vaulting sea refuse to drown me;
Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown’d on shore,
[Shore:
With tears as salt as sea, through thy unkind
The splitting rocks cower’d in the sinkingsands,
And would not dash me with their ragged sides;
Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,
Might in thy palace perish Margaret.
As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
When from the shore the tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the hatches in the storm;
And when the dusky sky began to robe
My earnest-gaping sight of thy land’s view,
I took a costly jewel from my neck,—
A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,—
And threw it towards thy land:—the sea receive’d it;
And so I wish’d thy body might my heart:
And even with this I lost fair England’s view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart,
And call’d them blind and dusty spectacles,
For losing ken of Albion’s wished coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk’s tongue,—
The agent of thy foul inconstancy,—
To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did
When he to madding Dido would unfold
His father’s acts, commenç’d in burning Troy!

Am I not witch’d like her? or thou not like him?
Ah me, I can no more! die, Margaret!
For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Enter Warwick and Salisbury. The Commons press to the door.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,
That good Duke Humphrey traitoriously is murder’d
By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort’s means.
The commons, like an angry hive of bees
That want their leader, scatter up and down,
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calm’d their spleenful mutiny
Until they hear the order of his death.
  K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick, is too true;
But how he died God knows, not Henry:
Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,
And comment then upon his sudden death.

War. That I shall do, my liege.—Stay, Salisbury,
With the rude multitude till I return.
[War. goes into an inner room; Sal. returns to the Commons at the door.

K. Hen. O Thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts,—
My thoughts that labour to persuade my soul
Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey’s life!
If my suspect be false, forgive me, God;
For judgment only doth belong to thee.
Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears;
To tell my love unto his dumb dead trunk,
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling;
But all in vain are these mean obsequies;
And to survey his dead and earthly image,
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

The folding doors of an inner Chamber are thrown open, and Gloster is discovered dead in his bed; Warwick and others standing by it.

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.

K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made;
For with his soul fled all my worldly solace;
For seeing him, I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King that took our state upon him
To free us from his Father’s wrathful curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.
Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!
What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow?
War. See how the blood is settled in his face!
Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost,
Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless,
Being all descended to the labouring heart;
Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy;
Which with the heart there cools, and ne'er returneth
To blush and beautify the cheek again.
But see, his face is black and full of blood;
His eye-balls further out than when he liv'd,
Staring full ghastly like a strangled man:
His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling;
His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd
And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdued:
Look, on the sheets his hair, you see, is sticking;
His well-proportioned beard made rough and rugged,
Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.
It cannot be but he was murder'd here;
The least of all these signs were probable.

Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?
Myself and Beaufort had him in protection;
And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.
War. But both of you were vow'd Duke Humphrey's foes;
And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep:
'Tis like you would not feast him like a friend;
And 'tis well seen he found an enemy.
Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen
As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless death.
War. Who finds the heifer dead and bleeding fresh,
And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?
Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,
But may imagine how the bird was dead,
Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?
Even so suspicious is this tragedy.
Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk?—where's your knife?
Is Beaufort termed a kite?—where are his talons?
Suf. I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping men;
But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart
That slanders me with murder's crimson badge:
Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire,
That I am guilty in Duke Humphrey's death.

[Exeunt Car., Som., and others.
War. What darest not Warwick, if false Suff.
Jik dare him?

Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit,
Nor cease to be an arrogant controller.
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.
War. Madam, be still,—with reverence may I say:
For every word you speak in his behalf
Is slander to your royal dignity.
Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour!
If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed
Some stern untrained chari, and noble stock
Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou art,
And never of the Nevils' noble race. [thee,
War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers
And I should rob the deathsmen of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby ten thousand shames,
And that my sovereign's presence makes me mild,
I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech,
And say it was thy mother that thou meant'st,
That thou thyself was born in bastardy;
And, after all this fearful homage done,
Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell,
Pernicious blood-sucker of sleeping men!
Suf. Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy blood,
If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.
War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence:
Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee,
And dosome service to Duke Humphrey's ghost.

[Exeunt Suffolk and Warwick.

K. Hen. What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted?
Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just;
And be he naked, though lock'd up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

Q. Mar. What noise is this?

Re-enter Suffolk and Warwick, with their weapons drawn.

K. Hen. Why, how now, lords! your wrathful weapons drawn
Here in our presence! dare you be so bold?—
Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here?
Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Bury,
Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

Sal. [To the Commons at the door.] Sirs, stand apart; the king shall know your mind.—

[He comes forward.
Dread lord, the commons send you word by me,
Unless false Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished fair England's territories,
They will by violence tear him from your palace,
And torture him with grievous lingering death.
They say, by him the good Duke Humphrey died;
They say, in him they fear your highness’ death;
And mere instinct of love and loyalty, —
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking, —
Makes them thus forward in his banishment.
They say, in care of your most royal person,
That if your highness should intend to sleep,
And charge that no man should disturb your rest,
In pain of your dislike, or pain of death;
Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,
Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That sily glided towards your majesty,
It were but necessary you were wak’d;
Lest, being suffered in that harmful slumber,
The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal:
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, wher’ ye will or no,
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;
With whose envenomed and fatal sting
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,
They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, my Lord of Salisbury!
Suf. ’Tis like the commons, rude and unpolish’d hinds,
Could send such message to their sovereign:
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ’d,
To show how quaint an orator you are:
But all the honour Salisbury hath won
Is, that he was the lord ambassador
Sent from a sort of tinkers to the king.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, or we will all break in!
K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me,
I thank them for their tender loving care:
And had I not been cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entreat:
For, sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk’s means:
And therefore,—by His majesty I swear,
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,—
He shall not breathe infection in this air
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

[Exit Salisbury.
Q. Mar. O Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk!
K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle
No more, I say: if thou dost plead for him,
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath.
Had I but said, I would have kept my word;
But when I swear, it is irrevocable. —

If after three days’ space thou here be’st found
On any ground that I am ruler of,
The world shall not be ransom for thy life,—
Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me:
I have great matters to impart to thee.
[Exeunt K. Hen., War., Lords, &c.
Q. Mar. Mischance and sorrow go along with you!
Heart’s discontent and sour affliction
Be playfellows to keep you company!
There’s two of you: the devil make a third!
And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!
Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execrations,
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.
Q. Mar. Fie, coward woman and soft-hearted wretch!
Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemies?
Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should I curse them?
Would curtains kill, as doth the mandrake’s goan,
I would invent as bitter-searching terms,
As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear,
Deliver’d strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate
As lean-faced Envy in her loathsome cave:
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words;
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;
Mine hair be fix’d on end, as one distract;
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban:
And even now my burden’d heart would break,
Should I not curse them? Poison be their drink!
Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste!
Their sweetest shade a grove of cypress trees!
Their chiefest prospect murdering basilisks!
Their softest touch as smart as lizard’s stings!
Their music frightful as the serpent’s hiss;
And boding screech-owls make the concert full!
All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—
Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment’st thyself; [glass,
And these dread curses,—like the sun against
Or like an overcharged gun,—recoil,
And turn the force of them upon thyself.
Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave?
Now, by the ground that I am banish’d from,
Well could I curse away a winter’s night,
Though standing naked on a mountain top,
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
And think it but a minute spent in sport.
Q. Mar. O, let me entreat thee, cease! Give me thy hand,
That I may dew it with my mournful tears;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments.
O, could this kiss be printed in thy hand,
[Stirs his hand.
That thou mightst think upon these by the seal,
Through whom a thousand sighs are breath’d for thee!
So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;
’Tis but surmise whilst thou art standing by,
As one that surfeits thinking on a want;
I will repeal thee, or, be well assur’d,
Adventure to be banished myself:
And banished I am, if but from thee.
Go; speak not to me; even now be gone.
O, go not yet!—Even thus two friends condemn’d leaves,
Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand
Leather a hundred times to part than die.
Yet now, farewell; and farewell life with thee!
Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,
Once by the king and three times thrice by thee.
’Tis not the land I care for, worth thou hence;
A wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world;
And where thou art not, desolation.
I can no more:—live thou to joy thy life;
Myself to joy in naught but that thou liv’st.

Enter Vaux.

Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news, I pr’ythee?
VAUX. To signify unto his majesty
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him.
That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the ait,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey’s ghost
Were by his side; sometime he calls the king,
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his overcharged soul:
And I am sent to tell his majesty
That even now he cries aloud for him. [king.
Q. Mar. Go tell this heavy message to the [Exit VAUX.
Ah me! what is this world! what news are these!
But wherefore grieve I at an hour’s poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk’s exile, my soul’s treasure?
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in tears,—
Theirs for the earth’s increase, mine for my sorrows?
[coming:
Now get thee hence: the king, thou know’st, is
H thou be found by me, thou art but dead.

Suf. If I depart from thee I cannot live.
And in thy sight to die, what were it else
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe—
Dying with mother’s hug between its lips:
Wherefrom, in thy sight, I should be raging mad,
And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth:
So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,
And then it liv’d in sweet Elysium.
To die by thee were but to die in jest;
From thee to die were torture more than death:
O, let me stay, befall what may befall!
Q. Mar. Away! though parting be a fretful corrosive,
It is applied to a deathful wound. [thee;
To France, sweet Suffolk: let me near from
For wheresoe’er thou art in this world’s globe
I’ll have an Iris that shall find thee out.
Suf. I go.
Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee.
Suf. A jewel, lock’d into the woefulst cask
That ever did contain a thing of worth.
Even as a splitter bark, so sooner we;
This way fall I to death.
Q. Mar. This way for me. [Exeunt severally.

Enter King Henry, Salisbury, Warwick, and others. The Cardinal in bed; Attend ants with him.

Car. If thou best death I’ll give thee
England’s treasure,
Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live and feel no pain.
K’ Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life
Where death’s approach is seen so terrible!
War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.
Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will.
Died he not in his bed? where should he die?
Can I make men live, whe’re they will or no?
O, torture me no more! I will confess.—
Alive again! then show me where he is;
I’ll give a thousand pound to look upon him.—
He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.—
Comb down his hair; look, look! it stands up right,
Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul!—
ACT IV.

SCENE I. — KENT. The Sea-shore near Dover.

Firing heard at sea. Then enter, from a boat, a Captain, a Master, a Master's Mate, Walter Whitmore, and others, with them Suffolk, disguised, and other Gentle men, prisoners.

Cap. The gaudy, babbling, and remorseful day
Is crept into the bosom of the sea:
And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades
That drag the tragic melancholy night;
Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings
Cry dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws
Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.
Therefore bring forth the soldiers of our prize;
For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs,
Here shall they make their ransom on the sand,
Or with their blood stain this discolour'd shore.
— Master, this prisoner freely give I thee;—
And thou that art his mate, make boot of this:—
The other, [pointing to Suffolk], Walter Whitmore is thy share. [know.

1 Gent. What is my ransom, master? Let me

Master. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head. [yours.

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes

Cap. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns,
And bear the name and port of gentlemen?—

Cut both the villains' threats;—for die you shall:—
The lives of those which we have lost in night
Cannot be counterpois'd with such a petty sum.

1 Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life. [straight.

2 Gent. And so will I, and write home for it
Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize a- board,
And therefore, to revenge it, shalt thou die:—
[To Suffolk.

And so should these, if I might have my will.
Cap. Be not so rash; take ransom, let him live.

Suf. Look on my George,—I am a gentleman.
Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.
Whit. And so am I; my name is Walter Whitmore.

How now! why start'st thou? what, dost thee think
Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death.

A cunning man did calculate my birth,
And told me that by Water I should die:
Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded;
Thy name is Gaultier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gaultier or Walter, which it is I care not:
Never yet did base dishonour blur our name.
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot.
Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge,
Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd,
And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!
[Bars hold on Suffolk.

Suf. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a prince,
The Duke of Suffolk, William De-la-Poole.

Whit. The Duke of Suffolk, muffled up in rags!
Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke:
Jove sometime went disguis'd, and why not I?

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.

Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, King Henry's
The honourable blood of Lancaster,
Must not be shed by such a jaded groom.
Hast thou not kisst thy hand and held my stirrup?

Bareheaded plodded by my foot-clout mule,
And thought thee happy when I shook my head?
How often hast thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
When I have feasted with Queen Margaret?
Remember it, and let it make thee crest-fall'n;
Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride:
How in our voiding-lobby hast thou stood.
And duly waited for my coming forth?
(he name? or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up that I can write my name.

All. He hath confessed: away with him! he's a villain and a traitor.

Cade. Away with him, I say! hang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck.

[Exeunt some with the Clerk.

Enter Michael.

M. h. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down. He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself: he is but a knight, is he?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels.] Rise up, Sir John Mortimer. [Rises.] Now have at him!

Enter Sir Humphrey Stafford and William his Brother, with drum and Forces.

Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent,
Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down;
Home to your cottages, forsake this gром:
— The king is merciful if you revolt. [blood

IV. Staf. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to
If you go forward: therefore yield or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not:
I' is to you, good people, that I speak,
Our whom, in time to come, I hope to reign;
For I am rightful heir unto the crown.
Staf. Villain, thy father was a plasterer;
And thou thyself a shearmen,—art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

IV. Staf. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this:—Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, [he not?
Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter,—did Staf. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

IV. Staf. That's false.

Cade. Ay, there's the question: but I say
The elder of them being put to nurse,
Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away:
And, ignorant of his birth and parentage,
Became a bricklayer when he came to age:
His son am I; deny it if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be king.

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore deny it not. [words,

Staf. And will you credit this base drudge's
That speaks he knows not what? [gone.

All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye

W. Staf. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. He lies, for I invented it myself.

Aside. —Go to, sirrah, tell the king from me, that, for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign; but I'll be protector over him.

Dick. And furthermore, we'll have the Lord Say's head, for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason: for thereby is England maimed, and lain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it an emasculate: and more than that, he can speak French; and therefore he is a traitor.

Staf. O gross and miserable ignorance!

Cade. Nay, answer if you can:—the Frenchmen are our enemies; go to, then, I ask but this,—can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no? [head.

All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his

W. Staf. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,
Assail them with the army of the king. [town

Staf. Herald, away; and throughout every Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade;
That those which fly before the battle ends
May, even in their wives' and children's sight,
Be bang'd up for example at their doors:

And you that be the king's friends, follow me.

[Exeunt the two Stafford and Forces.

Cade. And you that love the commons follow me.

Now show yourselves men: 'tis for liberty.
We will not leave one lord, one gentleman:
Spare none but such as go in cloaked shoon;
For they are thriftie honest men, and such
As would—but that they dare not—take our parts.

[wards us.

Dick. They are all in order, and march to Cade. But then are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march forward.

[Exeunt.

Scene III. —Another part of Blackheath.

Alarums. The two parties enter and fight, and both the Stafford are slain.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?
Dick. Here, sir.
Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou belavest thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore thus will I reward thee,—the Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred lacking one, a week.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear [putting on part of SIR H. STAFFORD'S armour]; and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse's heels till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols, and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee.—Come, let's march towards London. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, reading a supplication:
the. DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and Lord Say with him: at a distance. Queen Margaret mourning over Suffolk's head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind, And makes it fearful and degenerate; Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep. But who can cease to weep, and look on this? Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast. But where's the body that I should embrace? Buck. What answer makes your grace to the rebels' supplication?

K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat;
For God forbid so many simple souls Should perish by the sword! And I myself, Rather than bloody war shall cut them short, Will parley with Jack Cade their general:— But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face Ruft'd, like a wandering planet, over me, And could it not enforce them to relent That were unworthy to behold the same?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head. [Exit.]

Say. Ay, but I hope your highness shall have K. Hen. How now, madam! Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's death? I fear, my love, if that I had been dead, [me. Thou wouldst not have mourn'd so much for Q. Mar. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. The rebels are in Southwark: fly, my Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer, Descended from the Duke of Clarence's house; And calls your grace usurper openly, And vows to crown himself in Westminster. His army is a ragged multitude Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless: Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death Hath given them heart and courage to proceed: All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, They call false caterpillars, and intend their death. K. Hen. O graceless men! they know not what they do. [Exit.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth. Until a power be rais'd to put them down.

Q. Mar. Ah! were the Duke of Suffolk now alive, These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd. K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee; Therefore away with us to Killingworth.

Say. So might your grace's person be in danger; The sight of me is odious in their eyes: And therefore in this city will I stay, And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter a second Messenger.

Mes. Jack Cade hath gotten London Bridge; The citizens fly and forsake their houses; The rascal people, thirsting after prey, Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear To spoil the city and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord: away, take horse.

K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us. [Exit.

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is K. Hen. Farewell, my lord! to LORD SAY; trust not the Kentish rebels.

Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd.

Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence, And therefore am I bold and resolute.

SCENE V.—London. The Tower.

Enter Lord Scales and others, on the Walls. Then enter certain Citizens, below.

Scales. How now! is Jack Cade slain? 1 Cm. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them: the lord mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

_Scales._ Such aid as I can spare, you shall command;
but I am troubled here with them myself,—the rebels have assayed to win the Tower.
But get you to Smithfield, and gather head,
And thither I will send you Matthew Gough; fight for your king, your country, and your lives;
And so, farewell, for I must hence again.

_[Exeunt._

Scene VI.—London. _Cannon Street._

_Ende Jack Cade and his Followers._ He strikes his staff on London stone.

_Cade._ Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the pissing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now henceforward it shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer.

_Enter a Soldier, running._

_Sold._ Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

_Cade._ Knock him down there.

_[They kill him._

_Smith._ If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more; I think he hath a very fair warning.

_Dick._ My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

_Cade._ Come, then, let's go fight with them: but first, go and set London Bridge on fire; and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away.

_[Exeunt._

Scene VII.—London. _Smithfield._

_Alarums._ Enter, on one side, _Cade and his Company_; on the other, _Citizens, and the King's Forces_, headed by _Matthew Gough_. They fight; the Citizens are routed, and _Matthew Gough is slain._

_Cade._ So, sirs:—now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inns of court; down with them all.

_Dick._ I have a suit unto your lordship.

_Cade._ Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

_Dick._ Only, that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

_John._ Mass, 'twill be sore law then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

_[Aside._

_Smith._ Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese.

_[Aside._

_Cade._ I have thought upon it, it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm: my mouth shall be the Parliament of England.

_John._ Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out.

_[Aside._

_Cade._ And henceforward all things shall be in common.

_Enter a Messenger._

_Mess._ My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France: he that made us pay one-and-twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

_Enter George Bevis, with the Lord Say._

_Cade._ Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times.—Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord! now art thou within point blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my majesty for giving up of Normandy unto Monsieur Basimucu, the Dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar school: and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the king, his crown, and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride in a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

_Say._ What of that?

_Cade._ Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men than thou go in their hose and doublets.

_Dick._ And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

_Say._ You men of Kent,—

_Dick._ What say you of Kent?

_Say._ Nothing but this,—'tis bona terra, mala gens.
Cade. Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. I hear me but speak, and hear me where you will.

Kent, in the Commentaries Caesar writ,
1. term’d the civil’st place of all this isle:
Sweet is the country, because full of riches;
The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy;
Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.
I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy;
Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.
Justice with favour have I always done;
Prayers and tears have mov’d me; gifts could never.

When have I aught exacted at your hands,
But to maintain the king, the realm, and you?
Large gifts have I bestow’d on learned clerks,
Because my book preferr’d me to the king,
And seeing ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven.
Unless you be possess’d with devilish spirits,
You cannot but forbear to murder me:
This tongue hath parley’d unto foreign kings
For your behoof,—[the field?

Cade. Tut, when struck’st thou one blow in Say. Great men have reaching hands; oft have I struck
Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.
Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for Cade. Give him a box of the ear, and that will make ’em red again.

Say. Long sitt’t to determine poor men’s
Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.
Cade. Ye shall have a hempen cauldron, then,
and the help of hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?
Say. The palsy, and not fear, provokes me.
Cade. Nay, he nods at us, as who should say.
I’ll be even with you: I’ll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no. Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me wherein have I offended most?
Have I affected wealth or honour,—speak?
Are my chests fill’d up with extorted gold?
Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?
Whom have I injur’d, that ye seek my death?
These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding,
This breast from harbouring foul deceitful
O let me live!

Cade. I feel remorse in myself with his words;
but I’ll bridle it: he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. [Aside.] Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue;
he speaks not o’ God’s name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently;
and then break into his son-in-law’s house, Sir
James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done. [prayers,
Say. Ah, countrypeople! if you make your God should be so obdurate as yourselves,
How would it fare with your departed souls?
And therefore yet relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye.

[Exeunt some with LORD SAY.
The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute; there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead ere they shall have it; men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell.

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O brave!

Re-enter Rebels, with the heads of LORD SAY and his Son-in-law.

Cade. But is not this braver?—Let them kiss one another, for they loved well when they were alive. Now, part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France.
Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night;
for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and at every corner have them kiss.—Away! [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Southwark.

Alarum. Enter CADE and all his Rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish Street! down Saint Magnus’ corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames!—[A parley sounded, then a retreat.]
What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?

Enter BUCKINGHAM and LORD CLIFFORD,
with Forces.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee: [king Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the Unto the commons whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them all
That will forsake thee and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye rebel?
And yield to mercy whilst ’tis offered you;
Or let a rebel lead you to your deaths?
Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon,
Fling up his cap, and say God save his majesty! Who hateth him, and honours not his father, Henry the Fifth, that made all France to quake, Shake he his weapon at us and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What, Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave?—And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom: but you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break you backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces: for me, I will make shift for one: and so, God's curse light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade!

Cliff. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth, That thus do you exclaim you go with him? Will he conduct you through the heart of France? And make the meanest of you earls and dukes? And, he hath no home, no place to fly to; Nor knows he how to live, but by the poit, Unless by robbing of your friends and us. Were't not a shame, that whilst you live at war, The fearful French, whom you late vanquished, Should make a start o'er seas and vanquish you? Methinks already in this civil broil I see them lording it in London streets, Crying Villain! unto all they meet. Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to an hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together to surprise me: my sword make way for me, for here is no staying.

[Aside.]—In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very middest of you! and heavens and honour be witness that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels.

[Exit."

Book. What! is he fled? go some and follow him:

And he that brings his head unto the king Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.—

[Exeunt some of them.

Follow me, soldiers: we'll devise a mean To reconcile you all unto the king. [Exeunt.

Scene IX.—Killingworth Castle.

Trumpets sounded. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, and Somerset, on the terrace of the Castle.

K. Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne, And could command no more content than I? No sooner was I crept out of my cradle But I was made a king, at nine months old; Was never subject long'd to be a king As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter Buckingham and Lord Clifford.

Buck. Health and glad tidings to your majesty! K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Cade surpris'd?

Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, a number of Cade's Followers, with halters about their necks.

Cliff. He is fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield;

And humbly thus, with halters on their necks, Expect your highness' doom of life or death.

K. Hen. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates, To entertain my vows of thanks and praise! Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives, And show'd how well you love your prince and country:

Continue still in this so good a mind, And Henry, though he be unfortunate, Assure yourselves, will never be unkind: And so, with thanks and pardon to you all, I do dismiss you to your several countries.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Please it your grace to be advertised The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland; And with a puissant and a mighty power Of Gallowglasses and stout kerns Is marching hitherward in proud array: And still proclaimeth, as he comes along, His arms are only to remove from thee The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.

K. Hen. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd; Like to a snow that, having escap'd a tempest,
Is straightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate:
But now is Cade driven back, his men dispers'd;
And now is York in arms to second him.—
I pray thee, Buckingham, go thou and meet him;
And ask him what's the reason of these arms.
Tell him I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower;—
And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither,
Until his army be dismiss'd from him.

Som. My lord,
I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my country good.

K. Hen. In any case be not too rough in terms;
For he is fierce, and cannot brook hard lan.

Back. I will, my lord; and doubt not so to deal
As all things shall redound unto your good.

K. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;
For yet may England curse my wretched reign.

[Exeunt.

Scene X.—Kent. Iden's Garden.

Enter Cade.

Cade. Fie on ambition! fie on myself, that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish! These five days have I hid me in these woods, and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now am I so hungry that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climbed into this garden, to see if I can eat grass or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And I think this word sallet was born to do me good: for many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill; and many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink in; and now the word sallet must serve me to feed on.

Enter Iden, with Servants behind.

Iden. Lord, who would live turmoil'd in the court,
And may enjoy such quiet walks as these?
This small inheritance my father left me
Contenteth me, and's worth a monarchy.
I seek not to wax great by others' waning,
Or gather wealth I care not with what envy:
Sufficeth that I have maintains my state,
And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his free-simple without leave. [Aside.] Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king by carrying my head to him! but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatso'er thou be,
I know thee not; why, then, should I betray
Is't not enough to break into my garden,
And where a thief to come to rob my grounds,
Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,
But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee! ay, by the best blood that ever was broached, and beard thee too. Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days; yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door nail, I pray God I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall never be said, while England stands,
That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,
Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.
Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine,
See if thou canst outface me with thy looks:
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist;
Thy leg a stick compared with this truncheon;
My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast;
And if mine arm be heaved in the air,
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.
As for words, whose greatness answers words,
Let this my sword report what speech forbeares.

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard.—Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burley-boned clown in chines of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech Jove, on my knees, thou mayest be turned to holm-nails. [They fight. Cade falls.] O, I am slain! famine and no other hath slain me: let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'd defy them all. Wither, garden; and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,
And hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead:
Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point;
But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat,
To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man; and exhort all the world to be cowards,—for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour. [Dies.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The King's Camp on one side. On the other, enter York attended, with drum and colours: his Forces at some distance.

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,
And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head:
King, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright;
To entertain great England's lawful king.
Ah, sancta majestas! who would not buy thee dear?
Let them obey that know not how to rule;
This hand was made to handle naught but gold.
I cannot give due action to my words
Except a sword or sceptre balance it:
A sceptre shall it have,—have I a soul,—
On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter Buckingham.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me?
The king hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,
To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why thou, being a subject as I am,
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
Shouldst raise so great a power without his leave,
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great:
O, I could hew up rocks and fight with flint,
I am so angry at these abject terms;
And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury!
I am far better born than is the king;
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts:
But I must make fair weather yet awhile,
Till Henry be more weak and I more strong.

[Aside.

Buckingham, I pr'ythee, pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this while;
My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.
The cause why I have brought this army hither
Is to remove proud Somerset from the king,
Seditious to his grace and to the state. [part:

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part:
But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand;
The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.—
Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves;
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,
You shall have pay and everything you wish.—
And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love;
I'll send them all as willing as I live:
Lands, goods, horse, armour, anything I have,
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind submission:
We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter King Henry, attended.

K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,
That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm?

York. In all submission and humility York doth present himself unto your highness.

K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring? [hence,

York. To have the traitor Somerset from And fight against that monstrous rebel Cade,
Who since I heard to be disconsol'd.

Enter Idon, with Cade's head.

Idon. If one so rude and of so mean condition
May pass into the presence of a king,
Lo, I present your grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

K. Hen. The head of Cade!—Great God, how just art thou!—
O, let me view his visage, being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.— [him?

York.  I thank thee, Clifford: say, what news

Nay, do not fright us with an angry look:
We are thy sovereign, Clifford, kneel again;
For thy mistaken so, we pardon thee. [take;
Clif.  This is my king, York, I do not mis-
But thou mistak'st me much to think I do:
To Bedlam with him! is the man grown mad?
K.  Hen.  Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour
Makes him oppose himself against his king.
Clif.  He is a traitor; let him to the Tower,
And chop away that factious pate of his.
Q.  Mar.  He is arrested, but will not obey;
His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.
York.  Will you not, sons?
Edw.  Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.
Rich.  And if words will not, then our weapons shall.
Clif.  Why, what a brood of traitors have we York.  Look in a glass, and call thy image so:
I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor.—
Call hither to the stake my two brave bears,
That with the very shaking of their chains
They may astonish these fell-lurking curs:
Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Drums.  Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY,
with Forces.
Clif.  Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death,
And manacle the bear-ward in their chains,
If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-place.
Rich.  Oft have I seen a hot o'erweening cur
Run back and bite, because he was withheld;
Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw,
Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs and cried:
And such a piece of service will you do,
If you oppose yourselves to match Lord Warwick.
Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,
As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!

York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon.

Cliff. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves. [to bow?—

K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hast thou knee forgot
Old Salisbury,—shame to thy silver hair
Thou mad misleader of thy brain'sick son!—
What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian,
And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?—
O, where is faith? O, where is loyalty?
If it be banish'd from the frosty head,
Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?—
Will thou go dig a grave to find out war,
And shame thine honourable age with blood?
Why art thou old, and want'st experience?
Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?
For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me,
That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself
The title of this most renowned duke;
And in my conscience do repute his grace
The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have.

K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven
For such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin;
But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.
Who can be bound by any solemn vow
To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,
To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To reave the orphan of his patrimony,
To wring the widow from her custom'd right;
And have no other reason for this wrong
But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself. [thou hast,

Fast. Call Buckingham, and all the friends
I am resolv'd for death or dignity. [true.

Cliff. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove
War. You were best to go to bed and dream again,
To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Cliff. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm
Than any thou canst conjure up to day;
And that I'll write upon thy burgonet,
Might I but know thee by thy household badge.
War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,
The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff,
This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,—

As on a mountain-top the cedar shows,
That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,—
Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Cliff. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear,
And tread it under foot with all contempt,
Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear.

V. Cliff. And so to arms, victorious father,
To quell the rebels and their complices.
Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! speak not in spite,
For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

V. Cliff. Fool stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally.

Scene II.—Saint Albans.

Alarums: excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls!
And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now,—when the angry trumpet sounds alarum,
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air.—
Clifford. I say, come forth and fight with me:
Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter York

How now, my noble lord! what, all a-foot?
York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed:
But match to match I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows.
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.

Enter Lord Clifford

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.
York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase,
For I myself must hunt this deer to death.
War. Then, nobly, York: 'tis for a crown thou fight'st.—
As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

Exit.

Cliff. What see'st thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in
But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Cliff. Nor should thy prowess want praise
And esteem,
But that 'tis shown ignobly and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword,
As I in justice and true right express it!
Enter Young Clifford.

V. Clif. Shame and confusion! All is on the rout;
Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell,
Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
Hot coals of vengeance!—Let no soldier fly:
He that is truly dedicate to war
Hath no self-love; nor he that loves himself
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
The name of valour.—O, let the vile world end.
[Seeing his father's body.

And the premised flames of the last day
Knit earth and heaven together!
Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds
To cease!—Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The silver livery of advised age,
And in thy reverence and thy chair-days thus
To die in ruffian battle?—Even at this sight
My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine
It shall be stony. York not our old men spare;
No more will I their babes: tears virginal
Shall be to me even as the dew to fire;
And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclains,
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
Henceforth I will not have to do with pity:
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it
As wild Medea young Absyrutus did:
In cruelty will I seek out my fame.—
Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house:
[Taking up the body.

As did Aeneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders:
But then Aeneas bare a living load,
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. [Exit.

Enter Richard Plantagenet and Somerset, fighting, and Somerset is killed.

Rich. So lie thou there;—
For underneath an alehouse paltry sign,
The Castle in Saint Albans, Somerset
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.—
Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful still:
Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill. [Exit.

Alarums: excursions. Enter King Henry,
Queen Margaret, and others, retreating.

Q. Mar. Away, my lord! you are slow; for shame, away!
K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good Margaret, stay.
Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll nor fight nor fly:
Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
To give the enemy way; and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but fly.

[Alarum afar off.

If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes: but if we haply scape,—
As well we may, if not through your neglect,—
We shall to London get: where you are lov'd;
And where this breach, now in our fortunes made,
May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter Young Clifford.

V. Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,
I would speak blasphemy ere I bid you fly:
But fly you must; incurable discount
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away, for your relief! and we will live
To see their day, and them our fortune give:
Away, my lord, away! [Exit.

Scene III.—Fields near Saint Albans.

Alarum: retreat. Flourish, then enter York.
Richard Plantagenet, Warwick, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him,—
That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time,
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,
Repairs him with occasion? This happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I holp him to his horse,
Three times bestrud him, thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any further act: [him;
But still, where danger was, still there I met
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his will in his old feeble body.
But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day;
By the mass, so did we all.—I thank you, Richard:
God knows how long it is I have to live;
And it hath pleas'd him that three times to-day
You have defended me from imminent death.—
Well, lords, we have not got that which we have:
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing nature.
York I know our safety is to follow them;
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London,
To call a present court of Parliament.

Let us pursue him ere the writs go forth:—
What says Lord Warwick? shall we after them?
War. After them! nay, before them, if we can.
Now, by my hand, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
Saint Albans battle, won by famous York,
Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come.—[all:
Sound drums and trumpets:—and to London
And more such days as these to us befall!
[Exeunt.]

ACT I.

War. I wonder how the king escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursu'd the horsemens of the He sily stole away, and left his men:
Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland, Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat, Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself, Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all a-breast, Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in, Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham,
Is either slain or wounded dangerous;
I cleft his beaver with a downright blow:
That this is true, father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody sword.

Mont. And, brother, here's the Earl of Wiltshire's blood,

[To York, showing his.

Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

[Throwing down Somerset's head.

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.—

But, is your grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt.

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's head.
War. And so do I.—Victorious Prince of York,
Before I see thee seated in that throne
Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close.
This is the palace of the fearful king,
And this the regal seat: possess it, York;
For this is thine, and not King Henry’s heirs.
York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will;
For bither we have broken in by force. [die.
War. We’ll all assist you; he that flies shall York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk:—stay by me, my lords;—
And soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night.
War. And when the king comes, offer him
no violence,
Unless he seek to thrust you out per force.
[The Soldiers retire.
York. The queen this day here holds her parliament,
But little thinks she we shall be of her council:
By words or blows here let us win our right.
Rich. Arm’d as we are, let’s stay within this house.
[call’d,
War. The bloody parliament shall this be
Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be king,
And bashful Henry depos’d, whose cowardice
Hath made us by-words to our enemies.
York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute;
I mean to take possession of my right.
War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best,
The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,
Dares stir a wing if Warwick shake his hells.
I’ll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares.—
Resolvethee, Richard: claim the English crown.
[Warwick bea York to the throne,
who seats himself.
Flourish. Enter King Henry, Clifford,
Northumberland, Westmoreland, Exeter, and others, with red roses in their harts.
K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,
Even in the chair of state! belike he means,— Back’d by the power of Warwick, that false peer,—
To aspire unto the crown, and reign as king.—
Their Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father;
And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have vow’d revenge
On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.
North. If I be not, heavens be reveng’d on me!
Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.
West. What, shall we suffer this? let’s pluck him down:
My heart for anger burns; I cannot brook it.
K. Hen. He patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland.
Clif. Patience is for poltroons, and such as he:
He durst not sit there had your father liv’d.
My gracious lord, here in the parliament
Let us assail the family of York. [so.
North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin: be it
K. Hen. Ah, know you not the city favours them,
And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?
Exe. But when the duke is slain they’ll quickly fly.
K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry’s heart,
To make a shambles of the parliament house!
Cousin of Exeter, frown, words, and threats
Shall be the war that Henry means to use.
[They advance to the Duke.
Thou factious Duke of York, descend my throne,
And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet;
I am thy sovereign.
York. I am thine.
Exe. For shame, come down: he made thee
Duke of York. [was.
York. It was my inheritance, as the earldom
Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.
War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown
In following this usurping Henry.
Clif. Whom should he follow but his natural king?
War. True, Clifford; and that’s Richard
Duke of York.
K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne?
York. It must and shall be so: content thyself.
War. Be Duke of Lancaster; let him be king.
West. He is both king and Duke of Lancaster;
And that the Lord of Westmoreland shall maintain.
[Forget
War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You
That we are those which cha’d you from the field,
And slew your fathers, and with colours spread
March’d through the city to the palace-gates.
North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief;
And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.
West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons, Thy kinsmen, and thy friends, I’ll have more lives
Than drops of blood were in my father’s veins.
Clif. Urge it no more: lest that, instead of words,
I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger
As shall revenge his death before I stir.
War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worth less threats! [crown]
York. Will you we show our title to the
If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.
K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?
Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York;
Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March:
I am the son of Henry the Fifth,
Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop,
And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces.
War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.
K. Hen. The lord protector lost it, and not I:
When I was crown'd I was but nine months old.
Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose.—
Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.
Edw. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head.
Mont. Good brother to York, as thou lov'st and honour'st arms,
Let's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus.
Rich. Sound drums and trumpets and the king will fly.
York. Sons, peace!
K. Hen. Peace thou! and give King Henry leave to speak. [lords;
War. Plantagenet shall speak first: hear him,
And be you silent and attentive too,
For he that interrupts him shall not live.
K. Hen. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne,
Wherein my grandsire and my father sat?
No: first shall war unpeople this my realm;
Ay, and their colours,—often borne in France,
And now in England to our heart's great sorrow,— [lords;
Shall be my winding-sheet.—Why faint you,
My title's good, and better far than his.
War. But prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.
K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown.
York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king,
K. Hen. I know not what to say; my title's weak. [Aside.
Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?
York. What then?
K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king;
For Richard, in the view of many lords,
Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth,
Whose heir my father was, and I am his.
York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,
And made him to resign his crown perforce.
War. Suppose, my lords, he did it uncon-strain'd,
Think you 'twere prejudicial to his crown?
Exe. No; for he could not so resign his crown
But that the next heir should succeed and reign.
K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?
Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.
York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?
Exe. My conscience tells me he is lawful king.
K. Hen. All will revolt from me, and turn to him. [Aside.
North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,
Think not that Henry shall be so depos'd.
War. Depos'd he shall be, in despite of all.
North. Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern power,
Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,—
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,—
Can set the duke up in despite of me.
Cliff. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence.
May that ground gape, and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!
K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart! [crown.—
Yorl. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy
What matter you, or what conspire you, lords?
War. Do right unto this princely Duke of York;
Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And o'er the chair of state, where now he sits,
Write up his title with usurping blood.
[He stamps, and the Soldiers show themselves.
K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word:—
Let me for this my life-time reign as king.
York. Confirm the crown to me and to mine
heirs,
And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.
K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease. [son!
Cliff. What wrong is this unto the prince your War. What good is this to England and himself!
West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!
Cliff. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!
West. I cannot stay to hear these articles.
North. Nor I.
Cliff. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news. [king,
West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate
In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.
North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,
And die in bands, for this unmanly deed!
Cliff. In dreadful war must thou be overcome,
Or live in peace, abandon'd and despis'd!

[Exeunt North., Cliff., and West.
War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not. [not yield.
Exe. They seek revenge, and therefore will
K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!
War. Why should you sigh, my lord!
K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord Warwick, but Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit.
But be it as it may:—I here entail
The crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever;
Conditionally, that these thou take an oath
To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,
To honour me as thy king and sovereign,
And neither by treason nor hostility
To seek to put me down and reign thyself.
York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform. [Coming from the throne.
War. Long live King Henry!—Plantagenet, embrace him.
K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!
York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.
Exe. Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them foes!

[Senet. The Lords come forward.
York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle.
War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.
Norf. And I to Norfolk with my followers.
MONT. And I unto the sea, from whence I came.
K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow to the court.
Exe. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger:
I'll steal away.

Enter Queen Margaret and the Prince of Wales.
Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee.
K. Hen. Stay, gentle queen, and I will
Q. Mar. Who can be patient, gentle queen, and I will K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me and to her son
 Hath made her break out into terms of rage!
Revenge'd may she be on that hateful duke,
Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle—
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
Or nourish'd him as I did with my blood,—
Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there,
Rather than made that savage duke thine heir,
And disinherit thine only son.
Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me:
If you be king, why should not I succeed?
K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret;—pardon me,

The Earl of Warwick and the duke enforce'd me.
Q. Mar. Enforced thee! art thou king and wilt be forc'd?
[wretch!
I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous
Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me;
And given unto the house of York such head
As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.
To entail him and his heirs unto the crown,
What is it, but to make thy sepulchre,
And creep into it far before thy time?
Warwick is chancellor and the lord of Calais;
Stern Falconbridge commands the narrow seas;
The duke is made protector of the realm;
And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds
The trembling lamb environed with wolves.
Had I been there, which am a silly woman,
The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes
Before I would have granted to that act.
But thou preferr'st thy life before thine honour:
And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself
Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,
Until that act of parliament be repeal'd,
Whereby my son is disinherited. [colours
The northern lords that have forsworn thy
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread;
And spread they shall be,—to thy foul disgrace,
And utter ruin of the house of York.
Thus do I leave thee.—Come, son, let's away;
Our army is ready; come, we'll after them.
K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speech.
Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already:
get thee gone. [with me?
K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay
Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.
Prince. When I return with victory from the field
I'll see your grace: till then I'll follow her.
Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus. [Exeunt Queen Margaret and the Prince.
K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me and
to her son

Hath made her break out into terms of rage!
Revenge'd may she be on that hateful duke,
Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle—
Tire on the flesh of me and of my son!
The loss of those three lords torments my heart:
I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair:—
Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.
Exeunt. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all.

Enter Edward, Richard, and Montague.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.
Edw. No, I can better play the orator.
Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter York.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother! at a strife?
What is your quarrel? how began it first?
Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.
York. About what?
Rich. About that which concerns your grace and us.—
The crown of England, father, which is yours.
[death.
Rich. Your right depends not on his life or Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now:
[breathe,
By giving the house of Lancaster leave to
It will outrun you, father, in the end. [reign.
York. I took an oath that he should quietly
Edw. But, for a kingdom, any oath may be broken:
[year.
I would break a thousand oaths to reign one Rich. No; God forbid your grace should be York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.
Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear
York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.
Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not
Before a true and lawful magistrate,
That hath authority over him that swears:
Henry had none, but did usurp the place;
Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.
Therefore, to arms. And, father, do but think
How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown;
Within whose circuit is Elysium,
And all that poesy feign of bliss and joy.
Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest
Until the white rose that I wear be dy'd
Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.

York. Richard, enough; I will be king, or die.—
Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And whet on Warwick to this enterprise.—
Thou, Richard, shalt to the Duke of Norfolk,
And tell him privily of our intent,—
You, Edward, shall unto my Lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise:
In them I trust; for they are soldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.—
While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more,
But that I seek occasion how to rise,
And yet the king not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger.

But, stay: what news? Why com'st thou in such post? [and lords
Mess. The queen with all the northern earls
Intend here to besiege you in your castle:
She is hard by with twenty thousand men;
And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.
York. Ay, with my sword. What! think'st thou that we fear them?—
Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me;—
My brother Montague shall post to London:
Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left protectors of the king,
With powerful policy strengthen themselves,
And trust not simple Henry nor his oats.
Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it not:
And thus most humbly I do take my leave.
[Exit.

Enter Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer.

York. Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles!
You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;
The army of the queen mean to besiege us.
Sir John. She shall not need, we'll meet her in the field.
York. What, with five thousand men?
Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need:
A woman's general; what should we fear?
[A march afar off.
Edw. I hear their drums: let's set our men in order,
And issue forth, and bid them battle straight.
York. Five men to twenty!—though the odds be great,
I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.
Many a battle have I won in France,
Whenas the enemy hath been ten to one:
Why should I not now have the like success?
[Exit.
SCENE III.—Plains near Sandal Castle.

Alarum. Enter Rutland and his Tutor.

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to 'scape their hands?

Ah, tutor, look where bloody Clifford comes!

Enter Clifford and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy life.

As for the brat of this accursed duke,
Whose father slew my father,—he shall die.

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.

Clif. Soldiers, away with him! [child, entered.

Tut. Ah, Clifford, murder not this innocent

Lest thou be hated both of God and man.

[Exit, forced off by Soldiers.

Clif. How now! is he dead already? or is it fear

That makes him close his eyes?—I'll open them.

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch

That trembles under his devouring paws;
And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey,
And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder.

Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,
And not with such a cruel threatening look!

Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die!—

I am too mean a subject for thy wrath:

Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Clif. In vain thou speakest, poor boy; my father's blood

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it again:

He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives and thine

Were not revenge sufficient for me;

No, if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves,
And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,

It could not slake mine ire nor ease my heart.

The sight of any of the house of York

Is as a fury to torment my soul;

And till I root out their accursed line

And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore,— [Lifting his hand.

Rut. O let me pray before I take my death!

To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pity me!

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.

Rut. I never did thee harm: why wilt thou slay me?

Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut. But 'twas ere I was born.

Thou hast one son,—for his sake pity me;

Lest in revenge thereof,—sith God is just,—

He be as miserably slain as I.

Ahh, let me live in prison all my days;

And when I give occasion of offence

Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Clif. No cause!

Thy father slew my father; therefore, die.

[Clifford stabs him.

Rut. Dii faciant, laudis summa sit ista tua!

[Dies.

Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!

And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade

Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood,

Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Plains near Sandal Castle.

Alarum. Enter York.

York. The army of the queen hath got the field:

My uncles both are slain in rescuing me;

And all my followers to the eager foe

Turn back, and fly, like ships before the wind,

Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starved wolves.

My sons,—God knows what hath bechanc'd them:

[Exit.

But this I know,—they have demean'd them

Like men born to renown by life or death.

Three times did Richard make a lane to me

And three times cried, Courage, father! fight it out!

And full as oft came Edward to my side,

With purple falchion, painted o' the hilt

In blood of those that had encounter'd him:

And when the hardiest warriors did retire,

Richard cried, Charge: and give no foot of ground!

And cried, A crown, or else a glorious tomb:

A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!

With this we charg'd again: but, out, alas!

We bodg'd again; as I have seen a swan

With bootless labour swim against the tide,

And spend her strength with o'er matching waves.

[Short alarum within.

Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue

And I am faint, and cannot fly their fury:

And were I strong, I would not shun their fury:

The sands are number'd that make up my life;

Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter Queen Margaret, Clifford, Northumberland, and Soldiers.

Come, bloody Clifford,—rough Northumberland,

I dare your quenchless fury to mor'dange:

I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.

Clif. Ay, to such mercy, as his ruthless arm,
With downright payment, show’d unto my father.
Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth
A bird that will revenge upon you all:
And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Scorning whater’er you can afflict me with.

Why come you not? what! multitudes, and fear?
Clif. So cowards fight when they can fly no further:
So doves do peck the falcon’s piercing talons;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out invectives gainst the officers.

York. O Clifford, but bethink thee once again,
And in thy thought o’errun my former time:
And, if thou canst, for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice
[This!
Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word,
But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one.

[Draws.

Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes
I would prolong awhile the traitor’s life.
Wrath makes him deaf:—speak thou, Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford! do not honour him so
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart:
What value were it, when a cur doth grin,
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away?
It is war’s prize to take all ’vantages;
And ten to one is no impeach of valour.

[They lay hands on York, who struggles.

Clif. Ay, ay, so strives the woodcock with the gin.

North. So doth the cony struggle in the net.

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer’d booty;
So true men yield, with robbers so o’ermatch’d.

North. What would your grace have done unto him now?

[thumberland,

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Norfolk,
Come, make him stand upon this molehill here,
That raught at mountains with outstretched arms,
Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.—
What, was it you that would be England’s king?
Was’t you that reveill’d in our parliament,
And made a preaching of your high descent?
Where are your mess of sons to back you now?
The wanton Edward and the lusty George?
And where’s that valiant crook-back prodigy,

Dicky your boy, that with his grumbling voice
Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?
Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
Look, York: I stain’d this napkin with the blood
That valiant Clifford, with his rapiers point,
Made issue from the bosom of the boy;
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly,
I should lament thy miserable state.
I pray thee, grieve, to make me merry, York.
What, hath thy fiery heart so parch’d thine entrails
That not a tear can fall for Rutland’s death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be mad;
And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
Thou wouldst be fee’d, I see, to make me sport;
York cannot speak unless he wear a crown.—
A crown for York!—and, lords, bow low to him;—

Hold you his hands whilst I do set it on.

[Putting a paper crown on his head.

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king!
Ay, this is he that took King Henry’s chair;
And this is he was his adopted heir.—
But how is it that great Plantagenet
Is crown’d so soon, and broke his solemn oath?
As I bethink me, you should not be king
Till our King Henry had shook hands with death.
And will you pale your head in Henry’s glory,
And rob his temples of the diadem
Now in his life, against your holy oath?
O, ’tis a fault too, too unpardonable!—

Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his head;
And whilst we breathe take time to do him dead.

Clif. That is my office, for my father’s sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let’s hear the orisons he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France, [tooth!
Whose tongue more poisons than the adder’s
How ill-seeming is it in thy sex
To triumph, like an Amazonian trull,
Upon their woes whom fortune captivates!
But that thy face is, visary like, unchanging,
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush:
To tell thee whence thou cam’st, of whom deriv’d,

Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.
Thy father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem;
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.
Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen:
Unless the adage must be verified,—
That beggars mounted run their horse to death.
'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud;
But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small:
'Tis virtue that doth make them most admir'd;
The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at:
'Tis government that makes them seem divine;
The want thereof makes thee abominable:
Thou art as opposite to every good
As the antipodes are unto us,
Or as the south to the septentrion.
O tiger's head wrapp'd in a woman's hide!
How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the child,
To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,
And yet be seen to bear a woman's face?
Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;
Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless.
Bidd'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish:
[will:
Would'st have me weep? why, now thou hast thy
For raging wind blows up incessant showers,
And when the rage allays, the rain begins.
These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies:
And every drop cries vengeance for his death.
'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false Frenchwoman.
[me so
North. Beshrew me, but his passions move
That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.
York. That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood:
But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,—
O, ten times more,—than tigers of Hycania.
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears:
This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet boy,
And I with tears do wash the blood away.
Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this:
[He gives back the handkerchief.
And if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;
Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And say, Alas, it was a pitiful deed!—
There, take the crown, and, with the crown, my curse; [Giving back the paper crown.
And in thy need such comfort come to thee
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!—
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world;
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!
North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,
I should not for my life but weep with him,
To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.
Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my Lord Northumberland?
Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.
Cliff. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death.
[Stabbing him.
Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king.
[Stabbing him.
York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God!
My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee.
[Dies.
Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates:
So York may overlook the town of York.
[Flourish. Exeunt.
ACT II.
SCENE I.—A plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.
Drums. Enter Edward and Richard, with their Forces, marching.
Edw. I wonder how our princely father 'scap'd,
Or whether he be 'scap'd away or no
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit:
Had he been ta'en we should have heard the news;
[news:
I had he been slain we should have heard the
Or had he 'scap'd, methinks we should have heard
The happy tidings of his good escape.—
How fares my brother? why is he so sad?
Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd
Where our right valiant father is become.
I saw him in the battle range about;
And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth.
Methought he bore him in the thickest troop
As doth a lion in a herd of neat;
Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs,—
Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof and bark at him.
So far'd our father with his enemies;
So fled his enemies my warlike father:
Methinks 'tis prize enough to be his son.—
See how the morning ope's her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun!
How well resembles it the prime of youth,
Trimm'd like a youner prancing to his love!
Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?
Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect
sun;
Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.
See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable:
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.
In this the heaven figures some event.

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.
I think it cites us, brother, to the field,—
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meads,
Should, notwithstanding, join our lights togethert,
And overshrine the earth, as this the world.
Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear
Upon my target three fair shining suns.

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters:—by your leave I speak it,
You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foreshew
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Mess. Ah, one that was a woeful looker-on Whenas the noble Duke of York was slain,
Your princely father and my loving lord!

Edw. O, speak no more! for I have heard too much.

Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

Mess. Environed he was with many foes;
And stood against them as the hope of Troy
Against the Greeks that would have enter'd Troy.
But Hercules himself must yield to odds;
And many strokes, though with a little axe,
Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak.
By many hands your father was subdu'd;
But only slaughter'd by the irreful arm
Of unrelenting Clifford, and the queen,—
Whocrown'd the gracious duke in high despitse,— Laugh'd in his face; and when with grief he wept,
The ruthless queen gave him to dry his cheeks
A napkin steeped in the harmless blood
Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Cliffsordslain:
And after many scorns, many foul taunts,
They took his head, and on the gates of York
They set the same; and there it doth remain,
The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Edw. Sweet Duke of York, our prop to lean upon,—
Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay!—
O Clifford, boisterous Clifford, thou hast slain
The flower of Europe for his chivalry;
And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,
For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee!—
Now my soul's palace is become a prison:
Ah, would she break from hence, that this my body

Might in the ground be closed up in rest!
For never henceforth shall I joy again,
Never, O never shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weep; for all my body's moisture [heart:
Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning
Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden;
For self-same wind that I should speak withal
Is kindling coals, that fire all my breast,
And burn me up with flames, that tears would quench.
To weep is to make less the depth of grief:
Tears, then, for babes; blows and revenge for me!—

Richard, I bear thy name: I'll venge thy death,
Or die renowned by attempting it.

Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left with thee;
His dukedom and his chair with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird,
Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun:
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom
say:
Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

Vorc. Enter Warwick and Montague,
with Forces.

Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should
Our baleful news, and at each word's deliverance
Stab po nierds in our flesh till all were told,
The words would add more anguish than the wounds,
O valiant lord, the Duke of York is slain!

Edw. O Warwick, Warwick! that Plantagenet
Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption
Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears;
And now, to add more measure to your woes
I come to tell you things since then befall'n.
After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,
Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss and his depart.
I, then in London, keeper of the king,
Muster'd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
And very well appointed, as I thought,
March'd towards Saint Albans to intercept the queen,
Bearing the king in my behalf along;
For by my scouts I was advertised
That she was coming with a full intent
To teach our late decree in parliament
To king Henry's oath and your succession.

Short tale to make,—we at St. Albans met,
Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen,
That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen;
Or whether 'twas report of their success;
Or whether 'twas common fear of Clifford'sigor,
Who thunders to his captives, Blood and death,
I cannot judge; but, to conclude with truth,
Their weapons like to lightning came and went;—
Our soldiers,—like the Night-owl's lazy flight,
Or like a lazy thrush with a flail,—
I tell gently down, as if they struck their friends.
I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
With promise of high pay and great rewards.
But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
And we in them no hope to win the day:
So that we find; the king unto the queen:
Lord George, your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
For in the marches here we heard you were Making another head to fight again.

Exit. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gent.?
[Exit Warwick.]

And when came George from Burgundy to Eng.
War. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers;
And for your brother, he was lately sent
From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Ato. 'twas odds, belike, when valiant War.
wick fled:
O! have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er till now his scandal of retire.
War. Not now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear;
[Exit Warwick.]
For thou shalt know this strong right hand of
Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his list,
Were he as famous and so bold in war
As he is am'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Avo. I knew it well, Lord Warwick; blame me not:
'Tis love I bear thy glories makes me speak.
But in this troublous time what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
And wrap our bodies in black mourning-gowns,
To number our Ave-Maries with our beads?
Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?
If for the last, say Ay, and to it, lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out;
And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
With Clifford and the haught Northumberland,
And of their feather many more proud birds,
Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.
He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament;
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath and what best
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong:
Now if the help of Norfolk and myself.
With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March,
Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
Will but amount to five-and-twenty thousand.
Why, War! to London will we march among,
And once again besride our foaming steeds,
And once again cry, Charge upon our foes!
But never once again turn back and fly.

Avo. Ay, now methinks I hear great War.
wick speak:
Never may be live to see a sunshine day
That cries Retreat! Warwick bid him stay.

Exit. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder win I lean:
And when thou failest,—as God forbids the hour!—
Most Edward fail, which peril heaven refers!

War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York:
The next degree is England's royal throne:
For King of England shall thou be proclaim'd
In every borough as we pass along:
And he that throws not up his cap for joy,
Send this fault make forerun of his head
King Edward, — valiant Richard, — Mont. ague, —
Stay we no longer, dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets and about our task.

Avo. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard
As thou hast shown it fifty by thy deeds,—
I come to pierce it,—or to give thee mine.

Exit. Then strike up drums! — God and Saint George for us!

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now! what news?
Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word
By me, The queen is coming with a paissant host:
And craves your company for speedy counsel.
War. Why, then it sorts, brave warriors; let's away.
[Exeunt.
I was adopted heir by his consent:
Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,
You, that are king, though he do wear the crown,
Have caus’d him, by new act of parliament,
To blot out me and put his own son in.

Clif. And reason too:
Who should succeed the father but the son?
Rich. Are you there, butcher?—O, I cannot speak!

Clif. Ay, crook-back, here I stand to answer
Or any he the proudest of thy sort.

Rich. ’Twas you that kill’d young Rutland,
Was it not?

Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For God’s sake, lords, give signal to the fight.

War. What say’st thou, Henry, wilt thou yield

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu’d Warwick! dare you speak?

When you and I met at Saint Albans last,
Your legs did better service than your hands.

War. Then ’twas my turn to fly, and now ’tis thine.

Clif. You said so much before, and yet you War. ’Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

North. No, nor your manhood that durst make Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently—
Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain
The execution of my big-swoln heart

Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.

Clif. I slew thy father,—call’st thou him a child?

Rich. Ay, like a dastard and a treacherous
As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland;
But ere sunset I’ll make thee curse the deed.

K. Hen. Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak.

[thy lips.

Q. Mar. Defy them, then, or else hold close

K. Hen. I pr’ythee give no limits to my tongue:
I am a king, and privileg’d to speak.

Clif. My liege, the wound that bled this meeting here Cannot be cur’d by words; therefore be still.

Rich. Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword:

By him that made us all, I am resolv’d

That Clifford’s manhood lies upon his tongue.

Edu. Say, Henry, shall I have my right, or no?

A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day
That ne’er shall dine unless thou yield the crown.

War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy
For York in justice puts his armour on.

Prince. If that be right which Warwick says is right,
There is no wrong, but everything is right.

Rich. Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands;

For, well I wot, thou hast thy mother’s tongue.

Q. Mar. But thou art neither like thy sire nor dam;

But like a foul misshapen stigmatic,
Mark’d by the destinies to be avoided,

As venom toads, or lizards’ dreadful stings.

Rich. Iron of Naples hid with English gilt,

Whose father bears the title of a king,—

As if a channel should be call’d the sea,—

Sham’st thou not, knowing whence thou art extrauteled,

To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?

Edu. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns,

To make this shameless callet know herself.—
Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou,

Although thy husband may be Menelaus;

And ne’er was Agamemnon’s brother wrong’d
By that false woman as this king by thee.

His father revel’d in the heart of France,

And tam’d the king, and made the dauphin stool:

And had he match’d according to his state,

He might have kept that glory to this day;

But when he took a beggar to his bed,

And grac’d thy poor sire with his bical-day,

Even then that sunshine brew’d a shower for him

That wash’d his father’s fortunes forth of France,

And heap’d sedition on his crown at home.

For what hath broach’d this tumult but thy pride?

Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept;

And we, in pity of the gentle king,

Had slipp’d our claim until another age.

Geo. But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,

And that thy summer bred us no increase,

We set the axe to thy usurping root; [selves,

And though the edge hath something hit our—

Yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike,

We’ll never leave till we have hewn thee down,

Or bath’d thy growing with our heated bloods.

Edu. And in this resolution I defy thee;

Not willing any longer conference,

Since thou deniest the gentle king to speak.—

Sound trumpets!—let our bloody colours wave!—

And either victory or else a grave.

Edu. No, wrangling woman, we’ll no longer stay:

These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.

[Exit.}
Scene III.—A Field of Battle between Towton and Saxon, in Yorkshire.

Alarums: excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,
I lay me down a little while to breathe;
For strokes receiv'd and many blows repaid
I have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength,
And, spite of spite, needs must I rest awhile.

Enter Edward, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungentle death! [clowed.
For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is
War. How now, my lord! what hap? what hope of good?

Enter George.

Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair;
Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us:
What counsel give you, whither shall we fly?
Edw. Bootless is flight,—they follow us with wings;
And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?
Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance;
And in the very pangs of death he cried,
Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,
Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!
So, underneath the belly of their steeds,
That stain'd their fetlocks in his mosting blood,
The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.
War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:
I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Waiting our losses, whiles the foe doth rage;
And look upon, as 'tis the tragedy
Were play'd in jest by counterfeitting actors?
Here on my knee I vow to God above
I'll never pause again, never stand still,
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine
Or fortune given me measure of revenge.
Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine;
And in this vow do chain my soul to thine!—
And ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou settler-up and plucker-down of kings,—
Beseech thee, if with thy will it stands

That to my foes this body must be prey,
Yet that thy braven gates of heaven may ope,
And give sweet passage to my sinful soul!—
Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand;—and, gentle Warwick,
Let me embrace thee in my weary arms:
I, that did never weep, now melt with woe
That winter should cut off our spring-time so.
War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay;
And call them pillars that will stand to us;
And if we thrive, promise them such rewards
As victors wear at the Olympian games:
This may plant courage in their quailing breasts;
For yet is hope of life and victory.—
Forswear no longer, make we hence amain.

[Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Another part of the Field.

Excursions. Enter Richard and Clifford.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone:
Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York,
And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.
Cliff. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone:
This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York;
And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland;
And here's the heart that triumphs in their death,
And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and brother
To execute the like upon thyself;
And so, have at thee!

[They fight. War. enters; Cliff. flies.

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase;
For I myself will hunt this wolf to death.

[Exeunt.

Scene V.—Another part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter King Henry.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,
When dying clouds contend with growing light,
What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
Can neither call it perfect day nor night.
Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea
Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind;
Now sways it that way, like the selfsame sea
Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind:
Sometime the flood prevails, and then the wind;
Now one the better, then another best;
Both tugg'd to be victors, breast to breast,
Yet neither conqueror nor conquered;
So is the equal poise of this fell war.
Here on this molehill will I sit me down.
To whom God will, there be the victory.
For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
I have chid me from the battle; swearing both
They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead: if God's good will were so;
For what is in this world but grief and woe?
O God! methinks it were a happy life
To be no better than a homely swain;
To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run,—
How many make the hour full complete;
How many hours bring about the day;
How many days will finish up the year;
How many years a mortal man may live.
When this is known, then to divide the times,—
So many hours must I tend my flock;
So many hours must I take my rest;
So many hours must I contemplate;
So many hours must I sport myself;
So many days my ewes have been with young;
So many weeks ere the poor fools will yeam;
So many years ere I shall shear the fleece:
So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,
Pass'd over to the end they were created,
Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!
Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,
Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
To kings that fear their subjects' treachery?
O, yes, it doth; a thousand-fold it doth.
And to conclude,—the shepherd's homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicates,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.
Alarum. Enter a Son that has killed his Father, bringing in the dead body.
Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobody.
This man, whom hand to hand I slew in light,
May be possessed with some store of crowns;
And I, that haply take them from him now,
May yet ere night yield both my life and them
To some man else, as this dead man doth me. —
Who's this?—O God! it is my father's face,
Whom in this conflict I unwares have kill'd.

O heavy times, begetting such events!
From London by the king was I press'd forth:
My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man,
Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;
And I, who at his hand I receiv'd my life,
Have by my hands of it bereaved him.—
Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did!—
And pardon, father, for I knew not thee.—
My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;
And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.
K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
Whilst lions war, and battle for their dens,
Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity. —
WEEP, wretched man, I'll aid thee for tear;
And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war,
Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with grief.

Enter a Father that has killed his Son, with the body in his arms.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold;
For I have bought it with an hundred blows.—
But let me see: is this our ioeman's face?
Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son!
Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee, [arise,
Throw up thine eye! see, see what showers
Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart!—
O pity, God, this miserable age!—
What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,
Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural,
This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!—
O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,
And hast bereft thee of thy life too late!
K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief! [deeds!—
O that my death would stay these ruthless
O pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity!—
The red rose and the white are on his face,
The fatal colours of our striving houses:
The one his purple blood right well resembles;
The other his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth:
Wither one rose, and let the other flourish;
If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.
Son. How will my mother for a father's death
Take on with me, and ne'er be satisfied! [son Fath. How will my wife for slaughter of my Shed seas of tears, and ne'er be satisfied!
K. Hen. How will the country for these woeful chances
Misthink the king, and not be satisfied!
Son. Was ever son so rued a father's death?
Fath. Was ever father so bemoan'd his son?
K. Hen. Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' woe? Much is your sorrow; mine ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill. [Exit with the body.

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet;
My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre.—
For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go;
My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell;
And so obsequious will thy father be,
E'en for the loss of thee, having no more,
As Priam was for all his valiant sons. [will,
I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that
For I have murder'd where I should not kill.

[K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overgone with care,
Here sits a king more woeful than you are.

Alarums: excursions. Enter Queen Margaret, Prince of Wales, and Exeter.

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,
And Warwick rages like a chafed bull:
Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.
Q. Mfr. Mount you, my lord; towards Berwick post amain:
Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds
Having the fearful flying hare in sight,
With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath,
And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful hands.
Are at our backs; and therefore hence amain.

Exe. Away! for vengeance comes along with them:
Nay, stay not to expostulate,—make speed;
Or else come after: I'll away before.
K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet
Exeter:
Not that I fear to stay, but love to go
Winther the queen intends. Forward: away!

[Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Another part of the Field.

A loud Alarum. Enter Clifford, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out,—ay, here it dies,
Which, whiles it lasted, gave King Henry light.
O Lancaster, I fear thy overthrow
More than my body's parting with my soul!
My love and fear glid many friends to thee:
And, now I fall, thy tough commixtures melt.
Impairing Henry, strengthening misprond York,
The common people swarm like summer flies;
And whither fly the gnats but to the sun?

And who shines now but Henry's enemies?
O Phebus, hadst thou never given consent
That Phaeton should check thy fiery steeds,
Thy burning car never had scorched the earth!
And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should do,
Or as thy father and his father did,
Giving no ground unto the house of York,
They never then had sprung like summer flies;
And ten thousand in this luckless realm
Had left no mourning widows for our death.
And thou this day hastd kept thy chair in peace.
For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air?
And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?

Bootless are plaints, and cureless are my wounds;
No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight:
The foe is merciless, and will not pity:
For at their hands I have aiser'd no pity.
The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.
Come, York, and Richard, Warwick and the rest;
I stab'd your fathers' bosoms,—split my breast.

[Exeunt.

Alarum and retreat. Enter Edward,
George, Richard, Montague, Warwick, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords: good fortune bids us pause,
And smooth the frowns of war with peace:
Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,
That led calm Henry, though he were a king,
As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust,
Command an arsog to stem the waves.
But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?
War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape;
For, though before his face I speak the words,
Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave:
And, whereas he is, he's surely dead.

[Clifford groans, and dies.

Edw. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave? [parting.

Rich. A deadly groan, like life and death's day.

Edw. See who it is; and, now the battle's ended,
If friend or foe, let him be gently us'd.

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford:
Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,
But set his murdering knife unto the root
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,—
I mean our princely father, Duke of York.
War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,
Your father's head, which Clifford placed there; Instead whereof let this supply the room; Measure for measure must be answered.

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house, That nothing sung but death to us and ours: Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound, And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

War. I think his understanding is bereft. — Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee? — Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life, And he nor sees nor hears us what we say.

Rich. O, would he did! and so, perhaps, he doth: 'Tis but his policy to counterfeit, Because he would avoid such bitter taunts Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy and obtain no grace.

Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

[York.]

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to

Edw. Thou pitiedst Rutland, I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's Captain Margaret, to fence you now?

War. They mock thee, Clifford: swear as thou wast wont. [goes hard]

Rich. What, not an oath? nay, then the world When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath. — I know by that he's dead: and, by my soul, If this right hand would buy two hours' life, That I in all despite might rail at him, This hand should chop it off, and with the issuing blood Stifle the villain whose unstaunched thirst York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Ay, but he's dead: off with the traitor's head, And rear it in the place your father's stands. — And now to London with triumphant march, There to be crowned England's royal king, From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France, And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen: So shalt thou sinew both these lands together; And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again; For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt, Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ears.

First will I see the coronation; And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea, To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be;

For in thy should'rd do I build my seat, And never will I undertake the thing Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.— Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloster; — And George, of Clarence; — Warwick, as yourself, Shall do and undo as him pleaseth best.

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloster; For Gloster's dukedom is too ominous.

War. Tut, that's a foolish observation: Richard, be Duke of Gloster. Now to London, To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter two keepers, with cross-bows in their hands.

1 Keep. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves; For through this laund anon the deer will come; And in this covert will we make our stand, Culling the principal of all the deer. [shoot.

2 Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may

1 Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow Will scare the herd, and so my shot is lost. Here stand we both, and aim we at the best: And, for the time shall not seem tedious, I'll tell thee what befell me on a day In this self-place where now we mean to stand.

2 Keep. Here comes a man, let's stay till he be past.

Enter King Henry, disguised, with a prayer-book.

K. Hon. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love, To greet mine own land with my wishful sight. No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine; Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee, Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast anointed; No bending knee will call thee Cæsar now, No humble suitors press to speak for right, No, not a man comes for redress of thee; For how can I help them, and not myself?

1 Keep. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee:

This is the quondam king; let's seize upon him.
K. Hen. Let me embrace these sour adversities:
For wise men say it is the wisest course.
2 Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.
1 Keep. Forbear awhile; we'll hear a little
K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid;
And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick
Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister
To wife for Edward: if this news be true,
Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost;
For Warwick is a subtle orator,
And Louis a prince soon won with moving words.
By this account, then, Margaret may win him;
For she's a woman to be pitied much:
Her sighs will make a battery in his breast;
Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;
The tiger will be mild while she doth mourn;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse,
To hear and see her plaints, her brinsh tears.
Ay, but she's come to beg; Warwick, to give:
She, on his left side, craving aid for Henry;
He, on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
She weeps, and says her Henry is depos'd;
He smiles, and says his Edward is install'd;
That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no
more; [wrong,
While Warwick tells his title, smooths the Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
And in conclusion wins the king from her,
With promise of his sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support King Edward's place.
O Margaret, thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul,
Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn!
2 Keep. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens?
K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:
A man at least, for less I should not be;
And men may talk of kings, and why not I?
2 Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.
K. Hen. Why, so I am—in mind; and that's 2 Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy thine?
K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my
Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd content,—
A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy.
2 Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,
Your crown content and you must be contented
To go along with us; for, as we think,
You are the king King Edward hath depos'd;
And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,
Will apprehend you as his enemy.

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath?
2 Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not
K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was King of England?
2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now
K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old;
My father and my grandfather were kings;
And you were sworn true subjects unto me:
And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?
1 Keep. No;
For we were subjects but while you were king.
K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe
a man?
Ah, simple men, you know not what you swear!
Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Such is the lightness of you common men.
But do not break your oaths; for of that sin
My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded;
And be you kings; command, and I'll obey.
1 Keep. We are true subjects to the king,
King Edward.
K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,
If he were seated as King Edward is.
1 Keep. We charge you, in God's name and in the king's,
To go with us unto the officers.
K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd:
And what God will, that let your king perform;
And what he will, I humbly yield unto.
[Exeunt.

Scene II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOSTER, CLARENCE, and LADY GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloster, at Saint Albans' field
This lady's husband, Sir John Grey, was slain,
His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror:
Her suit is now to repossess those lands;
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life. [suit;
Glo. Your highness shall do well to grant her
It were dishonour to deny it her. [a pause.
K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make
Glo. Yea, is it so?
I see the lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the king will grant her humble suit.

Aside to Clarence.

Clar. He knows the game: how true he keeps the wind!

Aside to Gloster.

Glo. Silence!

Aside to Clarence.

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit;
And come some other time to know our mind.

L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay:
May it please your highness to resolve me now;
And what your pleasure is shall satisfy me.

Glo. Ay, widow? then I warrant you all your lands,
An if what pleases him shall pleasure you.
Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.

Aside.

Clar. I fear her not, unless she chance to fail.

Aside to Gloster.

Glo. God forbid that! for he'll take vantages.

Aside to Clarence.

K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow? tell me.

Clar. I think he means to beg a child of her.

Aside to Gloster.

Glo. Nay, whip me, then: he'll rather give her two.

Aside to Clarence.

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glo. You shall have four if you'll be ruled by him.

K. Edw. 'Twere pity they should lose their father's lands.

Then.

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave: I'll try this widow's wit.

Have leave, have leave,

Glo. Ay, good leave have you; for you will Till youth take leave, and leave you to the crutch.

Aside, and retires with Clarence.

K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.

K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good?

L. Grey. To do them good I would sustain K. Edw. Then get your husband's lands, to do them good.

L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.

K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got. [ness's service.

L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your high-K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me if I give them?

L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.

L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.

L. Grey. Why, then, I will do what your grace
Glo. He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble. [Aside to Clarence.

Clar. As red as fire! nay, then her wax must melt. [Aside to Gloster.

L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?

K. Edw. An easy task; 'tis but to love a king.

L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.

K. Edw. Why, then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee. [thanks.

L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand Glo. The match is made; she seals it with a curtsy. [Aside.

K. Edw. But stay thee,—'tis the fruits of love I mean. [liege.

L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving
K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense.
What love, thinkst thou, I sue so much to get?

L. Grey. My love till death, my humble
thanks, my prayers;
That love which virtue begs and virtue grants.

K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.

L. Grey. Why, then, you mean not as I thought you did. [my mind.

K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive
L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive
Your highness aims at, if I aim aright. [there.

K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.

K. Edw. Why, then, thou shalt not have thy husband's lands. [my dower;

L. Grey. Why, then, mine honesty shall be
For by that loss I will not purchase them.

K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.

L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.
But, mighty lord, this merry inclination
Accords not with the sadness of my suit:
Please you dismiss me, either with ay or no.

K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say ay to my request;
No, if thou dost say no to my demand.

L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.

Glo. The widow likes him not, she knits her brows. [Aside to Clarence.

Clar. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom. [Aside to Gloster.
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

K. Edw. Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;
Her words do show her wit incomparable;
All her perfections challenge sovereignty:
One way or other, she is for a king;
And she shall be my love, or else my queen.—

[Aside.

Say that King Edward take thee for his queen?
L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord:
I am a subject fit to jest withal,
But far unfit to be a sovereign.

K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee
I speak no more than what my soul intends;
And that is to enjoy thee for my love.

L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto:
I know I am too mean to be your queen,
And yet too good to be your concomit.

L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your grace my sons should call you father.

K. Edw. No more than when my daughters call thee mother.

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children:
And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,
Have other some: why, it's a happy thing
To be the father unto many sons.

Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

Glo. The ghostly father now hath done his slant.

K. Edw. Brothers, you must what with us we two have had.

Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks very

K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.

Chr. To whom, my lord?

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.

Glo. That would be ten days' wonder at the least.

Chr. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you both
Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,
And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the tower:
And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,

To question of his apprehension.—
Widow, go you along:—lords, use her honourably.

[Exeunt King Edward, Lady Grey, Clarence, and Nobleman.

Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.—
Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all,
That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring,
To cross me from the golden time I look for!
And yet, between my soul's desire and me,—
The lustful Edward's title buried,—
Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,
And all the unlock'd-for issue of their bodies,
To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:
A cold premeditation for my purpose!
Why, then, I do but dream on sovereignty:
Like one that stands upon a promontory,
And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
Wishing his foot were equal with his eye;
And chides the sea that sunders him from thence.

Saying he'll lade it dry to have his way:
So do I wish the crown, being so far off;
And so I chide the means that keep me from it;
And so I say I'll cut the causes off,
Flattering me with impossibilities.—

My eye's too quick, my heart overweening;
Unless my hand and strength could equal them.
Well, say there is no kingdom, then, for Richard:
What other pleasure can the world afford?
I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,
And deck my body in gay ornaments,
And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.
O miserable thought I and more unlikely
Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns!
Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb:
And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,
She did corrupt frail nature with some brine,
To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;
To make an envious mountain on my back,
Where sits deformity to mock my body;
To shape my legs of an unequal size;
To disproportion me in every part,
Like to a chaos, or an unliken'd bear-whelp
That carries no impression like the dam.
And am I, then, a man to be belov'd?
O monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought!
Then, since this earth affords me no joy to me
But to command, to check, to o'erbear such
As are of better person than myself,
I'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown,
And whiles I live to account this world but Until my misshap'd trunk that bears this head

Be round empanel'd with a glorious crown.
And yet I know not how to get the crown,
For many lives stand between me and home:
And I,—like one lost in a thorny wood,
That rents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns,
Seeking a way, and straying from the way;
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But toiling desperately to find it out,—
Torment myself to catch the English crown:
And from that torment I will free myself,
Or how my way out with a bloody axe.
Why, I can smile, and murder whiles I smile:
And cry content to that which grieves my heart:
And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
And frame my face to all occasions.
I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall;
I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk;
I'll play the orator as well as Nestor;
Deceive more slyly than Ulysses could;
And, like a Sinon, take another Troy:
I can add colours to the cameleon;
Change shapes with Proteus for advantages;
And set the murderous Machiavel to school.
Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
Tut, were it further off, I'll pluck it down!

[Exit.

SCENE III.—France. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Louis, the French King, and Lady Bona, attended: the King takes his state. Then enter Queen Margaret, Prince Edward her Son, and the Earl of Oxford.

K. Lou. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,
Sit down with us: 't ill befits thy state
And birth, that thou shouldst stand while Louis doth sit. [Rising]

Q. Mar. No, mighty King of France: now Must strike her sail, and learn awhile to serve Where kings command. I was, I must confess, Great Albion's queen in Former golden days: But now mischance hath trod my title down, And with dishonour laid me on the ground; Where I must take like seat unto my fortune, And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lou. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair?

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears, And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd A. Lou. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself, And sit thee by our side: yield not thy neck [Seats her by him.

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind Still ride in triumph over all mischance. Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief; It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts, And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak. Now, therefore, be it known to noble Louis That Henry, sole possessor of my love, Is, of a king, become a banish'd man, And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn; While proud ambitious Edward Duke of York Usurps the regal title and the seat Of England's true-anointed lawful king. This is the cause that I, poor Margaret,—
With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir,— Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid; And if thou fail us, all our hope is done: Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help; Our people and our peers are both misled; Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight, And, as thou see'st, ourselves in heavy plight.

K. Lou. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm,
While we bethink a means to break it off.
Q. Mar. The more we stay the stronger grows our foe. [Cour thee.

K. Lou. The more I stay the more I'll sue—
Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow:
And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow!

Enter Warwick, attended.

K. Lou. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence?

K. Lou. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[Descending from his state. Q. Mar. rises.

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;
For this is he that moves both wind and tide.

War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion, My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend, I come, in kindness and unfeigned love,— First, to do greetings to thy royal person; And then to crave a league of amity; And lastly, to confirm that amity With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister, To England's king in lawful marriage. [Done.

Q. Mar. If that go forward, Henry's hope is War. And, gracious madam [to Bona], in our king's behalf, I am commanded, with your leave and favour, Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart: Where fame, late entering at his heedful ear, Hath plac'd thy beauty's image and thy virtue.
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Q. Mar. King Louis,—and Lady Bona,— hear me speak,

Before you answer Warwick. His demand

Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest

love,

But from deceit bred by necessity;

For how can tyrants safely govern home

Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?

To prove him tyrant, this reason may suffice,—

That Henry liveth still; but were he dead,

Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henry's

son.

Look therefore, Louis, that by this league and

Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour;

For though usurpers sway the rule awhile,

Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret!

Prince. And why not queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp;

And thou no more art prince than she is queen.

Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;

And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,

Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;

And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,

Who by his prowess conquered all France:

From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how hap'st it, in this smooth

discourse,

You told not how Henry the Sixth hath lost

All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten?

Neither thinks these peers of France should smile at that.

But for the rest,—you tell a pedigree

Of threescore and two years; a silly time

To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege,

Whom thou obey'dst thirty and six years,

And not bewray thy treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,

Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?

For shame! leave Henry, and call Edward king.

Oxf. Call him my king by whose injurious

doom

My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere,

Was done to death? and more than so, my father,

Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,

When nature brought him to the door of death?

No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm,

This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York.

K. Lou. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and

Oxford,

Vouchsafe, at our request, to stand aside

While I use further conference with Warwick.

Q. Mar. Heavens grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not!

[Retiring with the Prince and Oxf.

K. Lou. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,

Is Edward your true king? for I were loth

To link with him that were not lawful chosen.

War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honour.

[eye?

K. Lou. But is he gracious in the people's

War. The more that Henry was unfortunate.

K. Lou. Then further,—all resembling set

aside,—

Tell me for truth the measure of his love

Unto our sister Bona.

War. Such it seems

As may beseem a monarch like himself.

Myself have often heard him say, and swear,

That this love was an eternal plant,

Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,

The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's

sun;

Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,

Unless the Lady Bona quit his pain. [solve.

K. Lou. Now, sister, let us hear your firm re-

Bona. Your grant or your denial shall be mine:—

Yet I confess [to War.] that often ere this day,

When I have heard your king's desert recounted,

Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire.

K. Lou. Then, Warwick, thus,—Our sister shall be Edward's;

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn

Touching the jointure that your king must make,

Which with her dowry shall be counterpois'd. —

Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness

That Bona shall be wife to the English king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English

king.

Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device

By this alliance to make void my suit:

Before thy coming, Louis was Henry's friend.

K. Lou. And still is friend to him and

Margaret:

But if your title to the crown be weak,—

As may appear by Edward's good success,—

Then 'tis but reason that I be releas'd

From giving aid which late I promised.

Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand

That your estate requires and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland at his ease,

Where having nothing, nothing can he lose.

And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,

You have a father able to maintain you;

And better 'twere you troubled him than France.
Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless
Warwick,—
Proud settler-up and puller-down of kings!
I will not hence till, with my talk and tears,
Both full of truth, I make King Louis behold
Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's false love:
For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

[A horn sounded within.

K. Lou. Warwick, this is some post to us or thee.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you,
Sent from your brother, Marquis Montague:—
These from our king unto your majesty:—
And, madam, these for you; from whom I know not.

[To Mar. They all read their letters.

Oxf. I like it well that our fair queen and
mistress
Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at Prince. Nay, mark how Louis stamps, as he were nettled:
I hope all's for the best.

K. Lou. Warwick, what are thy news?—and yours, fair queen? [hop'd joy.

Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with un-
War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent. [Lady Grey?

K. Lou. What, has your king married the
And now, to soothe your forgery and his,
Sends me a paper to persuade me patience?
Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?
Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?
Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before:
This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty. [heaven,

War. King Louis, I here protest, in sight of
And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,
That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's,—
No more my king, for he dishonours me,
But most himself, if he could see his shame.
Did I forget that by the house of York
My father came untimely to his death?
Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece?
Did I impale him with the regal crown?
Did I put Henry from his native right?
And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?
Shame on himself! for my desert is honour:
And, to repair my honour lost for him,
I here renounce him, and return to Henry.—
My noble queen, let former grudges pass,
And henceforth I am thy true servitor:
I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona,
And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;
And I forgive and quite forget old faults,
And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend.
War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend,
That if King Louis vouchsafe to furnish us
With some few bands of chosen soldiers,
I'll undertake to land them on our coast,
And force the tyrant from his seat by war.
'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him:
And as for Clarence,—as my letters tell me,—
He's very likely now to fall from him,
For matching more for wanton lust than honour,
Or than for strength and safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be re-veng'd
But by thy help to this distressed queen?
Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor
Henry live,
Unless thou rescuel him from foul despair?

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one.

War. And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins with K. Lou. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's.

Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd
You shall have aid.

Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

K. Lou. Then, England's messenger, return
And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Louis of France is sending over masques
To revel it with him and his new bride:
Thou see'st what 's past,—go fear thy king withal.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the willow-farland for his sake.

Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning-weeds are laid aside,
And I am ready to put armour on.

War. Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong;
And therefore I 'll uncrown him ere't be long.
There's thy reward: be gone. [Exit Mess.

K. Lou. But, Warwick,
Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men,
Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle;
And, as occasion serves, this noble queen
And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.
Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt,—
What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty.
That if our queen and this young prince agree,
I'll join mine eldest daughter, and my joy,
To him forthwith in holy wedlock-hands.
Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion. —
Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous,
Therefore delay not,—give thy hand to Warwick:
And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prim. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it;
And here to pledge my vow, I give my hand.

[He gives his hand to Warwick.

K. Lou. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied,
And thou, Lord Bourbon, our high-admiral,
Shall waft them over with our royal fleet. —
I long till Edward fall by war's mischance,
For mocking marriage with a dame of France.

[Execute all but Warwick.

War. I come from Edward as ambassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal foe.
Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadful war shall answer his demand.
Had he none else to make a stake but me?
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.
I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again:
Not that I pity Henry's misery,
But seek revenge on Edward's mockery.

Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—LONDON. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Gloster, Clarence, Somerset, Montague, and others.

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you
Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey?
Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?

Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France;
How could he stay till Warwick made return?

Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes the king.

Glo. And his well-chosen bride,
Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

Flourish. Enter King Edward, attended:
Lady Grey, as Queen: Pembroke, Stanford, Hastings, and others.

K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,
That you stand pensive, as half malcontent?

Clar. As well as Louis of France or the Earl of Warwick;
Which are so weak of courage and in judgment
That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause,
They are but Louis and Warwick: I am Edward.
Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will.

Glo. And shall have your will, because our Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

K. Edw. Yes, brother Richard, are you offended too?

Glo. Not I:
No, God forbid that I should wish them sever'd Whom God hath joined together; ay, and
'twere pity
To sunder them that yoke so well together.

K. Edw. Setting your scorns and your mislike aside,
Tell me some reason why the Lady Grey
Should not become my wife and England's queen:

And you too, Somerset and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.

[Louis
Clar. Then this is mine opinion,—that King
Becomes your enemy for mocking him
About the marriage of the Lady Grey.

Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,
Is now dishonour'd by this new marriage.

K. Edw. What if both Louis and Warwick
he appeas'd
By such invention as I can devise?

Mont. Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance
Would more have strengthen'd this our common-

Gast foreign storms than any home-bred marriage.

Hast. Why know not Montague that of itself
England is safe, if true within itself?

Mont. But the safer when 'tis back'd with France.

Hast. 'Tis better using France than trusting
France:
Let us be back'd with God, and with the seas
Which he hath given for fence impregnable,
And with those helps only defend ourselves;
In them and in ourselves our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves
To have the heir of the Lord Hungerford.

K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will
And grant;

And for this once my will shall stand for law.

Glo. And yet methinks your grace hath done well,

To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scalp unto the brother of your loving bride:

She better would have fitted me or Clarence;
But in your bride you bury brotherhood.
Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir
Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.
K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence! Is it for a wife
That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee.
Clar. In choosing for yourself you show'd your judgment,
Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker in mine own behalf;
And to that end I shortly mind to leave you.
K. Edw. Leave me or tarry, Edward will be king,
And not be tied unto his brother's will.
Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty
To raise my state to title of a queen,
Do me but right, and you must all confess
That I was not ignoble of descent;
And meaner than myself have had like fortune.
But as this title honours me and mine,
So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.
K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:
What danger or what sorrow can befall thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend.
And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
Unless they seek for hatred at my hands;
Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.
Glo. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters or what news
From France?
Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters: and few
But such as I, without your special pardon,
Dare not relate.
K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee: therefore,
in brief,
Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess
What answer makes King Louis unto our letters?
Mess. At my last, these were his very words:
Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Louis of France is sending over masquers
To rend it with him and his new bride.
K. Edw. Is Louis so brave? belike he thinks me Henry,
But what said Lady Bona to my marriage?
Mess. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain:
Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.

K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less;
She had the wrong. But what said Henry's
For I have heard that he was there in place.
Mess. Tell him, quoth she, my mourning-woods are done,
And I am ready to put armour on.
K. Edw. Behold she minds to play the Amadore,
But what said Warwick to these injuries?
Mess. He, more incens'd against your majesty
Than all the rest, discharge'd me with these words:
Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong;
And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long.
K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?
Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.
But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?
Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship.
That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.
Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger.
Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
I may not prove inferior to yourself.—
You that love me and Warwick, follow me.

Glo. Not I:
My thoughts aim at a further matter; I
Stay not for the love of Edward, but the crown.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!
Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;
And haste is needful in this desperate case.—
Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf
Go levy men, and make prepare for war;
They are already, or quickly will be landed;
Myself in person will straight follow you.

Exeunt Pem. and Staf.

But ere I go, Hastings and Montague,
Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,
Are near to Warwick by blood and by alliance:
Tell me if you love Warwick more than me?
If it be so, then both depart to him;
I rather wish you foes than hollow friends:
But if you mind to hold your true obedience,
Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague as he proves Hast. And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause!

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand
Scene II.—A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter Warwick and Oxford, with French and other Forces.

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes well; the common people by numbers swarm to us. But see where Somerset and Clarence come!

Enter Clarence and Somerset.

Speak suddenly, my lords,—are we all friends?

Clarin. Fear not that, my lord. [Warwick—War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto And welcome, Somerset.—I hold it cowardice To rest mistrustful where a noble heart Hath pawn’d an open hand in sign of love; Else might I think that Clarence, Edward’s brother, Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings: But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine. And now, what rests but, in night’s coverture, Thy brother being carelessly encamp’d, His soldiers lurking in the towns about, And but attended by a simple guard, We may surprise and take him at our pleasure? Our scouts have found the adventure very easy: That as Ulysses and stout Diomede With slight and manhood stole to Rhesus’ tents, And brought from thence the Thracian fatal steeds, [mantle, So we, well cover’d with the night’s black At unawares may beat down Edward’s guard And seize himself; I say not, slaughter him, For I intend but only to surprise him. You that will follow me to this attempt, Applaud the name of Henry with your leader. [They all cry “Henry!” Why, then, let’s on our way in silent sort: For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George! [Exeunt.

Scene III. —Edward’s Camp, near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen, before the King’s tent.

1 Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand: The king by this has set him down to sleep.

2 Watch. What, will he be not to bed?

1 Watch. Why, no: for he hath made a solemn vow Never to lie and take his natural rest Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress’d.

2 Watch. To-morrow then, belike, shall be the day,

If Warwick be so near as men report.

3 Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that That with the king here resteth in his tent?

1 Watch. ’Tis the Lord Hastings, the king’s chiefest friend. [the king

3 Watch. O, is it so? But why commands That his chief followers lodge in towns about him, While he himself keeps in the cold field?

2 Watch. ’Tis the more honour, because more dangerous. [ness:

3 Watch. Ay, but give me worship and quiet— I like it better than a dangerous honour.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands, ’Tis to be doubted who would waken him.

1 Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage. [tent,

2 Watch. Ay, wherefore else guard we his royal But to defend his person from night-foes?

Enter Warwick, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset, and Forces.

War. This is his tent; and see where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters! honour now or never! But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

1 Watch. Who goes there?

2 Watch. Stay, or thou diest.

[Warwick and the rest cry all—“Warwick! Warwick!” and set upon the Guard, who fly, crying “Arm! Arm!” Warwick and the rest following them.

The drum beating and trumpets sounding, re-enter Warwick and the rest, bringing the King out in his gown, sitting in a chair: Gloucester and Hastings are seen flying.

Som. What are they that fly there?

War. Richard and Hastings: let them go; here is the duke.

K. Edw. The duke! Why, Warwick, when we parted last Thou call’dst me king?

War. Ay, but the case is alter’d: When you disgrac’d me in my embassade, Then I degraded you from being king, And come now to create you Duke of York. Alas, how should you govern any kingdom, That know not how to use ambassadors; Nor how to be contented with one wife;
Nor how to use your brothers brotherly;
Nor how to study for the people’s welfare;
Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies?

K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too?
Nay, then I see that Edward needs must down.—
Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,
Of thee thyself and all thy complices,
Edward will always bear himself as king:
Though fortune’s malice overthrow my state,
My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward England’s king: [Takes off his crown.
But Henry now shall wear the English crown
And be true king indeed; thou but the shadow.

My Lord of Somerset, at my request,
See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey’d
Unto my brother, Archbishop of York.
When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,
I’ll follow you, and tell what answer
Louis and the Lady Bona send to him.—
Now, for awhile farewell, good Duke of York.

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs abide;
It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit, led out; Som. with him.

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us to do,
But march to London with our soldiers?
War. Ay, that’s the first thing that we have to do;
To free King Henry from imprisonment,
And see him seated in the regal throne.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen Elizabeth and Rivers.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to What late misfortune is befall’n King Edward?

Riv. What, loss of some pitch’d battle against Warwick? [person.

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal
Riv. Then, is my sovereign slain?
Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;
Either betray’d by falsehood of his guard,
Or by his foe surpris’d at unawares:
And, as I further have to understand,
Is new committed to the Bishop of York,
Fell Warwick’s brother, and by that our foe.

Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of grief;

Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may:
Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.
Q. Eliz. Till then, fair hope must hinder life’s decay.

And I the rather wean me from despair,
For love of Edward’s offspring in my womb:
This is it that makes me bride of passion,
And bear with mildness my misfortune’s cross:
Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear,
And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,
Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
King Edward’s fruit, true heir to the English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick, then,
Q. Eliz. I am inform’d that he comes towards London,
To set the crown once more on Henry’s head:
Guess thou the rest; King Edward’s friends must down.
But to prevent the tyrant’s violence,—
For trust not him that hath once broken faith,—
I’ll henceforth unto the sanctuary,
To save at least the heir of Edward’s right:
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.
Come, therefore, let us fly while we may fly:
If Warwick take us, we are sure to die. [Exit.

SCENE V.—A Park near Middlesham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOSTER, HASTINGS, SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, and others.

Glo. Now, my Lord Hastings and Sir William Stanley,
Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither
Into this chiefest thicket of the park. [brother,
Thus stands the case: you know our king, my
Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage and great liberty;
And often, but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way, to distroit himself.
I have advértis’d him by secret means
That if about this hour he make this way,
Under the colour of his usual game, [men,
He shall here find his friends, with horse and
To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King Edward and a Huntsman.

Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game. [huntsmen stand.—

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man: see where the Now, brother of Gloster, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close to steal the bishop’s deer?
Glo. Brother, the time and case requireth haste:
Your horse stands ready at the park-corner.
K. Edu. But whither shall we then?
Hast. To Lynn, my lord; and ship from thence to Flanders. [my meaning.
Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was
K. Edu. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness. [talk Glo. But wherfore stay we? 'tis no time to K. Edu. Huntsmen, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?
Hunt. Better do so than tarry and be hang'd.
Glo. Come then, away! let's ha' no more ado.
K. Edu. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwick's frown;
And pray that I may repossess the crown.
[Exit].

SCENE VI.—A Room in the Tower.

Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK,
SOMERSET, YOUNG RICHMOND, OXFORD,
MONTAGUE, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends
Have shaken Edward from the regal seat,
And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys,—
At our enlargement what are thy due fees?
Lieut. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;
But if an humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your majesty.
K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well-using me?
Nay, be thou sure I'll well require thy kindness;
For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure:
Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds
Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts,
At last, by notes of household harmony,
They quite forget their nature, and liberty.—
But, Warwick, after God, thou sat'st me free,
And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee;
He was the author, thou the instrument.
Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite,
By living low, where fortune seem'd haughty,
And that the people of this blessed land
May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,— Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,
I here resign my government to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deed:
War. Your grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous;
And now may seem as wise as virtuous
By spying and avoiding fortune's malice,
For few men rightly temper with the stars:
Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace
For choosing me when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy to be sway,
To whom the heavens, in thy nativity,
Adjudg'd an olive-branch and laurel-crown,
As likely to be brisk in peace and war:
And therefore I yield thee my free consent.
War. And I choose Clarence only for protector.

K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me
both your hands:
Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts,
That no dissension hinder government:
I make you both protectors of this land;
While I myself will lead a private life,
And in devotion spend my latter days,
To sin's rebuke and my Creator's praise.
War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will? [sigh ;
Clar. That he consents if Warwick yield conformity.
War. Why, then, though loath, yet must I be content:
We'll yoke together, like a double shadow.
To Henry's body, and supply his place;
I mean, in bearing weight of government,
While he enjoys the honour and his case.
And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful
Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a traitor,
And all his lands and goods be confiscate.
Clar. What else? and that succession be determin'd. [part.
War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want it's K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs.
Let me entreat,—for I command you on it—
That Margaret your queen, and thy son, Edward,
Be sent for, to return from France with speed;
For till I see them here, by doubtful fear
My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.
K. Hen. My Lord of Somerset, what youth
Of whom you seem to have so tender care?
Som. My hope it is young Henry, Earl of Richmond.
K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope,—if secret powers
[Lays his hand on his head.
Suggest but truth to my dividing thoughts:
This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss.
His books are full of peaceful majesty:
His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown,
His hand to wield a sceptre; and himself
Likely in time to bless a regal throne.
Make much of him, my lords: for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me.
Enter a Messenger.

War. What news, my friend? [brother,
Miss. That Edward is escaped from your
And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.
War. Unsoverd news I but how made he escape? [Gloster
Miss. He was convey’d by Richard Duke of
And the Lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush on the forest-side,
And from the bishop’s huntsmen receiv’d him;
For hunting was his daily exercise.
War. My brother was too careless of his charge.—
I’lt let us hence, my sovereign, to provide
A salve for any sore that may betide.

[Exeunt King Henry, War., Clar., Licut., and Attendants.

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward’s:
For doubtless Burgundy will yield him help,
And we shall have more wars before ’t be long.
As Henry’s late presaging prophecy
Did glad my heart with hope of this young
Richmond,
So doth my heart misgave me, in these confiainces,
What may befall him, to his harm and ours:
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
I forthwith will send him hence to Britanny,
Till storms be past of civil emnity.

Oxf. Ay, for if Edward repossess the crown,
’Tis like that Richmond with the rest shall down.

Som. It shall be so: he shall to Britanny.
Come, therefore, let’s about it speedily.

[Exeunt.

Scene VII.—Before York.

Enter King Edward, Gloster, Hastings,
And Forces.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Yet thus far fortune maketh us amends.
And says that once more I shall interchange
My waned state for Henry’s regal crown.
Well have we pass’d, and now repass’d the seas,
And brought desired help from Burgundy:
What, then, remains, we being thus arriv’d
From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of York,
But that we enter, as into our dukedom?

Glo. The gates made fast!—Brother, I like not this;
For many men that stumble at the threshold
Are well foretold that danger lurks within.

K. Edw. Tush, man, abodeaments must not now affright us:

By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For lither will our friends repair to us.

Hast. My liege, I’ll knock once more to summon them.

Enter, on the Walls, the Mayor of York and Aldermen.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming,
And shut the gates for safety of ourselves;
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

K. Edw. But, master mayor, if Henry be your king,
Yet Edward at the least is Duke of York.

May. True, my good lord; I know you for no less.

K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom,
As being well content with that alone. [nose,

Glo. But when the fox hath once got in his He’ll soon find means to make the body follow.

[Aside.

Hast. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt?
Open the gates, we are King Henry’s friends.

May. Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be open’d. [Exeunt from above.

Glo. A wise stout captain, and soon persuaded! [were well

Hast. The good old man would fain that all
So ’twere not long of him; but being enter’d,
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade
Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Re-enter the Mayor and Aldermen, below.

K. Edw. So, master mayor: these gates must not be shut
But in the night or in the time of war.
What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys;

[Takes his keys.

For Edward will defend the town and thee,
And all those friends that deign to follow me.

Drum. Enter Montgomery and Forces, Marching.

Glo. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv’d.

K. Edw. Welcome, Sir John! But why come you in arms?

[storm,
Mont. To help King Edward in his time of
As every loyal subject ought to do.

K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget
Our title to the crown, and only claim
Our dukedom till God please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence
again:
I came to serve a king, and not a duke.—
Drummer, strike up, and let us march away.

[A march begun.

K. Edw. Nay, stay, Sir John, awhile; and we'll debate
By what safe means the crown may be recover'd.

Mont. What talk you of debating? in few words,
If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king,
I'll leave you to your fortune, and be gone
To keep them back that come to succour you:
Why should we fight, if you pretend no title?

Glo. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

K. Edw. When we grow stronger, then we'll make our claim:

Till then, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning.

Hast. Away with scrupulous wit! now arms must rule.

Glo. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.

Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand;
The brut thereof will bring you many friends.

K. Edw. Then be it as you will; for 'tis my right,
And Henry but usurps the diadem.

Mont. Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself;
And now will I be Edward's champion.

Hast. Sound trumpet; Edward shall be here proclaim'd:

Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation.

[Give him a paper. Flourish.

Sold. [Reads.] Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c.

Mont. And whoso'er gainsays King Edward's right,
By this I challenge him to single fight.

[Throws down his gauntlet.

All. Long live Edward the Fourth!

K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery;—and thanks unto you all;
If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.
Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York;
And when the morning sun shall raise his car
Above the border of this horizon,
We'll forward towards Warwick and his mates;
For well I wot that Henry is no soldier.—

Ah, forward Clarence! how evil it beseems thee to flatter Henry and forsake thy brother!
Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.—

Come on, brave soldiers: doubt not of the day;
And that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

[Exeunt.]
My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,
My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,
My mercy dried their water-flowing tears;
I have not been desirous of their wealth,
Nor much oppress' dthem with great subsidies,
Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd:
[exit me?
Then why should they love Edward more than No. Exeter, these graces challenge grace:
And, when the lion saws upon the lamb,
The lamb will never cease to follow him.
[Shout within, "A Lancaster! A Lancaster!"
Exit. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter King Edward, Gloster, and Soldiers.

Edw. Seize on the shame-lac' d Henry, bear him hence:
And once again proclaim us king of England.—
You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow:
[dry,
Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them
And swell so much the higher by their ebb.—
Hark with him to the Tower; let him not speak.
[Exit some with King Henry.
And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,
Where peremptory Warwick now remains:
The sun shines hot; and, if we use delay,
Cold biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.
Glo. Away betimes, before his forces join,
And take the great-grown traitor unawares:
Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry.
[Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Coventry.

Enter upon the Wall's, Warwick, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and others.

War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?
1 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?—
Where is the post that came from Montague?
2 Mess. By this at Daimtry, with a puissant troop.

Enter Sir John Somerville.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son?
And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now?

Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,
And do expect him here some two hours hence.
[Drum heard.

War. Then Clarence is at hand; I hear his drum.
[Flies;

Som. It is not his, my lord; here Southam
The drum your honour hears marcheth from Warwick.
[Friends.

War. Who should that be? belike unlook'd-for
Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

March. Flourish. Enter King Edward, Gloster, and Forces.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.
[Wall!

Glo. See how the surly Warwick mans the War. O unbid spite! is sportful Edward come?
[Exeunt,
Where slept our scouts, or how ar. they set.
That we could hear no news of his repair?

K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates,
Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy knee,
Call Edward king, and at his hands beg mercy:
And he shall pardon thee these outrages.

War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,
Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down,
Call Warwick patron, and be penitent?
And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said the king:
Or did he make the jest against his will?
War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?
Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give:
I'll do thee service for so good a gift.

War. 'Twas I that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edw. Why, then, 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:
And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again;
And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner:
And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this,—
What is the body when the head is off?

Glo. Alas, that Warwick had no more forecast,
But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten,
The king was silly finger'd from the deck!
You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace,
And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edw. 'Tis even so; yet you are Warwick still.
Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time; kneel down, kneel down:
Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.
War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,
And with the other fling it at thy face,
Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee.
K. Edu. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend;
This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,
Shall, whiles thy head is warm and new cut oil,
Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood,—
Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.

Enter Oxford, with Forces, drum, and colours.
War. O cheerful colours! see where Oxford comes!
Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too.
K. Edu. So other foes may set upon our backs.

Stand we in good array; for they no doubt
Will issue out again and bid us battle:
If not, the city being but of small defence,
We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.
War. O, welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help.

Enter Montague, with Forces, drum, and colours.
Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!
Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason
Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.
K. Edu. The harder match'd, the greater victory:
My mind presageth happy gain and conquest.

Enter Somerset, with Forces, drum, and colours.
Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!
Glo. Thou name, both Dukes of Somerset,
Have sold their lives unto the house of York:
And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter Clarence, with Forces, drum, and colours.
War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along,
Of force enough to bid his brother battle;
With whom an upright zeal to right prevails

More than the nature of a brother's love!—
Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick call.
Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means?
[Taking the red rose out of his hat.
Look here, I throw my infamy at thee:
I will not ruinate my father's house,
Who gave his blood to line the stones together,
And set up Lancaster. Why, trowst thou,
Warwick,
That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,
To bend the fatal instruments of war
Against his brother and his lawful king?
Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath:
To keep that oath were more impiety
Than Jephtha's, when he sacrific'd his daughter.
I am so sorry for my trespass made,
That, to deserve well at my brother's hands,
I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe;
With resolution wheresoe'er I meet thee,—
As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad,—
To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.
And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee,
And to my brother turn my blushing checks.—
Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends;
And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,
For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

K. Edu. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd,
Than if thou never hast'd our hate.
Glo. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.
War. O passing traitor, perjur'd and unjust!
K. Edu. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town and fight?
Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?
War. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence;
I will away towards Barnet presently,
And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.
K. Edu. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way.
Lords, to the field: Saint George and victory.

[March. Exit.

Scene II.—A field of Battle near Barnet.
Alarums and excursions. Enter King Edward, bringing in Warwick wounded.
K. Edu. So lie thou there; die thou, and die our fear;
For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.—
Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee,
That Warwick's bones may keep thine company.
[Exit.
I.—Another part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter King Edward in triumph; with Clarence, Gloster, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,
And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
But in the midst of this bright-shining day
I see a black, suspicious, threatening cloud,
Th' will encounter with our glorious sun.

Ere he attain his easyf'd western bed:
I mean, my lords, those powers that the queen
Hath rais'd in Gallia have arriv'd our coast,
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud.
And blow it to the source from whence it came:
Th' very beams will dry those vapours up;
For every cloud engenders not a storm. [strong, Glo. The queen is valu'd thirty thousand
And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her;
If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd,
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving friends
That they do hold their course toward Tewks-
We, having now the best at Barnet field,
Will thither straight, for willingness rides way;
And as we march, our strength will be augmented
In every county as we go along.—
Strike up the drum; cry, Courage! and away. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, Somerset, Oxford, and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss,
But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown overboard,
The cable broke, the holding-anchor lost,
And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood;
Yet lives our pilot still: is't meet that he Should leave the helm, and, like a fearful lad,
With tearful eyes add water to the sea, [much;
And give more strength to that which hath to Whiles, in his moan, the ship splits on the rock,
Which industry and courage might have sav'd?
Ah, what a shame! ah, what a fault were this!
Say Warwick was our anchor; what of that?
And Montague our top-mast; what of him?
Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; what of these?
Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?
And Somerset another goodly mast?
[lings?
The friends of France our shrouds and tack-
And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I
For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?
We will not from the helm to sit and weep;
But keep our course, though the rough wind
say no, [wreck.
From shelves and rocks that threaten us with
As good to chide the waves as speak them fair.
And what is Edward but a ruthless sea?
What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?
And Richard but a ragged fatal rock?
All these the enemies to our poor bark.
Say you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while!
Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly sink:
Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you off,
Or else you famish,—that's a threefold death.
This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
If case some one of you would fly from us,
That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers, [rocks.
More than with ruthless waves, with sands, and Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided,
'Twere childish weakness to lament or fear.
Prince. Methinks a woman of this valiant spirit
Should, if a coward heard her speak these words,
Infuse his breast with magnanimity,
And make him naked foil a man-at-arms.
I speak not this as doubting any here;
For did I but suspect a fearful man,
He should have leave to go away betimes;
Lest in our need he might infect another,
And make him of like spirit to himself.
If any such be here,—as God forbid!—
Let him depart before we need his help.
Oxf. Women and children of so high a courage,
And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual shame.—
O brave young prince! thy famous grandfather
Doth live again in thee: long mayst thou live
To bear his image and renew his glories!
Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope,
Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day,
If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.
Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset;—sweet
Oxford, thanks.
[thing else.
Prince. And take his thanks that yet hath no

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at hand,
Ready to fight: therefore be resolute.
Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy
To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.
Som. But he's deceiv'd; we are in readiness.
Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness.
[budge.
Oxf. Here pitch our battle; hence we will not

Flourish and march. Enter, at a distance, King
Edward, Clarence, Gloster, and Forces.
K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,
[strengths.
Which, by the heavens' assistance and your
Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.
I need not add more fuel to your fire;
For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out:
Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords.
Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen,
what I should say
My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.
Therefore, no more but this:—Henry, your
sovereign,
Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects slain,
His statutes cancel'd, and his treasure spent;
And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil.
You fight in justice: then, in God's name, lords,
Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.
[Exeunt both armies.

Scene V. Another part of the Plains.

Alarums. Excursions: and afterwards a retre.at. Then enter King Edward, Clare-ence, Gloster, and Forces, with Queen
Margaret, Oxford, and Somerset, prisoners.
K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.
Away with Oxford to Haumes' Castle straight;
For Somerset, off with his guilty head. [speak.
Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words.
[fortune.
Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my [Exeunt Oxf. and Som., guil.tly.
Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous
world,
To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.
K. Edw. Is proclamation made that who finds Edward
Shall have a high reward, and he his life?
Glo. It is; and lo, where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with Prince Edward.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak.

What, can so young a thorow begin to prick?—

Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make
For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,
And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Suppose that I am now my father's mouth;
Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,
Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee,
Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolv'd!

Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat,
And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Æsop fable in a winter's night;
His currish riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By heave, brat, I'll plague you for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague
Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather.

K. Edw. Peace, willful boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty; you are all unprofitable:

Lascivious Edward,—and thou perjury'd
And thou, misshapen Dick,—I 'll sell ye all
I am your better, traitors as ye are:—

And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

K. Edw. Take that, the likeness of this railer here.

Glo. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony.

Clar. And there's for twittering me with perjury.

Q. Mar. O, kill me too!

Glo. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her.

K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold; for we have done too much.

Glo. Why should she live, to fill the world with words?

K. Edw. What, doth she swoon? use means for her recovery.

Glo. Clarence, excuse me to the king my brother;
I'll hence to London on a serious matter:
Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What? what?

Glo. The Tower! the Tower! [Exit.

Q. Mar. O Ned, sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy!

Canst thou not speak?—O traitors! murderers. They that stabb'd Caesar shed no blood at all, Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame, If this foul deed were by to equal it; He was a man;—this, in respect, a child,— And men ne'er spend their fury on a child. [It? What's worse than murderer, that I may name No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak:—
And I will speak, that so my heart may burst.

Butchers and villains! bloody cannibals! How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd! You have no children, butchers! if you had, The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse:

But if you ever chance to have a child, Look in his youth to have him cut off
As, deathsmen, you have rid this sweet young prince!

K. Edw. Away with her; go, bear her hence perforce.

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, despatch me here; [death:

Here sheathe thy sword, I'll pardon thee my What, wilt thou not?—then, Clarence, do it thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much.

Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?

Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself:

'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity.

What! wilt thou not?—Where is that devil's butcher, [thon?

Hard-favour'd Richard?—Richard, where art Thou art not here: murder is thy alms-deed; Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'th back.

K. Edw. Away, I say; I charge ye, bear her hence.

Q. Mar. So come to you and yours as to this prince! [Exit, led out forcibly.

K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?

Clar. To London, all in post: and, as I guess, To make a bloody supper in the Tower.

K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.

[sort

Now march we hence: discharge the common With pay and thanks, and let's away to London, And see our gentle queen how well she fares,— By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Exeunt.
Scene VI.—London. A Room in the Tower.

King Henry is discovered sitting with a book in his hand, the Lieutenant attending. Enter Gloster.

Glo. Good-day, my lord. What, at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord:—my lord, I should say rather;

’Tis sin to flatter, good was little better:

Good Gloster and good devil were alike, And both preposterous: therefore, not good lord.

Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer. [Exit Lieutenant.

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf; So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece, And next his throat unto the butcher’s knife.—

What scene of death hath Roscius now to act? Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind; The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

K. Hen. The bird that hath been limed in a bush,

With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush; And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird, Have now the fatal object in my eye [kill’d. Where my poor young was lim’d, was caught, and Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete, That taught his son the office of a fowl!

And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown’d. K. Hen. I, Daedalus: my poor boy, Icarus; Thy father, Minos, that denied our course; The sun, that sear’d the wings of my sweet boy, Thy brother Edward: and thyself, the sea, Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.

Ah, kill me with thy weapon, not with words! My breast can better brook thy dagger’s point Than can my ears that tragic history. But wherefore dost thou come? is’t for my life? Glo. Think’st thou I am an executioner? K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art: If murdering innocents be executing, Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glo. Thy son I kill’d for his presumption. K. Hen. Hast thou been kill’d when first thou didst presume, Thou hast not liv’d to kill a son of mine. And thus I prophesy,—that many a thousand, Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear, And many an old man’s sigh, and many a widow’s, And many an orphan’s water-standing eye,— Men for their sons, wives for their husbands, And orphans for their parents’ timeless death,— Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.

The owl shriek’d at thy birth,—an evil sign; The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time; Dogs howl’d, and hideous tempest shook down trees;

The raven rook’d her on the chimney’s top, And chattering pies in dismal discords sung.

Thy mother felt more than a mother’s pain, And yet brought forth less than a mother’s hope, To wit,— An indigest deformed lump,

Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree. Teeth hast thou in thy head when thou wast born,

To signify thou cam’st to bite the world:

And if the rest be true which I have heard, Thou cam’st—

Glo. I’ll hear no more:—die, prophet, in thy speech: [Stabs him. For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain’d.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O God forgive my sins and pardon thee! [Dies.

Glo. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted. [death! See how my sword weeps for the poor king’s O, may such purple tears be alway shed From those that wish the downfall of our house!—

If any spark of life be yet remaining,

Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee thither,— [Stabs him again. I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.— Indeed, ’tis true that Henry told me of; For I have often heard my mother say I came into the world with my legs forward: Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste, And seek their ruin that usurp’d our right: The midwife wonder’d; and the women cried, O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth! And so I was, which plainly signified That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog. Then, since the heavens have shap’d my body, Let hell make crook’d my mind to answer it. I have no brother, I am like no brother; And this word love, which greybeards call divine,

Be resident in men like one another, And not in me: I am myself alone.—

Clarence, beware; thou keep’st me from the light: But I will sort a pitchy day for thee; For I will buzz abroad such prophecies That Edward shall be fearful of his life: And then, to purge his fear, I’ll be thy death. King Henry and the prince his son are gone;
Thrice, thy turn is next, and then the rest;
Counting myself but bad till I be st. —
I'll throw thy body in another room,
And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.
[Exit with the body.

Scene VII. —London. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. King Edward is discovered sitting on his throne. Queen Elizabeth with the infant Prince, Clarence, Gloster, Hastings, and others, near him.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,
Repurchas'd with the blood of enemies.
What valiant foes, like to autumn's corn,
I have we mow'd down in tops of all their pride!
Three Dukes of Somerset,—threefold renown'd
For hardy and undoubted champions;
Two Cliffords, as the father and the son;
And two Northumberlands,—two braver men
Never spurr'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound;
With them the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague,
That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion,
And made the forest tremble when they roard.
Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security.—
Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy.—
Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles and myself
I have in our armours watch'd the winter's night;
Went all afoot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou mightst repossess the crown in peace:
And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.

Glo. I'll blast his harvest if your head were laid;
For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave;
And heave it shall some weight, or break my back:—
Work thou the way,—and that shalt execute.
[Aside.

K. Edw. Clarence and Gloster, love my lovely queen;
And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.
Clar. The duty that I owe unto your majesty
I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.
K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother thanks.

Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,
Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit.—
To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master,
And cried, all hail! when as he meant all harm.
[Aside.

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my country's peace and brothers' loves.
Clar. What will your grace have done with Margaret?
Reignier, her father, to the King of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.
K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to France.
And now what rests but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,
Such as befit the pleasure of the court?
Sound drums and trumpets! farewell, sour annoys!
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.
[Exeunt.

ACT I.

Scene I.—London. A Street.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds that lower'd upon our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarums chang'd to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
And now,—instead of mounting barbed steeds

To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,—
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I,—that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's majesty
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing world scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable
That dogs bark at me as I halt by them;—
Why, I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to spy my shadow in the sun,
And descant on mine own deformity:
And therefore,—since I cannot prove a lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,—
I am determined to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
I have laid, inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence and the king
In deadly hate the one against the other:
And, if King Edward be as true and just
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up,—
About a prophecy, which says that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be.
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul,—here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence, guarded, and Brakenbury.

Brother, good-day: what means this armed guard,
That waits upon your grace?

Clar. His majesty,
Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is George.

Glo. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of yours;
He should, for that, commit your godfathers;—
O, belike his majesty hath some intent
That you shall be new-christen'd in the Tower.
But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; for I protest
As yet I do not: but, as I can learn,
He hearkens after prophecies and dreams;
And from the cross-row plucks the letter G,
And says a wizard told him that by G
His issue disinherited should be;
And, for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought that I am he.
These, as I learn, and such like toys as these,
I have mov'd his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this it is, when men are rul'd by women:—
'Tis not the king that sends you to the Tower;
My Lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, 'tis she
That tempers him to this extremity.
Was it not she, and that good man of worship,
Antony Woodville, her brother there,
That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower,
From whence this present day he is deliver'd?
We are not safe, Clarence; we are not safe.

Clar. By heaven, I think there is no man secure
But the queen's kindred, and night-walking
That trudge betwixt the king and Mistress Shore.

Heard you not what an humble suppliant,
Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery?

Glo. Humbly complaining to her deity
Got my lord chamberlain his liberty.
I'll tell you what,—I think it is our way,
If we will keep in favour with the king,
To be her men, and wear her livery:
The jealous o'er-worn widow and herself,
Since that our brother dubb'd them gentle-women,
Are mighty gossips in this monarchy.  [me;

Brak. I beseech your graces both to pardon
His majesty hath strictly given in charge
That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever, with his brother.

Glo. Even so; an please your worship, Brakenbury,
You may partake of anything we say;
We speak no treason, man;—we say the king
Is wise and virtuous; and his noble queen
Well struck in years, fair, and n' t jealous;—
We say that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,
A cherry lip, a bonny eye, a passing pleasing tongue;
And the queen's kindred are made gentlefolks:
How say you, sir? can you deny all this?

Brak. With this, my lord, myself have naught to do.

Glo. Naught to do with Mistress Shore! I tell thee, fellow,
He that doth naught with her, excepting one,
Were best to do it secretly, alone.

Brak. What one, my lord?  [tray me?

Glo. Her husband, knave:—wouldst thou be-

Brak. I beseech your grace to pardon me;
and, withal,
Forbear your conference with the noble duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey.  [obey.—

Glo. We are the queen's subjects, and must Brother, farewell: I will unto the king;
And whatsoever you will employ me in,—
Were it to call King Edward's widow sister,—
I will perform it to enfranchise you.
Meantime, this deep disgrace in brotherhood
Touches me deeper than you can imagine.

Clar. I know it pleaseth neither of us well.

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long;
I will deliver you, or else lie for you:
Meantime, have patience.

Clar. I must perforce: farewell.

[Exeunt Clar., Brak., and Guard.

Glo. Go, tread the path that thou shalt ne'er return, Simple, plain Clarence!—I do love thee so
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,
SCENE I.

KING RICHARD III.

675

If heaven will take the present at our hands.—
But who comes here? the new-deliver'd Hastings?

Enter Hastings.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious lord!

Glo. As much unto my good lord chamber-

Well are you welcome to this open air.

How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must:

But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks

That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too.

For they that were your enemies are his,

And have prevail'd as much on him as you.

Hast. More pity that the eagle should be mew'd

While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

Glo. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad as this at home,—

The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy,

And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now, by Saint Paul, this news is bad

indeed.

O, he hath kept an evil diet long,

And overmuch consum'd his royal person:

'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.

What, is he in his bed?

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.

[Exit Hastings.

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die

Till George be pack'd with post horse up to heaven.

I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,

With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments;

And, if I fail not in my deep intent, Clarence hath not another day to live:

Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy,

And leave the world to me to bustle in!

For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter: [father?

What though I kill'd her husband and her

The readiest way to make the wench amends

Is to become her husband and her father:

The which will I; not all so much for love

As for another secret close intent,

By marrying her, which I must reach unto.

But yet I run before my horse to market:

Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives and reigns:

When they are gone, then must I count my gains.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—LONDON. Another Street.

Enter the Corpse of King Henry the Sixth, borne in an open coffin, Gentlemen bearing halberds to guard it; and Lady Anne as mourners.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,—

If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,—

Whilst I awhile obsequiously lament

The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.—

Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!

Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!

Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!

Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost,

To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,

Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son,

Stabb'd by the self-same hand that made these wounds!

Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life,

I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes:—

O, cursed be the hand that made these holes!

Cursed the heart that liad the heart to do it!

Cursed the blood that let this blood from hence!

More direful hap betide that hated wretch

That makes us wretched by the death of thee,

Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,

Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives!

If ever he have child, abortive be it,

Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,

Whose ugly and unnatural aspect

May fright the hopeful mother at the view;

And that be heir to his unhappiness!

If ever he have wife, let her be made

More miserable by the death of him

Than I am made by my young lord and thee!—

Come, now towards Chertsey with your holy load,

Taken from Paul's to be interred there;

And still, as you are weary of the weight,

Rest you, whiles I lament King Henry's corse.

[The Bearers take up the Corpse and advance.

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Stay, you that bear the corse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this

To stop devoted charitable deeds?

Glo. Villains, set down the corse; or, by

Saint Paul,

I'll make a corse of him that disobedys!

1 Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass. [command:

Glo. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou, when I

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast,

Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,

And spit upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

[The Bearers set down the coffin.
Anne. What, do you tremble? are you all afraid?
Alas, I blame you not; for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.—
Avant, thou dreadful minister of hell!
Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have; therefore, be gone.
Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curt.
Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not;
For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell;
I'll do it with cursing cries and deep exclamations.
If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.—
O, gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds
Open their concealed mouths and bleed afresh!
Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity;
For 'tis thy presence that exalts this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells;
Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural,
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.—
O God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his death!
O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his death!
[derer dead;
Either, heaven, with lightning strike the mur-
Or, earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick,
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!
Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity,
Which renders good for båd, blessings for curses.
Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man:
No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.
Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no b. st.
[truth!
Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the
Glo. More wonderful when angels are so angry;—
Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed e' ils to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit myself.
Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self.
Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have Some patient leisure to excuse myself.
Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make
No excuse current, but to hang thyself.
Glo. By such despair I should accuse myself.
Anne. And by despairing shalt thou stand excus'd;
For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.
Glo. Say that I slew them not?
Anne. Then say they were not slain:
But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.
Glo. I did not kill your husband.
Anne. Why, then, he is alive.
Glo. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.
Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest: Queen Margaret saw Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood;
The which thou once didst bend against her breast,
But that thy brothers beat aside the point.
Glo. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,
That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.
Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,
That never dreamt on aught but butcheries:
Didst thou not kill this king?
Glo. I grant ye.
Anne. Dost grant me, hedgehog? then, God grant me too
Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed!
O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous.
Glo. The fitter for the King of Heaven, that hath him.
[come.
Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never
Glo. Let him thank me, that help to send him thither;
For he was fitter for that place than earth.
Anne. And thou unit for any place but hell.
Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it.
Anne. Some dungeon.
Glo. Your bed-chamber.
Anne. Ill rest beside the chamber where thou liest!
Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.
Anne. I hope so.
Glo. I know so.—But, gentle Lady Anne,—
To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
And fall somewhat into a slower method,—
Is not the causer of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
As blaming as the executioner? [effect.
Anne. Thou wast the cause and most accurs'd
Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect;
Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep
To undertake the death of all the world,
So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom.
Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,
These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.
[reck;
Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's
You should not blemish it if I stood by:
As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that; it is my day, my life.
Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life!  [both.
Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art
Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.
Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that lovethe thee.
Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.
Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband.
Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.
Glo. He lives that loves thee better than he Anne. Name him.
Glo. Plantagenet.
Anne. Why, that was he.
Glo. The self-same name, but one of better nature.
Anne. Where is he?
Glo. Here.  [She spits at him.] Why dost thou spit at me?  [sake!
Anne. Would it were mortal poison, for thy
Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place.
Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler load.
Out of my sight! thou dost infect mine eyes.
Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine.
Anne. Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!  [once;
Glo. I would they were, that I might die at
For now they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,
Sham'd their aspects with store of childish
These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear,
No, when my father York and Edward wept,
To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made
When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at him;
Nor when thy warlike father, like a child,
Told the sad story of my father's death,
And twenty times made pause, to sob and weep,
That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks.
Like trees bedash'd with rain; in that sad time
My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear;
And what these sorrows could not thence exhale, Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.
I never su'd to friend nor enemy;  [word;
My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing
But, now thy beauty is propos'd my fee,
My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak.  [She looks scornfully at him.
Teach not thy lip such scorn; for it was made
For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.
If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,
Lo, here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;
Which if thou please to hide in this true breast;
And let the soul forth that adoreth thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.
Nay, do not pause; for I did kill King Henry,— [He lays his breast open; she offers at it with his sword.
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.
Nay, now despatch; 'twas I that stabb'd young Edward,—
[She again offers at his breast.
But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.
[She lets fall the sword.
Take up the sword again, or take up me.
Anne. Arise, dissembler: though I wish thy
death,
I will not be thy executioner.
Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.
Anne. I have already.
Glo. That was in thy rage:
Speak it again, and, even with the word,
This hand, which for thy love did kill thy love,
Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love;
To both their deaths shalt thou be accessory.
Anne. I would I knew thy heart.
Glo. 'Tis figured in my tongue.
Anne. I fear me both are false.
Glo. Then never man was true.
Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.
Glo. Say, then, my peace is made.
Anne. That shalt thou know hereafter.
Glo. But shall I live in hope?
Anne. All men, I hope, live so.
Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.
Anne. To take is not to give.
[She puts on the ring.
Glo. Look, how this ring encompasseth thy finger,
Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart;
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poor devoted servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.
Anne. What is it?  [designs
Glo. That it may please you leave these sad
To him that hath more cause to be a mourner,
And presently repair to Crosby Place;
Where,—after I have solemnly inter'd,
At Chertsey monastery, this noble king,
And wet his grave with my repentant tears,—
I will with all expedient duty see you:
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.  [me too
Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys
To see you are become so penitent.—
Tressel and Berkley, go along with me.
Glo. Bid me farewell.
Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve;
But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.

[Exeunt Lady Anne, Tress, and Berk.

Glo. Sirs, take up the corse.

Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord?

Glo. No, to White Friars; there attend my coming.

[Exeunt the rest, with the Corpse.

Was ever woman in this humour woo'd?
Was ever woman in this humour won?
I'll have her; but I will not keep her long.
What! I, that kill'd her husband and his father,
To take her in her heart's extremest hate;
With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,
The bleeding witness of her hatred by;
Having God, her conscience, and these bars against me,
And I no friends to back my suit withal,
But the plain devil and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her,—all the world to nothing!
Ha!
Hath she forgot already that brave prince,
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since,
Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?
A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,—
Fram'd in the prodigality of nature,
Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,—
The spacious world cannot again afford:
And will she yet abase her eyes on me,
That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,
And made her widow to a woeful bed?
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?
On me, that halt and am misshapen thus?
My dukedom to a beggarly denier,
I do mistake my person all this while:
Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
Myself to be a marvellous proper man.
I'll be at charges for a looking-glass;
And entertain a score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body:
Since I am crept in favour with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost.
But first I'll turn you fellow in his grave;
And then return lamenting to my love.—
Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass.  [Exit.

Enter Queen Elizabeth, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey.

Riv. Have patience, madam: there's no doubt his majesty
Will soon recover his accustomed health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse:

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good com-
And cheer his grace with quick and merry words.

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide on me?

Grey. No other harm but loss of such a lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms.  [goodly son,

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a
To be your comforter when he is gone.

Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young; and his minority
Is put unto the trust of Richard Gloster,
A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded he shall be protector?

Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded yet:
But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter Buckingham and Stanley.

Grey. Here come the Lords of Buckingham and Stanley.  [grace!

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!

Q. Eliz. The Countess Richmond, good my Lord of Stanley,
To your good prayer will scarcely say amen.
Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife,
And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd
I hate not you for your proud arrogance.

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe
The envious slanders of her false accusers;
Or, if she be accus'd on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which I think proceeds From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.  [of Stanley?

Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my Lord
Stan. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I
Are come from visiting his majesty.  [lords?

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment,

Buck. Madam, good hope; his grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam: he desires to make atone-
Between the Duke of Gloster and your brothers,
And between them and my lord chamberlain;
And sent to warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well!—but that will never be:
I fear our happiness is at the height.

Enter Gloster, Hastings, and Dorset.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it:—

Who are they that complain unto the king
That I, forsooth, am stern, and love them not?
By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly
That fill his ears with such dissentious rumbles.
Because he never flatter and speak fair,
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,
Duck with French nods and amish courtesy,
I must be held a rascally enemy.
Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd
By silken, sly insinuating Jacks? [your grace?]

Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks

Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty nor grace.
When have I injur'd thee? when done thee wrong?—
Or thee?—or thee?—or any of your faction?
A plague upon you all! His royal grace,—
Whom God preserve better than you would wish!—

Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing while,
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloster, you mistake the

The king, on his own royal disposition,
And not provok'd by any suitor else—
Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,
That in your outward action shows itself
Against my children, brothers, and myself—
Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather
The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glo. I cannot tell: the world is grown so bad,
That wrens may prey where eagles dare not perch:

Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloster;

You envy my advancement, and my friends';
God grant we never may have need of you!

Glo. Meantime, God grants that we have need of you:
Our brother is imprison'd by your means,
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while great promotions
Are daily given to ennoble those
That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble.

Q. Eliz. By Him that rais'd me to this careful
From that contented hap which I enjoy'd,
I never did incense his majesty
Against the Duke of Clarence, but have been
An earnest advocate to plead for him.
My lord, you do me shameful injury,
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny that you were not the mean
Of my Lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for,— [not so?

Glo. She may, Lord Rivers?—why, who knows

She may do more, sir, than denying that:
She may help you to many fair preferments;
And then deny her aiding hand therein,
And lay those honours on your high desert.
What may she not? She may,—ay, marry, may she,—

Riv. What, marry, may she? [king,

Glo. What, marry, may she! marry with a

A bachelor, a handsome stripling too:
I wis your grandam had a worse match.

Q. Eliz. My Lord of Gloster, I have too long borne

Your blunt upbraiding's and your bitter scoffs:
By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty
Of those gross taunts that oft I have endure'd.
I had rather be a country servant-maid
Than a great queen, with this condition,—
To be so baited, scorn'd, and stormed at.

Enter Queen Margaret, behind.

Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I beseech Him!

Thy honour, state, and seat is due to me.

Glo. What! threat you me with telling of the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said
I will avouch in presence of the king:
I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.
'Tis time to speak,—my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I remember them too well:

Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury.

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs;
A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,
A liberal rewarder of his friends:
To royalize his blood I spilt mine own.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his or thine. [band Grey

Glo. In all which time you and your hus-

Wore factious for the house of Lancaster:—
And, Rivers, so were you: was not your husband
In Margaret's battle at Saint Albans slain?
Let me put in your minds, if you forget,
What you have been ere this, and what you are;
Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A murderous villain, and so still thou art. [Warwick;

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father,
Ay, and forswore himself,—which Jesu pardon!—

Q. Mar. Which God revenge! [crown;

Glo. To fight on Edward's party, for the

And for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up.
I would to God my heart were flint, like Edward's,
Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine:
I am too childish-foolish for this world.
Q. Mar. Hic thee to hell for shame, and leave this world,
Thou cacodemon! there thy kingdom is.
Riv. My Lord of Gloster, in those busy days
Which here you urge to prove us enemies,
We follow'd then our lord, our sovereign king:
So should we you, if you should be our king.
Glo. If I should be!—I had rather be a pedler:
Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof!
Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose
You should enjoy, were you this country's king,—
As little joy you may suppose in me,
That I enjoy, being the queen thereof. [of;
Q. Mar. As little joy enjoys the queen there-
For I am she, and altogether joyless.
I can no longer hold me patient.—[Advancing.
Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out
In sharing that which you have pill'd from me!
Which of you trembles not that looks on me?
If not that, I being queen, you bow like subjects, [rebels?—
Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like
Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away!
Glo. Poul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight? [marr'd,
Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast
That will I make before I let thee go.
Glo. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?
Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment
Than death can yield me here by my abode.
A husband and a son thou ow'st to me,—
And thou a kingdom,—all of you allegiance:
This sorrow that I have, by right is yours;
And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.
Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee,
When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper,
[eyes;
And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his
And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a clout
Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland;—
His curses, then from bitterness of soul
Denounce'd against thee, are all fallen upon thee;
And God, not we, hath plagued thy bloody deed.
Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.
Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,
And the most merciless that e'er was heard of.
Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.

Dor. No man but prophesied revenge for it.
Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What, were you snarling all before
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me?
Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven
That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,
Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment,
Could all but answer for that peevish brat?
Can curses pierce the clouds and enter heaven?—
Why, then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses!—
Though not by war, by surfeit die your king,
As ours by murder, to make him a king!
Edward thy son, that now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward my son, that was Prince of Wales,
Die in his youth by like untimely violence!
Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!
Long may'st thou live to wail thy children's loss;
And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!
Long die thy happy days before thy death;
And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,
Dine neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!—
Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by,—
And so wasst thou, Lord Hastings,—when my son
him,
Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray
That none of you may live your natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off!
Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd hag.

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.
If heaven have any grievous plague in store,
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O, let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation
On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace!
The worm of conscience still be-gnaw thy soul!
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st,
And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!
No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,
Unless it be while some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!
Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog!
Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity
The slave of nature and the son of hell!
Thou slander of thy heavy mother's womb!
Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins!
Thou rag of honour! thou detested—
Glo. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!
Glo. Ha!
Q. Mar. I call thee not.
Glo. I cry thee mercy, then; for I did think
That thou hadst call’d me all those bitter names.
Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look’d for no reply.
Q. let me make the period to my curse!
Glo. ’Tis done by me, and ends in—Margaret.
Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath’d your curse against yourself.
Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!
Why strew’st thou sugar on that bottled spider,
Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?
Fool, fool! thou whett’st a knife to kill thyself.
The day will come that thou shalt wish for me
To help thee curse this poisonous bunch-back’d traitor.
Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic curse,
Lest to thy harm thou move our patience.
Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all mov’d mine.
Riv. Were you well serv’d, you would be taught your duty. [me duty,
Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do
Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects:
O, serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty!
Dor. Dispute not with her,—she is lunatic.
Q. Mar. Peace, master marquis, you are malapert:
Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current:
O, that your young nobility could judge
What ’twere to lose it, and be miserable!
They that stand high have many blasts to shake
them;
And if they fall they dash themselves to pieces.
Glo. Good counsel, marry:—learn it, learn it, marquis.
Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.
Glo. Ay, and much more: but I was born so high
Our aery buildeth in the cedar’s top,
And dallies with the wind, and scorrs the sun.
Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade;—alas!—
alas!—
Witness my son, now in the shade of death;
Whose brightout-shining beams thy cloudy wrath
Hath in eternal darkness folded up.
Your aery buildeth in our aery’s nest:—
O God, that see’st it, do not suffer it;—
As it was won with blood, lost be it so!
Buck. Peace, peace, for shame, if not for charity. [me:
Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to Uncharitably with me have you d’alt,
And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher’d.
My charity is outrage, life my shame,—
And in my shame still live my sorrow’s rage!
Buck. Have done, have done.
Q. Mar. O princeley Buckingham, I’ll kiss thy in sign of league and amity with thee:—
Now fair befall thee and thy noble house!
Thy garments are not spott’d with our blood,
Nor thou within the compass of my curse.
Buck. Nor no one here:—for curses never pass
The lips of those that breathe them in the air.
Q. Mar. I will not think but they ascend the sky,
And there awake God’s gentle sleeping peace.
O Buckingham, take heed of yonder dog!
Look, when he fawns he bites; and when he bites,
His venom tooth will rinkle to the death:
Have not to do with him, beware of him;
Sin, death, and hell have set their marks on him,
And all their ministers attend on him.
Glo. What doth she say, my Lord of Buckingham?
[lord.
Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel?
And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?
O, but remember this another day,
When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow,
And say, poor Margaret was a prophetess!—
Live each of you the subjects to his hate,
And he to yours, and all of you to God’s!
Hast. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses.
Riv. And so doth mine: I muse why she’s at Glo. I cannot blame her: by God’s holy mother,
She hath had too much wrong; and I repent
My part thereof that I have done to her.
Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.
Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her
wrong.
I was too hot to do somebody good,
That is too cold in thinking of it now.
Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;
He is frank’d up to fatting for his pains;
God pardon them that are the cause thereof!
Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion,
To pray for them that have done scathe to us.
Glo. So do I ever, being well advis’d;
For had I curs’d now, I had curs’d myself.
[Aside.
Enter Catesby.
Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you,—
And for your grace,—and you, my noble lords.
Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come.—Lords, will you go with me?

Riv. We wait upon your grace.

[Exeunt all but Gloster.

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.
The secret mischiefs that I set abroad
I lay unto the grievous charge of others.
Clarence,—whom I, indeed, have cast in darkness,—
I do beweep to many simple gulls;
Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;
And tell them 'tis the queen and her allies
That stir the king against the duke my brother.
Now, they believe it; and withal whet me
To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey:
But then I sigh; and, with a piece of Scripture,
Tell them that God bids us do good for evil:
And thus I clothe my naked villany
With odd old ends stol'n from of holy writ;
And seem a saint when most I play the devil.—
But, soft! here come my executioners.

Enter two Murderers.

How now, my hardy, stout-resolved mates!
Are you now going to despatch this thing?

1 Murd. We are, my lord, and come to have the warrant,
That we may be admitted where he is.

Glo. Well thought upon;—I have it here about me: [Gives the warrant.
When you have done, repair to Crosby Place.
But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,
Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;
For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps
May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

2 Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate;
Talkers are no good doers: be assur'd
We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.

Glo. Your eyes drop millstones when fools' eyes fall tears:
I like you, lads:—about your business straight;
Go, go, despatch.

1 Murd. We will, my noble lord. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—London. A Room in the Tower.

Enter Clarence and Brakenbury.

Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me.

[Exeunt, Gloster.

Clar. Methought that I had broken from the And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy;
And, in my company, my brother Gloster;
Who from my cabin tempted me to walk Upon the hatches: thence we look'd toward England,
And cited up a thousand heavy times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster,
That had befall'n us. As we pace'd along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,
Methought that Gloster stumbled; and, in falling,
Struck me, that thought to stay him, over-Into the tumbling billows of the main.
O Lord! methought what pain it was to drown!
What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!
What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalu'd jewels,
All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea:
Holes Some lay in dead men's skulls; and in those Where eyes did once inhabit there were crept,—
As 'twere in scorn of eyes,—reflecting gems,
That woul'd the slimy bottom of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by.

Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of death
To gaze upon the secrets of the deep? [strive

Clar. Methought I had; and often did I To yield the ghost: but still the envious flood Stopp'd in my soul, and would not let it forth To find the empty, vast, and wandering air; But smoother't it within my panting bulk, Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. Awake'd you not with this sore agony?

Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life;

O, then began the tempest to my soul!
I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood With that grim ferryman which poets write of, Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.
The first that there did greet my stranger soul Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;
Who cried aloud, What scarce for perjury Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence? And so he vanish'd: then came wandering by A shadow like an Angel, with bright hair Dabbled in blood; and he shriek'd out aloud, Clarence is come,—false, fleeting, perjur'd Clarence.

That stabb'd me in the side by Trenchbury;—
With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears
Such hideous cries that, with the very noise,
I trembling wak'd, and for a season after
Could not believe but that I was in hell,—
Such terrible impression made my dream.

_Brack._ No marvel, lord, though it alighted
you;
I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

_Clar._ O Brakenbury, I have done those things
That now give evidence against my soul,
For Edward's sake; and see how he requites me!
[thee,
O God! If my deep prayers cannot appease
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath in me alone,—
O, spare my guiltless wife and my poor children!

Keeper, I pr'ythee, sit by me awhile;
My soul is heavy, and I lain would sleep.

_Brack._ I will, my lord; God give your grace good rest!—

[CLARENCE reposeth himself on a chair.
Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours,
Makes the night morning, and the noontide night.
Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfelt imaginations,
They often feel a world of restless cares:
So that, between their titles and low name,
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

_Enter the two Murderers._

1 _Murd._ Ho! who's here?

_Brack._ What wouldst thou, fellow? and how can'st thou hither?

1 _Murd._ I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

_Brack._ What, so brief?

2 _Murd._ 'Tis better, sir, than to be tedious.—

Let him see our commission: talk no more.

[A paper is delivered to Brack., who reads it.

_Brack._ I am, in this, commanded to deliver
The noble Duke of Clarence to your hands:—
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning,
There lies the duke asleep,—and there the keys;
I'll to the king, and signify to him
That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

1 _Murd._ You may, sir; 'tis a point of wisdom: fare you well. [Exit Brakenbury.

2 _Murd._ What, shall we stab him as he sleeps?

1 _Murd._ No; he 'll say 'twas done cowardly,
2 _Murd._ When he wakes! why, fool, he shall never wake until the great judgment-day.

1 _Murd._ Why, then he 'll say we stabb'd him sleeping.

2 _Murd._ The urging of that word judgment hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

1 _Murd._ What, art thou afraid?

2 _Murd._ Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damned for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me.

1 _Murd._ I thought thou hadst been resolute.

2 _Murd._ So I am, to let him live.

1 _Murd._ I'll back to the Duke of Gloster, and tell him so.

2 _Murd._ Nay, I pr'ythee, stay a little: I hope my holy humour will change; it was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty.

1 _Murd._ How dose thou feel thyself now?

2 _Murd._ Faith, some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

1 _Murd._ Remember our reward, when the deed's done. [reward.

2 _Murd._ Zounds, he dies: I had forgot the

1 _Murd._ Where's thy conscience now?

2 _Murd._ In the Duke of Gloster's purse.

1 _Murd._ So, when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

2 _Murd._ 'Tis no matter; let it go; there's few or none will entertain it.

1 _Murd._ What if it come to thee again?

2 _Murd._ I'll not meddle with it,—it makes a man a coward; a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him: 'tis a blushing shame-faced spirit that mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills one full of obstacles: it made me once restore a purse of gold that by chance I found; it beggars any man that keeps it: it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man that means to live well endeavours to trust to himself and live without it.

1 _Murd._ Zounds, it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.

2 _Murd._ Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee but to make thee sigh.

1 _Murd._ I am strong-framed, he cannot prevail with me.

2 _Murd._ Spoke like a tall fellow that respects his reputation. Come, shall we fall to work?

1 _Murd._ Take him on the costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt in the next room.

2 _Murd._ O excellent device! and make a sop of him.
2 Murd. Strike!
1 Murd. No, we'll reason with him.
Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give me a cup of wine.
1 Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.
Clar. In God's name, what art thou?
1 Murd. A man, as you are.
Clar. But not, as I am, royal.
1 Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.
Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.
1 Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own. [speak!]
Clar. How darkly and how deadly dost thou
Your eyes do menace me: why look you pale?
Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?
Both Murd. To, to, to—
Clar. To murder me?
Both Murd. Ay, ay.
Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me
And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it.
Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?
1 Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king.
Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again.
2 Murd. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die.

Clar. Are you drawn forth among a world of
To slay the innocent? What is my offence?
What is the evidence that doth accuse me?
Where lawful quest have given their verdict upon Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounce'd
The bitter sentence of poor Clarence' death?
Before I be convict by course of law,
To threaten me with death is most unlawful.
I charge you, as you hope to have redemption
By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sin,
That you depart, and lay no hands on me:
The deed you undertake is damnable.
1 Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.

2 Murd. And he that hath commanded is our king. [kings
Clar. Erroneous vassals! the great King of Hath in the table of his law commanded
That thou shalt do no murder: will you then Spurn at his edict, and fulfil a man's?
Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand,
To hurl upon their heads that break his law.
2 Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee
For false forswearing, and for murder too:
Thou didst receive the sacrament to fight
In quarrel of the house of Lancaster.
1 Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God,
Clar. Have you that holy feeling in your souls,
To counsel me to make my peace with God,
And are you yet to your own souls so blind,
That you will war with God by murdering me?—
O, sirs, consider, they that set you on
To do this deed will hate you for the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

1 Murd. Relent! 'tis cowardly and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent is beastly, savage, devilish—
Which of you, if you were a prince's son,
Being pent from liberty, as I am now,—
If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,—
Would not entreat for life?—

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks;
O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,
Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,
As you would beg, were you in my distress:
A begging prince what beggar pities not?

2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

1 Murd. Take that, and that: if all this will not do,
I'll drown you in the malmsy-butt within.

[Exit with the body.

2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately despatch'd!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands
Of this most grievous guilty murder done!

Re-enter First Murderer.

1 Murd. How now, what mean'st thou, that thou helpest me not?
By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have been.

2 Murd. I would he knew that I had sav'd his Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say;
For I repent me that the duke is slain.

1 Murd. So do not I: go, coward as thou art.

Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole,
Till that the duke give order for his burial:
And when I have my need, I will away;
For this will out, and then I must not stay.

[Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—LONDON. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward, led in sick; Queen Elizabeth, Dorset, Rivers, Hastings, Buckingham, Grey, and others.

K. Edw. Why, so;—now have I done a good day's work:—
You peers, continue this united league:

I every day expect an embassage
From my Redeemer, to redeem me hence;
And now in peace my soul shall part to heaven,
Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.

Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hand;
Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;
And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K. Edw. Take heed you daily not before your king;
Lest he that is the supreme King of kings
Confound your hidden falsehood, and award
Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!

K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt from this,— Nor you, son Dorset,—Buckingham, nor you;—
You have been factious one against the other.

Wife, love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;
And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings; I will never more remember
Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine!

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him;—Hastings, love lord marquis.

Dor. This interchange of love I here protest,
Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [Embraces Dorset.

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal this league
With thy embraces to my wife's allies,
And make me happy in thy unity. [hate

Buck. Whene'er Buckingham doth turn his Upon your grace [to the QUEEN], but with all duteous love
Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me
With hate in those where I expect most love!

When I have most need to employ a friend,
And most assured that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me!—this do I beg of heaven
When I am cold in love to you or yours.

[Embracing Rivers, &c.

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buck-

ingham,
Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.

There waiteth now our brother Gloster here,
To make the blessed period of this peace.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.
Enter Gloster.

Glo. Good-morrow to my sovereign king and queen:
   And, princely peers, a happy time of day!
K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day.
Gloster, we have done deeds of charity;
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,
Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.
Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign lord.
   Among this princely heap, if any here,
By false intelligence or wrong surmise,
   Hold me a foe;
If I unwittingly, or in my rage,
   Have aught committed that is hardly borne
By any in this presence, I desire
   To reconcile me to his friendly peace:
'Tis death to me to be at enmity;
   I hate it, and desire all good men's love.
First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
   Which I will purchase with my duteous service;
   Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,
If ever any grudge were lodg'd betwixt us;
   Of you, and you, Lord Rivers, and of Dorset,
That all without desert have frown'd on me;
   Of you, Lord Woodville, and, Lord Scales, of you:
   [all.
Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen;—indeed, of
   I do not know that Englishman alive
With whom my soul is any jot at odds
   More than the infant that is born to-night:
I thank my God for my humility. [after:
Q. Eliz. A holiday shall this be kept here;
I would to God all strifes were well compounded.
   My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness
To take our brother Clarence to your grace.
Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for this,
   To be so flouted in this royal presence?
   Who knows not that the gentle duke is dead?
   [They all start.
You do him injury to scorn his corse.
K. Edw. Who knows not he is dead! who knows he is?
   [this!
Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is
   But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.
K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? the order was [died,
   And that a winged Mercury did bear;
Some tardy cripple bore the countermand
   That came too lag to see him buried.

God grant that some, less noble and less loyal,
   Nearer in bloody thoughts, but not in blood,
Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,
   And yet go current from suspicion!

Enter Stanley.

Stan. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done!
   [sorrow.
K. Edw. I pr'ythee, peace: my soul is full of Stan. I will not rise unless your highness hear me.
   [quest'st.
K. Edw. Then say at once what is it thou requ'st.
Stan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's life;
Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman
   Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.
K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death,
   And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?
   My brother kill'd no man,—his fault was thought,
   And yet his punishment was bitter death:
Who su'd to me for him? who, in my wrath,
   Kneel'd at my feet, and bid me be advis'd?
   Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of love?
Who told me how the poor soul did forsake
   The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?
Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury,
   When Oxford had me down, he rescu'd me,
   And said, Dear brother, live, and be a king?
Who told me, when we both lay in the field
   Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me
   Even in his garments, and did give himself,
   All thin and naked, to the numb-cold night?
   All this from my remembrance brutish wrath
   Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you
   Had so much grace to put it in my mind.
   But when your carters or your waiting-vassals
   Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd
   The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
   You straight are on your knees for pardon
   pardon;
And I, unjustly too, must grant it you:
   But for my brother not a man would speak,
   Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself
   For him, poor soul. The proudest of you all
   Have been beholden to him in his life;
   Yet none of you would once beg for his life.
   O God, I fear thy justice will take hold
   On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this!
Come, Hastings, help me to my closet.
   Ah, poor Clarence!
   [Exeunt King, Queen, Hast., Riv., Dor., and Grey.
Glo. This is the fruit of rashness!—Mark'd you not How that the guilty kindred of the queen
Look'd pale when they did hear of Clarence' death?
O, they did urge it still unto the king!
God will revenge it.—Come, lords, will you go
To comfort Edward with our company?
Buck. We wait upon your grace. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Palace.
Enter the Duchess of York, with a Son and Daughter of Clarence.

Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead?
Duch. No, boy.

Duch. Why do you weep so oft, and beat
And cry, O Clarence, my unhappy son!

Son. Why do you look on us, and shake your head,
And call us orphans, wretches, castaways,
If that our noble father be alive? [both:
Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me
I do lament the sickness of the king,
As loth to lose him, not your father's death;
It were lost sorrow to wait one that's lost.

Son. Then you conclude, my grandam, he is dead.
The king mine uncle is to blame for this:
God will revenge it; whom I will importune
With earnest prayers all to that effect.
Daugh. And so will I.

Duch. Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well;
Incaptive and shallow innocents, [death.
You cannot guess who caus'd your father's Son. Grandam, we can; for my good uncle
Gloster
Told me, the king, provok'd to it by the queen,
Devis'd impeachments to imprison him:
And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek;
Bade me rely on him as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as his child.

Duch. Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shape,
And with a virtuous visard hide deep vice!
He is my son; ay, and therein my shame;
Yet from my suck he drew not this deceit.

Son. Think you my uncle did dissemble, grandam?

Duch. Ay, boy.

Son. I cannot think it.—Hark! what noise is

Enter Queen Elizabeth, distractedly;
Rivers and Dorset following her.

Q. Eliz. Ah, who shall hinder me to wail
And weep,
To chide my fortune, and torment myself?

I'll join with black despair against my soul,
And to myself become an enemy. [patience?

Duch. What means this scene of rude im-
Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence:—
Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead. —
Why grow the branches when the root is gone?
Why wither not the leaves that want their sap?—
If you will live, lament; if die, be brief,
That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's;
Or, like obedient subjects, follow him
To his new kingdom of perpetual rest. [row
Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sor-
As I had title in thy noble husband!
I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And liv'd by looking on his images:
But now two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death,
And I for comfort have but one false glass,
That grieves me when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
And hast the comfort of thy children left:
But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine
arms,
And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble
Clarence and Edward. O, what cause have I,— Thine being but a moiety of my moan,—
To overgo thy woes and drown thy cries?
Son. Ah, aunt, you wept not for our father's death!

Daugh. How can we aid you with our kindred tears?

Daugh. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd,
Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept!

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation;
I am not barren to bring forth complaints:
All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I, being govern'd by the watery moon,
May send forth plenteous tears to drown the
world!
Ah for my husband, for my dear Lord Edward!

Chil. Ah for our father, for our dear Lord
Clarence!

Duch. Alas for both, both mine, Edward and
Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward? and he's gone. [he's gone.

Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? and Duch. What stays had I but they? and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a loss!
Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a loss!

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss!

Alas, I am the mother of these griefs!
Their woes are parasell'd, mine are general.
She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;
I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she:
These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I:
I for an Edward weep, so do not they:—
Alas, you three, on me, threefold distress'd,
Pour all your tears! I am your sorrow: nurse,
And I will pamper it with lamentation.

Dor. Comfort, dear mother: God is much displeas'd
That you take with unthankfulness his doing;
In common worldly things 'tis call'd ungrateful,
With dull unwillingness to repay a debt
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;
Much more to be thus opposed with heaven;
For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Ric. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother,
Of the young prince your son: send straight
Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives:
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,
And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter Gloster, Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings, Ratcliff, and others.

Glo. Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause
To wail the dimming of our shining star;
But none can cure their harms by wailing them.—

Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy;
I did not see your grace:—humbly on my knee
I crave your blessing. [thy breast,

Buck. God bless thee; and put meekness in Love, charity, obedience, and true duty!

Glo. Amen; and make me die a good old man!—
That is the butt end of a mother's blessing;
I marvel that her grace did leave it out. [Aside

Buck. You cloudy princes and heart-sorrowing peers,
That bear this heavy mutual load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love:
Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son.
The broken rance of your high-swoln hearts,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept:
Me seemeth good that, with some little train,
Fortwith from Ludlow the young prince be fet
Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my Lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out;
Which would be so much the more dangerous
By how much the estate is green and yet ungovern'd:
Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself,

As well the fear of harm as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented. [As:

Glo. I hope the king made peace with all of
And the compact is firm and true in me.

Ric. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach,
Which haply by much company might be urg'd:
Therefore I say with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Glo. Then be it so; and go we to determine Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam,—and you, my mother,—will you go
To give your censures in this business?

[Exeunt all but Buck. and Glo.

Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home;
For by the way I 'll sort occasion,
As index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet!—my dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction.

Toward Ludlow then, for we 'll not stay behind.

[Exeunt.

Scene III.—London. A Street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

1 Cit. Good-morrow, neighbour: whither away so fast?

2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:
Hear you the news abroad?

1 Cit. Yes,—that the king is dead.

2 Cit. Ill news, by 'r lady; seldom comes the better:
I fear, I fear't will prove a giddy world.

Enter a third Citizen.

3 Cit. Neighbours, God speed!

1 Cit. Give you good-morrow, sir.

3 Cit. Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death? [while!

2 Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help, the 3 Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublous world.

1 Cit. No, no; by God's good grace, his son shall reign.

3 Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd by

2 Cit. In him there is a hope of government,
Which, in his nonage, council under him,
And, in his full and ripen'd years, himself,
No doubt, shall then, and till then, govern well.
SCENE IV.—LONDON. A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the young Duke of York, Queen Elizabeth, and the Duchess of York.

Arch. Last night, I hear, they at Northampton lay; And at Stony-Stratford will they be to-night: To-morrow or next day they will be here.
Duch. I long with all my heart to see the prince: I hope he is much grown since last I saw him.
Q. Eliz. But I hear no; they say my son of York Has almost overta'en him in his growth.

York. Ay, mother; but I would not have it so.

Duch. Why, my young cousin? it is good to grow.
York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at My uncle Rivers talk’d how I did grow More than my brother: Ay, quoth my uncle Gloster, Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast, Because sweet flowers are slow, and weeds make haste.

Duch. Good faith, good faith, the saying did In him that did object the same to thee: He was the wretchedest thing when he was young; So long a growing, and so leisurely, That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. And so no doubt he is, my gracious madam.
Duch. I hope he is: but yet let mothers doubt.
York. Now, by my troth, if I had been re-member’d, I could have given my uncle’s grace a flout, To touch his growth nearer than he touch’d mine.
Duch. How, my young York? I pr’ythee, let me hear it.
York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old: ’Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth. Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.
Duch. I pr’ythee, pretty York, who told thee this?
York. Grandam, his nurse.
Duch. His nurse! why she was dead ere thou York. If ’twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.
Q. Eliz. A parlous boy:—go to, you are too good madam, be not angry with the child.
Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.
Arch. Here comes a messenger.

Enter a Messenger.

What news?
Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to hear.
Q. Eliz. How doth the prince?
Mess. Well, madam, and in health.
Duch. What is thy news?
Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret, With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.
Duch. Who hath committed them?
Mess. The mighty dukes Gloster and Buckingham.
Q. Eliz. For what offence?
Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclos’d; Why or for what the nobles were committed Is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.
Q. Eliz. Ah me, I see the ruin of my house!
The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind;
Insulting tyranny begins to jet
Upon the innocent and awless throne:—
Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre!
I see, as in a map, the end of all. (days

Duch. Accurs'd and unquiet wrangling
How many of you have mine eyes beheld?
My husband lost his life to get the crown;
And often up and down my sons were toss'd,
For me to joy and weep their gain and loss:
And being seate, and domestic broils
Clean overblown, themselves, the conquerors,
Make war upon themselves; brother to brother,
Blood to blood, self against self:—O, preposterous
And frantic outrage, end thy damned spleen;
Or let me die, to look on death no more!
Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy; we will to sanctuary.—

Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.
Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. My gracious lady, go.

[To the Queen.

And thither bear your treasure and your goods.
For my part, I'll resign unto your grace
The seal I keep: and so betide to me
As well I tender you and all of yours!
Come, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

Scene I.—London. A Street.

The trumpet's sound. Enter the Prince of Wales, Gloster, Buckingham, Catesby, Cardinal Bouchier, and others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts'soverign:
The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the way
Have made it tedious, weariesome, and heavy:
I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glo. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years
Hath not yet div'd into the world's deceit:
No more can you distinguish of a man
Than of his outward show; which, God he knows,
Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart.
Those uncles which you want were dangerous;
Your grace attended to their sugar'd words,

But look'd not on the poison of their hearts:
God keep you from them, and from such false friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends! but they were none. [greet you.

Glo. My lord, the mayor of London comes to Enter the Lord Mayor and his Train.

May. God bless your grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord;—and thank you all. [Exeunt Mayor, &c.

I thought my mother and my brother York
Would long ere this have met us on the way:
Fie, what a slug is Hastings, that he comes not
To tell us whether they will come or no!

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the sweating lord.

Enter Hastings.

Prince. Welcome, my lord: what, will our mother come?

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I,
The queen your mother and your brother York
Have taken sanctuary: the tender prince
Would fain have come with me to meet your grace,
But by his mother was perforce withheld.

Buck. Fie, what an indirect and peevish course
Is this of hers?—Lord cardinal, will your grace Persuade the queen to send the Duke of York
Unto his princely brother presently?
If she deny, Lord Hastings, go with him,
And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory
Can from his mother win the Duke of York,
Anon expect him here; but if she be obdurate
To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid
We should infringe the holy privilege
Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land
Would I be guilty of so great a sin. [lord,

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my Too ceremonious and traditional:
Weigh it but with the grossness of this age,
You break not sanctuary in seizing him.
The benefit thereof is always granted
To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place,
And those who have the wit to claim the place:
This prince hath neither claim'd it nor deserv'd it;
And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it:
Then, taking him from hence that is not there,
You break no privilege nor charter there.
Oft have I heard of sanctuary-men;
But sanctuary-children ne'er till now.

Card. My lord, you shall o'errule my mind for once.—

Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with me?
Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may. [Exeunt Car. and Hast. Say, uncle Gloster, if our brother come, Where shall we sojourn till our coronation? Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self. If I may counsel you, some day or two Your highness shall repose you at the Tower: Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit For your best health and recreation. [place.—

Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported Successively from age to age, he build it? Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord. Prince. But say, my lord, were not register'd, Menthinks the truth should live from age to age, As 'twere retail'd to all posterity, Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. So wise so young, they say, do never live long. [Aside.

Prince. What say you, uncle? [long.—

Glo. I say, without characters, fame lives Thus, like the formal vice, Iniquity, I moralize two meanings in one word. [Aside.

Prince. That Julius Cæsar was a famous man; With what his valour did enrich his wit, His wit set down to make his valour live: Death makes no conquest of this conqueror; For now he lives in fame, though not in life.— I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham,— Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man, I'll win our ancient right in France again, Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king. Glo. Short summers lightly have a forward spring. [Aside.

Enter York, Hastings, and the Cardinal.

York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call Prince. Ay brother,—to our grief, as it is yours:

Too late he died that might have kept that title, Which by his death hath lost much majesty. Glo. How fares our cousin, noble Lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my You said that idle weeds are fast in growth: The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle?

Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so. York. Then is he more beholding to you than I.

Glo. He may command me as my sovereign; But you have power in me as in a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger. Glo. My dagger, little cousin? with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother? [give;

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will And being but a toy, which is no grief to give. Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin. [it.

York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough. York. O then, I see, you will part but with light gifts;

In weightier things you'll say a beggar nay.

Glo. It is too weighty for your graces to wear. York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.

Glo. What, would you have my weapon, little lord? [call me. York. I would, that I might thank you as you Glo. How?

York. Little. [in talk:—

Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him. York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me:— Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me; Because that I am little, like an ape, He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders. [reasons!

Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle, He prettily and aptly taunts himself: So cunning and so young is wonderful. [along? Glo. My gracious lord, wilt please to pass Myself and my good cousin Buckingham Will to your mother, to entreat of her To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my lord? [so.

Prince. My lord protector needs will have it York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower. Glo. Why, what should you fear? [ghost: York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry My grandam told me he was murder'd there. Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope. [fear. Prince. An if they live, I hope I need not But come, my lord; and with a heavy heart, Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.

KING RICHARD III.

Scene II.—Before Lord Hastings' House.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord!—[Knocking,

Hast. [Within.] Who knocks?

Mess. One from the Lord Stanley.

Hast. [Within.] What is't o'clock?

Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter Hastings.

Hast. Cannot my Lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights?

Mess. So it appears by that I have to say.
First, he commends him to your noble self.
Hast. What then?

Mess. Then certifies your lordship that this he dreamed the boar had rased off his helm;
Besides, he says there are two councils held;
And that may be determin'd at the one
Which may make you and him to rue at the other.
Therefore he sends to know your lordship's
If you will presently take horse with him,
And with all speed post with him toward the north,
To shun the danger that his soul divines.
Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord;
Bid him not fear the separated councils:
His honour and myself are at the one,
And at the other is my good friend Catesby;
Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us,
Whereof I shall not have intelligence.
Tell him his fears are shallow, without instance:
And for his dreams, I wonder he's so simple
To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers:
To fly the boar before the boar pursues,
Were to incense the boar to follow us,
And make pursuit where he did mean no chase.
So, bid thy master rise and come to me;
And we will both together to the Tower,
Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.
Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say.

Exit.

Enter Catesby.

Cate. Many good-morrows to my noble lord!
Hast. Good-morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring: [state?

What news, what news, in this our tottering
Cate. It is a reeling world indeed, my lord; and I believe will never stand upright.

Till Richard wear the garland of the realm.

Hast. How! wear the garland! dost thou mean the crown?

Cate. Ay, my good lord. [my shoulders

Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from Before I'll see the crown so foul misplaced. But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward Upon his party for the gain thereof: And thereupon he sends you this good news,— That this same very day your enemies, The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that news, Because they have been still my adversaries: But that I'll give my voice on Richard's side, To bar my master's heirs in true descent, God knows I will not do it to the death.

Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind!

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve month hence,— That they who brought me in my master's hate, I live to look upon their tragedy. Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older, I'll send some packing that yet think not on't.

Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord, When men are unprepar'd, and look not for it.

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey: and so 'twill do With some men else that think themselves as safe As thou and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear To princely Richard and to Buckingham.

Cate. The princes both make high account of you,— For they account his head upon the bridge. [Aside.

Hast. I know they do; and I have well deserve'd it.

Enter STANLEY.

Come on, come on; where is your boar-spear, man? Fear you the boar, and go so unprouided?

Stan. My lord, good-morrow; and good-morrow, Catesby:—

You may jest on, but, by the holy rood, I do not like these several councils, I.

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as you do yours;

And never in my days, I do protest,

Was it more precious to me than 'tis now:

Think you, but that I know our state secure, I would be so triumphant as I am?

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London, [sure,—

Were jocund, and suppos'd their states were And they, indeed, had no cause to mistrust; But yet, you see, how soon the day o'ercast! This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt;

Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward! What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent.

Hast. Come, come, have with you. — Wot you what, my lord? To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads [hats.—

Than some that have accus'd them wear their But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow. [Exeunt STAN. and CATE.

How now, sirrah! how goes the world with thee? [ask.

Purs. The better that your lordship please to Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now [meet: Than when thou mett'st me last where now we Then was I going prisoner to the Tower, By the suggestion of the queen's allies; But now, I tell thee,—keep it to thyself,— This day those enemies are put to death, And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. God hold it, to your honour's good content! [me.

Hast. Gramercy: there, drink that for [Throwing him his purse.

Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit.

Enter a Priest.

Pr. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.

Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart.
I am in your debt for your last exercise;
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain!

Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest; Your honour hath no shriving-work in hand.

Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,

The men you talk of came into my mind.— What, go you toward the Tower?
Buck. I do, my lord; but long I cannot stay there:
I shall return before your lordship thence.
Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.
Buck. And supper too, although thou know'st it not. [Aside.
Come, will you go?
Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship.
[Exeunt.

Scene III.—Pomfret. Before the Castle.
Enter Ratcliff, with a Guard, conducting Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan to execution.
Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this,—
To-day shalt thou behold a subject die
For truth, for duty, and for loyalty. [of you! Grey. God bless the prince from all the pack
A knot you are of damned blood-stokers.
Vaugh. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.
Rat. Despatch; the limit of your lives is out.
Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison,
Fatal and ominous to noble peers!
Within the guilty closure of thy walls
Richard the Second here was hack'd to death:
And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,
We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink.
Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads,
When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I,
For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son.
Riv. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd she Buckingham,
Then curs'd she Hastings:—O, remember, God,
To hear her prayer for them, as now for us!
And for my sister and her princely sons,
Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt!
Rat. Make haste; the hour of death is expir'd.
Riv. Come, Grey,—come, Vaughan,—let us here embrace:
Farewell, until we meet again in heaven.
[Exeunt.

Scene IV.—London. A Room in the Tower.
Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings, the Bishop of Ely, Ratcliff, Lovel, and others, sitting at a table: Officers of the Council attending.
Hast. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met Is to determine of the coronation.
In God's name, speak,—when is the royal day?
Buck. Are all things ready for that royal time?
Stan. They are; and wants but nomination.
Ely. To-morrow, then, I judge a happy day.
Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind herein?
Who is most inward with the noble duke?
Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.
Buck. We know each other's faces: for our hearts,
He knows no more of mine than I of yours;
Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine.—
Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.
Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves me
well;
But for his purpose in the coronation
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein:
But you, my noble lords, may name the time;
And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.
Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke himself.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. My noble lords and cousins all, good-morrow.
I have been long a sleeper; but I trust
My absence doth neglect no great design
Which by my presence might have been concluded.
Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord,
William Lord Hastings had pronounced your
I mean, your voice,—for crowning of the king.
Glo. Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder;
His lordship knows me well, and loves me
My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn
I saw good strawberries in your garden there:
I do beseech you send for some of them.
Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart.
Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.
[Takes him aside.
Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business,
And finds the testy gentleman so hot
That he will lose his head ere give consent
His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it,
Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.
Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile; I'll go with you. [Exeunt Glo. and Buck.
Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.
To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;
For I myself am not so well provided
As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my lord the Duke of Gloucester?
I have sent for these strawberries.
Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth
this morning;
There's some conceit or other likes him well
When that he bids good-morrow with such spirit.
I think there's never a man in Christendom
Can lesser hide his love or hate than he;
For by his face straight shall you know his heart.
Stan. What of his heart perceive you in his face
By any livelihood he showed to-day?
Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended:
For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Re-enter Gloucester and Buckingham.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve
That do conspire my death with devilish plots
Of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd
Upon my body with their hellish charms?
Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my lord,
Makes me most forward in this princely presence
To doom the offenders: whoseoe'er they be,
I say, my lord, they have deserved death.
Glo. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil:
Look how I am bewitch'd: behold, mine arm
Is, like a blasted sapling, witherc'd up:
And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch,
Consorted with that harlot-strumpet Shore,
That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.
Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord,—

Glo. If thou protector of this damned straw,
Tell'st thou to me of ifs?—Thou art a traitor:—
Oh! with his head!—now, by Saint Paul I swear,
I will not die until I see the same.—
Lovell and Ratcliff:—look that it be done:—
The rest, that love me, rise and follow me.
[Exeunt all except HAST., LOV., and RATCLEFT.
Hast. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for me;
For I, too fond, might have prevented this.
Stanley did dream the bear did raze his helm;
And I did scorn it, and disdain to fly.
Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble,
And stared, when he look'd upon the Tower,
As loth to bear me to the slaughter-house.
O, now I need the priest that spake to me:

I now repent I told the pursuivant,
As too triumphing, how mine enemies
To-day at Pomsreft bloodily were butcher'd,
And I myself secure in grace and favour.
O Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse
Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head.
Rat. Come, come, despatch; the duke would be at dinner:
Make a short shrift; he longs to see your head.
Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men,
Which we more hunt for than the grace of God!
Who builds his hope in air of your good looks,
Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast,
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep.
Lov. Come, come, despatch; 'tis bootless to exclaim.
[Land and
I prophesy the fearfull'st time to thee
That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.—
Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head:
They smile at me who shortly shall be dead.
[Exeunt.

Scene V.—London. The Tower Walls.

Enter Gloucester and Buckingham in rusty armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake and change thy colour,
Murder thy breath in middle of a word,
And then again begin, and stop again,
As if thou wert distraught and mad with terror?
Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian;
Speak and look back, and pry on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,
Intending deep suspicion: ghastly looks
Are at my service, like enforced smiles;
And both are ready in their offices,
At any time, to grace my stratagems.
But what, is Catesby gone?

Glo. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor

Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY.

Buck. Lord mayor,—
Glo. Look to the drawbridge there!
Buck. Hark! a drum.
Glo. Catesby, o'erlook the walls.
Buck. Lord Mayor, the reason we have sent,—
Glo. Look back, defend thee,—here are enemies.
Buck. God and our innocency defend and guard us!
[Lovell,
Glo. Be patient, they are friends,—Ratcliff and.
Enter Lovel and Ratcliff, with Hastings' head.

Lovel. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor,
The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.
Glo. So dear I lov'd the man that I must weep.
I took him for the plainest harmless creature
That breath'd upon the earth a Christian;
Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded
The history of all her secret thoughts:
So smooth he dealt his vice with show of virtue
That, his apparent open guilt omitted,—
I mean, his conversation with Shore's wife,—
He liv'd from all attainder of suspect.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelter'd traitor
That ever liv'd.—Would you imagine, or almost believe,—Weren't not that by great preservation
We live to tell it you,—the subtle traitor
This day had plott'd, in the council-house,
To murder me and my good Lord of Gloster!
May. Had he done so? [fidels?]
Glo. What! think you we are Turks or In-
Or that we would, against the form of law,
Proceed rashly in the villain's death,
But that the extreme peril of the case,
The peace of England and our persons' safety,
Enforce'd us to this execution?
May. Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his death;
And your good graces both have well pro-
To warn false traitors from the like attempts.
I never look'd for better at his hands
After he once fell in with Mistress Shore. [die

Buck. Yet had we not determin'd he should Until your lordship came to see his end;
Which now the loving haste of these our friends,
Something against our meaning, hath prevented:
Because, my lord, we would have had you hear
The traitor speak, and timbrously confess
The manner and the purpose of his treasons;
That you might well have signified the same
Unto the citizens, who haply may Misconstrue us in him, and wail his death.

May. But, my good lord, your grace's word shall serve
As well as I had seen, and heard him speak:
And do not doubt, right noble princes both,
But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens
With all your just proceedings in this case.
Glo. And to that end we wish'd your lordship here,
To avoid the censures of the carping world.

Buck. But since you come too late of our inten-

Yet witness what you hear we did intend:
And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell,
[Exit Lord Mayor.

Glo. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post:—
There, at your nearest vantage of the time,
Infer the bastardy of Edward's children:
Tell them how Edward put to death a citizen,
Only for saying he would make his son
Heir to the crown; meaning, indeed, his house,
Which, by the sign thereof, was termed so.
Moreover, urge his hateful luxury,
And bestial appetite in change of lust; [wives,
Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters,
Even where his raging eye or savage heart,
Without control, list to make a prey.
Nay, for a need, thus far come near my per-

Tell them, when that my mother went with
Of that insatiate Edward, noble York,
My princely father, then had wars in France;
And, by true computation of the time,
Found that the issue was not his begot;
Which well appeared in his lineaments,
Being nothing like the noble duke my father;
Yet touch this sparingly, as were far off;
Because, my lord, you know my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord, I'll play the orator
As if the golden plea for which I plead
Were for myself: and so, my lord, adieu.
Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Bay-

Where you shall find me well accompanied
With reverend fathers and well learned Bishops.

Look for the news that the Guildhall affords.

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor Shaw.—
[Exit.

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor Shaw.— [both
Go thou [to Cate] to Friar Penker;—bid them
Meet me within this hour at Baynard's Castle.
[Exit Lov. and Cate.

Now will I in, to take some privy order
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;
And to give notice that no manner of person
Have any time recourse unto the princes. [Exit.

Scene VI.—London. A Street.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good Lord Hastings;
Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's.
And mark how well the sequel hangs together:—
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me;
The precedent was full as long a-doing:
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,
Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.
Here's a good world the while! Who is so gross
That cannot see this palpable device!
Yet who so bold but says he sees it not!
Bad is the world; and all will come to naught
When such ill dealing must be seen in thought.

[Exit.

SCENE VII.—LONDON. Court of Baynard's Castle.

Enter Gloster and Buckingham, meeting.

Glo. How now, how now! what say the citizens?
Buck. Now, by the holy mother of our Lord,
The citizens are mum, say not a word.
Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?
[Lucy,
Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady
And his contract by deputy in France;
The insatiate greediness of his desires,
And his enforcement of the city wives;
His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy,—
As being got, your father then in France,
And his resemblance, being not like the duke:
Withal I did infer your lineaments,—
Being the right idea of your father,
Both in your form and nobleness of mind;
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,
Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;
Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose
Untouch'd or slightly handled in discourse:
And when my oratory drew toward end
I bid them that did love their country's good Cry, God save Richard, England's royal king!
Glo. And did they so?
Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a
But, like dumb statues or breathing stones,
Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale.
Which when I saw, I reprehended them;
And ask'd the mayor what meant this wilful silence:
His answer was,—the people were not us'd
To be spoke to but by the recorder.
Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again,—
Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke inserr'ed;
But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine own,
At lower end of the hall, haul'd up their caps,
And some ten voices cried, God save King
Richard!
And thus I took the vantage of those few,—

Thanks, gentle citizens and friends, quoth I;
This general applause and cheerful shout
Argues your wisdom and your love to Richard:
And even here brake off and came away.
Glo. What tongueless blocks were they!
would they not speak? [come?
Will not the mayor, then, and his brethren,
Buck. The mayor is here at hand. Intend some fear;
Be not you spoke with but by mighty suit:
And look you get a prayer-book in your hand,
And stand between two churchmen, good my
lord;
For on that ground I'll make a holy descant:
And be not easily won to our requests; [fit.
Play the maid's part,—still answer nay, and take
Glo. I go; and if you plead as well for them
As I can say nay to thee for myself,
No doubt we bring it to a happy issue.
Buck. Go, go, up to the leads; the lord mayor knocks. [Exit Gloster.

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord: I dance attendance here;
I think the duke will not be spoke withal.

Enter, from the Castle, Catesby.

Now, Catesby,—what says your lord to my request? [lord,
Cate. He doth entreat your grace, my noble
To visit him to-morrow or next day:
He is within, with two right reverend fathers,
Divinely bent to meditation:
And in no worldly suit would he be mov'd,
To draw him from his holy exercise. [duke;
Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious
Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen,
In deep designs, in matter of great moment,
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his grace.
Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight. [Exit.

Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward!
He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed,
But on his knees at meditation;
Not dallying with a brace of courtezans,
But meditating with two deep divines;
Not sleeping, to engross his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul:
Happy were England would this virtuous prince
Take on himself the sovereignty thereof:
But, sure, I fear, we shall not win him to it.
May. Marry, God defend his grace should say us nay! [again.
Buck. I fear he will. Here Catesby comes
Re-enter Catesby.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace?

Cate. He wonders to what end you have assembled
Such troops of citizens to come to him:
His grace not being warne'd thereof before,
He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should Suspect me, that I mean no good to him:
By heaven, we come to him in perfect love;
And so once more return and tell his grace.

[Exit Catesby.

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 'tis much to draw them thence,—
So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter Gloster, in a Gallery above, between two Bishops. CATESBY returns.

May. See, where his grace stands 'tween two clerks!

Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian
To stay him from the fall of vanity:
And, see, a book of prayer in his hand,—
True ornament to know a holy man.—
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince,
Lend favourable ear to our requests;
And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion and right Christian zeal.

Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology:
I rather do beseech you pardon me,
Who, earnest in the service of my God,
Deferr'd the visitation of my friends. [sure?
But, leaving this, what is your grace's plea-

Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above,
And all good men of this ungovern'd isle.

Glo. I do suspect I have done some offence
That seems disgraceful in the city's eye;
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord; would it might please your grace,
On our entreaties, to amend your fault!

Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian land?

Buck. Know, then, it is your fault that you
The supreme seat, the throne majestical,
The scepter'd office of your ancestors,
Your state of fortune and your due of birth,
The lineal glory of your royal house,
To the corruption of a blemish'd stock:
Whilst, in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts,—
Which here we wak'en to our country's good,—
This noble isle doth want her proper limbs;
Her face defac'd with scars of infamy,
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,
And almost shoulder'd in the swallowing gulf
Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion.
Which to recure, we heartily solicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charge
And kingly government of this your land;—
Not as protector, steward, substitute,
Or lowly factor for another's gain;
But as successively, from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery, your own
For this, consorted with the citizens
Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And, by their vehement instigation,
In this just suit come I to move your grace.

Glo. I cannot tell if to depart in silence
Or bitterly to speak in your reproof
Best fitteth my degree or your condition:
If not to answer, you might haply think
Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded
To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me;
If to reproove you for this suit of yours,
So s-son'd with your faithful love to me,
Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends.
Therefore,—to speak, and to avoid the first,
And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,— Definitively thus I answer you.
Your love deserves my thanks: but my desert
Unmeritable shuns your high request.
First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown,
As the ripe revenue and due of birth,
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty and so many my defects, [ness,
That I would rather hide me from my great-
Being a bark to brook no mighty sea,—
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.
But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me,—
And much I need to help you, were there need;—
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will well become the seat of majesty,
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.
On him I lay that you would lay on me,—
The right and fortune of his happy stars;
Which God defend that I should wring from him!

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your
But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,
All circumstances well considered.
You say that Edward is your brother's son:
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife;
For first was he contract to Lady Lucy;—
Your mother lives a witness to his vow;—
And afterward by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the King of France.
These both put off, a poor petitioner,
A care-craz'd mother to many sons,
A beauty-waning and distressed widow,
Even in the afternoon of her best days,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,
Seduc'd the pitch and height of his degree
To base declension and loath'd bigamy:
By her, in his unlawful bed, he got
This Edward, whom our manners call the prince.
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that, for reverence to some alive,
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This prof'er'd benefit of dignity;
If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing time
Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat
Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this prof'er'd love.

Cate. O, make them joyful, grant their lawful
Glo. Alas, why would you heap those cares on me?
I am unfit for state and majesty:
I do beseech you, take it not amiss;
I cannot nor I will not yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it,—as, in love and zeal,
Loth to depose the child, your brother's son—
As well we know your tenderness of heart,
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kindred,
And equally, indeed, to all estates,—
Yet know, whe'r you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king;
But we will plant some other in the throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house:
And in this resolution here we leave you.—
Come, citizens, we will entreat no more.

[Exeunt BUCK., the Mayor and Citizens retiring.

Cate. Call them again, sweet prince, accept their suit:
If you deny them, all the land will rue it.
Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares?
Call them again.

[Cate. goes to the Mayor, &c., and then exit.

I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreaties,
Albeit against my conscience and my soul.

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM and CATESBY, the Mayor, &c., coming forward.

Cousin of Buckingham,—and sage, grave men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, whe'r I will or no,
I must have patience to endure the load:
But if black scandal or foul-fac'd reproach
Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your mere enforcement shall acquaintance me
From all the impure blasts and stains thereof;
For God he knows, and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire of this. [say it.]
May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will
Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.
Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title,—

Long live King Richard, England's worthy king!
All. Amen.

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be
Glo. Even when you please, for you will have it so.
Buck. To-morrow, then, we will attend your grace:
And so, most joyfully, we take our leave.

Glo. Come, let us to our holy work again.—

[To the Bishops.

Farewell, my cousin;—farewell, gentle friends.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—LONDON. Before the Tower.

Enter, on one side, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DUCHESS OF YORK, and MARQUIS OF DORSET; on the other, ANNE DUCHESS OF GLOSTER, leading LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET, CLARENCE'S young Daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here?—my niece Plantagenet
Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloster?
Now, for my life, she's wandering to the Tower,
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender princes.—

Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your graces both
A happy and a joyful time of day! [away?
Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! Whither
Anne. No further than the Tower; and, as I guess,
Upon the like devotion as yourselves,
To gratulate the gentle princes there.
Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks: we'll enter all together:—

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes.

Enter BRAKENBURY.

Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,
How doth the prince, and my young son of York?
Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience,
I may not suffer you to visit them;
The king has strictly charg'd the contrary.
   Q. Eliz. The king! who's that?
Brak. I mean the lord protector.
   Q. Eliz. The lord protect him from that kingly title!
Hath he set bounds between their love and me?
I am their mother; who shall bar me from them?
   Duch. I am their father's mother; I will see
      them.
   Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their Then bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy blame,
And take thy office from thee, on my peril.
   Brak. No, madam, no.—I may not leave it so;
   I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.
   [Exit.

   Enter Stanley.

   Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour
   hence,
And I'll salute your grace of York as mother
And reverend looker-on of two fair queens.—
   Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster,
   [To the Duchess of Gloster.
There to be crowned Richard's royal queen.
   Q. Eliz. Ah, cut my lace asunder, [beat,
That my pent heart may have some scope to
Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news!
   Anne. Despiteful tidings! Unpleasing news!
   Dor. Be of good cheer: mother, how fare your grace? [gone!
   Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee
Death and destruction dog thee at the heels;
Thy mother's name is ominous to children.
   If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,
And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell:
   Go, hie thee, hie thee from this slaughter-house,
Lest thou increase the number of the dead;
And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,
Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.
   Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam,—
   Take all the swift advantage of the hours;
You shall have letters from me to my son
In your behalf, to meet you on the way:
   Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.
   Douch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery!—
   O my accursed womb, the bed of death!
A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world,
Whose unavowed eye is murderous. [sent.
   Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.—
   O, would to God that the inclusive verge
   Of golden metal that must round my brow
We e red-hot steel, to sear me to the brain!

   Anointed let me be with deadly venom,
   And die ere men can say God save the Queen?
   Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory;
To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm.
   Anne. No, why?—When he that is my husband now
   Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corpse;
   When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands
   Which issu'd from my other angel husband,
   And that dead saint which I weeping
follow'd;
   O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face,
This was my wish.—Be thou, quoth I, accurs'd
   For making me, so young, so old a widow!
   And when thou wed'st, let sorrow haunt thy
bed;
   And be thy wife,—if any be so mad,—
   More miserable by the life of thee [death!
Thou hast made me by my dear lord's
Lo, ere I can repeat this curse again,
   Within so small a time, my woman's heart
   Grossly grew captive to his honey words,
And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's
   curse,—
Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest;
   For never yet one hour in his bed
Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,
   But with his timorous dreams was still awk'd.
Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick;
And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.
   Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu! I pity thy complaining.
   Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours. [glory!
   Q. Eliz. Farewell, thou woeful welcomer of Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it!
   Douch. Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!— [To DORSET.
   Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!— [To ANNE.
   Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee! [To QUEEN ELIZABETH.
   I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me!
   Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,
   And each hour's joy wreek'd with a week of teen.
   Q. Eliz. Stay yet, look back with me unto the Tower.—
Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes,
   Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls!
   Rough cradle for such little pretty ones!
   Rude ragged nurse, old sullen playfellow
   For tender princes, use my babies well!
   So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.
   [Exit.
Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit:
Gold were as good as twenty orators,
And will, no doubt, tempt him to anything.
K. Rich. What is his name?
Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrel.
The deep-revolving witty Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsels:
Hath he so long held out with me un'til'd,
And stops he now for breath?—well, be it so.

Enter Stanley.
How now, Lord Stanley! what's the news?
Stan. Know, my loving lord,
The Marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled
To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.
K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad
That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;
I will take order for her keeping close.
Inquire me out some mean poor gentleman
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence' daughter;—
The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.—
Look, how thou dream'st!—I say again, give out
That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:
About it; for it stands me much upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me.
[Exit Catesby.
I must be married to my brother's daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass:—
Murder her brothers, and then marry her!
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in
So far in blood that sin will pluck on sin:
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.

Re-enter Page, with Tyrrel.
Is thy name Tyrrel? [subject.
Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient
K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?
Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.
K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine? [enemies.
Tyr. Please you. But I had rather kill two K. Rich. Why, then, thou hast it: two deep enemies,
Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers,
Are they that I would have thee deal upon:—
Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to
them,
And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.
K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrel:
Go, by this token:—rise, and lend thine ear: [Whispers.
There is no more but so:—say it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.
   Tyr. I will despatch it straight. [Exit.

Re-enter Buckingham.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind
The late demand that you did sound me in.
   K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.
Buck. I hear the news, my lord.
K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son:—
   well, look to it. [promise,
Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by
For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd;
The earldom of Hereford, and the movables,
Which you have promised I shall possess.
   K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife: if she convey
Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.
Buck. What says your highness to my just request?
   [Sixth
K. Rich. I do remember me,—Henry the
Did prophesy that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little peevish boy.
A king!—perhaps,—
Buck. My lord,—
K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not at that time
Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him?
Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom,— [Exeter,
K. Rich. Richmond!—When last I was at
The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,
And call'd it Rouge-mont: at which name I started,

Because a bard of Ireland told me once
I should not live long after I saw Richmond.
Buck. My lord,—
K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock? [mind
Buck. I am thus bold to put your grace in
Of what you promis'd me.
K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock?
Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.
K. Rich. Well, let it strike.
Buck. Why let it strike?
K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke
Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.
   I am not in the giving vein to-day. [or no.
Buck. Why, then resolve me whether you will
K. Rich. Thou troublest me; I am not in the Buck. And is it thus? repays he my deep service
With such contempt? made I him king for this?

O, let me think on Hastings, and be gone
To Brecknock while my fearful head is on! [Exit.

Scene III.—London. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Tyrrel.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done,—
The most arch deed of piteous massacre
That ever yet this land was guilty of.
Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery,
Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,
Melting with tenderness and mild compassion,
Wept like two children in their death's sad story.
O thus, quoth Dighton, lay the gentle babes.—
Thus, thus, quoth Forrest, girdling one another
Within their alabaster innocent arms:
Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,
Which in their summer beauty kiss'd each other.
   A book of prayers on their pillow lay;
   Which once, quoth Forrest, almost chang'd my mind;
But, O, the devil,—there the villain stopp'd;
When Dighton thus told on,—we smothered
The most replenished sweet work of nature
That from the prime creation e'er she fram'd.—
   Hence both are gone; with conscience and remorse
They could not speak; and so I left them both,
To bear this tidings to the bloody king:—
And here he comes:—

Enter King Richard.

All health, my sovereign lord!
K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy in thy news? [charge
Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in Beget your happiness, be happy then,
   For it is done.
K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?
Tyr. I did, my lord.
K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel?
Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried
   them;
But where, to say the truth, I do not know.
K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, at after supper,
When thou shalt tell the process of their death.
Meantime, but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.
Farewell till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.
K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I sent up close;
His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage;
The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom, And Anne my wife hath bid the world good-night.
Now, for I know the Bretagne Richmond aims At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter, And by that knot looks proudly on the crown, To her go I, a jolly warning wooer.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord,—
K. Rich. Good news or bad, that thou com'st in so bluntly?
Rat. Bad news, my lord: Morton is fled to And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welshmen,
Is in the field, and still his power increaseth.
K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength. Come,—I have learn'd that fearful commenting Is leaden servitor to dull delay; Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd beggary: Then fiery expedition be my wing, Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king! Go, muster men: my counsel is my shield; We must be brief when traitors brave the field. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. —LONDON. Before the Palace.

Enter Queen MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow, And drop into the rotten mouth of death. Here in these confines slyly have I lurk'd, To watch the waning of mine enemies. A dire induction am I witness to, And will to France: hoping the consequence Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical. — Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret: who comes here?

[Retires.

Enter Queen ELIZABETH and the DUCHESS of YORK.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor prince! ah, my tender babes! My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets! If yet your gentle souls fly in the air, And be not fix'd in doom perpetual, Hover about me with your airy wings, And hear your mother's lamentation! [right
Q. Mar. I hover about her; say, that right for Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.
Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice That my woe-wearyed tongue is still and mute.— Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?

Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God, fly from such gentle lambs, And throw them in the entails of the wolf? When didst thou sleep when such a deed was done? [sweet son.
Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal-living ghost, [usurp'd, Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life Brief abstract and record of tedious days, Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth, [Setting down.

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood!
Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou would'st as soon afford a grave As thou canst yield a melancholy seat! [here. Then would I hide my bones, not rest them Ah, who hath any cause to mourn but we?

[Setting down by her.

Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverent, Give me the benefit of seniory, [Coming forward.

And let my griefs frown on the upper hand. If sorrow can admit society, [Setting down with them.

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine:— I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; I had a Henry, till a Richard kill'd him: Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.
Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou dost kill him;
I had a Rutland too, thou holp'st to kill him.
From forth the enem of thy womb hath crept A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death:
That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes, To worry lambs and lap their gentle blood;
That foul defacer of God's handiwork;
That excellent grand tyrant of the earth,
That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,— Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.—

O upright, just, and true-disposing God, How do I thank thee that this carnal cur Preys on the issue of his mother's body, And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan! Duch. O Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes! God witness with me, I have wept for thine.
Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry for revenge, And now I cloy me with beholding it.
KING RICHARD III.

[ACT IV.

Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward; Thy other Edward dead to quit my Edward; Young York he is but boot, because both they Match not the high perfection of my loss: Thy Clarence he is dead that stabb'd my Edward;

And the beholders of this frantic play, Theadulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan, Grey, Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves. Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer; Only reserv'd their factor to buy souls, And send them thither:—but at hand, at hand, Ensues his pitcous and unpitied end:

Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray, To have him suddenly convey'd from hence.— Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray, That I may live to say, The dog is dead!

Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophesy the time would come That I should wish for thee to help me curse That bottled spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad! [my fortune; The flattering index of a direful pageant; One heav'd a-high, to be hurl'd down below; A mother only mock'd with two fair babes; A dream of what thou wast; a garish flag, To be the aim of every dangerous shot; A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble; A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.

Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers? Where be thy two sons? wherein dost thou joy? Who sues, and kneels, and says, God save the queen? Where be the bending peers that flatt'rd thee? Where be the thronging troops that follow'd thee? Decline all this, and see what now thou art: For happy wife, a most distressed widow; For joyful mother, one that wails the name; For one being su'd to, one that humbly sues; For queen, a very caiffiff crown'd with care; For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me; For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one; For one commanding all, obey'd of none. Thus hath the course of justice wheel'd about, And left thee but a very prey to time; Having no more but thought of what thou wast, To torture thee the more, being what thou art. Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow? Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke;

From which even here I slip my worned head, And leave the burden of it all on thee.

Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mischance:—[France.

These English woes shall make me smile in Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay awhile,

And teach me how to curse mine enemies! Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast the day;

Compare dead happiness with living woe; Think that thy babes were fairer than they were, And he that slew them fouler than he is: Bettering thy loss makes the bad-causer worse; Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My words are dull; O, quicken them with thine! Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine. [Exit. Duch. Why should calamity be full of words? Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes, Airy succeeders of intestine joys, Poor breathing orators of miseries! [part Let them have scope: though what they do im- Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart. Duch. If so, then be not tongue-tied: go with me, And in the breath of bitter words let 's smother My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd. [Drum within.

I hear his drum:—be copious in exclams.

Enter King Richard and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition? [thee, Duch. O, she that might have intercepted By strangling thee in her accursed womb, From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done!

Q. Eliz. Hidst thou that forehead with a golden crown, [right, Where should be branded, if that right were The slaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown, And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers? Tell me, thou villain-slave, where are my chil- DUCH. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy DUCH. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy DUCH. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence? And little Ned Plantagenet, his son? [Grey? Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, DUCH. Where is kind Hastings? K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! strike alarum, drums! Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women Rail on the Lord's anointed: strike, I say! [Flourish. Alarums.

Either be patient, and entreat me fair, Or with the clamorous report of war Thus will I drown your exclamations.
Duch. Art thou my son?
K. Rich. Ay, I thank God, my father, and yourself.
Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.
K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,
That cannot brook the accent of reprooof.
Duch. O, let me speak!
K. Rich. Do, then; but I'll not hear.
Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.
K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste.
Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have stay'd for thee,
God knows, in torment and in agony.
K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?
[well]
Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it
Thou can'st on earth to make the earth my hell.
A grievous burden was thy birth to me;
Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy;
Thy school-days frightful, desperate, wild, and furious;
Thy prime of manhood daring, bold, and ven-Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody;
[hatred:
More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in
What comfortable hour canst thou name
That ever grace'd me in thy company?
K. Rich. Faith, none but Humphrey Hour, that call'd your grace
To breakfast once forth of my company,
If I be so disgraceful in your eye,
Let me march on and not offend you, madam.—
Strike up the drum.
Duch. I pr'ythee, hear me speak.
Duch. Hear me a word;
For I shall never speak to thee again.
Duch. Either thou wilt die by God's just or-
Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror;
Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish,
And never look upon thy face again.
Therefore take with thee my most heavy curse;
Which in the day of battle tire thee more
Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!
My prayers on the adverse party fight;
And there the little souls of Edward's children
Whisper the spirits of thine enemies,
And promise them success and victory.
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;
Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend.

K. Rich. Stay, madam, I must talk a word with you.
Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood
For thee to slaughter: for my daughters,
Richard,—
They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;
And therefore level not to hit their lives.
K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth,
Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.
Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O, let her live,
And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;
Slander myself as false to Edward's bed;
Throw over her the veil of infancy:
So she may live unsaw'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.
K. Rich. Wrong not her birth; she is of royal blood.
Q. Eliz. To save her life I'll say she is not so.
K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.
Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were Q. Eliz. No, to their lives bad friends were contrary.
K. Rich. All unawed is the doom of destiny.
Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny:
My babes were destined to a fairer death
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.
K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins.
[cozen'd
Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle
Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life.
Whose hand soever lanc'd their tender hearts,
Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction:
No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt
Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,
To revel in the entrails of my lambs.
But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys
Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;
And I, in such a desperate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling rent,
Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.
K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise
And dangerous success of bloody wars,
As I intend more good to you and yours
Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd!
Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,
To be discover'd, that can do me good?
K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle lady. [their heads?
Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose K. Rich. No, to the dignity and height of honour,
The high imperial type of this earth's glory.
Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrows with report of it;
Tell me what state, what dignity, what honour,
Canst thou demine to any child of mine? [all K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and Will I withal endow a child of thine;
So in the Lethe of thy angry soul [wrongs
Thou drown the sad remembrance of those Which thou supposes I have done to thee.
Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness
Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.
K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter.
Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with
K. Rich. What do you think?
Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul: [brothers;
So from thy soul's love didst thou love her
And from my heart's love do I thank thee for it.
K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning:
I mean that with my soul I love thy daughter,
And do intend to make her Queen of England.
Q. Eliz. Well, then, who dost thou mean shall be her king?
K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen:
who else should be?
Q. Eliz. What, thou? [madam?
K. Rich. I, even I: what think you of it,
Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?
K. Rich. That I would learn of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humour.
Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?
K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.
Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers,
A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave
Edward and York; then haply will she weep:
Therefore present to her,—assometime Margaret
Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,—
A handkerchief; which, say to her, did drain
The purple sap from her sweet brothers' bodies,
And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal.
If this inducement move her not to love,
Send her a letter of thy noble deeds;
Tell her thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence,
Her uncle Rivers; ay, and for her sake
Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne.
K. Rich. You mock me, madam; this is not
To win your daughter.
Q. Eliz. There is no other way;
Unless thou couldst put on some other shape,
And not be Richard that hath done all this.
That God, the law, my honour, and her love
Can make seem pleasing to her tender years?

K. Rich. Infer fair England’s peace by this alliance.

Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with still-lasting war.

K. Rich. Tell her the king, that may command.

Q. Eliz. That at her hands which the king’s

K. Rich. Say she shall be a high and mighty

Q. Eliz. To wait the title, as her mother doth.

K. Rich. Say I will love her everlastingly.

Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title, ever, last?

Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet

K. Rich. As long as heaven and nature

Q. Eliz. As long as hell and Richard likes of

K. Rich. Say I, her sovereign, am her subject low.

Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loathes such

K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.

Q. Eliz. An honest tale speed best being

K. Rich. Then, plainly to her tell my loving

Q. Eliz. Plain and not honest is too harsh a style.

K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and

Q. Eliz. O, no, my reasons are too deep and

K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam;

Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I till heart-

K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter,

Q. Eliz. Profan’d, dishonour’d, and the third

K. Rich. I swear,

Q. Eliz. By nothing; for this is no oath;

K. Rich. Then, by myself,—

Q. Eliz. Thyself is self-misus’d.

K. Rich. Why, then, by God,—

Q. Eliz. God’s wrong is most of all,

If thou hadst fear’d to break an oath by him,
Then the king thy brother made
Had not been broken, nor my brother slain;
If thou hadst fear’d to break an oath by him,
The imperial metal, circling now thy head,
Had grac’d the tender temples of my child;
And both the princes had been breathing here,
Which now, two tender bedfellows for dust.
Thy broken faith hath made a prey for worms.
What canst thou swear by now?

K. Rich. The time to come.

Q. Eliz. That thou hast wrong’d in the time

K. Rich. As I intend to prosper and

So strive I in my dangerous attempt
Of hostile arms! myself myself confound!
Heaven and fortune bar me happy hours!
Day, yield me not by light; nor, night, thy rest!
Be opposite all planets of good luck
To my proceeding!—if, with pure heart’s love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter!
In her consists my happiness and shine;
Without her, follows to myself and thee,
Herself, the land, and many a Christian soul,
To me proceeding!—if, with pure heart’s love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter!
In her consists my happiness and shine;
Without her, follows to myself and thee,
Herself, the land, and many a Christian soul,
Death, desolation, ruin, and decay:
It cannot be avoided but by this;
It will not be avoided but by this.
Therefore, dear mother,—I must call you so,—
Be the attorney of my love to her:
Plead what I will be, not what I have been;
Not my deserts, but what I will deserve:
Urge the necessity and state of times,
And be not peevish found in great designs.

Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus?

K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt you to do

Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself to be myself?

K. Rich. Ay, if your self’s remembrance

K. Rich. But in your daughter’s womb I

Where, in that nest of spicery, they shall breed
Selves of themselves, to your reconforture.
Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will?
K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.
Q. Eliz. I go.—Write to me very shortly,
And you shall understand from me her mind.
K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss; and so, farewell.

[Kissing her. Exit Q. Eliz.
Relenting fool, and shallow changing woman!

Enter Ratcliff; Catesby following.

How now! what news?
Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast
Rideth a puissant navy; to the shore
Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back:
'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral;
And there they hurl, expecting but the aid
Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore.
K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk:—
Ratcliff, thyself,—or Catesby; where is he?
Cate. Here, my good lord.
K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the duke.
Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste.
K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither:—post to Salisbury:
When thou com'st thither,—Dull, unmindful villain,
[To CATESBY.
Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke?
Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure,
What from your grace I shall deliver to him.
K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby:—bid him levy straight
The greatest strength and power he can make
And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.
Cate. I go.
[Exit.
Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury?
K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there before I go?
Rat. Your highness told me I should post before.

Enter Stanley.

K. Rich. My mind is chang'd.—Stanley, what news with you?
Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing;
Nor none so bad but well may be reported.
K. Rich. Hoyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad!
What need'st thou run so many miles about,
When thou must tell thy tale the nearest way?
Once more, what news?
Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him!
White-liver'd runagate, what doth he there?
Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.
K. Rich. Well, as you guess?
Stan. Stirr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton,
He makes for England here, to claim the crown.
K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the sword unsway'd?
Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd?
What heir of York is there alive but we?
And who is England's king but great York's heir?
Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?
Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.
K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your
liege,
[comes.
You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman
Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.
Stan. No, mighty liege; therefore mistrust me not.
K. Rich. Where is thy power, then, to beat him back?
Where be thy tenants and thy followers?
Are they not now upon the western shore,
Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?
Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.
K. Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they
in the north, [west?
When they should serve their sovereign in the Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty king:
Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave,
I'll muster up my friends, and meet your grace
Where and what time your majesty shall please.
K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond;
But I'll not trust thee.
Stan. Most mighty sovereign,
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful:
I never was nor never will be false.
K. Rich. Go, then, and muster men. But leave behind
[be firm.
Your son, George Stanley: look your heart
Or else his head's assurance is but frail.
Stan. So deal with him as I prove true to you.
[Exit.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,
As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother,
With many more confederates, are in arms.

Enter a second Messenger.

2 Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guilfords
And every hour more competitors [strong.
Flock to the rebels, and their power grows

Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham,— K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death? [He strikes him.
There, take thou that till thou bring better news.
3 Mess. The news I have to tell your majesty
Is, that by sudden floods and fall of waters,
Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd:
And he himself wander'd away alone,
No man knows whither.
K. Rich. I cry you mercy:
There is my purse to cure that blow of thine.
Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd
Reward to him that brings the traitor in?
3 Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

Enter a fourth Messenger.

4 Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel and Lord Marquis
Dorset,
'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms.
But this good comfort bring I to your highness,—
The Bretagne navy is dispers'd by tempest:
Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat
Unto the shore, to ask those on the banks
If they were his assistants, yea or no;
Who answer'd him they came from Buckingham
Upon his party; he, mistrusting them,
Hois'd sail, and made his course again for Bretagne.
K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up
If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Cate. My liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken,— [mord.
That is the best news: that the Earl of Rich-
Is with a mighty power landed at Milford
Is colder news, but yet they must be told.
K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury! while we reason here
A royal battle might be won and lost:—
Some one take order Buckingham be brought To Salisbury; the rest march on with me.
[Flourish. Exeunt.

Scene V.—A Room in Lord Stanley's
House.

Enter STANLEY and Sir Christopher URSWICK.

Stan. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me:—
That in the sty of the most deadly hour
My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold:
If I revolt, off goes young George's head;
The fear of that holds off my present aid.
So, get thee gone: commend me to thy lord;
Withal say that the queen hath heartily consented
He should espouse Elizabeth her daughter.
But tell me, where is princely Richmond now?
Chris. At Pembroke, or at Harfurd-west, in Wales.
Stan. What men of name resort to him?
Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier;
Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley;
Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew;
And many other of great name and worth:
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withal. [hand;
Stan. Well, hie thee to thy lord; I kiss his
These letters will resolve him of my mind.
Farewell. [Gives papers to Sir Chris.
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

Scene I.—Salisbury. An open place.

Enter the Sheriff and Guard, with Buckingham, led to execution.

Buck. Will not King Richard let me speak
with him?
Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient.
Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children, Grey, and Rivers,
Holy King Henry, and thy fair son Edward,
Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By underhand corrupted foul injustice,—
If that your moody discontented souls
Do through the clouds behold this present hour,
Even for revenge mock my destruction!—
This is All-Souls' day, fellows, is it not?
Sher. It is, my lord.
Buck. Why, then, All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday,
This is the day which in King Edward's time
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
False to his children or his wife's allies;
This is the day wherein I wish'd to fall
By the false faith of him whom most I trusted;
This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul
Is the determin'd respite of my wro't:
That high All-Seer which I dallied with Hath turn'd my feigned prayer on my head,
And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest.
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turn their own points on their masters' bosoms:
Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck,
When he, quoth she, shall split thy heart with sorrow,
Remember Margaret was a prophetess.—
Come, sirs, convey me to the block of shame:
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame.
[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—Plain near Tamworth.

Enter, with drum and colours, Richmond, Oxford, Sir James Blunt, Sir Walter Herbert, and others, with Forces, marching.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,
Burst'd underneath the yoke of tyranny,
Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we march'd on without impediment;
And here receive we from our father Stanley
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.
The wretched, bloody, and usurping bear,
That spoil'd your summer fields and fruitful vines,
Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough
In your embowell'd bosoms,—this foul swine
Lies now even in the centre of this isle,
Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn:
From Tamworth thether is but one day's march.
In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
By this one bloody trial of sharp war.

Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand swords,
To fight against that bloody homicide.

Herb. I doubt not but his friends will turn to us.

Blunt. He hath no friends but what are friends for fear,
Which in his dearest need will fly from him.

Richm. All for our vantage. Then, in God's name, march:
True hope is swift, and flies with swallows' wings;
Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings.
[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—Bosworth Field.

Enter King Richard and Forces; the Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Surrey, and others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tents, even here in Bosworth field.—

My Lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?

Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My Lord of Norfolk,—

Nor. Here, most gracious liege.

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knockes; ha! must we not?  [lord.

Nor. We must both give and take, my loving
K. Rich. Up with my tent! Here will I lie to-night;

[Soldiers begin to set up the King's tent.
But where to-morrow? Well, all's one for that.—

Who hath described the number of the traitors?

Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.

K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that ace—

Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength,

Which they upon the adverse faction want.—

Up with the tent!—Come, noble gentlemen,

Let us survey the vantage of the ground;—

Call for some men of sound direction:—

Let's lack no discipline, make no delay;

For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day.

[Exeunt.]

Enter, on the other side of the Field, Richmond, Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and other Lords. Some of the Soldiers pitch Richmond's tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And by the bright track of his fiery car
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.—

Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.—

Give me some ink and paper in my tent:
I'll draw the form and model of our battle,
Limit each leader to his several charge,
And part in just proportion our small power.—

My Lord of Oxford,—you, Sir William Brandon,—

And you, Sir Walter Herbert,—stay with me.—

The Earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment:—

Good Captain Blunt, bear my good-night to him,
And by the second hour in the morning

Desire the earl to see me in my tent:
Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me,—

Where is Lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?

Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours much,—
K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.
Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my tent
And help to arm me. Leave me, I say.
[K. Rich. retires into his tent.
Exeunt Ratcliff and Catesby.

RICHMOND'S tent opens, and discovers him and his Officers, &c.

Enter STANLEY.
Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!
Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford
Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!
Tell me, how fares our loving mother?
Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother,
Who prays continually for Richmond's good:
So much for that.—The silent hours steal on,
And flaky darkness breaks within the east.
In brief,—for so the season bids us be,— Prepare thy battle early in the morning,
And put thy fortune to the arbitrement of bloody strokes and mortal-starring war.
I, as I may,—that which I would I cannot,—
With best advantage will deceive the time,
And aid thee in this doubtful stroke of arms:
But on thy side I may not be too forward,
Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George,
Be executed in his father's sight.
Farewell: the leisure and the fearful time
Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love
And ample interchange of sweet discourse,
Which so-long-sunder'd friends should dwell
on:
God give us leisure for these rites of love!
Once more, adieu: be valiant, and speed well!
Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment:
I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap,
Lest lenient slumber peise me down to-morrow,
When I should mount with wings of victory:
Once more, good-night, kind lords and gentlemen.
[Exeunt Lords, &c. with STAN.
O Thou whose captain I account myself,
Look on my forces with a gracious eye;
Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
That they may crush down with a heavy fall
The usurping helmets of our adversaries!
Make us thy ministers of chastisement,
That we may praise thee in thy victory!
To thee I do commend my watchful soul
Este I let fall the windows of mine eyes:
Sleeping and waking, O, defend me still!
[Sleeps.

Enter, to his tent, KING RICHARD, NORFOLK,
KATCLIFF, and CATESBY.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?
Cate. It's sapper-time, my lord;
It's six o'clock.
K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.—
Give me some ink and paper.—
What, is my beaver easier than it was?
And all my armour laid into my tent?
Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness.
K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge—
Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.
Nor. I go, my lord.
K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.
Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.
K. Rich. Ratcliff,—
Rat. My lord?
K. Rich. Send out a pursuing-at-arms
To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power
Before sunrising, lest his son George fall
Into the blind cave of eternal night.—
Fill me a bowl of wine.—Give me a watch.—
Saddle white Surrey to the field to-morrow.
Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.— Ratcliff,—
Rat. My lord?
K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy Lord Northumberland?
Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey and himself,
Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop
Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.
K. Rich. So, I am satisfied.—Give me a bowl of wine:
I have not that alacrity of spirit
Nor cheer of mind that I was wont to have.
Set it down.—Is ink and paper ready?
Rat. It is, my lord.
The Ghost of Prince Edward, son to Henry the Sixth, rises between the two tents.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! [To King Richard.

Think how thou stabb'dst me in my prime of youth
At Tewksbury: despair, therefore, and die!—
Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged soul
Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:
King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

The Ghost of King Henry the Sixth rises.

Ghost. When I was mortal, my anointed body
By thee was punct'd full of deadly holes:
Think on the Tower and me: despair, and die!—
Harry the Sixth bids thee despair and die!—
Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

[To Richard.

Harry, that prophesied thou shouldst be king,
Dost comfort thee in sleep: live, and flourish!

The Ghost of Clarence rises.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! [To King Richard.

I, that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,
Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death!
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!
Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep:

[To Richard.

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee:
Good angels guard thy battle: live, and flourish!

The Ghosts of Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan rise.

G. of R. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow, [To Richard.

Rivers, that died at Pomfret! despair, and die!
G. of G. Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair!
G. of V. Think upon Vaughan, and, with guilty fear,

Let fall thy lance: despair, and die!—

[To Richard.

All Three. Awake, and think our wrongs in Richard's bosom [To Richard.

Will conquer him!—awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of Hastings rises.

Ghost. Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake,

[To Richard.

And in a bloody battle end thy days!
Think on Lord Hastings: despair, and die!—
Quiet untroubled soul, awake, awake!

[To Richard.

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake!

The Ghosts of the two young Princes rise.

Ghost. Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower:
Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!
Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair and die!—
Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy;
Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!
Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

The Ghost of Queen Anne rises.

Ghost. Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife,
That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations:
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!—
Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep:

[To Richard.

Dream of success and happy victory:
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of Buckingham rises.

Ghost. The first was I that help'd thee to the crown; [To King Richard.

The last was I that felt thy tyranny:
O, in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness!
Dream on, dream on of bloody deeds and death:
Fainting, despairing, yield thy breath!
I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid:

[To Richard.

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
God and good angels fight on Richmond's side;
And Richard falls in height of all his pride.

[The Ghosts vanish. K. Rich. starts out of his dream.

K. Rich. Give me another horse,—bind up my wounds,—
Have mercy, Jesu!—Soft! I did but dream.—
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!—
The lights burn blue.—It is now dead midnight;
Cold fearful d.ops stand on my trembling flesh.
What, do I fear myself? there's none else by;
Richmond loves Richard: that is, I am I.
Is there a murderer here? No;—yes; I am I:
Then fly. What, from myself? Great reason why,——
Lest I revenge. What,—myself upon myself!
Alack, I love myself. Wherefore? for anygood
That I myself have done unto myself?
O, no! alas, I rather hate myself
For hateful deeds committed by myself!
I am a villain: yet I lie, I am not.
KING RICHARD III.

SCENE III.

Fool, of thyself speak well:—fool, do not flatter. My conscience hath a thousand several tongues, And every tongue brings in a several tale, And every tale condemns me for a villain. Perjury, perjury, in the highest degree; Murder, stern murder, in the direst degree; All several sins, all us'd in each degree, Throng to the bar, crying all, Guilty! guilty! I shall despair. There is no creature loves me; And if I die no soul shall pity me: Nay, wherefore should they,—since that I myself Find in myself no pity to myself? Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd Came to my tent; and every one did threat To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliff.

Rat. My lord,—
Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early Hath twice done salutation to the morn;
Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour.
K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fearful dream!—[true?
What thinkest thou,—will our friends prove all Rat. No doubt, my lord.
K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I fear, I fear,—
Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows. [night
K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to—
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers
Armed in proof and led by shalow Richmond.
It is not yet near day. Come, go with me;
Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,
To hear if any mean to shrink from me.

[Exeunt K. Rich. and Ratcliff.

RICHMOND wakes. Enter Oxford and others.

Lords. Good-morrow, Richmond! [men,
Richn. Cry mercy, lords and watchful gentle-
That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here.
Lords. How have you slept, my lord?
Richn. The sweetest sleep and fairest-boding dreams
That ever enter'd in a drowsy head
Have I since your departure had, my lords.
Methought their souls whose bodies Richard murder'd
Came to my tent, and cried on victory:
I promise you, my heart is very jocund
In the remembrance of so fair a dream.
How far into the morning is it, lords?
Lords. Upon the stroke of four.
Richn. Why, then, 'tis time to arm and give direction.—

[He advances to the Troops.
KING RICHARD III.

[Act V.

Enter Norfolk.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord; the foe vaunts in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle; caparison my horse—

[Enter a Messenger.

What says Lord Stanley? will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.

K. Rich. Off with his son George's head!

Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass'd the marsh:

After the battle let George Stanley die.

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom:

Advance our standards, set upon our foes;

Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,

Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons!

Upon them! Victory sits on our helms.

Scene IV.—Another part of the Field.

Alarum: excursions. Enter Norfolk and Forces; to him Catesby.

Cate. Rescue, my Lord of Norfolk, rescue, rescue!

The king enacts more wonders than a man,

Daring an opposite to every danger:

His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,

Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death.

Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarum. Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate. Withdraw, my lord; I'll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a cast,

And I will stand the hazard of the die:

I think there he sixRichmonds in the field;

Five have I slain to-day instead of him—

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

[Exit.
SCENE V.—Another part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter, from opposite sides, Richard and Richmond; and exent fighting. Retreat, and flourish. Then re-enter Richmond, with Stanley bearing the crown, and divers other Lords and Forces.

Richm. God and your arms be prais'd, victorious friends; The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.

Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquitted thee! Lo, here, this long-usurped royalty From the dead temples of this bloody wretch Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal: Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say Amen to all!— But, tell me, is young George Stanley living? Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town, [us. Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord Ferrers, [don. Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Bran- Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births: Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled That in submission will return to us:

And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament, We will unite the white rose and the red:— Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction, That long hath frowned upon their enmity! What traitor hears me, and says not Amen? England hath long been mad, and scar'd herself; The brother blindly shed the brother's blood, The father rashly slaughter'd his own son, The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire: All this divided York and Lancaster, Divided in their dire division,— O, now let Richmond and Elizabeth, The true succeeders of each royal house, By God's fair ordinance conjoin together! And let their heirs,—God, if thy will be so,— Enrich the time to come with smooth'd-fac'd peace, With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days! Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord, That would reduce these bloody days again, And make poor England weep in streams of blood! Let them not live to taste this land's increase That would with treason wound this fair land's peace! Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again: That she may long live here, God say Amen! [Exeunt.

PROLOGUE.

I come no more to make you laugh: things now
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too. Those that come to see
Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I’ll undertake may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they
That come to hear a merry bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat guarded with yellow,
Will be deceiv’d; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
To make that only true we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness’ sake, and as you are known
The first and 1. ppiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would m ye: think ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living; think you see them great,
And follow’d with the general throng and sweat
Of thousand friends; then, in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery:
And if you can be merry then I’ll say
A man may weep upon his wedding-day.

ACT I.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk at one door; at the other, the Duke of Buckingham and the Lord Abergavenny.

Buck. Good-morrow, and well met. How have you done
Since last we saw in France?
SCENE I.]

KING HENRY VIII.

Nor. I thank your grace, Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when
Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde:
I was then present, saw them salute on horse-back;
Beheld them, when they lighted, how they
In their embracement, as they grew together;
Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd
Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the whole time
I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory: men might say,
Till this time pomp was single, but now married
To one above itself. Each following day
Became the next day's master, till the last
Made former wonders it's: to-day the French,
All clinquant, all in gold, like heathen gods,
Shone down the English; and to-morrow they Made Britain India: every man that stood Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
As cherubims, all gilt: the madams too,
Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear
The pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them as a painting; now this masque
Was cried incomparable; and the ensuing night
Made it a fool and beggar. The two kings,
Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
As presence did present them; him in eye,
Still him in praise: and, being present both,
'Twas said they saw but one; and no discerner Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns,—
For so they phrase 'em,—by their heralds chal-
The noble spirits to arms, they did perform
Beyond thought's compass: that former fabulous story,

Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
That Bevis was believ'd.

Buck. O, you go far.

Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
In honour honesty, the tract of everything
Would by a good discourser lose some life,
Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal;
To the disposing of it naught rebell'd,
Order gave each thing view; the office did
Distinctly his full function.

Buck. Who did guide—
I mean, who set the body and the limbs
Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Nor. One, certes, that promises no element
In such a business.

Buck. I pray you, who, my lord?

Nor. All this was order'd by the good discretion
Of the right reverend Cardinal of York. [Sung Buck. The devil speed him! no man's pie is
From his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder
That such a seech can with his very bulk
Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun,
And keep it from the earth.

Nor. Surely, sir,
There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends; [Sung
For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose Chalks successors their way; nor call'd upon
For high feats done to the crown; neither allied
To eminent assistants; but, spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note
The force of his own merit makes his way;
A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
A place next to the king.

Aber. I cannot tell What heaven hath given him,—let some graver
eye
Pierce into that; but I can see his pride Peep through each part of him: whence has he
that?
If not from hell, the devil is a niggard;
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buck. Why the devil,
Upon this French going-out, took he upon him,
Without the privity o' the king, to appoint Who should attend on him? He makes up the file
Of all the gentry; for the most part such
To whom as great a charge as little honour
He meant to lay upon: and his own letter,
The honourable board of council out,
Must fetch him in the papers.

Aber. I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have by this so sicken'd their estates that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buck. O, many 'em
Have broke their backs with laying manors on
For this great journey. What did this vanity
But minister communication of
A most poor issue?

Nor. Grievingly I think,
The peace between the French and us not values
The cost that did conclude it.

Buck. Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy,—That this tempest,
Dashing the garment of this peace, abode
The sudden breach on't.

Nor. Which is budded out;
For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd
Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

Aber. Is it therefore
The ambassador is silenc'd?

Nor. Marry, is 't.

Aber. A proper title of a peace; and purchas'd

At a superfluous rate!

Buck. Why, all this business
Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor. Like it your grace,
The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you,—
And take it from a heart that wishes towards you Honour and plentiful safety,—that you read
The cardinal's malice and his potency Together: to consider further, that What his high hatred would effect wants not
A minister in his power. You know his nature,
That he's revengeful; and I know his sword
Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and, 'tmay be said,
It reaches far; and where 'twill not end,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel,
You'll find it wholesome.—Lo, where comes
That I advise you shunning.

Enter Cardinal Wolsey, the purse borne before him, certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The Cardinal in his passage fix'd his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor?
ha?

Where's his examination?

I Secr. Here, so please you.

Wol. Is he in person ready?

I Secr. Ay, please your grace,

Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and

Buckingham
Shall lessen this big look.

[Exeunt Wolsey and Train.

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I

I have not the power to muzzle him; therefore Not wake him in his shimer. A beggar's book
Outworths a noble's blood.

Nor. What, are you chaf'd?
Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only
Which your disease requires.

Buck. I read in 's looks

Matter against me; and his eye revil'd
Me, as his object: at this instant [king;
He bores me with some trick: he's gone to the
I'll follow, and outstare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord,
And let your reason with your choler question
What 'tis you go about: to climb steep hills
Requires slow pace at first: anger is like
A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: be to yourself
As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king;
And from a mouth of honour quite cry down
This Ipswich fellow's insolence; or proclaim
There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd;
I heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself: we may outrun,
By violent swiftness, that which we run at,
And lose by over-running. Know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor till 't run o'er,
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advis'd;
I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself,
If with the sap of reason you would quench
Or but allay the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir,
I am thankful to you; and I'll go along
By your prescription: but this top-proud fellow, Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but
From sincere motions,—by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravel, I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not treasonous.

Buck. To the king I'll say 't; and make my vouch as strong
As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox,
Or wolf, or both,—for he is equal ravenous
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief
As able to perform; his mind and place
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally,—
Only to show his pomp as well in France
As here at home, suggests the king our master
To this last costly treaty, the interview,
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break i' the rinsing.

Nor. Faith, and so it did.

Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal
The articles o' the combination drew
As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified
As he cried, Thus let be: to as much end
As give a crutch to the dead: but our count-
cardinal
Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey,
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,—
Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
To the old dam treason,—Charles the emperor,
Under pretence to see the queen his aunt,—
For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came
To whisper Wolsey,—here makes visitation:
His fears were that the interview betwixt
England and France might, through their amity,
Breed him some prejudice; for from this league
Peep'd harms that menace'd him: he privately
Deals with our cardinal; and, as I row,—
Which I do well; for I am sure the emperor
Paid ere he promis'd; whereby his suit was granted
Ere it was ask'd;—but when the way was made,
And pav'd with gold, the emperor thus desir'd,—
That he would please to alter the king's course.
And break the foresaid peace. Let the king

As soon he shall by me,—that thus the cardinal
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him; and might wish he were Something mistaken in't.

Buck. No, not a syllable:
I do pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.

Enter Brandon, a Sergeant-at-Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it.

Serg. Sir,
My lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I
Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo, you, my lord,
The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish
Under device and practice.

Bran. I am sorry
To see you taken from liberty, to look on
The business present: 'tis his highness' pleasure
You shall to the Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocence; for that dye is on me Which makes my whit's part black. The will of heaven
Be done in this and all things!—I obey.—
O my Lord Abercawny, fare you well!

Bran. Nay, he must bear you company.—

The king [To ABERCAVNY.
Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know
How he determines further.

Aber. As the duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure
By me obey'd!

Bran. Here is a warrant from The king to attach Lord Montacute; and the bodies
Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—

Buck. So, so;
These are the limbs of the plot:—no more, I hope.

Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux.

Buck. O, Nicholas Hopkins?

Bran. He.

Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great cardinal
[ready:
Hath show'd him gold; my life is spann'd al-
I am the shadow of poor Buckingham,
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on,
By darkening my clear sun.—My lord, farewell. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—London. The Council Chamber.

Cornets. Enter King Henry, Cardinal
Wolsey, the Lords of the Council, Sir
Thomas Lovell, Officers, and Attendants.
The King enters, leaning on the Cardinal's shoulder.

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of
it,
Thanks you for this great care: I stood i' the
Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks
To you that choked it.—Let be call'd before us
That gentleman of Buckingham's: in person
I'll hear him his confessions justify;
And point by point the treasons of his master
He shall again relate.

[The King takes his state. The Lords of the Council take their several places. The Cardinal places himself under the King's feet, on his right side.

A noise within, crying, "Room for the Queen!" Enter Queen Katharine, ushered by the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk: she kneels. The King riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses, and places her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us:—half
Never name to us; you have half our power:
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given;
Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty.
That you would love yourself, and in that love
Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition.
K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance: there have been commissions
Sent down among 'em which have flaw'd the
heart
Of all their loyalties:—wherein, although,
My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as puer'ter-on
Of these exactions, yet the king our master, — Whose honour Heaven shield from soil!—even ehe escapes not
Language unmann'rly, yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears
In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears,—
It doth appear; for, upon these taxation,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them 'longing, have put off
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner
Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar,
And danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation!
Wherein? and what taxation?—My lord cardinal,
You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir,
I know but of a single part, in aught
Pertains to the state; and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord,
You know no more than others; but you frame Things that are known alike; which are not wholesome
To those which would not know them, and yet
Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions, Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are Most pestilent to the hearing; and to bear 'em
The back is sacrifice to the load. They say
They are devis'd by you; or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction!
The nature of it? in what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd
Under your promis'd pardon. The subjects' grief
Comes through commissions, which compel
From each
The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this Is nam'd your wars in France: this makes bold mouths;

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegiance in them; their curses now
Live where their prayers did: and it's come to pass
This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensed will. I would your highness Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer business.

K. Hen. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me,
I have no further gone in this than by
A single voice; and that not pass'd me but
By learned approbation of the judges. If I am Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither know
My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing,—let me say
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. We must not stint
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By not interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft Hit'ting a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
State-statues only.

K. Hen. Things done well
And with a care exempt themselves from fear;
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A trembling contribution! Why, we take
From every tree lop, bark, and part of the timber;
And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,
The air will drink the sap. To every county
Where this is question'd send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force of this commission: pray, look to't;
I put it to your care.

Wol. A word with you.

[To the Secretary.

Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons
Hardly conceive of me; let it be nois'd
That through our intercession this revokement
And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you
Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.
Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker;
To nature none more bound; his training such
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet see,
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete, [we,
Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when Almost with ravish'd listening, could not find
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black
As if besmeard in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear
This was his gentleman in trust, —of him
Things to strike honour sad. —Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices; whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth, and with bold spirit relate what you,
Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely.

Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech,—that if the king
Should without issue die, he'll carry it so
To make the sceptre his: these very words
I have heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Abergavenny; to whom by oath he menaced
Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not friendly by his wish, to your high person.
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on:
How grounded he his title to the crown
Upon our fall? to this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?

Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor; who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou this?

Surv. Not long before your highness sped to France,
The Duke being at the Rose, within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poulney, did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners
Concerning the French journey: I replied,
Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger. Presently the duke
Said, 'twas the fear, indeed; and that he doubted
'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk; That off, says he,
Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after under the confession's seal
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke
My chaplain to no creature living but
To me should utter, with demure confidence
This pausingly ens'd.—Neither the king nor's
heirs,
Tell you the duke, shall prosper: bid him strive
To gain the love of the commonalty: the duke
Shall govern England.

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office
On the complaint of the tenants: take good heed
You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul: I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on:—

Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions
The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 'twas dangerous for him
To ruminate on this so far, until
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
It was much like to do: he answer'd, Tush,
It can do me no damage; adding further,
That, had the king in his last sickness fail'd,
The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Ha! what, so rank? Ah-ha!
There's mischief in this man:—Canst thou say further?

Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Greenwich,
After your highness had reprov'd the duke
About Sir William Biomer,—

K. Hen. I remember
Of such a time:—being my sworn servant,
The duke retain'd him his. But on; what hence?
Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.
How now?

What news, Sir Thomas Lovell?

Lov. 'Faith, my lord, I hear of none, but the new proclamation
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What's it for?

Lov. The reformation of our travell'd gallants,
That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors.

Cham. I am glad 'tis there: now I would pray our monsieurs
To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either—
For so run the conditions—leave those remnants
Of fool and feather that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance
Pertaining thereunto,—as fights and fireworks;
Abusing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom,—renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings,
Short blister'd breeches, and those types of travel,
And understand again, like honest men;
Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take it,
They may, cum privilegio, wear away
The lag end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at.

Sands. 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases
Are grown so catching.

Cham. What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov. Ay, marry, there will be woe indeed, lords: the sly whoresons
Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;
A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.

Sands. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they're going,—
For, sure, there's no converting of 'em:—now
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song,
And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r Lady, I Held current music too.

Cham. Well said, Lord Sands;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord;
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a-going?

Lov. To the cardinal's:

Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O, 'tis true;

This night he makes a supper, and a great one,
To many lords and ladies; there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lou. That churchman bears a bounteous mind indeed,
A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;
His dews fall everywhere.

Cham. No doubt he's noble; he had a black mouth that said other of him.
Sands. He may, my lord,—has wherewithal; in him [trine:
Sparing would show a worse sin than ill-doing.
Men of his way should be most liberal;
They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;
[Thomas, Your lordship shall along.—Come, good Sir
We shall be late else; which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford,
This night to be comptrollers.

Sands. I am your lordship's.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—LONDON. The Presence Chamber in York Place.

Hautboys. A small table under a state for the Cardinal, a longer table for the guests.

Enter, at one door, Anne Burrell, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlewomen, as guests; at another door, enter Sir Henry Guildford.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace
Salutes ye all; this night he dedicates
To fair content and you; none here, he hopes,
In all this noble bevy, has brought with her
One care abroad; he would have all as merrily
As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome
Can make good people.—O, my lord, you are

Enter Lord Chamberlain, Lord Sands, and Sir Thomas Lovell.

The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, Sir Henry Guildford.
Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
But half my lay-thoughts in him; some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested;
I think would better please 'em; by my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones. [fessor

Lou. O, that your lordship were but now con-
To one or two of these!

Sands. I would I were;
They should find easy penance.

Lou. Fault, how easy?

Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.
Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit?
Sir Harry,
Place you that side; I'll take the charge of this:
His grace is ent'ring.—Nay, you must not freeze;
[weather:
Two women plac'd together makes cold
My Lord Sands, you are one will keep 'em waking;
Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith,
And thank your lordship.—By your leave, sweet ladies:

[Seats himself between Anne Bulleen and another lady.

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?
Sands. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too:
But he would bite none; just as I do now,—
He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

[Kisses her.

Cham. Well said, my lord.—
So, now you're fairly seated. —Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you if these fair ladies
Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, attended; and takes his state.

Wol. Ye're welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady
Or gentleman that is not freely merry
Is not my friend: this, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all, good health. [Drinks.

Sands. Your grace is noble:
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

Wol. My Lord Sands, I am beholden to you: cheer your neighbours.—
Ladies, you are not merry:—gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

Sands. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have
'Tem Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My Lord Sands.

Sands. Yes, if I make my play.
Here's to your ladyship: and pledge it, madam,
For 'tis to such a thing,—

Anne. You cannot show me.

Sands. I told your grace they would talk anon.
[Drum and trums. : Chambers discharged within.
Wol. What's that?

Cham. Look out there, some of ye.

[Exit a Servant.

Wol. What warlike voice, And to what end, is this?—Nay, ladies, fear not; By all the laws of war ye're privileg'd.

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now! what is't?

Serv. A noble troop of strangers,—I'm so they seem: they have left their barge, and landed;

And hither make, as great ambassadors From foreign princes.

Wol. Good lord chamberlain, Go give 'em welcome; you can speak the French tongue;

And, pray receive 'em nobly, and conduct 'em Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty Shall shine at full upon them.—Some attend him.

[Exit Chamberlain attended. All arise, and tables removed.

You have now a broken banquet: but we'll mend it.

A good digestion to you all: and once more I shower a welcome on you;—welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the King, and others, as maskers, habited like shepherds, with Torch-bearers, ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures?

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd To tell your grace,—that, having heard by fame Of this so noble and so fair assembly This night to meet here, they could do no less, Out of the great respect they bear to beauty, But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct, Crave leave to view these ladies, and entreat An hour of revels with 'em.

Wol. Say, lord chamberlain, They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay 'em [pleasures.

A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take their [Ladies chosen for the dance. The King chooses Anne Bulleen.

K. Hen. The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O beauty,

Till now I never knew thee! [Music. Dance.

Wol. My lord,—

Cham. Your grace?

Wol. Pray tell them thus much from me;— There should be one amongst them, by his person,

More worthy this place than myself; to whom, If I but knew him, with my love and duty I would surrender it.

Cham. I will, my lord.

[Comes from his state.

Wol. What say they?

Cham. Such a one, they all confess, There is indeed; which they would have your grace Find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see, then.—

By all your good leaves, gentlemen;—here I'll make My royal choice.

K. Hen. Ye have found him, cardinal:

[Unmasking.

You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord: You are a churchman, or I'll tell you, cardinal, I should judge now unhappily.

Wol. I am glad Your grace is grown so pleasant.

K. Hen. My lord chamberlain, Pr'ythee, come hither: what fair lady's that?

Cham. An't please your grace, Sir Thomas Bulleen's daughter,— [women.

The Viscount Rochford,—one of her highness'

K. Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one.— Sweetheart, I were unmann'rilly to take you out, And not to kiss you.—A health, gentlemen! Let it go round.

Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready I' the privy chamber?

Loo. Yes, my lord.

Wol. Your grace, I fear, with dancing is a little heated.

K. Hen. I fear, too much.

Wol. There's fresher air, my lord. In the next chamber. [sweet partner, K. Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one:— I must not yet forsake you;—let's be merry:— Good my lord cardinal, I have half a dozen healths To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure To lead 'em once again; and then let's dream Who's best in favour. —Let the music knock it.

[Exeunt, with trumpets.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. Whither away so fast?

2 Gent. O, God save ye! E'en to the hall, to hear what shall become Of the great Duke of Buckingham.
I'll save you
That labour, sir. All's now done, but the
Of bringing back the prisoner.

Were you there?
Yes, indeed, was I.
Pray, speak what has happen'd.
You may guess quickly what.
Is he found guilty?
Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon't.
I am sorry for't.
So are a number more.
But, pray, how pass'd it? [duke
I'll tell you in a little. The great
Came to the bar; where to his accusations
He pleaded still not guilty, and alleg'd
Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.
The king's attorney, on the contrary,
Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions
Of divers witnesses; which the duke desir'd
To have brought, vivé vocé, to his face:
At which appear'd against him his surveyor;
Sir Gilbert Peck, his chancellor; and John Car,
Confessor to him; with that devil-monk,
Hopkins, that made this mischief.
That was he
That fed him with his prophecies?
The same.
All these accus'd him strongly; which he fain
Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not:
And so his peers, upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all
Was either pitied in him or forgotten. [self?
After all this, how did he bear him-
When he was brought again to the bar to hear [stirr'd
His knell rung out, his judgment,—he was
With such an agony, he sweat extremely,
And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty;
But he fell to himself again, and sweetly
In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.
I do not think he fears death.
Sure, he does not,
He never was so womanish; the cause
He may a little grieve at.
Certainly
The cardinal is the end of this.
By all conjectures: first, Kildare's attained,
Then deputy of Ireland; who remov'd,
Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,
Lest he should help his father.

Was a deep envious one.
Shall make my grave.—Commend me to his grace; And if he speak of Buckingham, pray tell him Ye met him half in heaven: my vows and prayers Yet are the king’s; and, till my soul forsake, Shall cry for blessings on him: may he live Longer than I have time to tell his years! Ever belov’d and loving may his rule be! And when old time shall lead him to his end, Goodness and he fill up one monument! Lov. To the water side I must conduct your grace; Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux, Who undertakes you to your end. Vaux. Prepare there, The duke is coming: see the barge be ready; And fit it with such furniture as suits The greatness of his person. Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas, Let it alone; my state now will but mock me. When I came hither I was lord high constable And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun: Yet I am richer than my base accusers, [it; That never knew what truth meant: I now seal And with that blood will make ’em one day groan for’t. My noble father, Henry of Buckingham, Who first rais’d head against usurping Richard, Flying for succour to his servant Banister, Being distress’d, was by that wretch betray’d, And without trial fell; God’s peace be with him! Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying My father’s loss, like a most royal prince, Restor’d me to my honours, and out of ruins Made my name once more noble. Now his son, Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all That made me happy, at one stroke has taken For ever from the world. I had my trial, And must needs say a noble one; which makes me A little happier than my wretched father: Yet thus far we are one in fortunes,—both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov’d most; A most unnatural and faithless service! Heaven has an end in all: yet, you that hear me, This from a dying man receive as certain:— Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels, Be sure you be not loose; for those you make friends [ceive And give your hearts to, when they once per The least rub in your fortunes, full away Like water from ye, never found again But where they mean to sink ye. All good people, [hour Pray for me! I must now forsake ye: the last Of my long weary life is come upon me. Farewell: And when you would say something that is sad, Speak how I fell.—I have done; and God forgive me! [Exeunt Buckingham and Train. 1 Gent. O, this is full of pity!—Sir, it calls, I fear, too many curses on their heads That were the authors. 2 Gent. If the duke be guiltless, 'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you inking Of an ensuing evil, if it fall, Greater than this. 1 Gent. Good angels, keep it from us! Where may it be? You do not doubt my faith, sir? [quire 2 Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill re- A strong faith to conceal it. 1 Gent. Let me have it; I do not talk much. 2 Gent. I am confident; You shall, sir: did you not of late days hear A buzzing of a separation Between the king and Katharine? 1 Gent. Yes, but it held not: For when the king once heard it, out of anger He sent command to the lord mayor straight To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues That durst disperse it. 2 Gent. But that slander, sir, Is found a truth now: for it grows again Fresher than e’er it was; and held for certain The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal, Or some about him near, have, out of malice To the good queen, possess’d him with a scruple That will undo her: to confirm this too, Cardinal Campeius is arriv’d, and lately; As all think, for this business. 1 Gent. 'Tis the cardinal; And merely to revenge him on the emperor For not bestowing on him, at his asking, The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos’d. 2 Gent. I think you have hit the mark: but is’t not cruel [cardinal That she should feel the smart of this? The Will have his will, and she must fall. 1 Gent. 'Tis woeful We are too open here to argue this; Let’s think in private more. [Exeunt. SCENE II.—London. An Ante-chamber in the Palace. Enter the Lord Chamberlain reading a letter. Cham. My lord,—The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission and main power, took 'em from me; with this reason,—His master would be served before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir. I fear he will indeed: well, let him have them: He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Nor. Well met, my Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good-day to both your graces.

Suf. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. I left him private, Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?

Cham. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife Has crept too near his conscience.

Suf. No, his conscience Has crept too near another lady.

'Tis so: This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal: That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune, Turns what he lists. The king will know him one day. [self else. Suf. Pray God he do! he'll never know him.

Nor. How Hollily he works in all his business! And with what zeal! for, now he has crack'd the league Between us and the emperor, the queen's great He dives into the king's soul, and there scatters Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, Fears, and desairs,—and all these for his marriage: And out of all these to restore the king, He counsels a divorce; a loss of her That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years About his neck, yet never lost her lustre; Of her that loves him with that excellence That angels love good men with; even of her That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls, Will bless the king: and is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'Tis most true I'm, These news are everywhere; every tongue speaks And every true heart weeps for 't: all that dare Look into these affairs see this main end,— The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray, And heartily, for our deliverance; Or this imperious man will work us all

From princes into pages: all men's honours Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords, I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed: As I am made without him, so I'll stand, If the king please; his curses and his blessings Touch me alike, they are breath I not believe in. I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him To him that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let's in; And with some other business put the king From these sad thoughts that work too much upon him:—

My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me;
The king has sent me other-where: besides, You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him:

Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain. [Exit Lord Chamberlain.

NORFOLK opens a folding door. The King is discovered sitting, and reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.

K. Hen. Who is there, ha?

Nor. Pray God he be not angry.

K. Hen. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves Into my private meditations?

Who am I, ha?

Nor. A gracious king, that pardons all offences Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty this way Is business of estate; in which we come To know your royal pleasure.

K. Hen. Ye are too bold:

Go to; I'll make you know your times of business:

Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha?

Enter Wolsey and Campeius.

Who's there? my good lord cardinal?—O my Wolsey,
The quiet of my wounded conscience,
Thou art a cure fit for a king. — You're welcome, [To Campeius.

Most reverend learned sir, into our kingdom:
Use us and it.—My good lord, have great care I be not found a talker. [To Wolsey.

Wol. Sir, you cannot.

I would your grace would give us but an hour Of private conference.

K. Hen. We are busy; go. [To Norfolk and Suffolk.

Nor. [Aside to Suf.] This priest has no pride in him!
Gard. [Aside to Wol.] But to be commanded for ever by your grace, whose hand has raised me.

K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner.

[They converse apart.

Cam. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace

In this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Cam. Was he not held a learned man?

Wol. Yes, surely.

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread, then,

Even of yourself, lord cardinal.

Wol. How! of me?

Cam. They will not stick to say you envied him;

And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous,

Kept him a foreign man still; which so griev'd him

That he ran mad and died.

Wol. Heaven's peace be with him!

That's Christian care enough: for living murmurers

There's places of rebuke. He was a fool;

For he would needs be virtuous: that good fellow,

If I command him, follows my appointment:

I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother,

We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.

K. Hen. Deliver this with modesty to the queen.

[Exit Gardiner.

The most convenient place that I can think of
For such receipt of learning is Black-Friars;

There ye shall meet about this weighty business:

My Wolsey, see it furnish'd.—O, my lord,
Would it not grieve an able man to leave

So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, conscience,—

O, 'tis a tender place! and I must leave her.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—LONDON. An Ante-chamber in the Queen's Apartments.

Enter Anne Bullen and an Old Lady.

Anne. Not for that neither: here's the pang that pinches:—

His highness having liv'd so long with her, and she

So good a lady that no tongue could ever pronounce dishonour of her,—by my life,

She never knew harm-doing;—O, now, after

So many courses of the sun enthron'd,

Still growing in a majesty and pomp,—the which

To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than

King. Aside.

Duchess? It is a pity. Would move a monster.

Old L. Hearts of most hard temper.

Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O, God's will! much better.

She ne'er had known pomp; though it be temporal,

Yet, if that quarrel, fortune, do divorce.

It from the hearer, 'tis a suffrance panging,

As soul and body's severing.

Old L. Alas, poor lady!

She's a stranger now again.

Anne. So much the more.

Must pity drop upon her. Verily, I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,

And range with humble lives in content,

Than to be perk'd up in a glistening grief,

And wear a golden sorrow.

Old L. Our content.

Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth and maidenhead, I would not be a queen.

Old L. Beshrew me, I would,

And venture maidenhead for't; and so would you,

For all this spice of your hypocrisy:

You, that have so fair parts of woman on you,

Have too a woman's heart; which ever yet

Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty;

Which, to say sooth, are blessings—and which gifts,—

Saving your mincing,—the capacity

Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive

If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth,—

Old L. Yes, troth and troth; you would not be a queen?

Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.

Old L. 'Tis strange: a threepence bowed would hire me,

Old as I am, to queen it: but, I pray you,

What think you of a duchess? have you limbs

To bear that load of title?

Anne. No, in truth.

Old L. Then you are weakly made: pluck off a little;

I would not be a young count in your way.

For more than blushing comes to: if your back

Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak

Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk!

I swear again I would not be a queen

For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England

You'd venture an embalming: I myself

Would for Carnarvonshire, although there long'd [here?

No more to the crown but that. Lo, who comes

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good-morrow, ladies. What we'ret worth to know

The secret of your conference?

Anne. My good lord,

Not your demand; it values not your asking:

Our mistress' sorrows we were piti both,

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becomo

The action of good women: there is hope

All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings [lady,

Follow such creatures. That you may, fair

Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's

Tal'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty

Commends his good opinion of you to you, and Does purpose honour to you no less flowing;

Than Marchioness of Pembroke; to which title

A thousand pound a year, annual support,

Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know

What kind of my obedience I should tender;

More than my all is nothing: nor my prayers

Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes

More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes

Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship,

Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my obedience,

As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness;

Whose health and royalty I pray for.

Cham. Lady,

I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit

The king hath of you.—I have perus'd her well;

Beaut and honour in her are so mingled

That they have caught the king: and who knows yet

But from this lady may proceed a gem

To lighten all this isle?—I'll to the king

And say I spoke with you.

Anne. My honour'd lord.

Exit Lord Chamberlain.

Old L. Why, this it is; see, see!

I have been begging sixteen years in court,—

Am yet a courtier beggarly,—nor could

Come pat betwixt too early and too late

For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate!

A very fresh-fish here,—fie, fie, fie upon [up

This compell'd fortune!—have your mouth fill'd

Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me. [no.

Old L. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty *pen.+}
There was a lady once,—tis an old story,—
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt:—have you heard it?
Anne. Come, you are pleasant.
Old L. With your theme I could O'ermount the lark. The Marchioness of Pembroke!
A thousand pounds a year for pure respect!
No other obligation! By my life,
That promises more thousands: honour's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time
I know your back will bear a duchess:—say,
Are you not stronger than you were?
Anne. Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. Would I had no being,
If this salute my blood a jot: it faints me
To think what follows.
The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence: pray, do not deliver
What here you have heard to her.
Old L. What do you think me?
[Exeunt.

Trumpet, sennet, and cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habits of doctors; after them,
the Archbishop of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and Saint Asaph; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a Cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-usher bareheaded, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-Arms bearing a silver mace;
then two Gentlemen bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two Cardinals,
Wolsey and Campeius; two Noblemen with the sword and mace.
Then enter the King and Queen and their Trains.
The King takes place under the cloth of state;
the two Cardinals sit under him as judges.
The Queen takes place at some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; between them the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The Crier and the rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the hall.
Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is
read,
Let silence be commanded.
K. Hen. What's the need?

It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd;
You may, then, spare that time.

Wol. Be't so.—Proceed.
Scribe. Say, Henry King of England, come into the court.

K. Hen. Here.
Scribe. Say, Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.

[The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you do me right and justice;

And to bestow your pity on me: for
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions; having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance
Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas, sir,
In what have I offended you? what cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceed to put me off,
And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness,
I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable:
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
[sorry
Yea, subject to your countenance,—glad or
As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour
I ever contradicted your desire,
[friends
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your
Have I not strove to love, although I knew
He were mine enemy? what friend of mine
That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharg'd? Sir, call to mind
That I have been your wife, in this obedience,
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you: if, in the course
And process of this time, you can report,
And prove it too, against mine honour aught,
My bond to wedlock or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name,
Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharpest kind of justice. Please you, sir,
The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
And unmarch'd wit and judgment: Ferdinand,
My father, King of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many
A year before: it is not to be question'd
That they had gather'd a wise council to them
Of every realm, that did debate this business,
Who deem'd our marriage lawful: wherefore I humbly beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may Be by my friends in Spain advis'd; whose counsel I will implore; if not, 'tis the name of God, Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady,—And of your choice,—these reverend fathers; men of singular integrity and learning, Yea, the elect of the land, who are assembled To plead your cause: it shall be therefore boff pesThat longer you desire the court; as well For your own quiet as to rectify What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His grace Hath spoken well and justly: therefore, madam, It's fit this royal session do proceed; And that, without delay, their arguments Be now produc'd and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal,—To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam?

Q. Kath. Sir, I am about to weep; but, thinking that We are a queen,—or long have dream'd so,—certain The daughter of a king, my drops of tears I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patience yet.

Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, before, Or God will punish me. I do believe, Induc'd by potent circumstances, that You are mine enemy; and make my challenge You shall not be my judge: for it is you Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,—Which God's dew quench! Therefore I say again, I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once more, I hold my most malicious foe, and think not At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess You speak not like yourself; who ever yet Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom [wrong: O'ertopping woman's power. Madam, you do me I have no spleen against you, nor injustice For you or any: how far I have proceeded, Or how far further shall, is warranted By a commission from the consistory, [me Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge That I have blown this coal: I do deny it: The king is present: if it be known to him That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound, And worthily, my falsehood? yea, as much As you have done my truth. If he know That I am free of your report, he knows I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him It lies to cure me: and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: the which be- His highness shall speak in, I do beseech You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking, And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord, I am a simple woman, much too zeal: To oppose your cunning. You he mock and humble-mouth'd;
You sign your place and calling, in full seeming, With meekness and humility; but your heart Is cram'd with arrogancy, spleen, and pride. You have, by fortune and his highness' favours, Gone slightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted Where powers are your retainers; and your words,
Domestics to you, serve your will as't please Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell you, You tender more your person's honour than Your high profession spiritual: that again I do refuse you for my judge; and here, Before you ad, appeal unto the pope, To bring my whole cause fore his holiness, And to be judged by him.

[She curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.
Cam. The queen is obstinate, Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by: 'tis not well. She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again.

Grif. Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray you, keep your way:

When you are call'd, return,—Now the Lord help,

They vex me past my patience! Pray you, pass on:

I will not tarry; no, nor ever more

Upon this business my appearance make In any of their courts.

[Exeunt Queen, Grif. and her other Attendants.

K. Hen. Go thy ways, Kate: That man i' the world who shall report he has A better wife, let him in naught be trusted

For speaking false in that: thou art, alone,—If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness, Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government—

Obeying in commanding—and thy parts

Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out —

The queen of earthly queens—she's noble her;
And like her true nobility she has Carried herself towards me.

Wol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness That it shall please you to declare, in hearing Of all these ears,—for where I am rob'd and bound,
There must I be unloos'd; although not there At once and fully satisfied,—whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness; or But any scruple in your way, which might I place to the question on't or ever I have to you,—but with thanks to God for such A royal lady,—spake one the least word that might Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person?

K. Hen. My lord cardinal, I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour, I free you from'. You are not to be taught That you have many enemies, that know not Why they are so, but, like to village curs, Bark when their fellows do: by some of these The queen is put in anger. You are excus'd: But will you be more justified? you ever Have wish'd the sleeping of this business; never Desire'd it to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd, oft,
The passages made toward it:—on my honour, I speak my good lord cardinal to this point, And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't,
I will be bold with time and your attention:— Then mark the inducement. Thus it came;— give heed to't:— My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness, Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd By the Bishop of Bayonne, then French am-bassador:
Who had been hither sent on the debating A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and Our daughter Mary: I the progress of this business,
Ere a determinate resolution, he,— I mean the bishop,—did require a respite: Wherein he might the king his lord advertise Whether our daughter were legitimate, Respecting this our marriage with the dowager, Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me, Yea, with a splitting power, and made me tremble The region of my breast; which force'd such way That many maz'd considerations did throng, And press'd in with this caution. First, me-thought I stood not in the smile of heaven; who had Commanded nature that my lady's womb,

If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to't than The grave does to the dead; for her male issue Or died where they were made, or shortly after This world had air'd them: hence I took a thought This was a judgment on me; that my kingdom, Well worthy the best heir of the world, should not Be gladd'd in't by me: then follows that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in By this my issue's fall; and that gave to me Many a groaning throe. Thus hilling in The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together: that's to say, I meant to rectify my conscience,—which I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,— By all the reverend fathers of the land, And doctors learn'd:—first, I began in private With you, my Lord of Lincoln: you remember How under my oppression I did reck When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.

K. Hen. I have spoke long: be pleas'd your-self to say
How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness, The question did at first so stagger me,— Bearing a state of mighty moment in't, And consequence of dread,—that I committed The daring'st counsel which I had to doubt; And did entreat your highness to this course Which you are running here.

K. Hen. I then mov'd you, My Lord of Canterbury; and got your leave To make this present summons:—unsolicited I left no reverend person in this court: But by particular consent proceeded Under your hands and seals: therefore, go on; For no dislike 't the world against the person Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points Of my alleged reasons, drive this forward: Prove but our marriage lawfull, by my life And kingly dignity, we are contented To wear our mortal state to come with her, Katharine our queen, before the primest creature That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So pleasure your highness, The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness That we adjourn this court till another day: Meanwhile must be an earnest motion Made to the queen to call back her appeal She intends unto her holiness.

K. Hen. [They rise to depart. I may perceive

These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome. [Aside. My learn'd and well-belov'd servant, Cranmer, Pr'ythee, return! with thy approach, I know, My comfort comes along. Break up the court: I say, set on.

[Execut in manner as they entered.

ACT III.

The Queen and some of her Women at work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows sad with troubles; Sing and disperse 'em, if thou canst: leave working.

SONG.

Orpheus with his lute made trees, And the mountain-tops that freeze, Bow themselves, when he did sing: To his music plants and flowers Ever sprung; as sun and showers There had made a lasting spring.

Everything that heard him play, Even the billows of the sea, Hung their heads and then lay by. In sweet music is such art: Killing care and grief of heart Fall asleep, or, hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now? Gent. 'tis your grace, the two great Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me? Gent. They will'd me say so, madam. Q. Kath. Pray their grace. To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business With me, a poor weak woman, fallen from favour? I do not like their coming, now I think on't. They should be good men; their affairs as righteous: But all hoods make not monks.

Enter Wolsey and Campeius.

Wol. Peace to your highness! Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife; I would be all, against the worst may happen. What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords? [withdraw] Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to Into your private chamber, we shall give you The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here;

There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience, Deserves a corner: would all other women Could speak this with as free a soul as I do! My lords, I care not,—so much I am happy Above a number,—if my actions Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em, Envy and base opinion set against 'em, I know my life so even. If your business Seek me out, and that way I am wise in, Out with it boldly: truth loves open dealing. Wol. Tanta est erga me mentis integritas, regina serenissima,— Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin; I am not such a truant since my coming As not to know the language I have lived in: A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious; Pray, speak in English: here are some will thank you, [sake,— If you speak truth, for their poor mistress, Believe me, she has had much wrong: lord cardinal, The willing'st sin I ever yet committed May be absolvd in English. Wol. Noble lady, I am sorry my integrity should breed,— And service to his majesty and you,— So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant. We come not by the way of accusation To tant that honour every good tongue blesses, Nor to betray you any way to sorrow,— You have too much, good lady; but to know How you stand minded in the weighty difference Between the king and you; and to deliver, Like free and honest men, our just opinions, And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honour'd madam, My Lord of York.—out of his noble nature, Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace,— Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure Both of his truth and him,—which was too far,— Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace, His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. To betray me. [Aside. My lords, I thank you both for your good-will; Ye speak like honest men,—pray God ye prove so! But how to make ye suddenly an answer, In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,— More near my life, I fear,—with my weak wit, And to such men of gravity and learning, In truth, I know not. I was set at work Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking Either for such men or such business.
For her sake that I have been,—for I feel
The last fit of my greatness,—good your graces,
Let me have time and counsel for my cause:
Alas, I am a woman, friendless, hopeless!
Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears:
Your hopes and friends are infinite.
Q. Kath. In England
But little for my profit: can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure,—
Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,—
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,
They that must weigh out my afflications,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here:
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence,
In mine own country, lords.
Cam. I would your grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.
Q. Kath. How, sir?
Cam. Put your main cause into the king's protection:
He's loving and most gracious: 'twill be much
Both for your honour and your cause;
For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye
You'll part away disgrac'd.
Wol. He tells you rightly.
Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both,
—my ruin:
Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge
That no king can corrupt.
Cam. Your rage mistakes us.
Q. Kath. The more shame for ye: holy men
I thought ye,
Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;
But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye:
Mend them, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?
The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady,—
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?
I will not wish ye half my miseries;
I have more charity: but say I warn'd ye:
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once
The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.
Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.
Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: woe upon ye,
And all such false professors! would you have
If you have any justice, any pity,
If ye be anything but churchmen's habits,—
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?
Alas! has banish'd me his bed already,
His love too long ago! I am old, my lords,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness? all your studies
Make me a curse like this.
Cam. Your fears are worse.
Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long,—let me speak myself,
Since virtue finds no friends.—a wife, a true one?
A woman,—I dare say without vain-glory,—
Never yet branded with suspicion?
Have I with all my full affections
Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven?
obey'd him?
Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords.
Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure;
And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honour,—a great patience.
Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.
Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty,
To give up willingly that noble title
Your master wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.
Wol. Pray, hear me.
Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English earth,
Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts.
What will become of me now, wretched lady?
I am the most unhappy woman living.—
Alas, poor wenches, where are now your fortunes?
The way of our profession is against it:
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em.
For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly
Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage.
The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
I know you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm: pray, think us
Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues.

With these weak women's fears: a noble spirit,
As yours was put into you, ever casts
Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you;
Beware you lose it not: for us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies in your service.

Q. Keth. Do what ye will, my lords: and, pray, forgive me
If I have us'd myself unmannishly;
You know I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray, do my service to his majesty:
He has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers
While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers, Bestow your counsels on me; she now begs
That little thought, when she set footing here,
She should have bought her dignities so dear.

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—London. Ante-chamber to the King's Apartment in the Palace.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,
And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
Cannot stand under them: if you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise
But that you shall sustain more new disgraces,
With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion that may give me
Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke,
To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
Have uncontemn'd gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected? when did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person
Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures:
What he deserves of you and me I know;
What we can do to him,—though now the time Gives way to us,—I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt Anything on him; for he hath a witchcraft
Over the king in's tongue.

Nor. O, fear him not;
His spell in that is out: the king hath found
Matter against him that for ever mars

The honey of his language. No, he's settled.
Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir,
I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true:
In the divorce his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded; wherein he appears
As I would wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came
His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O, how, how?

Suf. The cardinal's letters to the pope mis-carried,
[read
And came to the eye o' the king: wherein was How that the cardinal did entertain his holiness
To stay the judgment o' the divorce; for if
It did take place, I do, quoth he, perceive
My king is tangled in affection to
A creature of the queen's, Lady Anne Bullen.

Sur. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Sur. Will this work?

Cham. The king in this perceives him how he coasts
And hedges his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
After his patient's death: the king already Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord!
For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now, all my joy
Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to't!

Nor. All men's!

Suf. There's order given for her coronation:
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears uncounted.—But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But will the king
Digest this letter of the cardinal's?

The Lord forbid!

Nor. Marry, amen!

Suf. No, no;
There be more wasps that buzz about his nose.

Sur. Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal
Campeius
Is stol'n away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;
Has left the cause o' the king unhandled; and
Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you
The king cried Ha! at this.
Cham. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry IIa! louder!
Nor. But, my lord,
When returns Cranmer?
Suf. He is return'd, in his opinions; which
Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom: shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager
And widow to Prince Arthur.
Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business.
Suf. He has; and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.
Nor. So I hear.
Suf. 'Tis so.—
The cardinal!

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.
Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody.
Wol. The packet, Cromwell,
Gave't you the king?
Crom. To his own hand, in's bedchamber.
Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?
Crom. Presently
He did unseal them: and the first he view'd,
He did it with a serious mind; a heed
Was in his countenance. You he bade Attend him here this morning.
Wol. Is he ready
To come abroad?
Crom. I think by this he is.
Wol. Leave me awhile. [Exit Cromwell.
It shall be to the Duchess of Alençon,
The French king's sister: he shall marry her.
Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for him:
There's more in't than fair visage.—Bullen!
No, we'll no Bullens.—Speedily I wish
To hear from Rome.—The Marchioness of Pembroke!
Nor. He's discontented.
Suf. May be he hears the king
Does what his anger to him.
Sur. Sharp enough,
Lord, for thy justice! [daughter,
Wol. The latequeen's gentlewoman, a knight's
To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!—
This candle burns not clear: 'tis I must sniff it;
Then out it goes.—What though I know her virtuous
And well deserving? yet I know her for
A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to
Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of

Our hard-rul'd king. Again, there is sprung up
An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one
Iath crawl'd into the favour of the king,
And is his oracle.
Nor. He is vex'd at something.
Sur. I would 'twere something that would fret the string,
The master-cord on's heart!
Suf. The king, the king!

Enter the King, reading a schedule, and Lovell.

K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated
To his own portion! and what expense by the hour [thrift,
Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of Does he rakes this together?—Now, my lords,
Saw you the cardinal?
Nor. My lord, we have [tion
Stood here observing him: some strange commo-
Is in his brain; he bites his lip and starts;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his temple; straight
Springs out into fast gait; then steps again,
 Strikes his breast hard; and anon he casts
His eye against the moon: in most strange postures
We have seen him set himself.
K. Hen. It may well be;
There is a mutiny in's mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd: and wot you what I found
There,—on my conscience, put unwittingly?
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing,—
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household; which I find at such proud rate that it out-speaks
Possession of a subject.
Nor. It's heaven's will:
Some spirit put this paper in the packet
To bless your eye withal.
K. Hen. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings: but I am afraid
His thoughts are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.
[He takes his seat and whispers Lovell, who goes to Wolsey.
Wol. Heaven forgive me!
Ever God bless your highness!
K. Hen. Good, my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory
Of your best graces in your mind; the which
Scene II.

KING HENRY VIII.

KING
You were now running o'er: you have scarce time
To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span
To keep your earthly audit: sure, in that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

WOL. Sir,
For holy offices I have a time; a time,
To think upon the part of business which
I bear 't the state; and nature does require
Her times of preservation, which perforce
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said well.
WOL. And ever may your highness yoke togethers
As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying!

K. Hen. 'Tis well said again;
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well:
And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd you:
He said he did; and with his deed did crown
His word upon you. Since I had my office
I have kept you next my heart; have not alone
Employ'd you where high profits might come home,
But par'd my present having to bestow
My bounties upon you.

WOL. What should this mean? [Aside.
SUR. The Lord increase this business!
[Aside to others.

K. Hen. Have I not made you
The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me
What I now pronounce you have found true:
And, if you may confess it, say withal
If you are bound to us or no. What say you?
WOL. My sovereign, I confess your royal graces, [could Shower'd on me daily, have been more than
My studied purposes require; which went Beyond all man's endeavours:—my endeavours
I have ever come too short of my desires,
Yet fill'd with my abilities: mine own ends
I have been mine so that evermore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person and
The profit of the state. For your great graces
I leap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks;
My prayers to heaven for you; my loyalty,
Which ever has and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. Fairly answer'd;
A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated: the honour of it
Does pay the act of it; as, if the contrary,
The foulness is the punishment. I presume

That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour, more
On you than any; so your hand and heart,
Your reason, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

WOL. I do profess
That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
More than mine own; that am, have, and will be,—
[You,
Though all the world should crack their duty to
And throw it from their soul; though perils did Abound as thick as thought could make 'em, and Appear in forms more horrid,—yet my duty,
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

K. Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken:
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open.'—Read o'er this:
[Giving him papers.
And after, this: and then to breakfast with What appetite you have.

[Exit, frowning upon CARDINAL WOLSEY:
the Nobles throng after him, smiling and whispering.

WOL. What should this mean?
What sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it?
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes: so looks the chafed lion
Upon the daring huntsman that has gallow'd him;
Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper;
I fear, the story of his anger.—'Tis so:
This paper has undone me:—'tis the account
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the pope-dom,
And see my friends in Rome. O negligence,
Ft for a fool to fall by! What cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his brains:
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune,
Will bring me off again.—What's this—To the Popes?
The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to 's holiness. Nay then, farewell!
I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness;
And from that full meridian of my glory
I haste now to my setting: I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.
KING HENRY VIII. [ACT III.

Re-enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal: who commands you?
To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands; and to confine yourself
To Asher House, my Lord of Winchester's,
Till you hear further from his highness.

Wol. Where's your commission, lords? Your words cannot carry Authority so weighty.

Suf. Who dare cross them,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?

Wol. Till I find more than will or words to do it.
I mean your malice, —know, officious lords,
I dare and must deny it. Now feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded,—envy:
How eagerly ye follow my disgrace,
As if it feel ye! and how sleek and wanton
Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin!
Follow your envious courses, men of malice;
You have Christian warrant for them, and, no doubt,
In time will find their fit rewards. That seal,
You ask with such a violence, the king,—
Mine and your master,—with his own hand gave me;—
Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honours,
During my life; and, to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters-patents: now, who'll take it?

Suf. The king, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself then.

Suf. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol. Proud lord, thou liest:
Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue than said so.

Suf. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:
The heads of all thy brother cardinals,—
With thee and all thy best parts bound together,— Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy!
You sent me deputy for Ireland;
Far from his succour, from the king, from all
That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st him;
Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity
Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol. This, and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer, is most false. The duke by law Found his deserts: how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you
You have as little honesty as honour,
That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.

Suf. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou
Shouldst feel [lords',
My sword i' the life-blood of thee else.—
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?
And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell, nobility; let his grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap like larks.

Wol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.

Suf. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion:
The goodness of your intercepted packets
You writ to the pope against the king: your goodness,
Since you provoke me, shall be most notoriety.
My Lord of Norfolk,—as you are truly noble,
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despis'd nobility, our issues,
Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,—
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life:—I'll startle you Worse than the sacrifying bell, when the brown wench
Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise
this man,
But that I am bound in charity against it!

Nor. These articles, my lord, are in the king's Land:
But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much tamer
And spotless shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth.

Suf. This cannot save you:
I thank my memory I yet remember
Some of these articles; and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush and cry guilty, cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections: if I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Suf. I'd rather want those than my head.—

Wol. First, that, without the king's assent or knowledge,
You wrought to be a legate; by which power
You main'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.
Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else
To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus [king
Was still inscrib'd; in which you brought the
To be your servant.

Sur. Then, that, without the knowledge,
Either of king or council, when you went
Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassalis, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Sur. That, out of more ambition, you have caus'd
Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance, [science,
By what means got I leave to your own con-
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the more undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are,
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord,
Press not a falling man too far! 'tis virtue:
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see
him
So little of his great self.

Sur. I forgive him. [is,—

Sur. Lord Cardinal, the king's further pleasure
Because all those things you have done of late,
By your power legitime within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a premumire;—
That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the king's protection:—this is my charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations
How to live better. For your stubborn answer
About the giving back the great seal to us,
The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall
thank you.

So fare you well, my little good lord cardinal.
[Exeunt all but WOLSEY.

Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear
me.

Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hope; to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him;
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
And,—when he thinks, good easy man, fall surely
His greatness is a-ripening,—nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventured,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory;
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride
At length broke under me; and now has left me,
Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye:
I feel my heart new opened. O, how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on prince's favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have:
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

Enter CROMWELL, amazedly.

Crom. Why, how now, Cromwell!

Wol. What, amaz'd
At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,
I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your grace?

Wol. Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell,
I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me,
I humbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders,
These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken
A load would sink a navy,—too much honour:
O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven!

Crom. I am glad your grace has made that right use of it.
[thinks.—

Wol. I hope I have: I am able now, me-
Out of a fortitude of soul I feel,—
To endure more miseries and greater far
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest and the worst
Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol. God bless him!

Crom. The next is that Sir Thomas More is chosen
Lord Chancellor in your place.

Wol. That's somewhat sudden:
But he's a learned man. May he continue
Long in his highness' favour, and do justice,
For truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones,
When he has run his course and sleeps in His-
May have a tomb of orphans' tears went on 'em!
What more?
KING HENRY VIII.

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome,
Install'd Lord Archbp. of Canterbury.
Wol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open as his queen,
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down. 0 Cromwell,
The king has gone beyond me: all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever:
No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited
Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell;
I am a poor fallen man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master: seek the king;
That sun, I pray, may never set! I have told him
[thee;
What and how true thou art: he will advance
Some little memory of me will stir him,—
I know his noble nature,—not to let
Thy hopeful service perish too: good Cromwell, Neglect him not; make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my lord,
Must I then leave you? must I needs forego
So good, so noble, and so true a master?
Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.
The king shall have my service; but my prayers
For ever and for ever shall be yours.

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries; but thou hast forc'd me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.
Let's dry our eyes: and thus far hear me, Cromwell;
And,—when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention
Of me more must be heard of,—say I taught thee;
'Say Wolsey,—that once trod the ways of glory,
And sound all the depths and shoals of honour,— Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in;
A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.
Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me.
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition:
By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win it?
Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
KING HENRY VIII.

SCENE I. ]

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The Archbishop Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Ampthill, where the princess lay; to which
She was often cited by them, but appear’d not:
And, to be short, for not appearance and
The king’s late scruple, by the main assent
Of all these learned men, she was divorc’d,
And the late marriage made of none effect:
Since which she was remov’d to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now sick.

2 Gent. Alas, good lady! —

[Trumpets.

The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is

THE ORDER OF THE PROCESSION.

A Lively flourish of trumpets: then enter,

1. Two Judges.
2. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him.
3. Choristers singing.
4. Mayor of London, bearing the mace. Then Carter, in his coat of arms, and on his head a gilt copper crown.
5. Marquis Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-cornal-of gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl’s coronet. Collars of SS.
6. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head.
Collars of SS.
7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports; under it the Queen in her robe; her hair richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side of her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.
8. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen’s train.
9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlers of gold without flowers.

A royal train, believe me. — These I know: —
Who’s that that bears the sceptre?

1 Gent. Marquis Dorset:

And that the Earl of Surrey, with the rod.

2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be

The Duke of Suffolk?

1 Gent. ’Tis the same, — high-steward.

2 Gent. And that my Lord of Norfolk?

1 Gent. Yes.

2 Gent. Heaven bless thee!

[Looking on the QUEEN.

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look’d on. —
Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel;
Our king has all the Indies in his arms,
And more and richer, when he strains that lady:
I cannot blame his conscience.

1 Gent. They that bear
The cloth of honour over her are four barons
Of the Cinque-ports.

2 Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all are near her.

I take it, she that carries up the train
Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk.

1 Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

2 Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed;

And sometimes falling ones.

1 Gent. No more of that.

[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of trumpets.

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! where have you been broil-
ing?

3 Gent. Among the crowd i’ the abbey; where Could not be wedg’d in more: I am stilled
With the mere ramness of their joy.

2 Gent. You saw

The ceremony?

3 Gent. That I did.

1 Gent. How was it?

2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.

3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream
Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen
To a prepar’d place in the choir, fell off
A distance from her: while her grace sat down
To rest awhile, some half an hour or so,
In a rich chair of state, opposing freely
The beauty of her person to the people.

Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman
That ever lay by man: which when the people
Had the full view of, such a noise arose
As the sheet-irons make at sea in a stiff tempest,
As loud, and to as many tunes: hats, cloaks,— Doublets, I think,—flew up; and had their faces
Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy
I never saw before. Great-bellied women,
That had not half a week to go, like rams
In the old time of war, would shake the press,
And make ’em reel before ’em. No man living
Could say, This is my wife, there; all were woven
So strangely in one piece.

2 Gent. But what follow’d?

3 Gent. At length her grace rose, and with modest paces [Cynthia,

Came to the altar; where she kneel’d, and,
Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and pray’d devoutly.
Then rose again, and bow’d her to the people:

When by the Archbishop of Canterbury
She had all the royal markings of a queen;

As holy oil, Edward Confessor’s crown,

The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems,
Kath. Pr'ythee, good Griffith, tell me how he died:
If well, he stepp'd before me, happily,
For my example.
Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam:
For after the stout Earl Northumberland
Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,—
As a man sorely tainted,—to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill
He could not sit his mule.
Kath. Alas, poor man!
Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester,
Lodg'd in the abbey; where the reverend abbot,
With all his covent, honourably receiv'd him;
To whom he gave these words,—O, father abbot,
An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!
So went to bed; where perversely his sickness
Pursu'd him still: and three nights after this,
About the hour of eight,—which he himself
Foretold should be his last,—full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.
Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him!
Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak
And yet with charity. He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes; one that, by suggestion,
Tied all the kingdom: simony was fair play;
His own opinion was his law: if the presence
He would say untruths; and be ever double
Both in his words and meaning: he was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful:
His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing:
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.
Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your highness
To hear me speak his good now!
Kath. Yes, good Griffith; I was malicious else.
Grif. This cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle.
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading:
Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not;
But to those men that sought him sweet as summer.
And though he were unsatisfied in getting—
Which was a sin,—yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely: ever witness for him
Those twins of learning that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich and Oxford! one of which fell with him,
Unwilling to outlive the good that did it;
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow'd happiness upon him;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little:
And, to add greater honours to his age.
Than man could give him, he did fear God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour: peace be with him!—
Patience, be near me still; and set me lower:
I have not long to trouble thee.—Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

[Sad and solemn music.

Grif. She is asleep; good wench, let's sit don: quiet,
For fear we wake her:—softly, gentle Patience.

The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages clad in white robes, Wearing on their heads garlands of boys, and golden wrists on their faces; branches of bay or palm in their hands. They first come unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spade garland over her head; at which the other four make reverent courtesies; then the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order to their changes, and holding the garland over her head; which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which,—as it were by inspiration,—she makes in her steep signs of refusing, and holds up her hands to heaven:
out so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone?

And leave me here, in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.
Kath. It is not you I call for:

Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.
Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop

Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun.
They promised me eternal happiness;

And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel Banish'd the kingdom!—Patience, is that letter
I caus'd you write yet sent away?
Pat. No, madam. [Giving it to Katharine.] Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.
Cap. Most willing, madam. Kath. In which I have commented to his [daughter,—
The model of our chaste loves, his young
The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!—
Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding;
She is young, and of a noble modest nature,—
I hope she will deserve well;—and a little
To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd
him,
Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor
Is, that his noble grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully:
Of which there is not one, I dare avow,—
And now I should not lie,—but will deserve,
For virtue and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty and decent carriage,
A right good husband, let him be a noble;
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have them.
The last is, for my men,—they are the poorest,
But poverty could never draw 'em from me,—
That they may have their wages duly paid 'em,
And something over to remember me by:
If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life
And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole contents:—and, good my
lord,
By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed, Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king
To do me this last right.
Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man! [me
Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember
In all humility unto his highness:
Say his long trouble now is passing [him,
Out of this world; tell him, in death I bless'd
For so I will.—Mine eyes grow dim. Farewell,
My lord.—Griffith, farewell. Nay, Patience,
You must not leave me yet: I must to bed;
Call in more women. When I am dead, good
wench,
Let me be us'd with honour: strew me over
With maiden flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste wife to my grave: embalm me,
Then lay me forth: although unqueen'd, yet like
A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can no more. [Exeunt, leading Katharine.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—LONDON. A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, a
Page with a torch before him.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?
Boy. It has struck.
Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for relights: times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times.

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.

Good hour of night, Sir Thomas! Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the king, my Lord?
Gar. I did, Sir Thomas; and left him at primero
With the Duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too, before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?

It seems you are in haste: an if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your friend
Some touch of your late business: affairs that walk,—
As they say spirits do,—at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature than the business
That seeks despatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour,
They say in great extremity; and fear'd
She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may find [Thomas,
Good time, and live: but for the stock, Sir
I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks I could Cry thee amen; and yet my conscience says
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,—
Hear me, Sir Thomas: you are a gentleman
Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well,—
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take 't of me.—
Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
Sleep in their graves.
Act IV.

SCENE I.

KING HENRY VIII.

Loy. Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Cromwell,—
Besides that of the jewel-house, he's made
O' the rolls, and the king's secretary; further,
sir,
Stands in the gap and trade of more preferments,
With which the time will load him. The archbishop [speak
Is the king's hand and tongue; and who dare
One syllable against him?
Gar. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd to speak my mind of him: and indeed this day, Sir,—I may tell it you,—I think I have Incens'd the lords o' the council, that he is,—
For so I know he is, they know he is,—
A most arch heretic, a pestilence [moved.
That does infect the land: with which they
Have broken with the king; who hath so far
Given ear to our complaint,—of his great grace
And princely care; foreseeing those fell mischiefs
Our reasons laid before him,—hath commanded
To-morrow morning to the council-board
He be convocated. He's a rank weed, Sir
Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long: good night, Sir Thomas.
Loy. Many good nights, my lord: I rest your servant.

[Exit Gardiner and Page.

As Lovell is going out, enter the King and the Duke of Suffolk.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-night;
My mind's not on't; you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.
K. Hen. But little, Charles;
Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play.—
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Loy. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent her message; who return'd her thanks
In the greatest humbleness, and desir'd your highness
Most heartily to pray for her.
K. Hen. What say'st thou, ha?
To pray for her? what, is she crying out?
Loy. So said her woman: and that her sufferance made
Almost each pang a death.
K. Hen. Alas, good lady!

Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
With gentle travail, to the gladding of
Your highness with an heir!
K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles; Prythee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember

The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone;
For I must think of that which company
Will not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness
A quiet night; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good-night.

[Exit Suffolk.

Enter Sir Anthony Denny.

Well, sir, what follows? [bishop,
Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the arch-
As you commanded me.
K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?
Den. Ay, my good lord.
K. Hen. 'Tis true: where is he, Denny?
Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.
K. Hen. Bring him to us.

Loy. This is about that which the bishop spake:
I am happily come hither. [Aside.

Re-enter Denny, with Cranmer.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery.

Loy. [Lovell seems to stay. Ha! I have said. Be gone.

What! [Exit Lovell and Denny.

Cran. I am fearful:—wherefore frowns he thus?
'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well. [Aside.
K. Hen. How now, my lord? you do desire to know
Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. It is my duty
To attend your highness' pleasure.
K. Hen. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury.
Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
I have news to tell you: come, come, give me your hand.

Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows:
I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord, Grievous complaints of you: which, being consider'd,
Have mov'd us and our council that you shall
This morning come before us: where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself
But that, till further trial in those charges
Which will require your answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower: you a brother of us,
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.
Cran. I humbly thank your highness; and am right glad to catch this good occasion. Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff And corn shall fly asunder, for I know There's none stands under more calumnious tongues Than I myself, poor man.

K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury: Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted In us, thy friend: give me thy hand, stand up: Pr'ythee, let's walk. Now, by my holy dame, What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd You would have given me your petition that I should have taken some pains to bring together Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard you, Without indulgence, further.

Cran. Most dread liege, The good I stand on is my truth and honesty: If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies, [not, Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing What can be said against me.

K. Hen. Know you not How your state stands i'the world, with the whole world? Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices Must bear the same proportion; and not ever The justice and the truth of the question carries The due o' the verdict with it: at what ease Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt To swear against you? such things have been done.

You are potently oppos'd; and with a malice Ofs great size. Ween you of better luck, I mean in perjur'd witness, than your Master, Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to: You take a precipice for no leap of danger, And woe your own destruction.

Cran. God and your majesty Protect mine innocence, or I fall into The trap is laid for me!

K. Hen. Be of good cheer; They shall no more prevail than we give way to. Keep comfort to you; and this morning see You do appear before them: if they shall chance, In charging you with matters, to commit you, The best persuasions to the contrary Fail not to use, and with what vehemency The occasion shall instruct you: if entreaties Will render you no remedy, this ring Deliver them, and your appeal to us There make before them.—Look, the good man weeps!

He's honest, on mine honour. God's bless'd mother! I swear he is true-hearted; and a soul None better in my kingdom.—Get you gone, And do as I have bid you. [Exit Cranmer.]—He has strangled His language in his tears.

Enter an Old Lady.

Gent. [Within.] Come back: what mean you? Old L. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring [angels Will make my boldness manners.—Now, good Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person Under their blessed wings!

Old L. Ay, ay, my liege; And of a lovely boy: the God of Heaven Both now and ever bless her! 'tis a girl.— Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger; 'tis as like you As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Love,

Re-enter Lovell.

Lov. Sir?

K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the queen [Exit. Old L. An hundred marks! By this light, I'll ha' more. An ordinary groom is for such payment. I will have more, or scold it out of him. Said I for this, the girl was like to him? I will have more, or else unsay't; and now, While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue.

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—Lobby before the Council Chamber.

Enter Cranmer: Servants, Door-keeper, &c., attending.

Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman That was sent to me from the council pray'd me To make great haste. All fast? what means this?—Ho! Who waits there?—Sure, you know me?

D. Keep. Yes, my lord; But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?

D. Keep. Your grace must wait till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor Butts.

Cran. So.
SCENE II.

---

Butts. [Aside.] This is a piece of malice. I am glad I came this way so hapily: the king Shall understand it presently. [Exit. Cran. [Aside.] 'Tis Butts, The King's physician: as he pass'd along, How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me! Pray, heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain, This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,— God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice,— [make me To quench mine honour: they would shame to Wait else at door, a fellow-counsellor, Among boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

The King and Butts appear at a window above. Butts. I'll show your grace the strangest sight,—

K. Hen. What's that, Butts? Butts. I think your highness saw this many a day.

K. Hen. Body o' me, where is it? Butts. There my liege: The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury; Who holds his state at door, 'mongst parvenus, Pages, and footboys.

K. Hen. Ha! 'tis he indeed: Is this the honour they do one another? 'Tis well there's one above them yet. I had thought They had parted so much honesty among 'em,— At least good manners,—as not thus to suffer A man of his place, and so near our favour, To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures, And at the door too, like a post with packets. By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery: Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close; We shall hear more anon. [Exeunt.

The Council Chamber.

Enter the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Suffolk, the Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Surrey, Lord Chamberlain, Gardiner, and Cromwell. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for the Archbishop of Canterbury. The rest seat themselves in order on each side. Cromwell at the lower end, as Secretary.

Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary:

Why are we met in council?

Crom. The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes.

Nor. Who waits there?

D. Keep. Without, my noble lords?

Gar. Yes.

D. Keep. My lord archbishop; And has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.

Chan. Let him come in.

D. Keep. Your grace may enter now. [Cran. approaches the Council-table. Chan. My good lord archbishop, I am very sorry To sit here at this present, and behold That chair stand empty: but we all are men, In our own natures frail, and capable Of our flesh; few are angels: out of which frailty [teach us, And want of wisdom, you, that best should Have misdemean'd yourself, and not a little. Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains,— For so we are inform'd,—with new opinions, Divers and dangerous; which are heresies, And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too, My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses Piece 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle, But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur 'em, Till they obey the manage. If we suffer,— Out of our casiness, and childish pity To one man's honour,—this contagious sickness, Farewell all physic; and what follows then? Commotions, uproars, with a general taint Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours, The upper Germany, can dearly witness, Yet freshly pitied in our memories. [press Cran. My good lords, hitherto in all the pro- Both of my life and office, I have laboured, And with no little study, that my teaching And the strong course of my authority Might go one way, and safely: and the end Was ever to do well: nor is there living,— I speak it with a single heart, my lords,— A man that more detests, more stirs against, Both in his private conscience and his place, Delacers of a public peace, than I do. Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart With less allegiance in it! Men that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships
That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord,
That cannot be: you are a counsellor,
And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business more moment, [pleasure,
We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness'
And our consent, for better trial of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower;
Where, being but a private man again,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah, my good Lord of Winchester, I
thank you;
You are always my good friend; if your will
I shall both find your lordship judge and jurt,
You are so merciful: I see your end—
'Tis my undoing: love and meekness, lord,
Become a churchman better than ambition:
Win straying souls with modesty again,
Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt as you do conscience
In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary.
That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers,
To men that understand you, words and weak-
Crom. My Lord of Winchester, you are a little,
By your good favour, too sharp: men so noble,
However faulty, yet should find respect
For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty
To load a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary,
I cry your honour mercy; you may, worst
Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer
Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest!
Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Crom. Do,
Remember your bold life too.

Cham. This is too much;
Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Cham. Then thus for you, my lord: it stands agreed,
I take it, by all voices, that forthwith
You be conveyed to the Tower a prisoner;
There to remain till the king's further pleasure
Be known unto us:—are you all agreed, lords?

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other
Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome.—
Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me?
Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar. Receive him,
And see him safe i' the Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lords,
I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords;
By virtue of that ring I take my cause
Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it
To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Cham. This is the king's ring.

Suf. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven: I told ye
all,
When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling,
'Twould fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords,
The king will suffer but the little finger
Of this man to be vex'd?

Cham. 'Tis now too certain:
How much more is his life in value with him?
Would I were fairly out on't!

Crom. My r'd gave me,
In seeking tales and informations
Against this man,—whose honesty the devil
And his disciples only envy at,—
Ye blew the fire that burns ye: now have at ye.

Enter the KING frowning on them; he takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven
In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince;
Not only good and wise, but most religious:
One that, in all obedience, makes the church
The chief aim of his honour; and, to strengthen
That holy duty, out of dear respect,
His royal self in judgment comes to hear
The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden commendations,
Bishop of Winchester. But know, I come not
To hear such flattery now, and in my presence;
They are too thin and bare to hide offences.
To me you cannot reach: you play the spaniel,
And think with wagging of your tongue to win
me:
K. Hen. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart:
The common voice, I see, is verified
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest,
Of thee, which says thus,—Do my Lord of
Cranmer, sit down. Now let me see the proudest, this one christening will beget a thousand:
here will be father, godfather, and all together.

_Ma._ The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in's nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance: that fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me; he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us.
There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that sailed upon me till her pink'd porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out _Clubs_ when I might see from far some forty trun-cheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope of the Strand, where she was quartered.
They fell on; I made good my place: at length they came to the broomstaff to me; I defied them still: when suddenly a file of boys behind them, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let them win the work: the devil was amongst them, I think, surely.

_Port._ These are the youths that thunder at a play-house and fight for bitten apples; that, no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill or the limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of them in _Limbo Patrum_, and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two beadles that is to come.

_Enter_ the Lord Chamberlain.

_Cham._ Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here! [coming,
They grow still too; from all parts they are
As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters,
These lazy knaves?—Ye have made a fine hand,
fellow,
There's a trim rabble let in: are all these Your faithful friends of the suburbs? We shall have [ladies,
Great store of room, no doubt, left for the
When they pass back from the christening.

_Port._ An't please your honour,
We are but men; and what so many may do,
Not being torn a pieces, we have done:
An army cannot rule'em.

_Cham._ As I live,
If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all
By the heels, and suddenly; and on your heads
Clap round fines for neglect: you're lazy knaves;
And here ye lie baiting of bombards, when

_Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets
sound:
They are come already from the christening:
Go, break among the press, and find a way out
To let the troop pass fairly: or I'll find A Marshalsea shall hold you play these two months.

_Port._ Make way there for the princess.

_Ma._ You great fellow,
Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.

_Port._ You in the camlet, get up o' the rail:
I'll pick you o'er the pales else. [Exeunt.

_SCENE IV._ _The Palace._

_Enter trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen,
Lord Mayor, Carter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolk, with his marshal's staff, Duke of Suffolk, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening gifts; then four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the Duchess of Norfolk, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle, &c. Train borne by a Lady; then follow the Marchioness of Dorset, the other godmother, and Ladies. The troop pass out about the stage, and Carter speaks.

_Cart._ Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever-happy, to the high and mighty princess of England, Elizabeth!

_Flourish. Enter King and Train._

_Cran._ [Kneeling.] And to your royal grace and the good queen,
My noble partners and myself thus pray:
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid to make parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye!

_K._ Hen._ Thank you, good Lord Archbishop,
What is her name?

_Cran._ Elizabeth.

_K._ Hen._ [Stand up, Lord. _The King kisses the child._
With this kiss take my blessing: God protect
thee!
Into whose hand I give thy life.

_Cran._ Amen.

_K._ Hen._ My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal.
I thank ye heartily; so shall this lady,
When she has so much English.

_Cran._ Let me speak, sir,
For heaven now bids me; and the words I utter
Let none think flattery, for they'll find 'em truth.
This royal infant,—Heaven still move about
her!—
K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England,
An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
Would I had known no more! but she must die,
She must, the saints must have her,—yet a virgin;
A most unspecet®d lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

K. Hen. O lord archbishop,
Thou hast made me now a man; never, before
This happy child, did I get anything:
This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me
That when I am in heaven I shall desire
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.

I thank ye all.—To you, my good lord mayor,
And you, good brethren, I am much beholding;
I have received much honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful.—Lead the way,
Lords:—[ye,
Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank
She will be sick else. This day, no man think
His business at his house; for all shall stay:
This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.

EPILOGUE.

'Tis ten to one this play can never please
All that are here; some come to take their ease,
And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
We have frightened with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear,
They'll say 'tis naught; others to hear the city
Abus'd extremely, and to cry.—That's witty!
Which we have not done neither; that, I fear,
All the expected good we're like to hear
For this play at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women;
For such a one we show'd 'em: if they smile,
And say 'twill do, I know, within awhile
All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap
If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

Trojan and Greek Soldiers, and Attendants.

Scene,—Troy, and the Grecian Camp before it.

PROLOGUE.

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece
The princes orgulous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war: sixty and nine, that wore
Their crownets regal, from the Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia: and their vow is made
To ransack Troy: within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel.
To Tenedos they come;
And the deep-drawing banks do there disgorge
Their warlike fraughtage: now on Dardan plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
Dardan, and Tymbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
And Antenorides, with massy staples
And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
Sperr up the sons of Troy.
Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard:—and hither am I come
A prologue arm'd,—but not in confidence
Of author's pen or actor's voice; but suited

In like conditions as our argument,—
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
Leaps o'er the vaunt and firstlings of those broils,
Beginning in the middle: starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.
Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are;
Now good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

ACT I.

Enter Troilus armed, and Pandaros.

Tro. Call here my valet; I'll unarm again:
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart,
Let him to field; Troilus, alas! hath none.

Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,
Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness
But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skilless as unpractis'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this:
for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further. He that will have a cake out of the wheat must needs tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening; but here's yet in the word hereafter, the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips. [be,

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she Doth lesser blest at sufferance than I do.
At Priam's royal table do I sit;
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,—
So, traitor!—when she comes!—When is she thenee?

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee,—when my heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain;
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
I have,—as when the sun doth light a storm,—
Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile:
But sorrow that is coach'd in seeming gladness
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker Than Helen's,—well, go to,—there were no more comparison between the women,—but, for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her,—but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not disparage your sister Cassandra's wit; but,—

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,
When I do tell thee there my hopes lie drown'd,
Reply not in how many fathoms deep
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressid's love: thou answer'st, she is fair;
Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart [voice;
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her
Handlest in thy discourse, O, that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink,
Writing their own reproach; to whose soft seizure
The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman!—This thou tell'st me,
As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her;
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm, [me
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given
The knife that made it!

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus,—how now, Pandarus!

Pan. I have had my labour for my travail;
ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you: gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? what, with me?

Pan. Because she is kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not an she were a blackamoor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I, she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no.
She's a fool to stay behind her father; let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her: for my part, I'll meddle nor make no more in the matter.

Tro. Pandarus,—

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me: I will leave all as I found it, and there an end.

[Exit. An alarum.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds?

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus,
I cannot fight upon this argument;
It is too strong a subject for my sword.
But Pandarus,—O gods, how do you plague me!

I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar;
And he's as tetchy as to be woo'd to woo
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?
Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl:
Between our Ilium and where she resides
Let it be cal'd the wild and wandering flood;
Ourself the merchant; and this sailing Pandar
Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

Alarum. Enter Æneas.

Æne. How now, Prince Troilus! wherefore not asfield?

[sorts,

Tro. Because not there: this woman's answer
For womanish it is to be from thence.

What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?

Æne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Æneas?

Æne. Troilus, by Menelaus.
Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn;
Paris is gerd with Mendace's horn. [Alarum.
Alex. Mark, what good sport is out of town
to-day!
Tro. Better at home, if would I might were
mew. — [thither?
But to the sport abroad;—are you bound
Alex. In all swift haste.
Tro. Come, go we, then, together. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Troy. A Street.

Enter Cressida and Alexander.

Cres. Who were those went by?
Alex. Queen Hecuba and Helen.
Cres. And whither go they?
Alex. Up to the eastern tower.
Whose height commands as subject all the vale,
To see the battle. Hector, whose patience
Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd:
He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer;
And, like as there were husbandry in war,
Before the sun rose he was harness'd light,
And to the field goes he; where every flower
Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw
In Hector's wrath.
Cres. What was his cause of anger?
Alex. The noise goes, this: there is among the Greeks
A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;
They call him Ajax.
Cres. Good; and what of him?
Alex. They say he is a very man per se,
And stands alone.
Cres. So do all men,—unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.
Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions: he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of; nor any man an attain't, but he carries some stain of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: he hath the joints of everything; but everything so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use;
or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.
Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?
Alex. They say he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and walking.
Cres. Who comes here?
Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Enter Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.
Alex. As may be in the world, lady.
Pan. What's that? what's that?
Cres. Good-morrow, uncle Pandarus.
Pan. Good-morrow, cousin Cressida: what do you talk of?—Good-morrow, Alexander.—
How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?
Cres. This morning, uncle.
Pan. What were you talking of when I came?
Was Hector armed and gone ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?
Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.
Pan. E'en so: Hector was stirring early.
Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.
Pan. Was he angry?
Cres. So he says here.
Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too;
his head about him to-day, I can tell them that:
and there is Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell them that too.
Cres. What, is he angry too?
Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.
Cres. O Jupiter! there's no comparison.
Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector?
Do you know a man if you see him?
Cres. Ay, if I ever saw him before, and knew
him.
Pan. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.
Cres. Then you say as I say; for I am sure he is not Hector.
Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degrees.
Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.
Pan. Himself! Alas, poor Troilus! I would he were,—
Cres. So he is.
Pan. Condition, I had gone barefoot to India.
Cres. He is not Hector.
Pan. Himself! no, he's not himself,—would
'a were himself! Well, the gods are above;
time must friend or end: well, Troilus, well,—
I would my heart were in her body!—No,
Hector is not a better man than Troilus.
Cres. Excuse me.
Pan. He is elder.
Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.
Pan. The other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale when the other's come to 't.
Hector shall not have his wit this year.—
Cres. He shall not need it if he have his own.
Pan. Nor his qualities,—
Cres. No matter.
Pan. Nor his beauty.
Cres. 'Twould not become him,—his own's better.
Pan. You have no judgment, niece: Helen herself swore the other day that Troilus, for a brown favour,—for so 'tis, I must confess,—not brown neither,— Cres. No, but brown.
Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.
Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.
Pan. She praised his complexion above Paris.
Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.
Pan. So he has.
Cres. Then Troilus should have too much: if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flattering a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.
Pan. I swear to you I think Helen loves him better than Paris.
Cres. Then she's a merry Greek indeed.
Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him the other day into the compassed window,—and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin,— Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.
Pan. Why, he is very young: and yet will he, within three pounds, lift as much as his brother Hector.
Cres. Is he so young a man and so old a lifter?
Pan. But to prove to you that Helen loves him,—she came, and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin,— Cres. Juno have mercy! how came it cloven?
Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled: I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.
Cres. O, he smiles valiantly.
Pan. Does he not?
Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.
Pan. Why, go to, then:—but to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,— Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof if you'll prove it so.
Pan. Troilus! why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.
Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would cat chickens in the shell.
Pan. I cannot choose but laugh to think how she tickled his chin;—indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess,— Cres. Without the rack.
Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.
Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer.
Pan. But there was such laughing!—Queen Hecuba laughed, that her eyes ran o'er,— Cres. With milestones.
Pan. And Cassandra laughed,—
Cres. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes. —Did her eyes run o'er too?
Pan. And Hector laughed.
Cres. At what was all this laughing?
Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.
Cres. An't had been a green hair I should have laughed too.
Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer.
Cres. What was his answer?
Pan. Quoth she, Here's but one and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.
Cres. This is her question.
Pan. That's true; make no question of that.
One and fifty hairs, quoth he, and one white; that white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons. —Jupiter! quoth she, which of these hairs is Paris my husband? —The forlorn one, quoth he; pluck it out and give it him. But there was such laughing! and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed; and all the rest so laughed that it passed.
Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by.
Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't.
Cres. So I do.
Pan. I'll be sworn 'tis true; he will weep you an 'twere a man born in April.
Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May. [A retreat sounded.
Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field: shall we stand up here, and see them as they pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet Cressida.
Cres. At your pleasure.
Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely: I'll tell you them all by their names as they pass by; but mark Troilus above the rest.
Cres. Speak not so loud.

AENEAS passes.

Pan. That's Aeneas: is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you. But mark Troilus; you shall see anon.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT I.

ANTENOR passes.

Cres. Who’s that?

Pan. That’s Antenor: he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he’s a man good enough: he’s one o’ the soundest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troilus?—I’ll show you Troilus anon; if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes.

Pan. That’s Hector, that, that, look you, that; there’s a fellow!—Go thy way, Hector!—There’s a brave man, niece.—O brave Hector!—Look how he looks!—There’s a countenance! Is’t not a brave man?

Cres. O, a brave man!

Pan. Is’t not? It does a man’s heart good. Look you what hacks are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there: there’s no jesting; there’s laying on; take’t off who will, as they say: there be hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

Pan. Swords! anything, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it’s all one: by god’s lid, it does one’s heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris:

PARIS passes.

look ye yonder, niece; is’t not a gallant man too, is’t not?—Why, this is brave now.—Who said he came hurt home to-day? he’s not hurt: why, this will do Helen’s heart good now, ha!—Would I could see Troilus now!—you shall see Troilus anon.

HELENUS passes.

Cres. Who’s that?

Pan. That’s Helenus:—I marvel where Troilus is:—that’s Helenus:—I think he went not forth to-day:—that’s Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus! no;—yes, he’ll fight indifferent well.—I marvel where Troilus is.—Hark! do you not hear the people cry Troilus?—Helenus is a priest.

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

TROILUS passes.

Pan. Where? yonder? that’s Deiphobus:—tis Troilus! there’s a man, niece!—I tell!—Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him:—O brave Troilus!—look well upon him, niece; look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hack’d than Hector’s; and how he looks, and how he goes.—O admirable youth! he ne’er saw three and twenty.—Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way!—Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris—Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

Cres. Here come more.

Forces pass.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat!—I could live and die i’ the eyes of Troilus.—Ne’er look, ne’er look; the eagles are gone: crows and daws, crows and daws!—I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles,—a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles! a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well!—Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a minced man: and then to be baked with no date in the pie,—for then the man’s date’s out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I’ll watch you for that; and that’s one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it is past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

Enter Troilus’ Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house; there he unarmed.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy. I doubt he be hurt.—Fare ye well, good niece.
SCENE III.—THE GRECIAN CAMP. Before Agamemnon’s Tent.

Sen. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Menelaus, and others.

Agam. Princes, [cheeks?]
What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks? The ample proposition that hope makes? All designs begun on earth below [disasters]
Fails in the promis’d largeness: cheeks and Grow in the veins of actions highest rear’d;
As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,
Infect the sound pine, and divert his grain
Tortive and errant from his course of growth.
Nor, princes, is it matter new to us
That we come short of our suppose so far
That, after seven years’ siege, yet Troy walls
stand;
Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have record, trial did draw
Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,
And that un-bodied figure of the thought
That gav’t surmised shape. Why, then, you princes,
Do you with cheeks abash’d behold our works;
And call them shames, which are, indeed,
naught else
But the protractive trials of great Jove
To find persitient constancy in men?
The fineness of which metal is not found
In fortune’s love; for then the bold and coward,
The wise and fool, the artist and unread,
The hard and soft, seem all affin’d and kin:

But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,
Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away;
And what hath mass or matter, by itself
Lies rich in virtue and unmingled. [seat,
Nest. With due observance of thy godlike
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance Lies the true proof of men: the sea being smooth,
How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast, making their way
With those of nobler bulk!
But let the ruffian Boreas once outrage
The gentle Thetis, and, anon, behold
The strong-ribb’d bark through liquid mountains cut,
Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Perseus’ horse: where’s then the saucy boat,
Whose weak untimber’d sides but even now
Co-rival’d greatness? either to harbour fled
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so Doth valour’s show and valour’s worth divide
In storms of fortune: for in her ray and brightness
The herd hath more annoyance by the breeze:
Than by the tiger: but when the splitting wind
Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
An I flies fled under shade,—why, then, the thing of courage,
As rous’d with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent tun’d in self-same key Retorts to ciding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,— Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,
Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,
In whom the tempers and the minds of all
Should be shut up,—hear what Ulysses speaks.
Besides the applause and approbation
The which,—most mighty for thy place and sway,—

[To Agamemnon.
And thou most reverend for thy stretch’d-out life,—

[To Nestor.
I give to both your speeches,—which were such
As Agamemnon and the hand of Groce
Should hold up high in brass; and such again
As venerable Nestor, hatch’d in silver, [tree
Should with a bond of air,—strong as the axle-
On which heaven rides,—knit all the Greek’s-h ears

[both,—
To his experience’d tongue,—yet let it please
Thou great,—and wise,—to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca; and be t of less expect,
That matter needless, of importless burden,
TROILUS

But with frights,

Crowns so

So doubly seconded with will and power,

Troy, yet upon his basis, had been

And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,

This chaos, when degree is suffocat

And this neglect of degree it is

And this is Agamemnon.

And this neglect of degree it is

That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose

That by the next;

That next by him beneath: so every step,

And this neglect of degree it is

Of his superior, grows to an envious fever

Of pale and bloodless emulation;

And this for the first pace that is sick

And his own sinews. To end a tale of length,

Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd

The fever whereof all our power is sick.

Agam. The nature of the sickness found,

Ulysses,

What is the remedy? [crows

Ulyss. The great Achilles,—whom opinion

Having his car full of his airy fame,

Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent

Lies mocking our designs with him Patroclus,

Upon a lazy bed, the livelong day

Breaks scurril jests;

And with ridiculous and awkward action,—

Which, slanderer, he imitacion calls,—

He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,

Thy topless deputation he puts on;

And, like a strutting player,—whose conceit

Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich

To hear the wooden dialogue and sound

'Twixt his stretch'd footings and the scafolding;

Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming

He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks

'Tis like a chime a-mending; with terms undropp'd,

Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon

Would seem hyperboles. At this jolly stuff

The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling

From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;

Cries, Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just.

Now play me Nestor; here is Nestor;

As he being drest to some oration.

That's done;—as near as the extremest ends

Of parallels; as like as Vulcan and his wife:

Yet god Achilles still cries, Excellent!

'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patroclus,

Arming to answer in a night alarm.

And then, sooth, the faint defects of age

Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and spit,

And, with a palsy-fumbling on his gorged,

Shake in and out the rivet: and at this sport

Sir Valentine; cries, O, enough, enough;
Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
In pleasure of my spleen. And in this fashion
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Several and generals of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field or speech for truce,
Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain,—
Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice,—many are infect.
Ajax is grown self-willed; and bears his head
In such a rein, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him;
Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war
Bold as an oracle; and sets Thersites,—
A slave, whose gall coins slanders like a mint,
To match us in comparisons with dirt,
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank sover rounded in with danger.

Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice;
Count wisdom as no member of the war;
Forestand prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand: the still and mental parts,—
That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
When fitness calls them on; and know, by measure
Of their observant toil, the enemies’ weight,—
Why, this hath not a finger’s dignity:
They call this bed-work, mappery, closet-war;
So that the ram that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudeness of his poise,
They place before his hand that made the engine,
Or those that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles’ horse Makes many Thetis’ sons. [Trumpet sounds.
Men. From Troy.

Enter Æneas.

Agam. What would you ’fore our tent?
Æne. Is this great Agamemnon’s tent, I pray you?
Agam. Even this. Æne. May one, that is a herald and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears?
Agam. With surely stronger than Achilles’ arm [voice
‘Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one Call Agamemnon head and general. [may Æne. Fair leave and large security. How
A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?
Agam. How!
Æne. Ay; I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And bid the cheek be ready with a blush
Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phoebus;
Which is that god in office, guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?
Agam. This Trojan scorns us; or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious courtier.
Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonair, unmurm’d,
As bending angels; that’s their fame in peace:
But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,
[jove’s accord,
Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and,
Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas,
Peace, Trojan; say thy finger on thy lips!
The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
If that the prais’d himself bring the praise forth:
But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath fame blows; that praise, sole pure, transcends. [Æneas?
Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself
Æne. Ay, Greek, that is my name.
Agam. What’s your affair, I pray you?
Æne. Sir, pardon; ’tis for Agamemnon’s ears.
Agam. He hears not privately that comes from Troy. [him;
Æne. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper
I bring a trumpet to awake his ear;
To set his sense on the attentive bent,
And then to speak.
Agam. Speak frankly as the wind;
It is not Agamemnon’s sleeping hour:
That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,
He tells thee so himself.
Æne. Trumpet, blow loud,
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents;
And every Greek of mettle, let him know
What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.
[Trumpet sounds.
We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy
A prince called Hector,—Priam is his father,—
Who in this dull and long-continued truce
Is rusty grown: he bade me take a trumpet
And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes, lords!
If there be one among the fairst of Greece
That holds his honour higher than his ease;
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril;
That knows his valour and knows not his fear;
That loves his mistress more than in confession,—
With truant vows to her own lips he loves,—
And dare avow her beauty and her worth
In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.
Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it,
As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo knows, 'Tis dry enough,—will, with great speed of judgment, Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose Pointing on him.

_Ulyss._ And wake him to the answer, think you?

_Nest._ Yes, 'tis most meet: whom may you That can from Hector bring his honour off, If not Achilles? Though 'tis but a sportful combat, Yet in the trial much opinion dwells; For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute With their first palate; and trust to me, Ulysses, Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd In this wild action; for the success, Although particular, shall give a scantling Of good or bad unto the general; And in such indexes, although small pricks To their subsequent volumes, there is seen The baby figure of the giant mass Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd He that meets Hector issues from our choice: And choice being mutual act of all our souls, Makes merit her election; and doth boil, As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd Out of our virtues; who miscarrying, [part, What heart receives from hence the conquering To steal a strong opinion to themselves? Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments. In no less working than are swords and bows Directive by the limbs.

_Ulyss._ Give pardon to my speech;— Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector. Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares, And think perchance they'll sell; if not, The lustre of the better shall exceed, By showing the worst first. Do not consent That ever Hector and Achilles meet; For both our honour and our shame in this Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

_Nest._ I see them not with my old eyes: what are they?

_Ulyss._ What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,

_Were he not proud, we all should share with But he already is too insolent; And we were better parch in Afric sun Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes. Should he 'scape Hector fair: if he were foil'd, Why, then we did our main opinion crush In taint of our best man. No, make a lottery; And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw The sort to fight with Hector: among ourselves, Give him allowance for the better man; For that will physic the great Myrmidon Who broils in loud applause, and make him fall  His crest that prouder than Blue Iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices: if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still.
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project's life this shape of sense assumes,— Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

[Exeunt.]

And I will give a taste of it forthwith.
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.
Two ears shall tame each other: pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone.

[Exit.]

ACT II.

Scene I.—Another part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter Ajax and Thersites.

Ajax. Thersites,—
Thers. Agamemnon,—how if he had boil'd,— full, all over, generally?—

Ajax. Thersites,—
Thers. And those boil'd did run?—Say so,— did not the general run then? were not that a botchy core?—

Ajax. Dog,—
Thers. Then would come some matter from him; I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear? Feel, then.

Thers. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak, then, thou vinewedst leaven, speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Thers. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but I think thy horse will sooner con an oration than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red marrain of thy jade's tricks!

Ajax. Treas'tool, learn me the proclamation.

Thers. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou striketh me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation,—

Thers. Then art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porcupine, do not; my fingers itch.

Thers. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou striketh as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation,—

Thers. Thou grumblest and railesst every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou barest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites:

Thers. Thou shouldst strike him.

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Thers. He would run thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Thers. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Thers. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord!
thou hast no more brain than I have in mine
ebows; an assago may tutor thee: thou scurvy valiant ass! thou art here but to bash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Thers. You scurvy lord!

Thers. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

[Exit.]

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax! wherefore do you this?—

How now, Thersites! what's the matter, man?

Thers. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?

Thers. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. So I do: what's the matter?

Thers. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well! why, I do so.

Thers. But yet you look not well upon him:
for whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that, fool.

Thers. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Thers. Lo, lo, lo, what modicum of wit he utters! his evasions have ears thus long.
I have bobbed his brain more than he has bit my bones: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pot meter is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax,—who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head,—I'll tell you what I say of
him.

Achil. What?

Thers. I say, this Ajax,—

[Ajax offers to beat him, Achilles interposes.]

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

Thers. Has not so much wit,—

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Thers. After, I will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool!
Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall,—

Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's?

Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool's will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I hate the vile owl go learn me the tenor of the proclamation, and he bats upon me.

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary,—no man is beaten voluntary: Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Ther. 'E'en so; a great deal of your wit, too, lies in your sinews, or else there be liars.
Hector shall have a great catch if he knock out either of your brains: 'a were as good crack a fasty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther. There's Ulysses and old Nestor,— whose wit was mouldy ere your grand-sires had nails on their toes,—yoke you like draught oxen, and make you plough up the wars.

Achil. What, what?

Ther. Yes, good sooth: to, Achilles! to,
Ajax! to!

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites: peace!

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hanged, like clot-poles, ere you come any more to your tents: I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools.

Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host:

That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun,
Will, with a trumpet, twixt our tents and Troy,
To-morrow morning call some knight to arms.
That hath a stomach, and such a one that dare
Maintain I know not what; 'tis trash. Farewell,

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not, it is put to lottery; otherwise
He knew his man.

Ajax. O, meaning you,—I'll go learn more of it. [Exit.

SCENE II.—TROY. A Room in Priam's Palace.

Enter Priam, Hector, Troilus, Paris, and Helenus.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent,
Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:

Deliver Helen, and all damage else,—
As honour, loss of time, travail, expense, Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd.

In hot digestion of this cormorant war,
Shall be struck off.—Hector, what say you to'

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I,
As far as toucheth my particular,
Yet, dread Priam,
There is no lady of more softer bowels,
More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out, Who knows what follows?
Than Hector is: the wound of peace is surety,
Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd
The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches
To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go:
Since the first sword was drawn about this question,
Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand dismes,
Hath been as dear as Helen,—I mean, of ours:
If we have lost so many tenths of ours,
To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten,—
What merit's in that reason which denies
The yielding of her up?

Tro. Fie, fie, my brother!

Weigh you the worth and honour of a king,
So great as our dread father, in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counters sum
The past-proportion of his infinite?
And buckle-in a waist most f.athmless
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reasons? fie, for godly shame!

Hec. No marvel though you bite so sharp at reasons: [Father
You are so empty of them. Should not our Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons,
Because your speech hath none that tells him so?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumber, brother priest; [Reasons
You far your gloves with reason. Here are your
You know an enemy intends you harm;
You know a sword employ'd is perilous,
And reason flies the object of all harm:
Who marvels, then, when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels,
Scene II.

And fly like child en Mercury from Jove,
Or like a star disrob'd?—Nay if we talk of reason
Let's shut our gates and sleep: manhood and Should have have hearts would they but fat their thoughts
With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect
Make livers pale and lusthod deject. [cost
Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth
The holding.

Tro. What is aught but as 'tis valued?
Hect. But value dwells not in particular will;
It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the prizer: 'tis mad idolatry
To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dothes, that is attributive
To what infectious itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgment: how may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it elected,
The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To bolster from this, and to stand firm by honour:
We turn not back the silks upon the merchant
When we have soil'd them; nor the remainder viands
We do not throw in unrespective sieve,
Because we now are full. It was thought meet
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:
Your breath of full consent beilied his sails;
The seas and winds,—old wranglers,—took a truce, [desir'd;
And did him service: he touch'd the ports
And for an old aunt, whom the Greeks held captive,
[freshness
He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes stale themorning.
Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt:
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl,
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,
And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went,—
As you must needs, for you all cried, Go, go,—
If you'll confess he brought home noble prize,—
As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands,
And cried, Inestimable!—why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,
And do a deed that fortune never did,— Beggar the estimation which you prized
Richer than sea and land? O theft most base,
That we have stol'n what we do fear to keep!
But thieves, unworthy of a thing so stol'n,
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri. What noise? what shrill is this?

Pro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

Hect. It is Cassandra.

Enter Cassandra, raving.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand
eyes,
And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

Hect. Peace, sister, peace. [old,
Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled
Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moister of that mass of moan to come.
Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand;
Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all.
Cry, Trojans, cry! an Helen and a woe:
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go.

[Exit.

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains
Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it;
Nor once deject the courage of our minds
Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-sick raptures
Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons:
And Jove forbid there should be done amongst us
Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain!

Par. Else might the world convince of levy
As well my undertakings as your counsels:
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on such a project.
For what, alas, can these my single arms?
What propagation is in one man's valour,
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.
Pri. Paris, you speak in one besotted on your sweet delights: you have the honey still, but these the gall; so to be valiant is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself the pleasures such a beauty brings with it; but I would have the soil of her fair rape.wiped off in honourable keeping her. What treason were it to the ransack'd queen, disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me, now to deliver her possession up on terms of base compulsion! Can it be that so degenerate a strain as this should once set footing in your generous bosoms? There's not the meanest spirit on our party, without a heart to dare or sword to draw, when Helen is defended; nor none so noble, whose life were ill bestow'd or death unfam'd, where Helen is the subject: then, I say, [well, we'll may we fight for her, whom, we know the world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said well; and on the cause and question now in hand have glos'd;—but superficially: not much unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought unfit to hear moral philosophy:
the reasons you allege do more conduce to the hot passion of temp'rant blood than to make up a free determination 'twixt right and wrong; for pleasure and revenge have ears more deaf than adders to the voice of any true decision. Nature craves all dues be render'd to their owners: now, what nearer debt in all humanity than wife is to the husband? If this law of nature be corrupted through affection; and that great minds, of partial indulgence to their benumbed wills, resist the same; there is a law in each well-order'd nation to curb those raging appetites that are most disobedient and refractory.
if Helen, then, be wife to Sparta's king,—as it is known she is,—these moral laws of nature and of nations speak aloud to have her back return'd: thus to persist in doing wrong extenuates not wrong, but makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion is this, in way of truth: yet, nevertheless, my spritely brethren, I propound to you in resolution to keep Helen still; for 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence upon our joint and several dignities.

Thers. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:

Were it not glory that we more affected than the performance of our heaving spleens, I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector, she is a theme of honour and renown:
a spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds:
whose present courage may beat down our foes and fame in time to come canonize us:
for, I presume, brave Hector would not base so rich advantage of a promised glory, as smiles upon the forehead of this action, for the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours, you valiant offspring of great Priamus,—I have a roasting challenge sent amongst the dull and factious nobles of the Greeks will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits: I was advertised their great general slept, whilst emulation in the army crept:
This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt.

Scene III. The Grecian Camp. In front of Achilles' Tent.

Enter Thersites.

Thers. How now; Thersites! what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury! Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O worthy satisfaction! would it were otherwise; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me. 'Shoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful excrections. Then there's Achilles,—a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove, the king of gods; and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus; if ye take not that little little less-than-little wit from them that they have! which short-aimed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in construction deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the bone-ache! for that, methinks is the curse dependent on those that war for: plebeet. I have said my prayers; and devil envy say Amen.—What ho! my Lord Achilles!

Enter Patroclus.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites! Good Thersites, come in and rail.

Thers. If I could have remembered a gilt counterfeit, thou would'st not have slipped out of my contemplation; but it is no matter;
thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen.—Where's Achilles?

Patr. What, art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay, the heavens hear me!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where?—Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come,—what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles:—then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites: then tell me, I pray thee, v.'t's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus: then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayest tell that knowest.

Achil. O, tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man.—Proceed, Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand of the prover. It suffices me thou art.—Look you, who comes here?

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody.—Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit Patroclus.

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is a cuckold and a whore; a good quarrel to draw emulous factions and bleed to death upon. Now the dry serpigo on the subject! and war and lechery confound all! [Exit Ther.]

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomedes, and Ajax.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but ill-disposed, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

He shent our messengers; and we lay by Our appertainings, visiting of him: Let him be told so; lest, perchance, he think We dare not move the question of our place, Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit. Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent: He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart: you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: but why, why? let him show us the cause.—A word, my lord. [Takes Agamemnon aside.

Nest. Who, Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss. No: you see, he is his argument that has his argument,—Achilles.

Nest. All the better: their faction is more our wish than their faction. But it was a strong composure a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie. Here comes Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Re-enter Patroclus.

Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry If anything more than your sport and pleasure Did move your greatness; and this noble state To call upon him; he hopes it is no other But for your health and your digestion sake,— An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. I hear you, Patroclus:—We are too well acquainted with these answers: But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn Cannot outfly our apprehensions. Much attribute he hath; and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him: yet all his virtues,— Not virtuously on his own part beheld,— Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss; Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him.
We come to speak with him; and you shall not sin
If you do say we think him over-proud
And under-honest; in self-assumption greater Than in the note of judgment; and worthier than himself
Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on,
Disguise the holy strength of their command,
And underwrite in an observing kind
His humorous predominance; yea, watch
His pettish tunes, his ebbs, his flows, as if
The passage and whole carriage of this action
Tide on his side. Go tell him this; and add,
That if he overhold his price so much,
We'll none of him; but let him, like an engine
Not portable, lie under this report;—
Bring action hither, this cannot go to war:
A stirring dwarf we do allowance give
Before a sleeping giant:—tell him so.
Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently.
[Exit.

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied;
We come to speak with him.—Ulysses, enter you.
[Exit Ulysses.

Ajax. What is he more than another?
Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.
Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am?
Agam. No question.
Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?
Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.
Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.
Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud eats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed devours the deed in the praise.
Ajax. I do hate a proud man as I hate the generating of toads.
Nest. Yet he loves himself: is not strange?
[Aside.

Re-enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow
Agam. What's his excuse?
Ulyss. He doth rely on none;
But carries on the stream of his dispose,
Without observance or respect of any,
In will peculiar and in self-admission.
Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request,
Untent his person, and share the air with us?

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only,
[greatness:
He makes important: possess'd he is with
And speaks not to himself but with a pride
That quarrels at self-breath: imagin'd worth
Holds in his blood such swarm and hot discourse
That 'twixt his mental and his active parts
Kingdom's Achilles in commotion rages,
And batters down himself: what should I say?
He is so plagiary proud that the death tokens of it
Cry, No recovery.

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.—
Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent;
'Tis said he holds you well; and will be led,
At your request, a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so!
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles. Shall the proud
lord,
That bastess his arrogance with his own seam,
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts,—save such as do revolve
And ruminate himself,—shall he be worshipp'd
Of that we hold an idol more than he?
No, this thrice-worthy and right valiant lord
Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquire'd;
Nor, by my will, assuageth his merit,
As amply tinted as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles:
That were to enlaid his fat already pride,
And add more coals to Cancer when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.
This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid;
And say in thunder, Achilles go to him.

Nest. O, this is well; he rubs the vein of him.

Aside.

Dio. And how his silence drinks up this applause!

Aside.

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist
I'll push him o'er the face.
Agam. O, no, you shall not go. [pride:
Ajax. An 'a be proud with me I'll pheaze his Let me go to him.

Aside.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow!
Ajax. Can he not be sociable?
Ulyss. The raven chides blackness. [Aside.
Ajax. I'll let his humours blood.
Agam. He will be the physician that should be the patient.
[Aside.

Ajax. An all men were o' my mind,—
Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion. [Aside.
Ajax. 'A should not bear it so, 'A should eat swords first: shall pride carry it?

Nest. An'twould, you'd carry half. [Aside.

Ulyss. 'A would have ten shares. [side.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—TROY.  A Room in Priam's Palace.

Enter Pandarbus and a Servant.

Pan. Friend, you,—pray you, a word: do not you follow the young Lord Paris?
Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.
Pan. You depend upon him, I mean?
Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.
Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman; I must needs praise him.
Serv. The lord be praised!
Pan. You know me, do you not?
Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.
Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the Lord Pandarus.
Serv. I hope I shall know your honour better.
Pan. I do desire it
Serv. You are in the state of grace,

Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles.—What music is this?
Serv. I do but partly know, sir: it is music in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?
Serv. Wholly, sir.
Pan. Who play they to?
Serv. To the hearers, sir.
Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?
Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.
Serv. Who shall I command, sir?
Pan. Friend, we understand not one another:
I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning.
At whose request do these men play?
Serv. That's to t, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul,—
Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida?
S. v. No, sir, Helen: could you not find out that by her attributes?
Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus: I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business seethes.
Serv. Sudden business! there's a stewed phrase indeed!

Enter Paris and Helen, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them!—especially to you, fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pinnow!
Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.
Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.—Fair prince, here is good broken music.
Par. You have broke it, cousin: and by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall lose it out with a piece of your performance.
—Nell, he is full of harmony.
Pan. Truly, lady, no.
Helen. O, sir,—
Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.
Pan. Well said, my lord! well, you say so in fits.
Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen.
—My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?
Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll hear you sing, certainly.
Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me.—But, marry, thus, my lord,—My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus,— Helen. My Lord Pandarus; honey-sweet lord,—
Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to:—commends himself most affectionately to you,— Helen. You shall not hob us out of our melody: if you do, our melancholy upon your head!
Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen, I' faith.
Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.
Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words; no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you that, if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.
Helen. My Lord Pandarus,—
Pan. What says my sweet queen,—my very very sweet queen?
Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night?
Helen. Nay, but, my lord,—
Pan. What says my sweet queen?—My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups.
Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.
Pan. No, no, no such matter; you are wide: come, your disposer is sick.
Par. Well, I'll make excuse.
Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.
Par. I spy.
Pan. You spy! what do you spy?—Come, give me an instrument.—Now, sweet queen.
Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is glibly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.
Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.
Pan. He! no, she'll none of him; they two are twain.
Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.
Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this; I'll sing you a song now.
Helen. Ay, ay, pr'ythee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.
Pan. Ay, you may, you may.
Helen. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!
Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, I' faith. [love.
Par. Ay, good now, love, love, love, nothing but Pan. In good troth, it begins so:
Love, love, nothing but love, still more!
For, oh, love's bow
Shoots luck and doe:
The shaft confounds,
Not that it wounds,
But tackles still the sore.
These lovers cry—Oh! oh! they die!
Yet that which seems the wound to kill,
Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! ha!
So dying love lives still:
Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!
Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ha! ha!

Heigh ho!
Helen. In love, I' faith, to the very tip of the nose.
Par. He eats nothing but doves, love; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begot hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.
Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they are vipers: is love a generation of vipers?
—Sweet lord, who's a-field to-day?
Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy: I would fain have armed to-day, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not?
Helen. He hangs the lip at something:—you know all, Lord Pandarus.
Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen.—I hang to hear how they sped to-day. You'll remember your brother's excuse?
Par. To a hair.
Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.
Helen. Commend me to your niece.
Pan. I will, sweet queen. [Exit.

[A retreat sounded.
Par. They are come from field; let us to Priam's hall [woo you To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must
To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles,
With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd,
Shall more obey than to the edge of steel,
Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall do more Than all the island kings,—disarm great Hector.
Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris;
Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty
Gives us more palm in beauty than we have,
Yea, overshines ourself.
Pan. Sweet, above thought I love thee.
[Exeunt.

Scene II.—Troy. Pandarus' Orchard.
Enter Pandarus and Troilus' Boy, meeting.
Pan. How now! where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?
[him thither.
Boy. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct
Pan. O, here he comes.

Enter Troilus.

How now, how now!
Tro. Sirrah, walk off.
Pan. Have you seen my cousin?
Tro. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door,
Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks
Staying for waftage, O, be thou my Charon,
And give me swift transportance to those fields
Where I may wallow in the lily beds
Propos'd for the deserver! O gentle Pandarus,
From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings,
And fly with me to Cressid!
Pan. Walk here i' the orchard, I'll bring her straight.
[Exit.
Tro. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round.
The imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchanteth my sense: what will it be,
When that the watry palate tastes indeed
Love's thrice-reured nectar? death, I fear me;
Swooning destruction; or some joy too fine,
Too subtle-potent, tun'd too sharp in sweetness,
For the capacity of my ruder powers:
I fear it much; and I do fear besides
That I shall lose distinction in my joys;
As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying.

Re-enter Pandarus.
Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight:
you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were fray'd with a sprite: I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain: she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta'en sparrow.
[Exit.

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom:

My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse;
And all my powers do their bestowing lose,
Like vassalage at unawares encountering
The eye of majesty.

Re-enter Pandarus with Cressida.
Pan. Come, come, what need you blush?
Shame's a baby.—Here she now: swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me.
—What, are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you?
Come your ways, come your ways; an you draw backward, we'll put you in the fills.— Why do you not speak to her?—Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loth you are to offend daylight!
An 't were dark, you'd close sooner. So, so;
rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now,
A kiss in fee-farm! build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks i' the river: go to, go to.

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.
Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds:
but she'll bereave you of the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again? Here's—In witness whereof the parties interchangeably.—Come in, come in: I'll go get a fire.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wished me thus!

Cres. Wished, my lord!—The gods grant,—
O my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?
Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils of cherubims; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: to fear the worst oft cures the worse.

Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear: in all
Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.
Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither?

Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, cat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrousness in love, lady;—that the will is infinite, and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit.

Cres. They say, all lovers swear more per-for nance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

Tro. Are there such? such are not we; praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare till merit crown it: no perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert before his birth; and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truest not truer than Troilus.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter Pandarus.

Pan. What, blushing still? have you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that: if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord: if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too; our kindred, though they be long ere they are woed, they are constant being won: they are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart:—

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day
For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid, then, so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord,
With the first glance that ever—Pardon me,—
If I confess much, you will play the tyrant.
I love you now; but not, till now, so much
But I might master it:—in faith, I lie;
My thoughts were like unbridl'd children, grown
Too headstrong for their mother:—see, we fools! Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us,
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?—
But, though I lov'd you well, I wo'd you not;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man,
Or that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;

For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence,

Cunning in dullness, from my weakness draws
My very soul of conscience!—Stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pan. Pretty, 'tis faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me:
'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss;
I am asham'd:—O heavens! what have I done?
For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid!

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning,—

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun Yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try:
I have a kind of self resides with you;
But an unkind self, that itself will leave
To be another's fool. I would be gone:—
Where is my wit? I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love;
And fell so roundly to a large confession,
To angle, or your thoughts: but you wise;
Or else on love not, for to be wise and love
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O that I thought it could be in a woman,—
As, if it can, I will presume in you,—
To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love;
To keep her constancy in plight and youth,
Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays!
Or, that persuasion could but thus convince me,—
That my integrity and truth to you
Might be afronted with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love;
How were ' then uplifted! but, alas! I am as true as truth's simplicity,
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. A virtuous fight,
When right with right wars who shall be most right!
True swains in love shall, in the world to come,
Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes,
Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,
Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration,—
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon.
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,—
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentic author to be cited,
As true as Troilus shall crown up the verse,
And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be!
If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself,
When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,
And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated
To dusty nothing; yet let memory
From false to false, among false maids in love,
Upbraid my falsehood! when they have said—as false
As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Iard to the kind, or stepdame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,
As false as Cressid.

Pan. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it;
I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand;
here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name, call them all Pandars; let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers between Pandars! say, amen.

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber and a bed; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death: away! And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maids here, bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear!

[Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Diomedes, Nestor, Ajax, Menelaus, and Calchas.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you
The advantage of the time prompts me alond
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind
That, through the sight I bear in things to Jove,
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incur'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes; sequest'rest from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition
Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Again. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan?

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd
Yesterday took: Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you,—often have you thanks there-fore,—
Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied: but this Antenor,
I know, is such a wrest in their affairs
That their negotiations all must slack
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes,
And he shall buy my daughter; and her presence
Shall quite strike off all service I have done
In most accepted pain.

Again. Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Cressid hither: Calchas shall have
What he requests of us.—Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal, bring word if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden
Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt Diomedes and Calchas.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus, before their tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands i'the entrance of his tent:
Please it our general to pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot; and, princes all,
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him:
I will come last. 'Tis like he'll question me
Why such unpleasing eyes are bent on him:
If so, I have derision med'cinable,
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink:
It may do good: pride hath no other glass
To show itself but pride; for supple knees
Feed arrogance, and are the proud man's fees.

Again. We'll execute your purpose, and put on
A form of strangeness as we pass along:—
So do each lord; and either greet him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achill. What, comes the general to speak with me?

[Troy.
You know my mind, I'll fight no more against Again. What says Achilles? would be aught with us?

[general?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the Achill. No.
Nest. Nothing, my lord.
Agam. The better.

[Exit AGAMEMNON and NESTOR.

Achil. Good day, good day.
Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me?
Ajax. How now, Patroclus?
Achil. Good-morrow, Ajax.
Ajax. Ha?
Achil. Good-morrow.
Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit.
Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles? [to bend,
Patr. They pass by strangely: they were us'd
To send their smiles before them to Achilles;
To come as humbly as they us'd to creep
To holy altars.
Achil. What, am I poor of late?
'Tis certain, greatness, once fallen out with fortune, [is,
Must fall out with men too. What the declin'd
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others
As feel on his own fall: for men, like butterflies,
Show not their mealy wings but to the summer;
And not a man, for being simply man,
Hath any honour; but honour for those honours
That are without him, as place, riches, and favour,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit:
Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,
The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
Do one pluck down another, and together
Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:
Fortune and I are friends; I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess [out
Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find Something not worth in me such rich beholding
As they have often given. Here is Ulysses:
I'll interrupt his reading.—
How now, Ulysses!
Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son!
Achil. What are you reading?
Ulyss. A strange fellow here
Writes me, That man,—how dearly ever parted,
How much in having, or without or in,—
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.
Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.
The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
To others' eyes: nor doth the eye itself,—
That most pure spirit of sense,—behold itself,
Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd:
Salutes each other with each other's form:
For speculation turns not to itself
Till it hath travell'd, and is mirror'd there Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all.
Ulyss. I do not strain at the position,—
It is familiar,—but at the author's drift;
Who, in his circumstance, expressly proves
That no man is the lord of anything,—
Though in and of him there be much consisting,— Till he communicate his parts to others;
Nor doth he of himself know them for anght
Till he behold them form'd in the applause
Where they're extended; who, like an arch, reverberates
The voice again; or, like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in this;
And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax.
Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse;
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are
Most abject in regard and dear in use!
What things again most dear in the esteem
And poor in worth! Now shall we see to-morrow
An act that very chance doth throw upon him,
Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men do,
While some men leave to do!
How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall,
While others play the idiots in her eyes!
How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is fasting in his wantonness!
To see these Grecian lords!—why, even already
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
And great Troy shrinking.
Achil. I do believe it; for they pass'd by me
As misers do by beggars,—neither gave to me
Good word nor look. What, are my deeds forgot?
[back,
Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-siz'd monster of ingratiitudes:
Those scraps are good deeds past; which are deavour'd
As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: to have done is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail [way;
in monumental mockery. Take the instant
For honour travels in a strait so narrow [path;
Where one but goes abreast: keep, then, the
For emulation hath a thousand sons
That one by one pursue: if you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an enter'd tide they all rush by.
And leave you hindmost;
Or, like a gallant horse fall’n in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the object rear,
O’er-run and trampling’d on: then what they do—
[yours;
Though less than yours in past, must o’er-top
Time is like a fashionable host, [hand;
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the
And with his arms out-stretch’d, as he would fly,
Grasps in the corner: welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not Virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was;
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time. [kin,—
One touch of nature makes the whole world
That all, with one consent, praise new-born gawds, [past;
Though they are made and moulded of things
And give to dust that is a little girt [eye
More laud than girt o’er-dusted. The present
Praises the present object:
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax:
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on
In thee,
And still it might; and yet it may again,
If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive,
And case thy reputation in thy tent;
Whose glorious deeds but in these fields of late
Made emulous missions ’mongst the gods themselves,
And drave great Mars to faction.
Achil. Of this my privacy
I have strong reasons.
Ulyss. But ’gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroic;
’Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam’s daughters.
Achil. Ha! known!
Ulyss. Is that a wonder?
The providence that’s in a watchful state
Knows almost every grain of Pluto’s gold;
Finds bottom in the uncomprehending deeps;
Keeps place with thought, and almost, like the gods,
Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.
There is a mystery—with whom relation
Durst never meddle—in the soul of state;
Which hath an operation more divine
Than breath or pen can give expressure to:
All the commerce that you have had with Troy
As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord;
And better would it fit Achilles much

To throw down Hector than Polyxena:
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When fame shall in our island sound her trump;
And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing,
Great Hector’s sister did Achilles win:
But our brave Ajax bravely beat down him.
Farewell, my lord: I as your bower speak;
The fool slides o’er the ice that you should break.

Par. To this effect, Achilles, have I moved you:
A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath’d than an envious man
In time of action. I stand condemn’d for this;
They think my little stomach to the war,
And your great love to me, restrains you thus:
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton
Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion’s mane,
Be shook to air.
Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?
Par. Ay, and perhaps receive much honour
by him.
Achil. I see my reputation is at stake;
My fame is shrewdly gor’d.
Par. O, then, beware;
Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves;
Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.
Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet
Patroclus:
I’ll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him
To invite the Trojan lords, after the combat,
To see us here unarm’d: I have a woman’s longing,
An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace;
To talk with him, and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view. A labour sav’d!

Enter Thersites.
t to set down her reckoning: bites his lip with a public regard, as who should say, There were wit in this head, an 'twould out; and so there is; but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck i' the combat, he'll break it himself in vain-glory. He knows not me: I said Good-morrow, Ajax; and he replies, Thanks, Agamemnon. What think you of this man, that takes me for the general? He is grown a very land fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him, Thersites.

Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody; he professes not answering: speaking is for beggars; he wears his tongue in's aims. I will put on his presence: let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him, Patroclus: tell him,—I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent; and to procure safe conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious six-or-seven-times-honoured captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon. Do this.

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax!

Ther. Hum!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,—

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent,—

Ther. Hum!

Patr. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon!

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to't?

Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other: howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains I know not: but, I am sure none; unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight.

Ther. Let me bear another to his horse; for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My mind is troubld', like a fountain stir'd;

And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exeunt Achil. and Patroclus.

Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it! I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a valiant ignorance.

[Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—TROY. A Street.

Enter, at one side, Æneas, and Servant with a torch; at the other, Paris, Deiphobus, Antenor, Diomedes, and others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! who's that there?

Dei. Tis the Lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there in person?

Had I so good occasion to lie long [business

As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly

Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too.—Good morrow, Lord Æneas. [hand,—

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas,—take his Witness the process of your speech, wherein You told how Diomed, a whole week by days, Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant sir,

During all question of the gentle truce;

But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance

As heart can think or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces.

Our bloods are now in calm; and, so long, health;

But when contention and occasion meet,

By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life

With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly

With his face backward.—In humane gentle-

Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life,

Welcome indeed! by Venus' hand I swear

No man alive can love, in such a sort,

The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Dio. We sympathise.—Jove, let Æneas live,

If to my sword his fate be not the glory,

A thousand complete courses of the sun!

But, in mine emulous honour, let him die,

With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!

Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.
TROILUS

Par. This is the most despitful gentle greeting,
The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.—
What business, lord, so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the king; but why,
I know not. [this Greek

Par. His purpose meets you: 'twas to bring
To Calchas' house; and there to render him,
For the enreced Antenor, the fair Cressid:
Let's have your company; or, if you please,
Haste there before us: I constantly do think,—
Or, rather, call my thought a certain knowledge,—

My brother Troilus lodges there to-night:
Rouse him, and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality wherefore: I fear
We shall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you:
Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece
Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help;
The bitter disposition of the time
Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Æne. Good-morrow, all.

[Exit, with Servant.

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed,—faith,
tell me true,
Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship,—
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best, Myself or Menelaus?

Dio. Both alike:
He merits well to have her, that doth seek her,—
Not making any scruple of her soileur,—
With such a hell of pain and world of charge;
And you as well to keep her, that defend her,—
Not palating the taste of her dishonour,—
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends:
He, like a piling cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tuned pipe;
You, like a lecher, out of vulgar loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors:
Both merits poise'd, each weighs nor less nor more;
But he as he, each heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too litter to your countrywoman.

Dio. She's bitter to her country. Hear me,
Paris:
For every false drop in her bawdy veins
A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight [speak,
A Trojan hath been slain: since she could
She hath got given so many good words breath
As for her: Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy:
But we in silence hold this virtue well,—

We'll not commend what we intend to sell.
Here lies our way.

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—Troy. Court of Pandarus' House.

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

Troy. Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn is cold.

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine
He shall unbolt the gates.

Troy. Trouble him not;
To bed, to bed: sleep kill those pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy senses
As infants empty of all thought!

Cres. Good-morrow, then.
Troy. I pr'ythee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you aweary of me?
Troy. O Cressida! but that the busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows,
And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer,
I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been too brief.
Troy. Beshrow the witch! with venomous wights she stays
As tediously as hell; but flies the grasps of love
With wings more momentary-swift than thought.
You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cres. Pr'ythee, tarry:—
You men will never tarry.—-
O foolish Cressida!—I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Hark! there's one up.

Pan. [Within.] What, 's all the doors open
Troy. It is your uncle.

Cres. A pestilence on him! now will he be
I shall have such a life!—

Enter Pandarus.

Par. How now, how now? how go maidenheads?
—Here, you maid! where's my cousin Cressid?
Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!

You bring me to do, and then you flout me too.

Par. To do what? to do what?—let her say what: what have I brought you to do?
Cres. Come, come, beshrow your heart!
you'll ne'er be good,
Nor suffer others.

Par. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! ah, poor capocchia! hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him!

Cres. Did not I tell you?—would he were knock'd i' the head!—

[Knocking.
Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see.—
My lord, come you again into my chamber:
You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha! ha!

Cres. Come, you are deceiv’d, I think of no such thing.—

[Harkening.
How earnestly they knock!—Pray you, come in:
I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Exeunt Troilus and Cressida.

Pan. [Going to the door.] Who’s there? what’s the matter? will you beat down the door? How now? what’s the matter?

Enter Æneas.

Æne. Good-morrow, lord, good-morrow.

Pan. Who’s there? my lord Æneas? By my troth, I knew you not: what news with you so early?

Æne. Is not Prince Troilus here?

Pan. Here! what should he do here?

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord; do not deny him:
It doth import him much to speak with me.

Pan. Is he here, say you? ’tis more than I know, I’ll be sworn.—For my own part, I came in late. What should he do here?

Æne. Who! — nay, then:—come, come, you’ll do him wrong ere you are ware: you’ll be so true to him to be false to him: do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither; go.

As Pandarus is going out, re-enter Troilus.

Tro. How now! what’s the matter?

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,
My matter is so rash. There is at hand
Paris your brother, and Diaphus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor
Deliver’d to us; and for him forthwith,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
We must give up to Diomedes’ hand
The Lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?

Æne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy:
They are at hand, and ready to effect it.

Tro. How my achievements mock me!
I will go meet them: — and, my lord Æneas,
We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of nature
Have not more gift in taciturnity.

[Exeunt Troilus and Æneas.

Pan. Is’t possible? no sooner got but lost?
The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad: a plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke’s neck!
Think it an altar; and thy brother Troilus
A priest, there offering to it his own heart.

Par. I know what 'tis to love;
And would, as I shall pity, I could help!—
Please you walk in, my lords. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—TROY. A Room in Pandarus' House.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Par. Be moderate, be moderate.
Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
And violenteth in a sense as strong [it?
As that which causeth it: how can I moderate
If I could temporize with my affection,
Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like allayment could I give my grief:
My love admits no qualifying dross;
No more my grief, in such a precious loss.
Par. Here, here, here he comes.

Enter Troilus.

Ah, sweet ducks!
Par. What a pair! of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too. O heart, as the goodly saying is,— O heart, heavy heart,
Why sigh'st thou without breaking!
where he answers again,
Because thou canst not ease thy smart
By silence nor by speaking.
There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse: we see it, we see it.—I'll give you, lambs!
[Tyranny, purity
Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strained a
That the bless'd gods,—as angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities,—take thee from me.
Cres. Have the gods envy?
Par. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case.
Cres. And is it true that I must go from Troy?
Tro. A hateful truth.
Cres. What, and from Troilus too?
Par. From Troy and Troilus.
Cres. Is it possible?
Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents
Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows
Even in the birth of our own lab'ring breath:
We two, that with so many thousand sighs

Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves
With the rude brevity and discharge of one.
Injurious time now, with a robber's haste,
Crams his rich thievry up, he knows not how;
As many farewells as be stars in heaven,
With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to
them,
He fumbles up into a loose adieu;
And scants us with a single famish'd kiss,
Distasted with the salt of broken tears.

Par. [Within.] My lord, is the lady ready?
Tro. Hark! you are call'd. Some say the Genius so
Cries, Come! to him that instantly must die.—
Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.
Par. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root?

Cres. I must, then, to the Grecians?
Tro. No remedy.
Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks!
When shall we see again?
Tro. Hear me, my love. Be thou but true of heart,—

Cres. I true! how now! what wicked deem Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
For it is parting from us:
I speak not be thou true, as fearing thee;
For I will throw my glove to death himself
That there's no maculation in thy heart:
But be thou true, say I, to fashion in
My sequent protestation; be thou true,
And I will see thee. [Dangers

Cres. O, you shall be expos'd, my lord, to
As infinite as iniminent! but I'll be true.
Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger.
Wear this sleeve. [See you?
Cres. And you this glove. When shall I
Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels,
To give thee nightly visitation.
But yet be true.

Cres. O heavens!—be true, again!

Tro. Hear w. I speak it, love:
The Grecian youths are full of quality;
They're loving, well compos'd, with gifts of nature flowing,
And swelling o'er with arts and exercise:
How novelty may move, and parts with person,
Alas, a kind of godly jealousy,
Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin,—
Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.
Tro. Die I a villain, then!
In this I do not call your faith in question
So mainly as my merit; I cannot sing,
Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk,
Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all,
To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:
But I can tell, that in each grace of these
There lurks a still and dumb-discursive devil
That tempts most cunningly: but be not tempted.

Cres. Do you think I will?

Tro. No.

But something may be done that we will not:
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their changeful potency.

Aene. [Within.] Nay, good my lord,—

Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Par. [Within.] Brother Troilus!

Tro. Good brother, come you hither;
And bring Aeneas and the Grecian with you.

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who, 'tis alas, it is my vice, my fault:
While others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch mere simplicity;
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper
crowns,
With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.
Fear not my truth: the moral of my wit
Is—plain and true; there's all the reach of it.

Enter Aeneas, Paris, Antenor, Deiphobus, and Diomedes.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! here is the lady
Which for Antenor we deliver you:
At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand;
And by the way possess thee what she is.
Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Tidon.

Dio. Fair Lady Cressid,
So please you, save the thanks this prince expects:
The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously,
To shame the zeal of my petition to thee
In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.
I charge thee use her well, even for my charge;
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. O, be not move'd, Prince Troilus:
Let me be privil'g'd by my place and message
To be a speaker free; when I am hence
I'll answer to my lord: and know you, lord,
I'll nothing do on charge: to her own worth
She shall be priz'd; but that you say, be't so,
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour, no.

Tro. Come, to the port.—I'll tell thee,
Diomed,

This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy Lady, give me your hand; and, as we walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

[Execut Tro., Cres., and Diomedes.

[Trumpet within.

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Aene. How now have we spent this morning?
The prince must think me tardy and remiss,
That swore to ride before him to the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come, to field with him.

Dio. Let us make ready straight.

Aene. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth and single chivalry.

[Execut.

Scene V.—The Grecian Camp. Lists set out.

Enter Ajax, armed; Agamemnon, Achilles, Patroclus, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor,
and others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,
Anticipating time. With starting courage
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant,
And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse,
Now crack thy lungs and split thy brassen pipe:
Blow, villain, till thy sanded Bias cheek
Out-swell the colic of puff'd Aquilon:
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout
blood;
Thou blow'st for Hector. [Trumpet sounds.

Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achill. 'Tis but early day.

Agam. Is not yon Diomed, with Calchas' daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;
He rises on the toe: that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter Diomedes, with Cressida.

Agam. Is this the lady Cressid?

Dio. Even she?

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular;
'Twere better she were kiss'd in general,
And very courtly counsel: I'll begin.—

So much for Nestor.

Nest. And very courtly counsel: I'll begin. —

TROILUS

Greek. what purpose give knight; 779

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips,

Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now;

For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment,

And parted thus you and your argument.

Ulyss. O deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns!

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss;—this,

Patooclas kisses you.

Patr. I'll have my kiss, sir.—Lady, by your leave.

Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive?

Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live,

The kiss you take is better than you give;

Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for one. [none.

Cres. You're an odd man; give even or give

Men. An odd man, lady? every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know, 'tis true,

That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You fill me o' the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn.

Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn.—

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg then, do.

Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss

When Helen is a maid again, and his.

Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of Dio. Lady, a word.—I'll bring you to your father.

DIOMEDES leads out CRESSIDA.

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her!

There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip,

Nay, her foot speaks: her wanton spirits look out

At every joint and motive of her body.

O, these encounterers, so glib of tongue,

That give a coating welcome ere it comes,

And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts

To every ticklish reader! set them down

For sluttish spoils of opportunity,

And daughters of the game. [Trumpet within.

All. The Trojans' trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

Enter Hector, armed; Æneas, Troilus, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all you state of Greece! what shall be done [purpose

To him that victory commands? Or do you

A victor shall be known? will you the knights

Shall to the edge of all extremity

Pursue each other: or shall be divided

By any voice or order of the field?

Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Æne. He cares not; he'll obey conditions.

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely
done,

A little proudly, and great deal misprizing

The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir,

What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.

Æne. Therefore Achilles. But, whate'er, know this:—

In the extremity of great and little

Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;

The one almost as infinite as all,

The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,

And that which looks like pride is courtesy.

This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood:

In love whereof, half Hector stays at home;

Half heart, half hand, Hector comes to seek [Greek.

This blended knight, half Trojan and half

Achil. A maiden battle then?—O, I perceive

you.

Re-enter DIOMEDES.

Agam. Here is Sir Diomed.—Go, gentle knight,

Stand by our Ajax; as you and Lord Æneas

Consent upon the order of their fight
So be it; either to the uttermost,

Or else a breath: the combatants being kin

Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[AJAX and HECTOR enter the lists.

Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?

[Knit;

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true

Not yet mature, yet matchless: firm of word;

Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue;

Not soon provok'd, nor, being provok'd, soon
calm'd:
Troilus. We'll answer it.

The issue is embrace:—Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,—

As sell I have the chance,—I would desire
My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish; and great Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hect. Agamemnon, call my brother Troilus to me:

And signify this loving interview
To the expectors of our Trojan part; [cousin;

Desire them home.—Give me thy hand, my
I will go eat with thee, and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

[by name;]

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me name
But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes
Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Again. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one
That would be rid of such an enemy;

But that's no welcome: understand more clear,
What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion;

But in this extant moment, faith and troth,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing,
Bids thee, with most divine integrity,
From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon.

[To you.

Again. My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting;—

You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.

Hect. Who must we answer?

Ag. The noble Menelaus.

Hect. O you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, thanks!

Mock not, that I affect the untraded oath;
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove:
She's well, but bade me not commend her to

you.

[theme.

Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly Hect. O, pardon; I offended.

[off.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Grecish youth; and I have seen thee,

As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,

Despising many forfeits and subduements,

When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i'the

air,

Not letting it decline on the declin'd,

That I have said to some my standers-by,

Io, Jupiter is w onder, dealing life!

And I have seen thee pause, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling: this have I seen;
But this thy countenance, still look'd in steel,
I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire,
And once fought with him: he was a soldier good;
But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.

Troil. This is the old Nestor.

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time:
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.

Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention,
As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Ha! [morrow:—
By this white beard, I'd fight with thee to,
Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time.

Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
When we have here her base and pillar by us.

Hect. I know thy favour, Lord Ulysses, well.
Ah, sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
Since first I saw myself and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy. [ensue:

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would
My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
For yonder walls, that pertainly front your town,
Yond towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you:
There they stand yet; and modestly I think
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns all;
And that old common arbitrator, time,
Will one day end it.

Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welcome:
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me, and see me at my tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses, thou!

Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee;
I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
And quoted joint by joint.

Hect. Is this Achilles?

Achil. I am Achilles. [thee.

Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee; let me look on Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou art too brief: I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

Hect. O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er;

But there's more in me than thou understand'st.
Why dost thou so oppress me with thing eye?

Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part
Of his body
[there,
Shall I destroy him? whither there, or there, or
That I may give the local wound a name,
And make distinct the very breach whereout
Hector's great spirit flew: answer me, heavens!

Hect. It would discredit the bless'd gods, proud man,
To answer such a question: stand again:
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly,
As to prenominate in nice conjecture
Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil. I tell thee, yea.

Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well;
For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;
But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee everywhere, yea, o'er and o'er. —
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag,
His insolence draws folly from my lips;
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never,—

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin:—
And you, Achilles, let these threats alone,
Till accident or purpose bring you to't:
You may have every day enough of Hector,
If you have stomach; the general state, I fear,
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field:
We have had pelting wars since you refus'd
The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death;
To-night all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match.

Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent:
There in the full convive we: afterwards,
As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall Converge together, severally entreat him.—
Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow,
That this great soldier may his welcome know.
[Execunt all but Tro. and Ulysses.

Tro. My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,
In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus:
There Diomed doth feast with him to-night;
Who neither looks upon the heaven nor earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressid.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you
so much,
After we part from Agamemnon’s tent,
To bring me thither?

_Ulyss._ You shall command me, sir.

As gentle tell me, of what honour was
This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there
That wails her absence?

_Tro._ O, sir, to such as boasting show their

A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?
She was belov’d, she lov’d: she is, and doth:
But, still, sweet love is food for fortune’s tooth.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—THE GREEKIAN CAMP. Before

ACHILLES’ TENT.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

_Achil._ I’ll heat his blood with Greekish wine

Which with my scimitar I’ll cool to-morrow. —

_Patr._ Let us feast him to the height.

Enter THERSITES.

_Achil._ How now, thou core of envy!
Thou crusty batch of nature, what’s the news?

_Ther._ Why, thou picture of what thou

_Achil._ From whence, fragment?

_Ther._ Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

_Patr._ Who keeps the tent now? [wound.

_Ther._ The surgeon’s box, or the patient’s.

_Patr._ Well said Adversity! and what need

_Ther._ Pr’ythee, be silent, boy; I profit not

_Patr._ Male varlet, you rogue! what’s that?

_Ther._ Why, his masculine whore. Now, the _Patr._ Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou

_Ther._ Do I curse thee?

_Patr._ Why, no, you ruinous butt; you whose-son indistinguishable cur, no.

_Ther._ No! why art thou, then, exasperate,

thou idle immaterial skein of sleeve-silk, thou

Greens sarcastic flaps for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal’s flap, thou? Ah, how the poor world is pestered with such water-thieves,— diminutives of nature!

_Patr._ Out, gall!

_Achil._ My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted
From my great purpose in to-morrow’s battle.

Here is a letter from Queen Hecuba;
A token from her daughter, my fair love;
Both taxing me and gaging me to keep
An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it;
Fall, Greeks; fall, fame; honour; or go or stay;
My major vow lies here, this I’ll obey,—
Come, come, THERSITES, help to trim my tent;—
This night in banqueting must all be spent.—
Away, Patroclus!

[Exeunt Achil. and Patr.

_Ther._ With too much blood and too little brain these two may run mad; but, if with too much brain and too little blood they do, I’ll be a curer of madmen. Here’s Agamemnon,—an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails;
but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckold; a thirsty shoehorn in chain, hanging at his brother’s leg,— to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to? To an ass, were nothing; he is both ass and ox: to an ox, were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care: but to be Menelaus,—I would conspire against destin, ask me not what I would be, if I were not THERSITES; for I care not to be the house of a lazor, so I were not Menelaus.—

Hey-day! spirits and fires!

Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEM-NON. ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and

DIOMEDES, with lights.

_Agam._ We go wrong, we go wrong.

_Ajax._ No, yonder ‘tis

_Ther._ There, where we see the lights.

_Agam._ I trouble you.

_Ajax._ No, not a whit.

_Achil._ Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all. [good night.

_Agam._ So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.
Tro. Yea, so familiar!
Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.
Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff; she's noted.
Dio. Will you remember?
Dio. Nay, but do, then.
And let your mind be coupled with your words.
Tro. What should she remember?
Ulyss. List! [to folly.
Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more Ther. Roguery!
Dio. Nay, then,— Cres. I'll tell you what,—
Dio. Pho, pho! come, tell a pin: you are forsworn.
[have me do?
Cres. In faith, I cannot: what would you
Ther. A juggling trick, to be secretly open.
Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me?
Cres. I pr'ythee, do not hold me to mine oath:
Bid me do anything but that, sweet Greek.
Dio. Good-night.
Tro. Hold, patience!
Ulyss. How now, Trojan!
Cres. Diomed,—
Dio. No, no, good-night: I'll be your fool no more.
Tro. Thy better must.
Cres. Hark! one word in your ear.
Tro. O plague and madness! [I pray you,
Ulyss. You are mov'd, prince; let us depart,
Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself
To wrathful terms: this place is dangerous;
The time right deadly; I beseech you, go.
Tro. Behold, I pray you!
Ulyss. Nay, good my lord, go off:
You flow to great destruction; come, my lord.
Tro. I pray thee, stay.
Ulyss. You have not patience; come.
Tro. I pray you, stay: by hell and all hell's torments,
I will not speak a word.
Dio. And so, good-night.
Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.
Tro. Doth that grieve thee?
O wither'd truth!
Ulyss. Why, how now, lord?
Tro. By Jove,
I will be patient.
Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!
Dio. Pho, pho! adieu; you palter.
Cres. In faith, I do not: come hither once again.
[will you go?
Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something:
You will break out.
Tro. She strokes his cheek!
Come, come.

TROILUS. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak a word:

There is between my will and all offences
A guard of patience:—stay a little while.

Ther. How the devil luxury, with his fat rump and potato finger, tickles these together!

Fry, lechery, fry!

Dio. But will you, then?

CRES. In faith, I will, &; never trust me else.

Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it.

CRES. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.

ULYSSES. You have sworn patience.

TROIL. I will not be myself, nor have cognition
Of what I feel: I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge; now, now, now!

CRES. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve.

TROIL. O, beauty! where's thy faith?

ULYSSES. Thy lord,—

TROIL. I will be patient; outwardly I'll ill.

CRES. You look upon that sleeve; Behold it well.—

He lov'd me—O false wench!—Give't me again.

DIO. Whose was't?

CRES. It is no matter, now I have't again.

I will not meet with you to-morrow night:

DIO. Go, pr'ythee, Diomed, visit me no more. [stoned.

Ther. Now she sharper;—Well said, Whet.

DIO. I shall have it.

CRES. What, this?

DIO. Ay, t'at.

CRES. O, all you gods?—O pretty, pretty pledge!

Thy master now lies thinking in his bed
Of thee and me; and sighs, and takes my glove,
And gives memorial dainty kisses to it,
As I kiss thee.—Nay, do not snatch it from me;
He that takes that doth take my heart withal.

DIO. I had your heart before, this follows it.

TROIL. I did swear patience.

CRES. You shall not have it, Diomed; faith, you shall not;

I'll give you something else.

DIO. I will have this: whose was it?

CRES. It is no matter.

DIO. Come, tell me whose it was.

CRES. 'Twas one's that loved me better than you will.

But, now you have it, take it.

DIO. Whose was it?

CRES. By all Diana's waiting women yond,
And by herself, I will not tell you whose.

DIO. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm:
And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it:

TROIL. Wert thou the devil, and wor'st it on thy horn,

It should be challeng'd.

CRES. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past;—and yet it is not;

I will not keep my word.

DIO. Why, then, farewell:

Thou never shalt mock Diomed again. [word

CRES. You shall not go:—one cannot speak a

But it straight starts you.

DIO. I do not like this fooling.

Ther. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not you pleases me best.

DIO. What, shall I come? the hour?

CRES. Ay, come:—O Jove!

Do come:—I shall be plag'ed'd.

DIO. Farewell till then.

CRES. Good-night: I pr'ythee, come.

[Exit DIOMEDES.

Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee;

But 't ith my heart the other eye doth see.

Ah, poor our sex! this fault in us I find,

The error of our eye directs our mind:

What error leads must err; O, then conclude,

Minds sway'd by eyes are full of turpitude.

[Exit.

Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more,

Unless she said, My mind is now turn'd whore.

ULYSSES. All's done, my lord.

TROIL. It is.

ULYSSES. Why stay we, then?

TROIL. To make a recordation to my soul

Of every syllable that here was spoke.

But if I tell how these two did co-act,

Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?

Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,

An esperance so obstinately strong,

That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears;

As if those organs had deceptive functions

Created only to calumniate.

Was Cressid here?

ULYSSES. I cannot conjure, Trojan.

TROIL. She was not, sure.

ULYSSES. Most sure she was.

TROIL. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness. [but now.

ULYSSES. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here

TROIL. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood!

Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage

To stubborn critics,—apt, without a theme,

For depravation,—to square the general sex

By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.

ULYSSES. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?

TROIL. Nothing at all, unless that this were

she.
TROILUS

Ther. Will he swagger himself out on's own eyes?

Tro. This she? no; this is Diomed's Cressid:
If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimonies,
If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
If there be rule in unity itself,
This is not she. O madness of discourse,
That cause sets up with and against itself!
Bi-fold authority! where reason can revolt
Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid!
Within my soul there doth conduce a fight
Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparable
Divides more wider than the sky and earth;
And yet the spacious breadth of this division
Admits no oriel for a point, as subtle
As Ariachne's broken woof, to enter.

Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates;
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:
Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself;
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd;

And with another note, five-finger-tied,
The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy relics
Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be but half-attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express?

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged
well

In characters as red as Mars his heart [fancy
Inflam'd with Venus: never did young man
With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.
Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed;
That sleeve is mine that he'll bear on his helm;
Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill
My sword should bite it: not the dreadful spout
Which shipmen do the hurracano call,
Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,
Shall dizzy with more glamour Neptune's ear
In his descent, than shall my promised sword
Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupis.

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false,
Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
And they 'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O, contain yourself;
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter Æneas.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour,
my lord:
Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

TROILUS

Tro. I have with you, prince.—My courteous lord, adieu.—
Farewell, revolted fair!—and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

[Execut Tro., Æne., and Ulyss.

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed! I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me anything for the intelligence of this wheresoever:
The parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery; still wars and lechery; nothing else holds fashion: a burning devil take them! [Exit.

SCENE III.—TROY. Before Priam's Palace.

Enter Hector and Andromache.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd
To stop his ears against admonishment?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.
Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in:
By all the everlasting gods, I'll go!

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.
Hect. No more, I say.

Enter Cassandra.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?

And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent.
Consort with me in loud and dear petition,
Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.
Cas. O, 'tis true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound!

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother. [me swear.

Hect. Begone, I say: the gods have heard Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows:
They are polluted offerings, more abhorrd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. O, be persuaded! do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful,
For we would give much, to use violent thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity. [vow;

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the
But vows to every purpose must not hold:
Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say;
Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds dear; but the dear man
Holds honour far more precious dear than life.—
Enter Troilus.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight
to-day?

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

[Exit Cassandra.

Hect. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth;
I am to-day in the vein of chivalry:
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the branches of the war.
Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not, brave boy,
I'll stand to-day for thee, and me, and Troy.

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you;
Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Grecians
Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise and live.

Hect. O, 'tis fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by Heaven, Hector.

Hect. How now! how now!

Tro. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pity with our mothers;
And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords;
Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth.

Hect. Fie, savage, fie!

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight
to-day.

Tro. Who should withhold me?
Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn,
Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter Cassandra, with Priam.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast:
He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,
Thou on him leaning and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come, go back:
Thy wise hath dream'd; thy mother hath bad visions;
Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt,
To tell thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Encas is a-field;
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,

Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not go.

Hect. I must not break my faith.

You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him!

And. Do not, dear father.

Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you:
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit Andromache.

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl
Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O, farewell, dear Hector!

Look, how thou dost! look, how thy eye turns pale!

Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents!

Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out!

How poor Andromache shriils her dolours forth!

Behold, destruction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like witless antics, one another meet;
And all cry, Hector! Hector's dead! O
Hector!

Tro. Away! away! [my leave:

Cas. Farewell:—yet, soft:—Hector I take
Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive.

[Exit.

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclam:

Go in, and cheer the town: we'll forth, and Do deeds worth praise, and tell you them at night.

Pri. Farewell: the gods with safety stand

[Exeunt severally Priam and Hector.

Alarums.

Tro. They are at it, hark! Proud Diomed, believe,
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

As Troilus is going out, enter from the other side Pandarusr.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?

Tro. What now? [girl.

Pan. Here's a letter come from yond poor

Tro. Let me read.

Pan. A whoreson phthisick, a whoreson rascally phthisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one of these days: and I have a rheum in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones, that unless a man were cursed I cannot tell what to think on't.—What says she there?

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;
The effect doth operate another way. —

Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change together.

My love with words and errors still she feeds;
But edifies another with her deeds.

[Exeunt severally.

SCENE IV._Plains between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

LADY ANON: —
My heart is heavy with despair;
And in my heart the man of Troy.

Thou wouldst laugh at that miracle. Yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them.

[Exit.

SCENE V.—Another part of the Camp.

Enter Diomedes and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse;
Present the fair steed to my lady Cressida:
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty;
Tell her I have chas'is'd the amorous Trojan,
And am her knight by proof.

Serv. —

I go, my lord. —

[Exit.

Enter Agamemnon.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamas Hath beat down Menon; bastard Margaretn Hath Doreus prisoner,
And stands colossus-wise, waging his beam,
Upon the pashed corse of the kings
Epistrophus and Cædus: Polixenes is slain;
Amphimacus and Thoas deadly hurt;
Patroclus t'ain, or slain; and Palamedes Sore hurt and bruised: the dreadful Sagittary Appals our numbers — haste we, Diomed, To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles;
And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame. —
There is a thousand Hectors in the field:
Now here he fights on Galate his horse,
And there lacks work; anon he's there afoot,
And there they fly or die, like scaled skulls Before the belching whale; then is he yonder,
And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fall down before him like the mower's swath; Here, there, and everywhere he leaves and takes;
Dexterity so obeying appetite That what he will he does; and does so much That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. O, courage, courage, princes! great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance: Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood, Together with his mangl'd Myrmidons,
That noiseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him,
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend,
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and clad.
Roaring for Troilus; who hath done today Mad and fantastic execution:
Engaging and redeeming of himself
With such a careless force and forceless care.
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
Lade him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Dio.
Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Where is this Hector?
Come, come, thou boy-queiller, show thy face;
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry:—
Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector.
[Exit.

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?

Ajax. What would'st thou?

Dio. I would correct him.
Ajax. Were I the general, thou should'st have my office
Troi/us!
Ere that correction.—Troilus, I say! what,

Enter Troilus.

Tro. O traitor Diomed!—turn thy false face,
thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou owest me for my horse!

Dio. Ha! art thou there?

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand, Diomed.

Dio. He is my prize. I will not look upon.

Tro. Come, both, you cogging Greeks; have at you both.
[Exit, fighting.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Now do I see thee, ha! have at thee, Hector!

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.
[Achilles, I do disdain thy courtesy, proud
Be happy that my arms are out of use:
My rest and negligence befriend thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again;
Till when, go seek thy fortune.
[Exit.

Hect. Fare thee well:—
I would have been much more a fresher man
Had I expected thee. —How now, my brother!

Re-enter Troilus.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Aeneas: shall it be?

No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry him; I'll be ta'en too,
Or bring him off.—fate, hear me what I say!
I reek not though I end my life to-day.
[Exit.

Enter one in sumptuous armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark;—
No? wilt thou not?—I like thy armour well;
I'll flush it, and unlock the rivets all.
[abide?
But I'll be master of it:—Wilt thou not, beard,
Why then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide.
[Exit.

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Achilles, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons;

Mark what I say.—Attend me where I wheel:
Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath:
And when I have the bloody Hector found,
Empale him with your weapons round about;
In fallest manner execute your aims.
Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye:—
It is decreed Hector the great must die.
[Exit.

Enter Menelaus and Paris, fighting; then Thersites.

Thers. The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are at it. Now, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris,
'loo! now my double-henned sparrow! 'loo,
Paris, 'loo! The bull has the game:—'ware horns, ho!
[Exit Paris and Menelaus.

Enter Margarelon.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Thers. What art thou?

Thers. I am a bastard too; I love bastards:
I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in everything illegitimate.
One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore he tempting judgment: farewell, bastard.
[Exit.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward!
[Exit.

SCENE VIII.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Most putrid core, so fair without,
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my day's work done: I'll take good breath:
Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death!

[puts off his helmet and hangs his shield behind him.]

Enter Achillles and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set;
How ugly night comes breathing at his heels;
With the vail and dark'ning of the sun,
To close the day up, Hector's life is done.

Hect. I am unarm'd; forego this vantage.

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike; this is the man.

So, Ilion, fall thou next! now, Troy, sink down!
Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.—
On, Myrmidons; and cry you all amain,
Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.

[They make great noise of weeping and shouting of victory.]

Hark! a retire upon our Grecian part. [My lord.

Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like,
Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads
the earth,
And, stickler-like, the armies separate.
My half-sup'd sword, that frankly would have fed,
Pleas'd with this dainty bait, thus goes to bed.
Come, tie his body to my horse's tail;
Along the field I will the Trojan trail. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX. —Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Agamemnon, Ajax, Menelaus, Nestor, Diomedes, and others, marching.

Shouts within.

Agam. Hark! hark! hark! what shout is that?

Nest. Peace, drums; [Achilles! Achilles! Achilles!

[Within.] Achilles! Achilles! Hector's slain,

To pray Achilles see us at our tent.—

If in his death the gods have us befriended;

Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are

SCENE X. —Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Aeneas and Trojans.

Aene. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field:

Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Enter Troilus.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hector!—the gods forbid!

Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail, [Field.

In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed! [Troy.

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at
I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy.
And linger not our sure destructions on!

Aene. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not that tell me so:

I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death;
But dare all inimiceness that gods and men
Address their dangers in. Hector is gone:

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him that will a screech-owl aye be call'd

Go in to Troy, and say there, Hector's dead:

There is a word will Priam turn to stone;

Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,

Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word,

Scare Troy out of itself. But, march away:

Hector is dead; there is no more to say.
Stay yet.—You vile abominable tents,

Thus proudly pigt upon our Phrygian plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare,

I'll through and through you!—And, thou great-siz'd coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates:

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's
thoughts.—

Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go:

Hope of revenge shall hide on inward woe.

[Exeunt Aeneas and Trojans.

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandarus.

Pan. But bear you, hear you!

Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and shame pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name! [Exit.

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones!—O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised! O traitors and lawds, how earnestly are you set at work, and how ill required! Why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me
see:

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing
Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;
And bearing once sublime in armed tail,
Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail—
Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.
As many as be here of pand'er's hall,
Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall;
Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,
Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
Brethren and sisters of the old-door trade,

Some two months hence my will shall here be made:
It should be now, but that my fear is this,—
Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss:
Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for cases;
And, at that time, bequeath you my diseases.

[Exit.]

ACT I.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and others, at several doors.

Poet. Good-day, sir.
Painter. I am glad you are well.
Poet. Have I not seen you long; how goes the world?
Painter. It wears, sir, as it grows.
Poet. Ay, that's well known: But what particular rarity? what strange, Which manifold record not matches? See, Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power Hath conjured to attend I know the merchant.
Painter. I know them both; the other's a jeweller.
Merchant. O, 'tis a worthy lord!
Jeweller. Nay, that's most fix'd.
Merchant. A most incomparable man; breath'd, as it were, To an untirable and continue goodness: He passes.
Jeweller. I have a jewel here.
Merchant. O, pray, let's see't: for the Lord Timon, sir? [that—Jeweller. If he will touch the estimate: but, for Poet. [Reciting to himself.] When we for recompense have prais'd the veil,

It stains the glory in that happy verse
Which aptly sings the good.

Merchant. 'Tis a good form.

Jeweller. And rich: here is a water, look ye.

Painter. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.
Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes
From whence 'tis nourish'd: the fire 'e the flint
Shows not till it be struck; our gentle flame
Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies
Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Painter. A picture, sir.—And when comes your book forth?

Merchant. [sir,—

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment,
Let's see your piece.

Painter. 'Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'his: this comes off well and excellent.

Painter. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable: how this grace
Speaks his own standing! what a mental power
This eye shoots forth! how big imagination
Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture
One might interpret.
Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.
Here is a touch; 'tis good?
Poet. I will say of it.

It tutors nature: artificial strife
Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord is follow'd!
Poet. The senators of Athens:—happy man!
Pain. Look, more!
Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood
Of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man,
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug
With ampest entertainment, my free drift
Halts not particularly, but moves itself
In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice
Infests one comma in the course I hold;
But flies an eagle flight, bold, and forth on,
Leaving no track behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?
Poet. I will unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds,—
As well of glib and slippery creatures as
Of grave and austere quality,—tender down
Their services to Lord Timon: his large fortune,
Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,
Subdues and properties to his love and tendance
All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer
To Apemantus, that few things loves better
Than to abhor himself: even he drops down
The knee before him, and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.
Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill
Feign'd Fortune to be thro'n: the base o' the mount
Is rank'd with all deserts, all kinds of natures,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states: amongst them all,
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to Whose present grace present slaves and Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope.

This throne, this Fortune, and this' ill, methinks,
With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness, would be well express'd
In our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on.

All those which were his fellows but of late,—
Some better than his value,—on the moment
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?
Poet. When Fortune, in her shift and change of mood,
Spurns down her late belov'd, all his dependents,
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down.
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'Tis common:
A thousand moral paintings I can show
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's
More pregnant than words. Yet you do well
To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.
Trumpets sound. Enter Timon, attended;
the Servant of Ventidius talking with him.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?
Ven. Serv. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt;
His means most short, his creditors most strait:
Your honourable letter he desires
To those have shut him up; which failing him,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well;
I am not of that feather to shake off [him
My friend when he most needs me. I do know
A gentleman that well deserves a help,— [him.
Which he shall have; I'll pay the debt, and free

Tim. Commend me to him: I will send his ranso. ;
And, being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me:—
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after.—Fare you well.

Ven. Serv. All happiness to your honour!

Enter an Old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.
Tim. Freely, good father.
Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.
Tim. I have so: what of him?
Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no?—Lucilius.

Lucilius comes forward from among the Attendants.

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift;
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd
Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well; what further?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else,

On whom I may confer what I have got:
The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I pray thee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid her resort;
Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon;
His honesty rewards him in itself;
It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young and apt:
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To Lucilius.] Love you the maid?
Luc. Ay, my good lord; and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be
I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me to build his fortune I will strain a little,
For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter:
What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,
Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: never
That state or fortune fall into my keeping
Which is not ow'd to you!

[Exit Lucilius and Old Athenian.]

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me
Go not away.—What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech
Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.
The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,
He is but outside: these pencill'd figures are Even such as they give out. I like your work;
And you shall find I like it: wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you!
Tim. Well fare you, gentleman: give me your hand:
We must needs dine together.—Sir, your jewel
I hath suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord! dispraise?
Tim. A mere satiety of commendations,
If I should pay you for't as 'tis extoll'd
It would unclew me quite.

Jew. My lord, 'tis rated
As those which sell would give. But you well know,
Things of light value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters: believe 't, dear lord,
You mend the jewel by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd. [common tongue,]

Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the Which all men speak with him. [child?]

Tim. Look, who comes here: will you be

Enter Apemantus.

Jew. We'll bear with your lordship.

Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good-morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!

Apem. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy
When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest. [know'st them not.

Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou

Apem. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes.

Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus?

Apem. Thou knowest I do; I call'd thee by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.

Apem. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whither art going? [brains.]

Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's

Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for. [law.

Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the

Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus?

Apem. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it?

Apem. He wrought better that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. You are a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation:
what's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?

Apem. No; I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou shouldst, thou'dst anger ladies.

Apem. O, they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.
Apem. So thou apprehendest it: take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus?

Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking.—How now, poet!

Poet. How now, philosopher!

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one?

Apem. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apem. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feign'd—he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: he that loves to be flattered is worthy of the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now, hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord.—Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee!

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Serv. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse, All of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us.—[Exeunt some Attendants. You must needs dine with me:—go not you hence Till I have thank'd you:—when dinner's done Show me this piece.—I am joyful of your sights.

Enter Alcibiades, with his company.

Most welcome, sir! [They salute.

Apem. So, so, there!—

Aches contract and starve your supple joints!—

That there should be small love amongst these sweet knaves, bred out And all this courtsey! The strain of man's into baboon and monkey.

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed

Most hungrily on your sight.

Tim. Right welcome, sir! Ere we depart we'll share a bounteous time In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.

[Exeunt all but Apemantus.

Enter Two Lords.

1 Lord. What time o' day is 't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

1 Lord. That time serves still. [omitt's it.

Apem. The more accursed thou, that still

2 Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast.

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves, and wine heat fools.

2 Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.

2 Lord. Why, Apemantus?

Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

1 Lord. Hang thyself.

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding: make thy requests to thy friend.

2 Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence.

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of the ass.

[Exit. [Exit.

1 Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in
And taste Lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes The very heart of kindness. [gold

2 Lord. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of Is but his steward: no need but he repays Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him But breeds the giver a return exceeding All use of quittance.

1 Lord. The noblest mind he carries That ever govern'd man. [Shall we in?

2 Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! 1 Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Athens. A Room of State in Timon's House.

Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet served in; Flavius and others attending; then enter Timon, Alcibiades, Lucius, Lucullus, Sempronius, and other Athenian Senators, with Ventidius, and Attendants. Then comes, dropping after all, Apemantus, discontentedly.

Ven. Most honour'd Timon, [father's age, It hath pleas'd the gods to remember my And call him to long peace. He is gone happy, and has left me rich:

Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those talents, Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help
I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O, by no means, Honesty Ventidius; you mistake my love;
I gave it freely ever; and there's none
Can truly say he gives if he receives: [dare
If our better play at that game, we must not
To imitate them; faults that are rich are fair.

Tim. A noble spirit!

[They all stand ceremoniously looking on
TIMON.

Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devis'd at first
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Reciting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship there needs none.
Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes
Than my fortunes to me. [They sit.

1 Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.

Apem. Ho, ho, confess'd it! hang'd it, have you not?

Tim. O, Apemantus!—you are welcome.

Apem. No;
You shall not make me welcome.
I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fie, thou art a churl; you have got a humour there
Does not become a man; 'tis much to blame. —
They say, my lords, fara fortun brevis est
But yond man is ever angry.
Go, let him have a table by himself;
For he does neither affect company
Nor is he fit for't, indeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine apparel, Timon:
I come to observe; I give thee warning on't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou art an Athenian, therefore welcome: I myself would have no power; pr'ythee, let my meat make thine silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for I should ne'er flatter thee. — O you gods, what a number of men eat Timon, and he sees
'em not! it grieves me to see
So many dip their meat in one man's blood;
And all the madness is, he cheers them up too.
I wonder men dare trust themselves with men;
Methinks they should invite them without knives;
Good for their meat and safer for their lives.
There's much example for't; the fellow that sits next him now, parts bread with him, pleads the breath of him in a divided draught, is the readiest man to kill him: 'tis been prov'd. If I were a huge man I should fear to drink at meals,

Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes: [threats.

Great men should drink with harness on their Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.

Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow! he keeps his tides well.—Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.
Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner,
Honest water, which ne'er left man the more:
This and my food are equals; there's no odds:
Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Apemantus' Grace.

[imortal gods. I crave no self;
I pray for no man but myself,
Grant I may never prove so blind,
To trust man on his oath or bond;
Or a harlot for her want me:
Or a dog that seems a sleeping;
Or a keeper with my freedom;
Or my friends, if I should need 'em.

Amen. So fall to it:
Rich men sin, and I eat not.

[Eats and drinks.

Much good diche thy good heart, Apemantus!

Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Acm. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends.

Acm. So they were bleeding new, my lord, there's no meat like them; I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. Would all those flatterers were these enemies, then; that then their might's kill
'em, and bid me to 'em.

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.

Tim. O no doubt, my good friends, let the gods themselves have provided that I shall be much help from you: how had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable tune from thousands, did I not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods, think I, what need we have any friends if we should ne'er have need of 'em? they were the most needless creatures living, should we never have use for 'em; and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits: and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends?
O, what a precious comfort 'tis to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes! O joy, c'en made away ere it can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water,
'thinks: to forget their faults I drink to you.

A'pem. Thou weep'st to make them drink,
Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our
And at that instant like a bale sprung up.

A'pem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that bale a bastard. [me much.

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd A'pem. Much! [Tucket sounded.

Tim. What means that trumpet?

Enter a Servant.

How now!

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies! what are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon—and to all
That of his bounties taste!—The five best senses
Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely
To gratulate thy plenteous bosom:
The ear, taste, touch, smell, pleas'd from thy table rise;
They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They are welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance.

Music, make their welcome! [Exit Cupid.

1 Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you're belov'd.

Music. Re-enter Cupid, with a mask of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

A'pem. Hoy-day, what a sweep of vani/
comes this way!
They dance! they are mad women.
Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil and root.
We make ourselves fools to disport ourselves,
And spend our flatteries to drink those men
Upon whose age we void it up again,
With poisonous spite and envy.
Who lives that's not depraved or depraves?
Who dies that bears not one spurn to their graves
Of their friends' gift?
I should fear that dance before me now

Would one day stamp upon me: has been done;
Men shut their doors against a setting sun.

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of Timon; and, to show their loves, each sings out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and ease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,
Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind;
You have added worth unto't and lustre,
And entertain'd me with mine own device:
I am to thank you for't.

1 Lady. My lord, you take us even at the A'pem. Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me. [you:

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends
Please you to dispose yourselves.

All Ladies. Most thankfully, my lord.

[Exeunt Cupid and Ladies.

Tim. Flavius,—

Flav. My lord?

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord.—[Aside.] More jewels
yet!

There is no crossing him in his humour,
Else I should tell him,—well, 'tis faith. I should,
When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could.
'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind,
That man might never be wretched for his mind.

[Exit, and returns with the casket.

1 Lord. Where be our men?

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

2 Lord. Our horses?

Tim. O my friends,
I have one word to say to you. Look you,
my good lord,
I must entreat you, honour me so much
As to advance this jewel; accept it, and wear it.
Kind my lord.

1 Lord. I am so far already in your gifts,—

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate
Newly alighted, and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flav. I beseech your honour,
Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.

Tim. Near; why, then, another time I'll hear thee: [entertainment.

I pr'ythee, let's be provided to show 'em

Flav. I scarce know how. [Aside.
Enter another Servant.

2 Serv. May it please your honour, Lord Lucius,
Out of his free love, hath presented to you
Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.
Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the presents
Be worthily entertained.

Enter a third Servant.

How now! what news?

3 Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him; and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.

Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd,
Not without fair reward.

Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to?
He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,
And all out of an empty coffer:
Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this,
To show him what a beggar his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wishes good:
His promises fly so beyond his state
That what he speaks is all in debt, he owes
For every word: he is so kind that he now
Pays interest for't; his land's put to their books.
Well, would I were gently put out of office
Before I were fore'd out!
Happier is he that has no friend to feed
Than such as do e'en enemies excite
I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit.

Tim. You do yourself well.

Much wrong, you hate too much of your own merits:
Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

2 Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.

3 Lord. O, he is the very soul of bounty!
Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave Good words the other day of a bay courser
I rode on: it is yours because you lik'd it.

3 Lord. O, I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that. [know no man
Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I Can justly praise but what he does affect:
I weigh my friend's affection with mine own;
I'll tell you true. I'll call to you.

All Lords. O, none so welcome.

Tim. I take all and your several visitations
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give;
Methinks I could deal kingdoms to my friends
And ne'er be weary.—Alcibiades,
Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich;
It comes in charity to thee: for all thy living
Is 'mongst the dead; and all the lands thou hast
Lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, de'il'd land, my lord.

1 Lord. We are so virtuously bound,—

Tim. And so
Am I to you.

2 Lord. So infinitely endear'd,—

Tim. All to you.—Lights, more lights.

1 Lord. The best of happiness,
Honour, and fortunes keep with you, Lord Timon!

Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Execut Alcibiades, Lords, &c.

Apm. What a coil's here! Serving of becks and jutting-out of bums!
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums
That are given for'em. Friendship's full of Methinks false hearts should never have sound
Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on dregs:
[legs.

Tim. Now, Apmantus, if thou wert not
I would be good to thee.

Apm. No, I'll nothing: for if I should be bribed too, there would be none left to rail upon thee; and then thou wouldst sin the faster.
Thou givest so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly: what need these feasts, poms, and vain glories?

Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on société once, I am sworn not to give regard to you.
Farewell; and come with better music. [Exit.

Apm. So;—thou'lt not hear me now,— thou shalt not then, I'll lock thy heaven from thee.

O, that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I. —Athens. A Room in a Senator's House.

Enter a Senator, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand;—to Varro and to Isidore [sum.
He owes nine thousand; besides my former Which makes it five-and-twenty. — Still in motion
Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will not.
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog
And give it Timon, why, the dog coin's gold:
If I would sell my horse and buy twenty more
Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon,
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight,
And able horses: no porter at his gate;
But rather one that smiles, and still invites
All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason
Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho! Caphis, I say!

Enter Caphis.

Caph. Here, sir; what is your pleasure?
Sen. Get on your cloak and haste you to Lord Timon;
Importune him for my moneys; be not ceas'd With sight denial; nor then silence'd, when—Commend me to your master—and the cap Plays in the right hand, thus: 'tis he shall him My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn Out of mine own; his days and times are past, And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit: I love and honour him; Yet must not break my back to heal his finger: Immediate are my needs; and my relief Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words, I'll find supply immediate. Get you gone: I'll on a most important aspect, A visage of demand; for, I do fear, When every feather sticks in his own wing Lord Timon will be left a naked gull, Which flashes now a phcenix. Get you gone.
Caph. I go, sir.
Sen. Take the bonds along with you,
And have the dates in compt.
Caph. I will, sir.
Sen. Go.

[Exit.]

Enter Flavius, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense That he will neither know how to maintain it Nor cease his flow of riot: takes no account How things go from him; nor resumes no care Of what is to continue: never mind Was to be so unwise to be so kind. What shall be done? he will not hear, till feel: I must be round with him now he comes from hunting. Fie, fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter Caphis, and the Servants of Isidore and Varro.

Caph. Good-even, Varro: what, You come for money?
Var. Serv. Is’t not your business too?
Caph. It is:—and yours too, Isidore?
Isid. Serv. It is so.
Caph. Would we were all discharg’d!
Var. Serv. I fear it.
Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter Timon, Alcibiades, and Lords, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner’s done we’ll forth again,
My Alcibiades. — With me? what is your will?
Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.
Tim. Dues! whence are you?
Caph. Of Athens here, my lord,
Tim. Go to my steward. [me off Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath—
To the succession of new days this month: My master is awak’d by great occasion To call upon his own; and humbly prays you That, with your other noble parts, you’ll suit In giving him his right.
Tim. Mine honest friend, I pri’thee but repair to me next morning.
Caph. Nay, good my lord,—
Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.
Var. Serv. One Varro’s servant, my good lord,—
Isid. Serv. From Isidore:
He humbly prays your speedy payment,—
Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master’s wants,— six weeks
Var. Serv. Twas due on forfeit, my lord, And past,— Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord:
And I am sent expressly to your lordship.
Tim. Give me breath,—
I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on; I’ll wait upon you instantly.—
[Exit Alcibiades and Lords.]
Come hither: pray you, Flavius. How goes the world, that I am thus encountered With clamorous demand of date-broke bonds, And the detention of long-since-due debts, Against my honour?
Flav. Please you, gentlemen, The time is ungracious to this business: Your importunity cease till after dinner: That I may make his lordship understand Wherefore you are not paid.
Tim. Do so, my friends.—
See them well entertained. [Exit.
Flav. Pray, draw near. [Exit.

Enter Apemantus and Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the feel with Apemantus: let’s ha’ some sport with ‘em.
Var. Serv. Hang him, he’ll abuse us.
Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!
Var. Serv. How dost, fool?
Apen. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?
Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.
Apen. No, tis to thyself.—Come away.

[To the Fool.
Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain? what do you in this wise company? How dost thou, Apeamantus?

Apeam. Would I had a red in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.

Page. Pr'ythee, Apeamantus, read me the superscription of these letters: I know not which is which.

Apeam. Can't not read?

Page. No.

Apeam. There will little learning die, then, that day thou art hanged. This is to Lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou 'lt die a' d. u.

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog's death. Answer not. I gone.

[Exit Page.

Apeam. E'en so thou outrun' st grace. Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apeam. If Timon stay at home.—You three serve three usurers?

Apeam. Ay; would they served us!

Apeam. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

Fool. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant; my mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters they approach sadly and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily and go away sadly: the reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apeam. Do it, then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave; which, notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime it appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones more than his artificial one. He is very often like a knight; and, generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen; this spirit walks in.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man; as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apeam. That answer might have become Apeamantus.

[Timon.

Var. Serv. Aside, aside; here comes Lord

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Apeam. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometime the philosopher.

[Exit Apeamantus and Fool.

Flavius. Pray you, walk near; I'll speak with you anon.

[Exit Serv.

Tim. You make me marvel: wherefore, at this time,

Had you not fully laid my state before me?

That I might so have rated my expense

As I had leave of means?

Flavius. You would not hear me

A many leisures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to:

Fer'chance some single vantages you took
When my indisposition put you back;
And that unquietness made you minister

This to excuse yourself.

Flavius. O my good lord

At many times I brought in my accounts, [off] I laid them before you; you would throw them Away, as you found them in mine honesty.

When, for some trilling present, you have bid me [weep; Return so much, I have shook my head and

Yeas, gains, the authority of manners, pray'd you

To hold your hand more close: I did admire

Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you, in the club of your estate,

And your great flow of debts. My loved lord,

Though you hear now,—too late!—yet now's a time,

The greatest of your having lacks a half

To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flavius. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone;
And what remains will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues: the future comes apace:
What shall defend the interim? and at length
How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedemon did my land extend.

Flav. O my good lord, the world is but a word:
Were it all yours to give it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone!

Tim. You tell me true.

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry or falsehood,
Call me before the exactest auditors
And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me,
When all our offices have been oppress'd
With riotous feeders; when our vaults have wept
With drunken spilth of wine; when every room
Hath blaz'd with lights and bravery'd with minstrelsy;
I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock,
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Pr'ythee, no more.

Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord! [Ants

How many prodigal bits have slaves and peas-
This night engulfed! Who is not Timon's?
What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's?
Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon!
Ah! when the means are gone that buy this praise
The breath is gone whereof this praise is made:
I cast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter showers,
These flies are couch'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no further:
No villainous bounty yet hath passed my heart;
Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.
Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart;
If I would branch the vessels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,
Men and men's fortunes could I frankly use.
As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim. And, in some sort, these want of mine are crown'd
That I account them blessings; for by these Shall I try friends: you shall perceive how you Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.
Within there! Flaminus! Servilius!

Enter Flaminius, Servilius, and other Servants.

Serv. My lord? my lord?—

Tim. I will despatch you severally:—you to Lord Lucius;—to Lord Lucullus, you; I hunted with his honour to-day;—you to Sempronius: commend me to their loves; and I am proud to say, that my occasions have found a time to use
'em toward a supply of money: let the request be fify talents.

Flav. As you have said, my lord.

Flav. Lord Lucius and Lucullus? hum!

Aside.

Tim. Go you, sir, [to another Serv.] to the senators,—
Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserv'd this hearing, bid 'em send of the instant
A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold,—
For that I knew it the most general way,—
To them to use your signet and your name;
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can't be?

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,
That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot Do what they would; are sorry—you are honourable;— [not]
But yet they could have wish'd—they know
Something has been amiss—a noble nature
May catch a wrench—would all were well—
tis pity;—
And so, intending other serious matters,
After wasteful looks, and these hard fractions,
With certain half caps and cold-moving nods,
They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them!
Pr'ythee, man, look cheerily. These old fellows Hate their ingratitude in them hereditary:
Their blood is enk'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flows;
'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not kind;
And nature, as it grows again toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey dull and heavy.
Go to Ventidius [to a Serv.]; pr'ythee, [to Flavius] be not sad,
Thou art true and honest; ingeniously I speak,
No blame belongs to thee:—[To Serv.] Ven-tidius lately
Buried his father; by whose death he's stepp'd
Into a great estate: when he was poor,
Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends, [me;
I clear'd him with five talents: greet him from Bid him suppose some good necessity [ber'd
Touches his friend, which craves to be remem-With those five talents:—[To Flav.] That had,—give 't these fellows
To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'er speak or think [sink.
That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can Flav. I would I could not think it: that thought is bounty's foe;
Being free itself it thinks all others so. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—ATHENS. A Room in Lucullus' House.

Flaminius waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter Lucullus

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of Lord Timon's men? a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night.—Flaminius, honest Flaminius; you are very respectively welcome, sir.—Fill me some wine. [Exit Servant.]—And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, sir,

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir: and what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir; which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to the fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. La, la, la, la,—nothing doubting, says he? Alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha'een dined with him and told him on't; and come again to supper to him of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his: I ha'een told him on't, but I could ne'er get him from it.

Re-enter Servant, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towards prompt spirit,—give thee thy due,—and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee.—Get you gone, sirrah [to the Servant, who goes out.]—Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money; especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidares for thee: good boy, wink at me, and say thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ:
And we alive that liv'd! Fly, damned baseness, To him that worships thee.

[Throwing the money back.

Lucul. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation,
Thou disease of a friend and not himself!
Has friendship such a faint and milky heart,
It turns in less than two nights? O you gods,
I feel my master's passion! This slave
Unto his honour has my lord's meat in him:
Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment
When he is turn'd to poison?
O, may diseases only work upon 't!
And when he's sick to death, let not that part
Of nature
Which my lord paid for, be of any power
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour!

[Exit.

SCENE II.—ATHENS. A public Place.

Enter Lucius, with Three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

1 Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours,—now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

2 Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents; may, urged extremely for 't, and showed what necessity belonged to 't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How?

2 Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on 't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in 't. For my own part, I must needs confess I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trinkets, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him and sent to me, I should never have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter Servilius.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour.—My honoured lord,—[To Lucius.

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well; commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent,—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, think'st thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. Has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me;

He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the meantime he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfurnish myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour!—Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not able to do't,—the more beast, I say. I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not for the welfare of Athens I had done't now. Command me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind: and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius.

[Exit Servilius.

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed;
And he that's once denied will hardly speed.

[Exit.

1 Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?
2 Stran. Ay, too well.

I Stran. Why, this is the world's soul; and just of the same piece
Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him His friend that dips in the same dish? for, in My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father, And kept his credit with his purse; Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks But Timon's silver treads upon his lip; And yet,—O see the monstrousness of man When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!— He does deny him, in respect of his What charitable men afford to beggars.

3 Stran. Religion groans at it.

1 Stran. For mine own part, I never tasted Timon in my life, Nor came any of his bounties over me To mark me for his friend; yet I protest, For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue, And honourable carriage, had his necessity made use of me, I would have put my wealth into donation, And the best half should have return'd to him, So much I love his heart: but, I perceive, Men must learn now with pity to dispense: For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—Athens. A Room in Sempronius' House.

Enter Sempronius and a Servant of Timon's.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't,—hum!—'bove all others? He might have tried Lord Lucius or Lucullus; And now Ventidius is wealthy too, Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. My lord,

They have all been touch'd and found base metal; for

They have all denied him.

Sem. How! have they denied him?

Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him? And does he send to me? Three! hum!— It shows but little love or judgment in him: Must I be his last refuge! His friends, like physicians, Thrive, give him over: must I take the cure upon me? him, Has much disgrace'd me in't; I am angry at That might have known my place: I see no sense for't, But his occasions might have woo'd me first; 'Tis, in my conscience, I was the first man That e'er received gift from him: And does he think so backwardly of me now
That I’ll requite it last? No:
So it may prove an argument of laughter
To the rest, and ’mongst the lords I be thought a fool.
I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum
Had sent to me first, but for my mind’s sake;
I had such a courage to do him good. But now return,
And with their faint reply this answer join;
Who hates mine honour shall not know my coin.

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship’s a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic,—he cross’d himself by’t:
and I cannot think but, in the end, the villanies of man will set him clear.
How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! It takes virtuous copies to be wicked; like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire:
Of such a nature is his politic love.
This was my lord’s best hope; now all are fled,
Save only the gods: now his friends are dead,
Doors, that were ne’er acquainted with their wards
Many a bounteous year, must be employ’d
Now to guard sure their master.
And this is all a liberal course allows;
Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house.

Exit.

Enter Two Servants of Varro and the Servant of Lucius, meeting Titus, Hortensius, and other Servants of Timon’s creditors, waiting his coming out.

1 Var. Serv. Well met; good-morrow, Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Lucius! What, do we meet together?

Luc. Serv. Ay, and I think
One business does command us all; for mine
Is money.

Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter Philotus.

Luc. Serv. And Sir Philotus too!

Phio. Good-day at once.

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother.

What do you think the hour?

Phio. Labouring for nine.

Luc. Serv. So much?

Phio. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serv. Not yet.

Phio. I wonder on’t: he was wont to shine at seven.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter
with him:
You must consider that a prodigal course
Is like the sun’s; but not, like his, recoverable.
I fear
’Tis deepest winter in Lord Timon’s purse;
That is, one may reach deep enough and yet Find little.

Tit. I am of your fear for that.

Tit. I’ll show you how to observe a strange
Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true, he does.

Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon’s gift,
For which I wait for money.

Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark how strange it shows,
Timon in this should pay more than he owes:
And e’en as if your lord should wear rich jewels
And send for money for ’em.

Hor. I am weary of this charge, the gods can witness:
I know my lord hath spent of Timon’s wealth,
And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

1 Var. Serv. Yes, mine’s three thousand crowns: what’s yours?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.

1 Var. Serv. ’Tis much deep: and it should seem by the sun
Your master’s confidence was above mine;
Else, surely, his had equall’d.

Enter Flaminius.

Tit. One of Lord Timon’s men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! sir, a word: pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not.

Tit. We attend his lordship; pray, signify
so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent.

Exit.

Enter Flavius, in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?

He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, sir?

Both Var. Serv. By your leave, sir,—

Flav. What do you ask of me, my friends?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.

Flav. Ay, if money were as certain as your waiting
’Twere sure enough.

Why then preferr’d you not your sums and bills
When your false masters eat of my lord’s meat?
Then they could smile, and fawn upon his debts,

[news.
And take down th’ interest into their gluttonous
You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up;
Let me pass quietly:
Believe’t my lord and I have made an end;
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.
Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.
Flavius. If’t will not serve ‘tis not so base as you;
For you serve knaves. [Exit.
1 Var. Serv. How! What does his cashier’d worship matter?
2 Var. Serv. No matter what; ‘tis poor, and that’s revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter Servilius.

Tit. O, here’s Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Serv. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should much derive from’t; for, take’t of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent: his comfortable temper has forsook him; he is much out of health, and keeps his chamber. [not sick: I am a poor man, sir. I am a poor man, sir. I am a poor man, sir.

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers are And, if it be so far beyond his health, Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts, And make a clear way to the gods.

Serv. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flavius. [Within.] Servilius, help!—my lord!—my lord!

Enter Timon, in a rage; Flavius following.

Tim. What, are my doors oppos’d against my passage?
Have I been ever free, and must my house
Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?
The place which I have feasted, does it now,
Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here’s mine.

Hor. Serv. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.

Tit. All our bills. [to the girdle.

Tim. Knock me down with ‘em: cleave me

Luc. Serv. Alas, my lord,—

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tit. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that.—

What yours?—and yours?—

1 Var. Serv. My lord,—

2 Var. Serv. My lord,—

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.

Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money; these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a man owes ‘em.

[Exeunt.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Tim. They have e’en put my breath from me, the slaves.

Creditors!—devils.

Flavius. My dear lord,—

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flavius. My lord,—

Tim. I’ll have it so.—My steward!

Flavius. Here, my lord.

Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again, Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius; all:
I’ll once more feast the rascals.

Flavius. O my lord,

You only speak from your distracted soul;
There is not so much left to furnish out
A moderate table.

Tim. Be’t not in thy care; go,
I charge thee, invite them all: let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I’ll provide. [Exeunt.

Scene V.—Athens. The Senate House.

The Senate sitting.

1 Sen. My lords, you have my voice to it; the fault’s

Bloody; ’tis necessary he should die:
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

2 Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.

Enter Alcibiades, attended.

Alcibiades. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!

1 Sen. Now, captain?

Alcibiades. I am an humble suitor to your virtues;

For pity is the virtue of the law,

And none but tyrants use it cruelly.

It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy

Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood,

Hath stepp’d into the law, which is past depth.

To those that without heed do plunge into’t.

He is a man, setting his fate aside,

Of comely virtues:

Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice,—

An honour in him which buys out his fault,—

But with a noble fury and fair spirit,

Seeing his reputation touch’d to death,

He did oppose his foe:

And with such sober and unnoted passion

He did behave his anger ere ’twas spent,

As if he had but prov’d an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:
Your words have took such pains, as if they labour’d [quarrelling]
To bring manslaughter into form, and set
Upon the head of valour; which, indeed,
Is valour misbegot, and came into the world
When sects and factions were newly born:
He’s truly valiant that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe; and make his wrongs [carelessly]:
His outsides,—to wear them like his raiment,
And ne’er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.
If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,
What folly ’tis to hazard life for ill!
Alcib. My lord,— [clear:
1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look
To revenge is no valour, but to bear. [me,
Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon
If I speak like a captain:—
Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threats? sleep upon’t,
And let the foes quietly cut their throats,
Without repugnancy? but if there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad? why, then, women are more valiant,
That stay at home, if bearing carry it;
And th’ ass more captain than the lion; the fellow
Loaden with in’s wiser than the judge,
If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,
As you are great, be pitifully good:
Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?
To kill, I grant, is sin’s extremest gust;
But, in defence, by mercy, ’tis most just.
To be in anger is impiety;
But who is man that is not angry?
Weigh but this crime.
2 Sen. You breathe in vain.
Alcib. In vain! his service done
At Lacedæmon and Byzantium
Were a sufficient briber for his life.
1 Sen. What’s that?
Alcib. Why, I say, my lords, h’s done fair service,
And slain in fight many of your enemies:
How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds!
2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with ’em, he
Is a sworn rioter: he has a sin that often
Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner:
If there were no foes, that were enough
To overcome him: in that beastly fury
He has been known to commit outrages
And cherish factions: ’tis inerr’d to us
His days are foul and his drink dangerous.
1 Sen. He dies.
Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.
My lords, if not for any parts in him,—
Though his right arm might purchase his own time,
And be in debt to none,—yet, more to move you,
Take my deserts to his, and join them both:
And, for I know your reverend ages love
Security, I’ll pawn my victories, all
My honours to you, upon his good returns.
If by this crime he owes the law his life,
Why, let the war receive’t in valiant gore;
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.
1 Sen. We are for law,—he dies; urge it no more,
On height of our displeasure: friend or brother,
He forfeits his own blood that spills another.
Alcib. Must it be so? it must not be. My lords,
I do beseech you, know me.
2 Sen. How!
Alcib. Call me to your remembrances.
3 Sen. What I
Alcib. I cannot think but your age has forgot me;
It could not else be I should prove so base
To sue, and be denied such common grace:
My wounds ache at you.
1 Sen. Do you dare our anger?
’Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;
We banish thee for ever.
Alcib. Banish me!
Banish your dotage; banish usury,
That makes the senate ugly.
1 Sen. If, after two days’ shine, Athens contain thee, Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit,
He shall be executed presently.
[Executor Senators.
Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough;
that you may live
Only in bone, that none may look on you!
I am worse than mad: I have kept back their foes,
While they have told their money, and let out
Their coin upon large interest; I myself
Rich only in large hurts:—all those for this?
Is this the balsam that the usuring senate
Pours into captains’ wounds? Ha! banishment?
It comes not ill: I hate not to be banish’d;
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I’ll cheer up
My discontented troops, and lay for hearts.
’Tis honour with most lands to be at odds;
Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods.
[Exit.
Scene VI.—Athens. A magnificent Room in Timon's House.

Enter divers Lords at several doors.

1 Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.
2 Lord. I also wish it to you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day.
1 Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encountered: I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.
2 Lord. It should not be by the persuasion of his new feasting.
1 Lord. I should think so: he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.
2 Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.
1 Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.
2 Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?
1 Lord. A thousand pieces.
2 Lord. A thousand pieces!
1 Lord. What of you?
3 Lord. He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes.

Enter Timon and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both.—And how fare you?
1 Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.
2 Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship.
Tim. Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men. [Aside.]—Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to't presently.
1 Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned you an empty messenger.
Tim. O, sir, let it not trouble you.
2 Lord. My noble lord,—
Tim. Ah, my good friend! what cheer?
2 Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.
Tim. Think not on't, sir.

2 Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,—
Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance.—Come, bring in all together.

[The banquet brought in.

2 Lord. All covered dishes!
1 Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.
3 Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.
1 Lord. How do you? What's the news?
3 Lord. Alcibiades is banished: hear you of it?
1 & 2 Lord. Alcibiades banished!
3 Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.
1 Lord. How! how!
2 Lord. I pray you, upon what?
Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?
3 Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.
2 Lord. This is the old man still.
3 Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold?
2 Lord. It does: but time will—and so,—
3 Lord. I do conceive.
Tim. Each man to his stool with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.—

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forfake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are. The rest of your fees, O gods,—the senators of Athens, together with the common tag of people,—what is amis in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends,—as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes, when uncovered, are seen to be full of warm water.

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?
Some other. I know not.
Tim. May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends! smoke and Luke-warm water
Is your perfection. This is Timon's last;
Who, stuck and spangled with your flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces
[Throwing the water in their faces.
Your reeking villany. Live leath'd and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,
[flies,
You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's
Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks! Of man and beast the infinite malady Crust you quite o'er!—What, dost you go? Soft, take thy physic first,—thou too,—and thou:—

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.—

[Throws the dishes at them, and drives them out.]

What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast Whereat a villain's nor a welcome guest. Burn, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated be Of Timon, man, and all humanity! [Exit.]

Re-enter the Lords.

1 Lord. How now, my lords!
2 Lord. Know you the quality of Lord Timon's fury?
3 Lord. Fie! did you see my cap?
4 Lord. I have lost my gown.
1 Lord. He's but a mad lord, and naught but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel the other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat,—did you see my jewel?
3 Lord. Did you see my cap?
2 Lord. Here 'tis.
4 Lord. Here lies my gown.
1 Lord. Let's make no stay.
2 Lord. Lord Timon's mad.
3 Lord. I feel it upon my bones.
4 Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the Walls of Athens.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee, O thou wall That girdlest in those wolves, dive in the earth And hence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent! Obedience fail in children! slaves and fools, Pluck the grave wrinkled senator from the bench And minister in their steads! to general filths Convert, of the instant, green virginity,— Do't in your parent's eyes! bankrupts, hold fast; Rather than render back, out with your knives And cut your trusters' throats! bound servants, steal!

Large-handed robbers your grave masters are, And pill by law! maid, to thy master's bed,— Thy mistress is o' the brothel! son of sixteen, Pluck the lim'd crutch from thy old limping sire, With it beat out his brains! piety and fear, Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth, Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbourhood, Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades, Degrees, observances, customs and laws, Decline to your confounding contraries, [men, And let confusion live!—Pilgrims incident to Your potent and infectious fevers heap On Athens, ripe for stroke! thou cold sciatia, Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt As lamely as their manners! lust and liberty Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth, That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive And drown themselves in riot! itches, blains, Sow all the Athenian bosoms; and their crop Be general leprosy! breath infect breath; That their society, as their friendship, may Be merely poison! Nothing I'll hear from thee But nakedness, thou detestable town! Take thou that too, with multiplying banns! Timon will to the woods; where he shall find The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind. The gods confound,—hear me, ye good gods all,—
The Athenians both within and out that wall! And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow To the whole race of mankind, high and low! Amen. [Exit.

Enter Flavius, with Two or Three Servants.

1 Serv. Here you, master steward, where's our master? Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining? Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you? Let me be recorded by the righteous gods, I am as poor as you.

1 Serv. Such a house broke! So noble a master fall'n! All gone! and not One friend to take his fortune by the arm And go along with him!

2 Serv. As we do turn our backs To our companion thrown into his grave, So his familiars from his buried fortunes Slink all away! leave their false vows with him, Like empty purses pick'd; and his poor self, A dedicated beggar to the air, With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty, Walks, like contempt, alone.—More of our fellows.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house. [livery.

3 Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's That see I by our faces; we are fellows still, Serving alike in sorrow: leak'd is our bark;
And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck
I hearing the surges threat: we must all part
Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all,
The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.
Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake,
Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads,
And say,
As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortune,
We have seen better days. Let each take some.

[Giving them money.

Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more:
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.

[Servants embrace, and part several ways.

O, the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us!
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt
Since riches point to misery and contempt?
Who would be so mock'd with glory? or to live
But in a dream of friendship?

[pounds,

To have his pomp, and all that state com-
But only painted, like his varnish'd friends?
Poor honest lord, brought low by his own heart,
Undone by goodness! strange, unusual blood,
When man's worst sin is, he does too much good!
Who then dares to be half so kind again?
For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar
men.

My dearest lord,—bless'd to be most accru'd,
Rich only to be wretched,—thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind lord!
He's flung in rage from this ingratitude seat
Of monstrous friends; nor has he with him to Supply his life, or that which can command it.
I'll follow and enquire him out:
I'll ever serve his mind with my best will;
Whilst I have gold, I'll be his steward still.

[Exit.

Scene III.—The Woods. Before Timon's Cave.

Enter Timon.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb
Infect the air! Twin'd brothers of one womb,—
Whose procreation, residence, and birth
Scarce is divident,—touch them with several fortunes;
The greater scorns the lesser; not nature,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune
But by contempt of nature.

Raise me this beggar and deny 't that lord;
The senator shall bear contempt hereditary
The beggar native honour.

It is the pasture lards the other's sides,
The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,
In purity of manhood stand upright;
And say, This man's a flatterer? if one be,
So are they all; for every groce of fortune
Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate
Ducks to the golden fool: all is oblique.

There's nothing level in our cursed natures
But direct villany. Therefore, be abhor'd
All feasts, societies, and thrones of men!
His semblable, yea, himself Timon disdains:
Destruction fang mankind!—Earth, yield me roots!

[Digging.

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate
With thy most operant poison! What is here?
Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods,

I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear heavens!
Thus much of this will make black, white; foul, fair;
[Valiant.
Wrong, right; base, noble; old, young; coward,

Ha, you gods! why this? what this, you gods? why, this [sides;

Will lug your priests and servants from your Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads:

This yellow slave
Will knit and break religions; bless the accru'd;
Make the hoar leprous eye, and place thieves,
And give them title, knee, and approbation,
With senators on the bench; this is it
That makes the wappen'd widow wed again;
She whom the spital-house and lecherous sores
Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices

To the April day again. Come, damned earth,
Thou common whore of mankind, that putt'st odds

Among the rout of nations, I will make thee

Do thy right nature.—[March afar off.] Ha! a drum?—Thou'rt quick,

But yet I'll bury thee: thou'lt go, strong thief,

When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:—
Nay, stay thou out for earnest.

[Keeping some gold.

Enter Alcibiades, with drum and fife, in warlike manner; Phrynia and Timandra.

Alcib. What art thou there? speak.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaweth thy heart

For showing me again the eyes of man!

Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee,

That art thyself a man?

Tim. I am misanthropos, and hate mankind.
For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee something.
_Alcib._ I know thee well; But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.
_Tim._ I know thee too; and more than that I know thee.
I not desire to know. Fellow thy drum;
With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules;
Religious canons, civil laws are cruel;
Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine
Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,
For all her cherubin look.
_Pin._ Thy lips rot off!
_Tim._ I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns.
To thine own lips again. [change?
_Alcib._ How came the noble Timon to this _Tim._ As the moon does, by wanting light to give:
But then renew I could not, like the moon;
There were no suns to borrow of.
_Alcib._ Noble Timon,
What friendship may I do thee?
_Tim._ None, but to Maintain my opinion.
_Alcib._ What is it, Timon?
_Tim._ Promise me friendship, but perform none: if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man!
_Alcib._ I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.
_Pery._
_Tim._ Thou saw'st them when I had prosperity.
_Alcib._ I see them now; then was a blessed time.
_Harlots._
_Tim._ As thine is now, held with a brace of _Timana_ Is this the Athenian minion whom the world
_Voice'd so regardfully?
_Tim._ Art thou Timandra?
_Timana_ Yes.
_Tim._ Be a whore still! they love thee not that use thee;
Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.
Make use of thy salt hours season the slaves
For tubs and baths; bring down rose-cheek'd youth to
The tub-fast and the diet.
_Timana._ Hang thee, monster!
_Alcib._ Pardon him, sweet Timandra; for his wits
Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.—
I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof doth daily make revolt
In my penurious band: I have heard and griev'd,
How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth,
Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,
But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them,—
_Tim._ I pray thee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone.
_Alcib._ I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear
_Tim._ How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?
I had rather be alone.
_Alcib._ Why, fare thee well:
Here is some gold for thee.
_Tim._ Keep it, I cannot eat it.
_Alcib._ When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—
_Tim._ Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?
_Alcib._ Ay, Timon, and have cause.
_Tim._ The gods confound them all in thy conquest;
And thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!
_Alcib._ Why me, Timon?
_Tim._ That by killing of villains,
Thou wast born to conquer my country.
Put up thy gold: go on,—here's gold,—go on;
Be as a planetary plague, when Jove
Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison
In the sick air: let not thy sword skip one:
Pity not honour'd age for his white beard,
He is an usurer: strike me the counterfeit matron:
It is her habit only that is honest,
Herself's a bawd: let not the virgin's cheek
Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milk
Paps,
That through the window-bars bore at men's
Are not within the leaf of pity writ,
_I set_ them down horrible traitors: spare not the babe,
[eye]
Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their Think it a bastard, whom the oracle
Thath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut,
And mince it sans remorse: swear against objects;
Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes;
Whose proof nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,
Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding, Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers:
Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent,
Confounded be thyself! Speak not, be gone.
_Alcib._ Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,
Not all thy counsel.
_Tim._ Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee?
_Pin._ &c. Timana. Give us some gold, good Timon: hast thou more?
'Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade, [sluts, And to make whores a bawd. Hold up, you Your aprons mountant: you are not oathable,— Although I know you'll swear, terribly swear, Into strong slanders and to heavenly aquis, The immortal gods that hear you,—spare your oaths, I'll trust to your conditions: be whores still; And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you, Be in whose face, allure him, burn him up; Let your close fire predominate his smoke, And be no turncoats: yet may your pains six months [fools Be quite contrary: and thatch your poor thin With burdens of the dead;—some that were hang'd, No matter,—wear them, betray with them: whore still; Paint till a horse may mine upon your face: A pox of wrinkles!

Phr. & Timon. Well, more gold.—What then?— Believe't, that we'll do anything for gold.

Tim. Consumptions sow [shins, In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice, That he may never more false title plead, Nor sound his quillets shrilly: hoar the flamen, That scolds against the quality of flesh And not believes himself: down with the nose, Down with it flat; take the bridge quite away Of him that, his particular to foresee, Smells from the general weal: make curl'd-pate ruffians bald; And let the unscarr'd braggarts of the war Derive some pain from you: plague all; That your activity may defeat and quell The source of all erection.—There's more gold:— Do you damn others and let this damn you, And ditches grave you all!

Phr. & Timon. More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon.

Tim. More whose, more mischief first; I have given you earnest.

Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens! Farewell, Timon:

If I thrive well I'll visit thee again.

Tim. If I hope well I'll never see thee more.

Alcib. I never did thee harm.

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

Alcib. 'Call'st thou that harm?

Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take Thy beagles with thee.

Alcib. We but offend him.—Strike.

Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness, Should yet be hungry!—Common mother, thou,

Whose womb unmeasurable and infinite breast Teems and feeds all; whose self-same mettle, Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd,

Engenders the black toad and adder blue,
The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm, With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine; Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate, From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root! Ensear thy fertile and conceiptious womb, Let it no more bring out ingratitude man! Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears;

Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward Hath to the marbled mansion all above Never presented!—O, a root,—dear thanks! Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-turn leas;

Whereof ungrateful man, with liquorish draughts And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind, That from it all consideration slips!

Enter Apemantus.

More man? plague, plague!

Apem. I was directed hither: men report Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them. [a dog

Tim. 'Tis, then, because thou dost not keep Whom I would imitate: consumption catch thee! Apem. This is in thee a nature but affected; A poor unmanly melancholy sprung From change of fortune. Why this spindle this place?

This slave-like habit? and these looks of care? Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft; Hug their disca'd perfumes, and have forgot That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods By putting on the cunning of a carper. Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee, And let his very breath whom thou 'st observe Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain, And call it excellent: thou wast told thus; Thou gav'st thine cars, like tapsters that bid welcome,

To knaves and all approachers: 'tis most just That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again Rascals should have't. Do not assume my likeness.
TIMON OF ATHENS.

SCENE III.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself. [like thyself;

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being A madman so long, now a fool. 'What, think'st That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain, Will put thy shirt on warm? Will these moss'd trees, That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels, And skip when thou point'st out? Will the cold brook, Candied with ice, candle thy morning taste To cure thy o'night's surfeit? call the creatures,— Whose naked natures live in all the spite Of wreckful heaven; whose bare unhoused trunks, To the conflicting elements expos'd, Answer mere nature,—bid them flatter thee; O, thou shalt find,—

Tim. A fool of thee: depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatt'rst misery.

Apem. I flatter not; but say thou art a cailiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee;

Tim. Always a villain's office or a fool's.

Dost please thyself in 't?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on To castigate thy pride, 'twere well; but thou Dost it enforcedly; thou'dst courtier be again Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before: The one is filling still, never complete; The other, at high wish: best state, contentless, Hath a distracted and most wretched being, Worse than the worst, content;

Tim. Thou should'st desire to die, being miserable.

Apem. Not by his breath that is more miserable.

Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm With favour never clasp'd; but bred a dog. Hadst thou, like us from our first swath, proceeded

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords To such as may the passive drugs of it [thyself Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd In general riot; melted down thy youth In different beds of lust; and never learn'd The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd The sugar'd game before thee. But myself, Who had the world as my confectionary; The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men At duty, more than I could frame employment; That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare For every storm that blows,—I, to bear this, That never knew but better, is some burden:

Thy nature did commence in suffering, time Hath made thee hard in 't. Why shouldst thou hate men? [given?

They never flatt'rd thee: what hast thou If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag. Must be thy subject; who, in spite, put stuff To some she beggar, and compounded thee Poor rogue hereditary. Hence I be gone!— If thou hadst not been born the worst of men, Thou hadst been a knave and flatt'erer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now:

Wrote all the wealth I have shut up in thee, I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.— That the whole life of Athens were in this!

Thou would I eat it. [Eating a root.

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast. [Offering him something.

Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.

Apem. So I shall mend mine own by the lack of thine. [botch'd;

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but If not, I would it were.

Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt, Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have. Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best and truest: For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.

Apem. Where ly'st o' nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me.

Where feast'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Apem. Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather, where I eat it.

Tim. Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind!

Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: when thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume they mocked thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee, eat it.
TIMON OF ATHENS.

Tim. On what I hate I feed not.
Apem. Dost hate a medlar?
Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.
Apem. An thou hadst hated medlars sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now.
What man didst thou ever know unthrift that was beloved after his means?
Tim. Who without those means thou talkest of didst thou ever know beloved?
Apem. Myself.
Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog.
Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?
Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?
Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.
Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?
Apem. Ay, Timon.
Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee t'attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee; if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accused by the ass: if thou wert the ass, thy dullness would torment thee; and still thou livedst but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury:
wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse; wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard; wert thou a leopard, thou wert gorman to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life: all thy safety were remotion; and thy defence absence.
What beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation!
Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou might'st have hit upon it here:
the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.
Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?
Apem. Yonder comes a poet and a painter:
the plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way: when I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.
Tim. When there is nothing living but thee,
More things like men?—Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Enter Thieves.

1 Thief. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender sort of his remainder: the mere want of gold and the falling from of his friends drove him into this melancholy.

2 Thief. It is noised he hath a mass of treasure.

3 Thief. Let us make the assay upon him: if he care not for’t, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall’s get it?

2 Thief. True; for he bears it not about him, ’tis hid.

1 Thief. Is not this he?

Thieves. Where?

2 Thief. ’Tis his description.

3 Thief. He: I know him.

Thieves. Save thee, Timon.

Tim. Now, thieves?

Thieves. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both too; and women’s sons.

Thieves. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs:
The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips!
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush
Lays her full mess before you. Want! why want?

[water, As beasts and birds and fishes.

1 Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries,

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes;

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con,

That you are thieves profess’d; that you work not

In holier shapes: for there is boundless theft

In limited professions. Rascal thieves,

Here’s gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o’ the grape

Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth,

And so’scape hanging: trust not the physician;

His antidotes are poison, and he slays More than you rob: take wealth and lives together;

Do villany, do, since you protest to do’t,

Like workmen. I’ll example you with thievish:
The sun’s a thief, and with his great attraction
Robbs the vast sea: the moon’s an arrant thief,

And her pale fire she snatches from the sun:
The sea’s a thief, whose liquid surge resolves The moon into salt tears: the earth’s a thief, That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen From general excrement: each thing’s a thief: The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power

Have uncheck’d theft. Love not yourselves; Rob one another;—there’s more gold;—cut throats;

All that you meet are thieves. To Athens go, Break open shops: nothing can you steal But thieves do lose it: steal not less for this I give you; and gold confound you howsoever!

Amen. [Timon retires to his cave.]

3 Thief. Has almost charmed me from my profession by persuading me to it.

1 Thief. ’Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

2 Thief. I’ll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

1 Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens: there is no time so miserable but a man may be true.

[Exeunt Thieves.]

Enter Flavius.

Flav. O you gods!

Is you despis’d and ruinous man my lord?

Full of decay and failing? O monument And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow’d! What an alteration of honour

Has desperate want made!

What viler thing upon the earth than friends Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends! How rarely does it meet with this time’s guise, When man was wish’d to love his enemies! Grant I may ever love, and rather woo Those that would mischiefe me than those that do:

I Has caught me in his eye: I will present My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord, Still serve him with my life.—My dearest master!

Timon comes forward from his cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men;

Then, if thou grant’st thou’rt a man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not:

I never had honest man about me, I; all I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness,
Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep—come nearer;
though I love thee
Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st
Flav. Pliny mankind; whose eyes do never give
But thorough lust and laughter. Pity's sleeping:
Strange times, that weep with laughing, not without weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,
To accept my grief, and, whilst this poor
To entertain me as your steward still.
Tim. Had I a steward
So true, so just, and now so comfortable?
It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.
Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man
Was born of woman.

Flav. Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
You perpetual sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man,—mistake me not,—but one;
No more, I pray,—and he's a steward.
How fair would I have hated all mankind!
And thou redeem'st thyself: but all, save thee,
I fell with curses.

Flav. Methinks thou art more honest now than wise;
For by oppressing and betraying me
Thou might'st have sooner got another service:
For many so arrive at second masters [true,—
Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me
For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure,—
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
If not a usuring kindness, and, as rich men
deal gifts,
Expecting in return twenty for one? [breast

Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late:
You should have fear'd false times when you did feast:
Suspect still comes where an estate is least.
That which I show, heaven knows, is merely
love,
Duty, and zeal to your unmatched mind,
Care of your food and living; and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,
For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish,—that you had power and wealth
To requite me, by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so!—Thou singly

Here, take:—the gods, out of my misery,
I have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy; [men:
But thus condition'd:—thou shalt build from Hate all, curse all; show charity to none;

But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone
Lest thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow [blasted woods,
Debts wither 'em to nothing: be men like
And may diseases lick up their false bloods!
And so, farewell and thrive.

Flav. O, let me stay,
And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hast curses,
Stay not; but fly whilst thou'rt bless'd and free:
Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.

[Exit several.]
Tim. Excellent workman! thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him; it must be a personating of himself: a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulence.

Tim. Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him:
Then do we sin against our own estate
When we may profit meet and come too late.

Pain. True; [night,
When the day serves, before black-corner'd
Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. I'll meet you at the turn. What a
That he is worship'd in a baser temple
Than where sweet feed!
'Tis thou that rig'st the bark, and plough'st
Settlest admired reverence in a slave:
To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye
Be crown'd with plagues, that thee alone obey!
Fit I meet them. [Advancing from his cave.

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Pain. Our late noble master!

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir,
Having often of your open bounty tasted,
Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off,
Whose thankless natures.—O abhorred spirits!—
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough:
What! to you,
Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence
To their whole being! I'm wrapt, and cannot cover
The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see't the
You that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen and known.

Pain. He and myself
Have brav'd in the great shower of your gifts,
And sweetly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men.

Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I
Can you eat roots, and drink cold water? no.

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service.

Tim. Ye're honest men: ye've heard that I
I am sure you have: speak truth; ye're honest
men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord: but therefore
Came not my friend nor I.

Tim. Good honest men!—Thou draw'st a counterfeit
Best in all Athens: thou'rt indeed the best;
Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. E'en so, sir, as I say.—And, for thy fiction,

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth
That thou art even natural in thine art.—
But for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,
I must needs: ye yo have a little fault:
Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you; neither wish I
You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour
To make it known to us.

Tim. You'll take it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you indeed?

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knife
That mightily deceives you.

Both. Do we, my lord?

Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog; see him
dissemble,
Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,
Keep in your bosom: yet remain assur'd
That he's a made-up villain.

Pain. I know not such, my lord.

Poet. Nor I.

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you gold,
Rid me these villains from your companies:
Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught,

Confound them by some course, and come to
I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord; let's know them. [in company

Tim. You that way, and you this,—but two
Each man apart, all single and alone,
Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.
If where thou art two villains shall not be,

[To the Painter.

Come not near him.—If thou wouldst not reside

[To the Poet.

But where one villain is, then him abandon.—
Hence! pack! there's gold,—ye came for gold, ye slaves: [hence!
You have done work for me, there's payment:
You are an alchemist, make gold of that:—

Out, rascal dogs!

[Exit, beating and driving them out.
Enter Flavius and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon;
For he is set so only to himself
That nothing but himself, which looks like man,
Is friendly with him.

1 Sen. Bring us to his cave;
It is our part and promise to the Athenians
To speak with Timon.

2 Sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same: 'twas time and griefs
That framed him thus: time, with his fairer
Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him. Bring us to
him,
And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave.—
Peace and content be here! Lord Timon!
Timon!
Look out, and speak to friends; the Athenians,
By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee:
Speak to them, noble Timon.

TIMON comes from his Cave.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn!—
Speak and be hang'd:
For each true word a blister! and each false
Be as a cautery to the root o' the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!

1 Sen. Worthy Timon,— Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon. [Timon.

1 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee,
Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,
Could I but catch it for them.

1 Sen. O, forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators with one consent of love
Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought
On special dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.

2 Sen. They confess
Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross:
Which now the public body,—which doth seldom
Play the recanter,—feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal
Of its own fail, restraining aid to Timon;
And send forth us to make their sorrow'd render,
Together with a recompense more fruitful
Than their offence may weigh down by the dram:
Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth
As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;
Surprise me to the very brink of tears:
Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes,
And I'll beweep these comforts, worthy senators.

1 Sen. Therefore so please thee to return with us,
And of our Athens,—thine and ours,—to take
The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good name
Live with authority:—so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades the approaches wild;
Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.

2 Sen. And shakes his threatening sword
Against the walls of Athens.

1 Sen. Therefore, Timon,— Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir; thus,—
If Alcibiades kill my countrymen.
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon, [Athens,
That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair
And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war;
Then let him know,—and tell him Timon speaks it,
In pity of our aged and our youth,—
I cannot choose but tell him that I care not,
And let him take 't at worst; for their knives care not,
While you have throats to answer; for myself,
There's not a willie in the unruly camp
But I do prize it at my love, before [you
The reverend'st threat in Athens. So I leave
To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not, all's in vain.
Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph;
It will be seen to-morrow: my long sickness
Of health and living now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still;
De Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

1 Sen. We speak in vain.
Tim. But yet I love my country; and am not
One that rejoices in the common wreck,
As common bruit doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoke.
Tim. Commend me to my loving countrymen,—

1 Sen. These words become your lips as they pass thorough them. [triumphers

2 Sen. And enter in our ears like great
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them;
And tell them that, to ease them of their griefs,
SCENE II.—The Walls of Athens.

Enter two Senators and a Messenger.

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his files
As full as thy report?

Mess. I have spoke the least:
 Besides, his expedition promises
 Present approach. [not Timon.

2 Sen. We stand much hazard if they bring Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend;
 Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,
 Yet our old love had a particular force,
 And made us speak like friends:—this man was riding
 From Alcibiades to Timon's cave
 With letters of entreaty, which imported
 His fellowship 'tis the cause against your city,
 In part for his sake mov'd.

1 Sen. [Here come our brothers.

Enter Senators from Timon.

3 Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.—

The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring
 Doth choke the air with dust: in, and prepare:
 Ours is the fall, I fear; our foes the snare.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Woods. Timon's Cave, and a rude Tomb seen.

Enter a Soldier seeking Timon.

Sold. By all description this should be the place.
 Is this? Who's here? speak, ho!—No answer?—What Timon is dead, who hath outstretched his span:
 Some beast rear'd this; there does not live a man.
 [tomb

Dead, sure; and this his grave,—what's on this I cannot read; the character I'll take with wax:
 Our captain hath in every figure skill,
 An ag'd interpreter, though young in days:
 Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
 Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades and Forces.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town
 Our terrible approach. [A parley sounded.

Enter Senators on the Walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
 With all licentious measure, making your wills
 The scope of justice; till now, myself, and such
 As slept within the shadow of your power,
 Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd
 Our sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush,
 When crouching marrow, in the bear's strong,
 Cries, of itself, No more: now breathless wrong
 Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease;
 And pusry insolence shall break his wind
 With fear and horrid flight.

1 Sen. [Noble and young,

When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
 Ther thou hadst power or we had cause of fear,
 We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm,
 To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
 Above their quantity.

2 Sen. So did we woo

Transformed Timon to our city's love,
 By humble message and by promis'd means.
 We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
 The common stroke of war.
These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands from whom
You have receiv'd your griefs: nor are they such
That these great towers, trophies, and schools Should fall
For private faults in them.

Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out;
S'ame, that they wanted cunning, in excess,
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation and a tithed death,—
If thy revenges hunger for that food [tenth];
Which nature loathes,—take thou the destin'd
And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.

All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square to take,
On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cruelties and those kin
Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must fall
With those that have offended: like a shepherd
Approach the fold and call the infected forth,
But kill not all together.

What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile
Than hew to't with thy sword.

Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates and they shall ope;
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before
To say thou 'lt enter friendly.

Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers
Shall make their harbour in our town till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports;

Those enemies of Timon's and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for: reproof,
Fall, and no more: and,—to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning,—not a man
Shall pass his quarter or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

'Tis most nobly spoken.

Descend, and keep your words.

Enter a Soldier.

My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem of the sea;
And on his grave-stone this inscription, which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

[Reads.] Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:
Seek not my name, a plague consume you wicked caitiffs left!

Here lies Timon; who, alive, all living men
Did hate:
Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass, and stay
Not here thy gait.

These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorrest in us our human griefs, Scorn'dst our brain's flow, and those our droplets which
From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for eye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven: Dead
Is noble Timon; of whose memory
Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace stint war;
make each
Prescribe to other, as each other's leech.
Let our drums strike.

[Exeunt.}
CORIOLANUS.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS, a noble Roman.
TITUS LARTIUS, } Generals against the Volscians.
COMINIUS,
MENENIUS AGrippa, Friend to CORIOLANUS.
ICINlius VELOtus, } Tribunes of the People.
JUNIUS Brutus,
YOUNG MARCIUS, Son to CORIOLANUS.
A Roman Herald.
TULLIUS AUFIDIIUS, General of the Volscians.
Lieutenant to AUFIDIIUS.
Conspirators with AUFIDIIUS.

Scene.—Partly in Rome, and partly in the Territories of the Volscians and Antates.

ACT I.

Scene I.—Rome.  A Street.

Enter a company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

1 Citr. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

Citizens. Speak, speak.

1 Citr. You are all resolved rather to die than to famish?

Citizens. Resolved, resolved.

1 Citr. First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

Citizens. We know’t, we know’t.

1 Citr. Let us kill him, and we’ll have corn at our own price. Isn’t a robbery?

Citizens. No more talking on’t; let it be done: away, away!

2 Citr. One word, good citizens.

1 Citr. We are accounted poor citizens; the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us: if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them.—Let us revenge this with our pikes ere we become rakes: for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

2 Citr. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?
Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,
Will you undo yourselves?

Men. We cannot, sir, we are undone already.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care
Have the patricians of you. For your wants,
Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well
Strike at the heaven with your staves as lift them Against the Roman state; whose course will on
The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs
Of more strong link asunder than can ever
Appear in your impediment: for the dearth,
The gods, not the patricians, make it; and
Your knees to them, not arms, must help.

Alack,
You are transported by calamity [slander
Thither where more attends you; and you
The helms o’ the state, who care for you like fathers,
When you curse them as enemies.

Men. Care for us! True, indeed! They never cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their storehouses crammed with grain;
make edicts for usury, to support usurers;
repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich; and provide more piercing statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will;
and there’s all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must Confess yourselves wondrous malicious,
Or be accus’d of folly. I shall tell you
A pretty tale: it may be you have heard it;
But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture
To stale’t a little more.

Men. Well, I’l1 hear it, sir; yet you must not think to fo’t-off our disgrace with a tale:
but, an’t please you, deliver.

Men. There was a time when all the body’s members
Rebell’d against the belly; thus accus’d it:—
That only like a gulf it did remain
’t the midst o’ the body, idle and unactive,
Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing
Like labour with the rest; where the other instruments
Did see and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And, mutually participate, did minister
Unto the appetite and affection common
Of the whole body. The belly answered,—

Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile, [thus,—
Which ne’er came from the lungs, but even
For, look you, I may make the belly smile
As well as speak,—it tauntingly replied
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts
That envied his receipt; even so most fitly
As you malign our senators for that
They are not such as you.

Men. Your belly’s answer? What!
The Kingly-crowned head, the vigilant eye,
The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpet,
With other muniments and petty helps
In this our fabric, if that they;—

Men. What then?—’Fore me, this fellow speaks!—what then?
what then? [restrain’d

Men. Should the incorruptable belly be
Who is the sink o’ the body,—

Men. Well, what then?

Men. The former agents, if they did complain,
What could the belly answer?

Men. I will tell you; If you’ll bestow a small,—of what you have little,—
Patience awhile, you’ll hear the belly’s answer.

Men. Note me this, good friend;
Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer’d:
True it is, my incorruptable friends, quoth he,
That I receive the general food at first
Which you do live upon; and yet it is,
Because I am the storehouse and the shop
Of the whole body: but, if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood,
Even to the heart, the seat of the brain:
And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves and small inferior veins
From me receive that natural competency
Whereby they live; and though that all at once
You, my good friends,—this says the belly,— mark me,—

Men. Ay, sir; well, well.

Men. Though all at once cannot See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my audit :—, that all
From me do back receive the flour of all,
And leave me but the bran. What say you to’t?

Men. It was an answer: how apply you this?

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,
And you the mutinous members: for, examine
Their counsels and their cares; digest things rightly
Touching the weal of the common; you shall
No public benefit which you receive
But it proceeds or comes from them to you,
And now away from yourselves.—What do you think,
You, the great toe of this assembly?

1 Citi. Is the great toe? why the great toe?

Men. For that, being one of the lowest,
best, poorest,
Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st foremost:
Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run,
Lead'st us to win some vantage.—
But make you ready your stiff hats and clubs;
Rome and her rats are at the point of battle;
The one side must have bale.—

Enter Caius Marcius.

Hail, noble Marcius!

Mar. Thanks.—What’s the matter, you dissentious rogues,
That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs?

1 Cit. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to ye will flatter [curs,
Beneath abhorring.—What would you have, you
That like nor peace nor war? The one affrights you, [you
The other makes you proud! He that trusts to Where he should find you lions finds you hares;
Where foxes, geese: you are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,
Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is [him.
To make him worthy whose offence subdues
And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness
Deserves your hate; and your affections are
A sick man’s appetite, who desires most that Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours swims with fins of lead,
And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye!

Trust ye!

With every minute you do change a mind;
And call him noble that was now your hate,
Him vile that was your garland. What’s the matter,
That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senator, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else
Would feed on one another?—What’s their seeking?

[they say,

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof,
The city is well stor’d.

Mar. Hang ’em! They say!
They’ll sit by the fire and presume to know
What’s done in the Capitol; who’s like to rise,
Who thrives and who declines; side factions,
and give out
Conjectural marriages: making parties strong,
And feebling such as stand not in their liking.
Below their cobbled shoes. They say there’s grain enough!
Would the nobility lay aside their ruth
And let me use my sword, I’d make a quarry
With thousands of these quarter’d slaves, as high
As I could pick my lance.

Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded:
For though abundantly they lack discretion,
Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech
you,
What says the other troop?

Mar. They are dissolved: hang ’em!
They said they were an-hungry; sigh’d forth proverbs,—
That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs must
That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent not
Corn for the rich men only:—with these shreds
They vented their complaints: which being
answer’d,
And a petition granted them,—a strange one,
To break the heart of generosity,
And make bold power look pale,—they threw their caps [moon,
As they would hang them on the horns of the Shouting their emulation.

Men. What is granted them?

Mar. Five tribunes, to defend their vulgar wisdoms,
Of their own choice: one’s Junius Brutus,
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not.—’Dearth!
The rabble should have first unroof’d the city
For so prevail’d with me: it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes
For insurrection’s arguing.

Men. This is strange.

Mar. Go, get you home, you fragments!

Enter a Messenger, hastily.

Mess. Where’s Caius Marcius?

Mar. Here! what’s the matter?
Mess. The news is, sir, the Volscæ are in arms.

Mar. I am glad on’t: then shall ha! means
Our musty superfluity.—See, our best elders.

Enter Cominius, Titus Lartius, and other Senators; Junius Brutus and Sicinius Velutus.

1 Sen. Marcius, ’tis true that you have lately told us.—
The Volscæ are in arms.
They have a leader,
Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to't.
I sin in envying his nobility;
And were I anything but what I am,
I would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought together.

Mar. Were half to half the world by the ears, and he
Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make
Only my wars with him: he is a lion
That I am proud to hunt.

1 Sen. Then, worthy Marcius,
Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir, it is;
And I am constant.—Titus Lartius, thou
Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face.
What, art thou stiff? stand'st out?

Tit. No, Caius Marcius;
I'll lean upon one crutch and fight with the other
Ere I stay behind this business.

Men. O, true bred!

1 Sen. Your company to the Capitol; where I
know,
Our greatest friends attend us.

Tit. Lead you on:
Follow, Cominius; we must follow you;
Right worthy your priority.

Com. Noble Marcius!

1 Sen. Hence to your homes; be gone!

[To the Citizens.]

Mar. Nay, let them follow:
The Volsces have much corn; take these rats thither
To gnaw their garners.—Worshipful mutineers,
Your valour puts well forth: pray, follow.

[Exeunt Senators, Com., Mar., Tit., and MENEN. Citizens steal away.

Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Marcius?

Bru. He has no equal. [people,—

Sic. When we were chosen tribunes for the Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eyes?

Sic. Nay, but his taunts.

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods.

Sic. Be-mock the modest moon.

Bru. The present wars devour him: he is grown Too proud to be so valiant.

Sic. Such a nature,
Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow
Which he treads on at noon: but I do wonder
His insolence can brook to be commanded Under Cominius.

Bru. Fame, at which he aims,—
In whom already he is well grace'd,—cannot Better be held, nor more attain'd, than by

A place below the first: for what miscarries
Shall be the general's fault, though he perform
To the utmost of a man; and giddily censure
Will then cry out of Marcius, O, if he Had borne the business!

Sic. Besides, if things go well,
Opinion, that so sticks on Marcius, shall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Bru. Come:
Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcius, Though Marcius earn'd them not; and all his faults
To Marcius shall be honours, though, indeed,
In aught he merit not.

Sic. Let's hence, and hear
How the despatch is made; and in what fashion,
More than in singularity, he goes
Upon this present action.

Bru. Let's along.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—CORIOLANUS. The Senate House.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS and certain Senators.

1 Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius,
That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels,
And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours?
What ever hath been thought on in this state, that could be brought to bodily act are Rome
Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone Since I heard thence; these are the words: I think
I have the letter here; yes, here it is: [Reads.
They have press'd a power, but it is not known
Whether for east or west: the dearth is great;
The people mutinous: and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marcius your old enemy,—
Who is of Rome worse hated than of you,—
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
These three lead on this preparation
Where 'tis best: most likely 'tis for you:
Consider of it.

1 Sen. Our army's in the field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly
To keep your great pretences veil'd till when They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,
It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery
We shall be shorten'd in our aim: which was,
To take in many towns ere, almost, Rome
Should know we were afoot.

2 Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission; hie you to your bands:
Let us alone to guard Corioli:
If they set down before's, for the remove Bring up your army; but I think you'll find They're not prepar'd for us.

Auf. O, doubt not that;
I speak from certainties. Nay, more,
Some parcels of their power are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Caius Marius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you!

Auf. And keep your honours safe!
1 Sen. Farewell.
2 Sen. Farewell.
All. Farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—ROME. An Apartment in Marius' House.

Enter Volumnia and Virgilia: they sit down on two low stools and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing, or express yourself in a more comfortable sort: if my son were my husband, I should freer rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embraces of his bed where he would show most love. When yet he was but tenderboned, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way; when, for a day of king's entertainments, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; I,—considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall if renown made it not stir,—was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter,
I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam? how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue.
Hear me profess sincerely,—had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuosely surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you. [myself.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire
Vol. Indeed you shall not.

Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum;

See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair;
As children from a bear, the Volscæ shunning
him:

Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus,— Come on, you cowards! you were got in fear
Though you were born in Rome: his bloody brow
With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes,
Like to a harvest-man that's task'd to mow
Or all, or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter, no blood!

Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man
Than gilt his trophy: the breasts of Hecuba,
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood
At Grecian swords contending.—Tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome. [Exit Gent.

Vir. I heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!

Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with Valeria and her Usher.

Val. My ladies both, good-day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here?
A fine spot, in good faith.—How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords and hear a drum than look upon his schoolmaster.

Val. O' my word, the father's son: I'll swear 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: he has such a confirmed countenance.
I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; caught it again; or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it; O, I warrant, how he mammoned it!

Vol. One on's father's moods.

Val. Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitches; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Val. Not out of doors!

Vol. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience; I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars.

Val. Fie, you confine yourself most unreasonably; come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Val. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope: yet they say all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come; I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity.—Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed I will not forth.

Val. In truth, I do, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is:—The Volsces have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in everything hereafter.

Val. Let her alone, lady; as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth.

Val. In troth, I think she would.—Fare you well, then.—Come, good sweet lady.—Pr'ythee, Virgilia, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and go along with us.

Vir. No, at a word, madam; indeed I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well, then, farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter, with drums and colours, Marcius, Titus Lartius, Officers, and Soldiers.

Mar. Vonder comes news:—a wager they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Enter a Messenger.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view; but have not spoke as yet.

Lart. So, the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll nor sell nor give him: lend you him I will

For half a hundred years.—Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. Within this mile and half.

Mar. Then shall we hear their 'larum, and they ours.—

Now, Mars, I pr'ythee, make us quick in work, That we with smoking swords may march from hence [blast.

To help our fielded friends!—Come, blow thy

They sound a parley. Enter, on the Walls, some Senators and others.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls? [he, l Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less Than that's lesser than a little. Hark, our drums [Drums afar off.

Are bringing forth our youth! we'll break our walls, Rather than they shall pound us up: our gates, Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes; They'll open of themselves. Hark you far off! [Alarums afar off.

There is Aufidius; list what work he makes Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O, they are at it!

Lart. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders, ho!

The Volsces enter and pass over.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city. [fight

Now put your shields before your hearts, and With hearts more proof than shields. —Advance, brave Titus: They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts, Which makes me sweat with wrath.—Come on, my fellows:

He that retires I'll take him for a Volsce, And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarums, and exect Romains and Volsces fighting. The Romans are beaten back to their trenches. Re-enter Marcius.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you, [plagues You shames of Rome! —you herd of—Boils and Plaster you o'er, that you may be ahorr'd Further than seen, and one infect another Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese, That bear the shapes of men, how have you run [and hell! From slaves that apes would beat! Pluto All hurt behind; backs red, and faces pale With flight and agony fear! Mend, and charge home,
Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe
And make my wars on you; look to't: come on;
If you'll stand fast we'll beat them to their wives,
As they us to our trenches followed.

Another alarm. The Volscy and Romans re-enter, and the fight is renewed. The Volscy retire into Corioli, and MARCIUS follows them to the gates.

So, now the gates are open.—now prove good seconds:
'Tis for the followers fortune widens them,
Not for the fliers mark me, and do the like.

[He enters the gates.

1 Sol. Fool-hardiness: not I.

2 Sol. Nor I.

[MARCIUS is shut in.

1 Sol. See, they have shut him in.

All. To the pot, I warrant him.

[Alarum continues.

Re-enter Titus Lartius.

Lart. What is become of Marcus?

All. Stain, sir, doubtless,

1 Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels,
With them he enters; who, upon the sudden,
Clapp'd to their gates: he is himself alone,
To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow!
Who, sensible, outdares his senseless sword,
And when it bows stands up! Thou art left,
    Marcus:
A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art,
Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier
Even to Cato’s wish, not fierce and terrible
Only in strokes; but with thy grim looks and
The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds
Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world
Were feverous and did tremble.

Re-enter Marcius, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy.

1 Sol. Look, sir.

Lart. O, 'tis Marcus!
Let’s fetch him off, or make remain alike.

[They fight, and all enter the city.

Scene V.—Within Corioli. A Street.

Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

2 Rom. And I this.

3 Rom. A murrain on 't! I took this for silver.

[Alarum continues still afar off.

Enter Marcius and Titus Lartius with a trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers that do prize their hours

At a crack'd drachm! Cushions, leaden spoons,
Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,

[With them!—

Ere yet the fight be done, pack up:—down
And bark, what noise the general makes!—To
him!—

There is the man of my soul’s hate, Aufidius, Piercing our Romans: then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city:
Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste
To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed’st;
Thy exercise hath been too violent for
A second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not;
My work hath yet not warm’d me: fare you
well:
The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me: to Aufidius thus
I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune,
Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms

[man,
Misguide thy opposers’ swords! Bold gentle-
Prosperity be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest!—So farewell.

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius!—

[Exit Marcius.

Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place,
Call thither all the officers o’ the town,
Where they shall know our mind: away!

[Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Near the Camp of Cominius.

Enter Cominius and Forces, retreating.

Com. Breathe you, my friends: well fought;
we are come off
Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands
Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs,
We shall be charg’d again. Whiles we have struck,
By interims and conveying gusts we have heard
The charges of our friends. Ye Roman gods, Lead their successes as we wish our own,
that both our powers, with smiling fronts
encountering,
May give you thankful sacrifice!—

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Thy news?

Com. The citizens of Corioli have issued,
And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle;
I saw our party to their trenches drawn,
And then I came away.
Com. Though thou speakest truth, methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:

How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour, And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volscians held me in chase, that I was fore'd to wheel
Three or four miles about; else had I, sir, Half an hour since brought my report.

Com. Who's yonder, that does appear as he were slain? O gods!

He has the stamp of Marcius; and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. [Within.] Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor.

More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue From every meaner man.

Enter Marcius.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,

But mantled in your own.

Mar. O! let me clip you In arms as sound as when I woo'd; in heart As merry as when our nuptial day was done, And tapers burn'd to bedward!

Com. Flower of warriors, how is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees: Condemning some to death and some to exile; Ransoming him or pitying, threat'ning the other; Holding Corioli in the name of Rome, Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash, To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?

Where's he? call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone:

He did inform the truth: but for our gentlemen, The common file,—a plague!—tribunes for them!—

The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.

Where is the enemy? are you lords o' the field? If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Marcius, We have at disadvantage fought, and did Retire, to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? know you on which side They have placed their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcius, Their bands in the vaward are the Antiates, Of their best trust; or'er them Ausdias, Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you, By all the lattices wherein we have fought, By the blood we have shed together, by the vows [directly We have made to endure friends, that you Set me against Ausdias and his Antiates; And that you not delay the present, but, Filling the air with swords advance'd and darts, We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish You were conducted to a gentle bath, And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking: take your choice of those That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they That most are willing.—If any such be here,— As it were sin to doubt,—that love this painting Wherein you see me smear'd; if any fear Lesser his person than an ill report; If any think brave death outweighs bad life, And that his country's dearer than himself; Let him alone, or so many so minded, Wave thus [waving his hand],—express his disposition, And follow Marcius.

[They all shout, and wave their swords; take him up in their arms, and cast up their caps. O, me alone! I make you a sword of me? If these shows be not outward, which of you But is four Volscians? none of you but is Able to bear against the great Ausdias A shield as hard as his. A certain number, Though thanks to all, must I select from all: the rest Shall bear the business in some other fight, As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march; And four shall quickly draw out my command, Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my fellows: Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us.

Scene VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

Titus Lartius, having set a guard upon Corioli, going with drum and trumpet toward Cominius and Caius Marcius, enters with a Lieutenant, a party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So, let the ports be guarded: keep your duties
As I have set them down. If I do send, despatch
Those centuries to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding: if we lose the field
We cannot keep the town.

Lit. Fear not our care, sir.

Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon’s.—
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp conduct us.

[Exeunt.

Scene VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

Alarum. Enter, from opposite sides, Marcius and Aufidius.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee; for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike:
Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame and envy. Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first sadder die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!

Auf. If I fly, Marcius,
Halloo me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Coriolis wall,
[ blood
And made what work I pleas'd: 'tis not my Wherein thou seest me mask'd; for thy revenge
Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Auf. Wert thou the Hector
That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny,
Thou shouldst not spare me here.—

[They fight, and certain Volscians come to the aid of Aufidius.

Officious, and not valiant,—you have sham'd me
In your condemned seconds.

[Exeunt fighting, driven in by Mar.

Scene IX.—The Roman Camp.

Alarum. A retreat is sounded. Flourish.

Enter, at one side, Cominius and Romans;
at the other side, Marcius, with his arm in a scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Thou 'lt not believe thy deeds: but I'll report it
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles;
Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug.
I the end admire; where ladies shall be frightened,
And, gladly quak'd, hear more; where the dull tribunes,
That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine honours,
Shall say, against their hearts, We thank the gods;
Our Rome hath such a soldier!

Yet canst thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully dined before.

Enter Titus Lartius, with his power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison:
Hadst thou beheld,—

Mar. Pray now, no more; my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me it grieves me. I have
As you have done,—that's what I can; induc'd
As you have been,—that's for my country:
He that has but effected his good will
Hath over-ta'en mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving; Rome must know
The value of her own: 'twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings; and to silence that
Which, to the spire and top of praises vouch'd,
Would seem but modest: therefore, I beseech you,—

In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done,—before our army hear me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart
To hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not,
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses,—
[ all
Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store,—
The treasure in this field achieved and city,
We render you the tenth; to be ta'en forth
Before the common distribution at Your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing.

[ A long flourish. They all cry, "Marcius! Marcius!" cast up their caps and lances.
Cominius and Lartius stand bare.

Mar. May these same instruments which you profane

Never sound more! When drums and trumpets
The field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be Made all of false-fac'd soothing!
When steel grows soft as the parasite's silk,
Let him be made a coverture for the wars!
No more I say! for that I have not wash'd
My not soiled hand, or soiled some debile wretch,—

Which, without note, here's many else have done,—
You shout me forth in acclamations hyperbolical;
As if I loved my little should be dictated
In praises sauc'd with lies.

Cor. Too modest are you;
More cruel to your good report than grateful
To us that give you truly: by your patience,
If 'gainst yourself you be incens'd, we'll put you—

[manacles,
Like one that means his proper harm,—in
Then reason safely with you.—Therefore be it known,
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius Wears this war's garland: in token of the which,
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging: and from this time,
For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS.—
Bear the addition nobly ever!

[FLOURISH. TRUMPETS SOUNDED, AND DRUMS.

ALL. Caius Marcius Coriolanus!

Cor. I will go warn;
And when my face is fair you shall perceive
Whether I blush or no: howbeit, I thank you.—
I mean to ride your steed; and at all times
To underest your good addition
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent:
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success.—You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.

Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now
Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general.

Com. Take 't: 'tis yours.—What is 't?

Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli
At a poor man's house; he us'd me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But then Ausilius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O, well begg'd!

Were he the butcher of my son he should Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.

Lart. Marcius, his name?

Cor. By Jupiter, forgot:—
I am weary; yea, my memory is tir'd.—
Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent:
The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time
It should be look'd to: come. [Exeunt.

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Volsces.

A flouris. Cornets. Enter Tullus Aufidius, bloody, with two or three soldiers.

AUF. The town is ta'en! [Edition.

1 Sol. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good con-

AUF. Condition!

I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volsce, be that I am.—Condition!

What good condition can a treaty find
I the part that is at mercy?—Five times,
Marcius, [beat me;
I have fought with thee; so often hast thou
And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eat.—By the elements,
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He's mine or I am his: mine emulation
Hath not that honour in 't it had; for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force,—
True sword to sword,—I'll potch at him some way,
Or wrath or craft may get him.

1 Sol. He's the devil.

AUF. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour's poisoned
With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself: nor sleep nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick; nor fame nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests nor times of sacrifice,
Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate. —Marcius: where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there,
Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in's heart. Go you to the city; [must Learn how 'tis held; and what they are that
Be hostages for Rome.

1 Sol. Will not you go?

AUF. I am attended at the cypress grove:
I pray you,— [thither
'Tis south the city mills,—bring me word
How the world goes, that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.

1 Sol. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter Menenius, Sicinius, and Brutus.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to night.

Bru. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.
Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius.

Bru. He's a lamb indeed, that baas like a bear.

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men; tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor in, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all.

Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file? Do you?

Both Trib. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,—will you not be angry?

Both Trib. Well, well, sir, well.

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience; give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. You blame Marcius for being proud?

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can do very little alone; for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O that you could turn your eyes toward the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O that you could!

Bru. What then, sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates,—alias, fools,—as any in Rome.

Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in't: said to be something imperfect in favouring the first complaint, hasty and tender-like upon too trivial motion; one that converses more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such wealsmen as you are,—I cannot call you Lycurguses,—if the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say your worships have delivered the matter well when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables; and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they lie deadly that tell you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it that I am known well enough too? What harm can your bisson consecnptunities gleam out of this character, if I be known well enough too?

Bru. Come, sir, come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor anything. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs: you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller; and then rejourn the controversy of threepence to a second day of audience.—When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the colic, you make faces like mummers; set up the bloody flag against all patience; and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing: all the peace you make in their cause is calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary bencher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a butcher's cushion or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying, Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion; though peradventure some of the best of them were hereditary hangmen. God-den to your worships: more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you.

{Brutus and Sicinius retire.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, Valeria, &c.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies,—and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,—will you follow your eyes so fast?

Val. Honorable Menenius, my boy Marcian approaches; for the love of Juno let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcian coming home!

Val. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation.
Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee.
—Hoor! Marcius coming home!
Vol. Look, here's a letter from him: the state hath another, his wife another; and I think there's one at home for you.
Men. I will make my very house reef tonight.—A letter for me?
Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you;
I saw it.
Men. A letter for me! It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricall, and, to it is preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.
Vir. O, no, no, no.
Vol. O, he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.
Men. So do I too, if it be not too much.— Brings a victory in his pocket?—The wounds become him.
Vol. On's brows: Menenius, he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.
Men. Has he disciplined Ausidius soundly?
Vol. Titus Lartius writes,—they fought together, but Ausidius got off.
Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: an he had stayed by him, I would not have been so disposed for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this?
Vol. Good ladies, let's go.—Yes, yes, yes;
the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war:
he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.
Vol. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.
Men. Wondrous! ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.
Vir. The gods grant them true!
Vol. True! pow, wow.
Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true.—
Where is he wounded?—[To the Tribunes, who come forward.] God save your good worship:—
Marcius is coming home: he has more cause to be proud. Where is he wounded?
Vol. I' the shoulder and i' the left arm:
there will be large cicatrices to show the people when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' the body:
Men. One i' the neck and two i' the thigh,— there's nine that I know.
Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave. [A shout and flourish.]
Hark! the trumpets.
Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius: before him [tears; he carries noise, and behind him he leaves Death, that dark spirit, in's nery arm doth lie; [die.
Which, being advanc'd, declines, and then men
A senetet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINUS and TITUS LARTIUS; between them, CORIO-LANUS, crowned with an oaken garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.
Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight
Within Corioli gates: where he hath won,
With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these
In honour follows Coriolanus:—
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!
[Floinish.
All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus! [heart;
Cor. No more of this, it does offend my Pray now, no more.
Com. Look, sir, your mother! O,
You have, I know, petition'd all the gods
For my prosperity! [Kneels.
Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up;
My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and
By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd,—
What is it?—Coriolanus must I call thee?
But, O, thy wife!
Cor. My gracious silence, hail!
Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd home,
That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah, my dear,
Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,
And mothers that lack sons.
Men. Now the gods crown thee! Cor.
And live you yet?—O my sweet lady,
pardon. [To VALERIA.
Vol. I know not where to turn.—O, welcome
home;—
And welcome, general;—and you are welcome Men. A hundred thousand welcomes.—I could weep
[Welcome:
And I could laugh; I am light and heavy.—
A curse begin at very root on's heart
That is not glad to see thee!—You are three That Rome should dote on: yet, by the faith of men,
We have some old crab trees here at home that
Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors:
We call a nettle but a nettle; and
The faults of fools but folly.
Com. Ever right.
Cor. Menenius ever, ever.
Her. Give way there, and go on!
Cor. Your hand, and yours:

[To his wife and mother.

Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited;
From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,
But with them change of honours.
Vol. I have lived
To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy: only [but There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not
Our Rome will cast upon thee.
Cor. Know, good mother,
I had rather be their servant in my way
Than sway with them in theirs.
Com. On, to the Capitol.

[Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before. The Tribunes remain.

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights
Are spectated to see him: your prattling nurse
Into a rapture lets her baby cry
While she chats him: the kitchen malkin pins
Her richest lankram 'bout her reeche neck,
Clambering the walls to eye him: stalls, bulks, windows,
Are smoker'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges hors'd
With variable complexion; all agreeing
In earnestness to see him: self-shown flamens
Do press among the popular throngs, and puff
To win a vulgar station: our veil'd dames Commit the war of white and damask, in
Their nicely gaw'de cheeks, to the wanton spoil
Of Phoebus' burning kisses: such a pother,
As if that whatsoever god who leads him
Were slily crept into his human powers,
And gave him graceful posture.

Sic. On the sudden,
I warrant him consul.
Bru. Then our office may,
During his power, go sleep. [honours
Sic. He cannot temperately transport his
From where he should begin and end; but will Lose those that he hath won.
Bru. In that there's comfort.
Sic. Doubt not the commoners, for whom we stand,
But they, upon their ancient malice, will forget,
With the least cause, these their new honours; which
That he'll give them make as little question
As he is proud to do't.

Bru. I heard him swear,
Woe he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i' the market-place, nor on him put
The napless vesture of humility;
Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds
To the people, beg their sinking breaths.
Sic. 'Tis right.
Bru. It was his word: O, he would miss it rather
To carry it but by the suit of the gentry to
And the desire of the nobles.
Sic. I wish no better
Than have him hold that purpose, and to put it
In execution.
Bru. 'Tis most like he will.
Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good wills,
A sure destruction.
Bru. So it must fall out
To him or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people in what hatred
He still hath held them; that to's power he Would
Have made them mules, silence'd their pleaders,
Disproportioned their freedoms: holding them,
In human action and capacity,
Of no more soul nor fitness for the world
Than camels in their war; who have their pro-
Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence Shall touch the people,—which time shall not want,
If it be put upon't; and that's as easy
As to set dogs on sheep,—will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?
Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis thought
That Marcus shall be consul:
And I have seen the dumb men throng to see him,
The blind to hear him speak: matrons flung Gloves,
Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchers,
Upon him as he pass'd: the nobles bended
As to Jove's statue; and the commons made
A shower and thunder with their caps and shouts:
I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Rome. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers, to lay cushions.

Off. Come, come; they are almost here.
How many stand for consulships?
2 Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it.
1 Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.
2 Off. Faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if they love them not why, they hate upon brother a ground: therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition; and, out of his noble carelessnes, lets them plainly see't.
1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waved indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite.
Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes,—to flatter them for their love.
2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country: and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonnetted, without any further deed to have them at all into their estiination and report: but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful injury; to report otherwise were a malice that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.
1 Off. No more of him; he is a worthy man:
make way, they are coming.

A Senet. Enter, with Lictors before them,
Cominius the Consul, Menenius, Coriolanus, Senators, Sicinius, and Brutus.
The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves.

Men. Having determin'd the Volsc泽s, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service that Hath thus stood for his country: therefore
please you,
Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul, and last general
In our well-found successes, to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Marcus Coriolanus; whom
We meet here, both to thank and to remember,
With honours like himself.

1 Sen. Speak, good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us
think
Rather our state's defective for requital Than we to stretch it out.—Masters of the people,
We do request your kindest ears; and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
To yield what passes here.

Sit.
We are convened
Upon a pleasing treaty; and have hearts
Inclined to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather
We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people than
He hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off:
I would you rather had been silent. Please
you
To hear Cominius speak?

Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their bedfellow.—
Worthy Cominius, speak.

CORIOLANUS rises, and offers to go away.
Nay, keep your place.

1 Sen. Sit, Coriolanus: never shame to hear
What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honours' pardon:
I had rather have my wounds to heal again
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope
My words disench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir; yet off,
When blows have made me stay, I fled from
words.

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head
If the sun
When the alarum were struck, than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd.

Men. Masters of the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,— That's thousand to one good one,—when you now see
He had rather venture all his limbs for honour
Than one on's ears to hear it?—Proceed,

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Corio-
Should not be utter'd feebly.—It is held
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and Most dignifie the haver: if it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others: our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him: he bestrid
An o'erpress'd Roman, and 't the consul's view
Slew three opposers: Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee: in that day's feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he wax'd like a sea;
And in the brunt of seventeen battles since
He lucr'd all swords of the garland. For this last,
Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: he stopp'd the fiers;
And by his rare example made the coward
Turn terror into sport: as weeds before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,
And fell below his stem: his sword,—death's stamp,—
Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
Was timed with dying cries: alone he enter'd
The mortal gate of the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny; a'dles came off,
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck
Corioli like a planet. Now all's his:
When, by and by, the din of war 'gan pierce
His ready sense; then straight his doubled spirit
Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatigae,
And to the battle came he; where he did Run reeling o'er the lives of men as if 'Twere a perpetual spoil: and till we call'd
Both field and city ours he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!
1 Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours
Which we devise him.

Cor. Our spoils he kick'd at;
And look'd upon things precious as they were
The common muck of the world: he covets less
Than misery itself would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them; and is content
To spend the time to end it.

Men. He's right noble:
Let him be call'd for.

1 Sen. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter Coriolanus.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life and services.

Men. It then remains
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you
Let me o'erleap that custom; for I cannot Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage:
please you
That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to 't:
Pray you, go fit you to the custom; and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that?
Cor. To brag unto them,—thus I did, and thus:—

[Hide
Show them the unaching scars which I should
As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only!—

Men. Do not stand upon't.—
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them:—and to our noble consul
Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!

[Flourish. Exeunt all but Sic. and Bru.

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sic. May they perceive's intent! He will requite them
As if he did contemn what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place
I know they do attend us.

[Exeunt.

Enter several Citizens.

1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

2 Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

3 Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do:
for if he show us his wounds and tell us his deeds,
we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speak for them: so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. ingratitude is mon strous: and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which we, being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve; for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

3 Cit. We have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some auburn, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured; and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points of the compass.

2 Cit. Think you so? Which way do you judge my wit would fly?

3 Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will;—'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head; but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward.

2 Cit. Why that way?

3 Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return, for conscience' sake, to help to get thee a wife.

2 Cit. You are never without your tricks:—you may, you may.

3 Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man. Here he comes, and in the gown of humility: mark his behaviour. We are not to stay altogether, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars; wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues: therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content. [Exeunt.

Enter Coriolanus and Menenius.

Men. O sir, you are not right; have you not known
The worthiest men have done't!

Cor. What must I say?—
I pray, sir,—Plague upon't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace.—Look, sir;—my wounds:—
I got them in my country's service, when
Some certain of your brethren roared, and ran
From the noise of our own drums.

Men. O me, the gods!
You must not speak of that: you must desire them
To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me! hang 'em! I would they would forget me, like the virtues
Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. You'll mar all:
I'll leave you. Pray you, speak to 'em, I pray you,
In wholesome manner.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces
And keep their teeth clean. [Exit Menenius.
So, here comes a brace:

Re-enter two Citizens.

You know the cause, sirs, of my standing here.
1 Cit. We do, sir; tell us what hath brought you to't.

Cor. Mine own desert.

2 Cit. Your own desert!

Cor. Ay, not mine own desire.

1 Cit. How! not your own desire!

Cor. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

1 Cit. You must think, if we give you anything, we hope to gain by you.

Cor. Well then, I pray, your price of the consulship?

1 Cit. The price is to ask it kindly.

Cor. Kindly! sir, I pray, let me ha't: I have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private.—Your good voice, sir; what say you?

2 Cit. You shall ha'it, worthy sir.

Cor. A match, sir.—There is in all two worthy voices begg'd.—I have your alms: adieu.

1 Cit. But this is something odd.

2 Cit. An't were to give again,—but 'tis no matter.

[Exeunt two Citizens.

Re-enter other two Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

3 Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma?

3 Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends; you have not, indeed, loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother, the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condition they account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most courteously; that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully.
to the desiers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

4 Cit. We hope to find you our friend; and therefore give you our voices heartily.

3 Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further.

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily!

[Exeunt.

Cor. Most sweet voices!—
Better it is to die, better to starve,
Than crave the hire which first we do deserve.
Why in this wolfish toge should I stand here,
To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear,
Their needless vouches? Custom calls me to't:—
What custom wills, in all things should we do't,
The dust on antique time would lie unswept,
And mountainous error be too highly heaped
For truth to o'erpeer. Rather than fool it so,
Let the high office and the honour go
To one that would do thus.—I am half through;
The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.
Here come more voices.

Re-enter other three Citizens.

Your voices: for your voices I have fought;
Watch'd for your voices; for your voices bear
Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six
I have seen and heard of; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more: your voices;
Indeed, I would be consul.

5 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go Without any honest man's voice.

6 Cit. Therefore let him be consul: the gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All 3 Citizens. Amen, amen.—God save thee, noble consul!

[Exeunt.

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter Menenius, with Brutus and Sicinius.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes
Endue you with the people's voice:—remains
That, in the official marks invested, you
Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have dischagr'd;
The people do admit you; and are summon'd
To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again,
Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company.—Will you

Brut. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

He has it now; and by his looks methinks
'Tis warm at his heart.

Weeds. With a proud heart he wore his humble
Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters! have you chose
this man?

1 Cit. He has our voices, sir. [loves.

Brut. We pray the gods he may deserve your

2 Cit. Amen, sir:—to my poor unworthy notice,
He mocked us when he begg'd our voices.

3 Cit. Certainly,

He flouted us downright.

1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech,—he did not mock us.

2 Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says
He us'd us scornfully: he should have show'd us
His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for's country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

Citizens. No, no; no man saw 'em.

3 Cit. He said he had wounds, which he could show in private;
And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,
I would be consul, says he; aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me;
Your voices therefore: when we granted that,
Here was, I thank you for your voices,—thank you,—
Your most sweet voices:—now you have left

I have no further with you:—was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either were you ignorant to see't?
Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?

Brut. Could you not have told him,
As you were lesson'd,—when he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy; ever spake against
Your liberties, and the charters that you bear
I' the body of the weal: and now, arriving
A place of potency and sway o' the state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the plebeii, your voices might Be curses to yourselves? You should have said,
That as his worthy deeds did claim no less
Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices, and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

_Sic._ Thus to have said,
As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his spirit
And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to;
Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures n article
Tying him to aught; so, putting him to rage,
You should have ta'en the advantage of his choler,
And pass'd him unelected.

_Bru._ Did you perceive
He did solicit you in free contempt
When he did need your loves; and do you think
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? Or had you tongues to Against the rectiorship of judgment?

_Sic._ Have you
Ere now denied the asker; and now again,
On him that did not ask but mock, bestow
Your su'd-for tongues? [him yet.
3 _Cit._ He's not confirm'd; we may deny
2 _Cit._ And will deny him:
I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.
1 _Cit._ I twice five hundred, and their friends to piece 'em. [friends

_Bru._ Get you hence instantly; and tell those
They have chose a consul that will from them take Their liberties; make them of no more voice
Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking
As therefore kept to do so.

_Sic._ Let them assemble;
And, on a safer judgment, all revoke
Your ignorant election: enforce his pride
And his old hate unto you: besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed;
How in his suit he scorn'd you: but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,
Which, most gibingly, ungravelly, he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

_Bru._ Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd,—
No impediment between,—but that you must Cast your election on him.

_Sic._ Say you chose him More after our commandment than as guided By your own true affections; and that your minds,

Pre-occupied with what you rather must do
Than what you should, made you against the grain
To voice him consul. Lay the fault on us.

_Bru._ Ay, spare us not. Say we read lectures to you,
How youngly he began to serve his country,
How long continued: and what stock he springs of—

The noble house o' the Marcians; from whence
That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son,
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king;
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither;
And Censorinus, darling of the people,
And nobly nam'd so, twice being censor,
Was his great ancestor.

_Sic._ One thus descended,
That hath beside well in his person brought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Scaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.

_Bru._ Say you ne'er had done't,—
Harp on that still,—but by our putting on:
And presently when you have drawn your number,

_Rep_ to the Capitol.

_Citizens._ We will so; almost all
Repent in their election. [Exeunt.

_Bru._ Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard
Than stay, past doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger.

_Sic._ To the Capitol,
Come: we will be there before the stream o' the people;
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded onward. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—ROME. A Street.

_Cornets._ Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Senators, and Patricians.

_Cor._ Tullus Aufidius, then, had made new head? [caus'd

_Lart._ He had, my lord; and that it was which Our swifter composition.

_Cor._ So then the Voices stand but as at first;
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road
Upon's again.
Cor. Are they worn, lord consul, so That we shall hardly in our ages see Their banners wave again.
Cor. Saw you Ausidius?
Lart. On safeguard he came to me; and did curse Against the Volscians, for they had so vilely Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.
Cor. Spoke he of me?
Lart. He did, my lord.
Cor. How? what?
Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword;
That of all things upon the earth he hated Your person most; that he would pawn his fortunes To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher.
Cor. At Antium lives he?
Lart. At Antium.
Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there, To oppose his hatred fully.—Welcome home. [To Lartius.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people, The tongues o' the common mouth. I do despise them;
For they do prank them in authority, Against all noble sufferance.
Sic. Pass no further.
Cor. What makes this change?
Men. The matter?
Cor. Have I had children's voices?
Men. Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place.
Sic. The people are incens'd against him.
Cor. Stop, Or all will fall in broil.
Cor. Are these your herd?—Must these have voices, that can yield them now, Their offices? And straight disclaim their tongues?—What are You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth? Have you not set them on?
Men. Be calm, be calm.
Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot, To curb the will of the nobility:
Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule, Nor ever will be ruled.
Brut. Call not a plot:
The people cry you mock'd them; and of late, When corn was given them gratis, you repin'd; Scandal'd the suppliants for the people,—call'd them Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.
Cor. Why, this was known before.
Brut. Not to them all.
Cor. Have you inform'd them sithence?
Brut. How! I inform them!
Cor. You are like to do such business.
Brut. Not unlike,
Each way, to better yours.
Cor. Why, then, should I be consul? By you clouds,
Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me Your fellow tribune.
Sic. You show too much of that For which the people stir: if you will pass To where you are bound, you must inquire your way, Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit; Or never be so noble as a consul,
Nor yoke with him for tribune.
Men. Let's be calm.
Cor. The people are abus'd; set on. This palt'ring Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely I' the plain way of his merit.
Cor. Tell me of corn!
This was my speech, and I will speak 't again,—
Men. Not now, not now.
1 Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now.
Cor. Now, as I live, I will.—My nobler friends, I crave their pardons:
For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves: I say again, In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our senate The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition, Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd, and scatter'd,
By mingling them with us, the honour'd number; Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that Which they have given to beggars.
Men. Well, no more.
1 Sen. No more words, we beseech you.
Cor. How! no more!
As for my country I have shed my blood, Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs Coin words till their decay against those measles Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought, The very way to catch them.
You speak o' the people
As if you were a god to punish, not
A man of their iniquity.
'Twore well
We let the people know 't.
What, what? his choler?
If I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Jove, 'twould be my mind!
It is a mind
That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.
Shall remain!—
I hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you
His absolute shall?
'Twas from the canon.
O good, but most unwise patricians! why,
You grave, but reckless senators, have you thus Given Hydra leave to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory shall, being but
The horn and noise o' the monster, wants not spirit
To say he 'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power,
Then vail your ignorance: if none, awake
Your dangerous lenity. If you are learn'd
Be not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians
If they be senators: and they are no less
When, both your voices blended, the great'st taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magis-
And such a one as he, who puts his shall,
His popular shall, against a graver bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself,
It makes the consuls base: and my soul aches
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both, and take
The one by the other.
Well, on to the market-place.
Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
The corn o' the storehouse gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometime in Greece,
Though there the people had more
I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.
Why, shall the people give
One that speaks thus their voice?
I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know
Was not our recompense, resting well assur'd
They ne'er did service for 't: being press'd to the war,
Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
They would not thread the gates,—this kind of service
Did not deserve corn gratis: being i' the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them. The accusation
Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the motive
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bisson multitude digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express
What's like to be their words:— We did request it:
We are the greater poll, and in true fear
They gave us our demands:—thus we debase
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares fears: which will in time
Break ope the locks o' the senate, and bring in
The crows to peck the eagles.
Come, enough.
Enough, with over-measure.
No, take more:
What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end with!—This double worship,
Where one part does disdain with cause, the other
Insult without all reason; where gentry, title,
Cannot conclude but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows,
Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech
You that will be less fearful than discreet;
That love the fundamental part of state
More than you doubt the change on 't; that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To vamp a body with a dangerous physic
That's sure of death without it,—at once pluck out
The multitudinous tongue; let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison: your dishonour
Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become 't;
Not having the power to do the good it would,
For the ill which doth control 't.
Has said enough.
Has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
As traitors do.
Thou wretch despite o'erwhelm thee!—
What should the people do with these bald tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench: in a rebellion, [law, When what’s not meet, but what must be, was Then were they chosen; in a better hour Let what is meet be said it must be meet, And throw their power i’ the dust.
Bru. Manifest treason.
Sic. This a consul? no.
Bru. The ædiles, ho!—Let him be apprehended. [whose name myself
Sic. Go, call the people [Exit Brutus];—in Attach thee as a traitorous innovator, A foe to the public weal. Obey, I charge thee, And follow to thine answer.
Cor. Hence, old goat!
Sen. and Pat. We’ll surety him.
Com. Aged sir, hands off.
Cor. Hence, rotten thing! or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy garments.
Sic. Help, ye citizens! Re-enter Brutus, with the ædiles and a rabble of Citizens.
Men. On both sides more respect.
Sic. Here’s he that would take from you all your power.
Bru. Seize him, ædiles.
Citizens. Down with him! down with him!
2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons! [They all bustle about Coriolanus. Tribunes, patricians, citizens!—what, ho!— Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, citizens!
Citizens. Peace, peace, peace; stay, hold, peace!
Men. What is about to be?—I am out of breath; [bunes Confusion’s near; I cannot speak.—You tri-To the people,—Coriolanus, patience:— Speak, good Sicinius.
Sic. Hear me, people; peace!
Citizens. Let’s hear our tribune: peace!— Speak, speak, speak.
Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties:
Men. We have as many friends as enemies.
Men. Shall it be put to that?
1 Sen. The gods forbid! I pr’ythee, noble friend, home to thy house; Leave us to cure this cause.
Men. For ’tis a sore upon us, You cannot tent yourself; be gone, beseech you.
Com. Come, sir, along with us.
Cor. I would they were barbarians,—as they Though in Rome litter’d,—not Romans,—as they are not, Though calv’d i’ the porch o’ the Capitol,—
Men. Be gone; Put not your worthy rage into your tongue; One time will owe another.
Cor. I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could myself.

Take up a brace o’ the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.

Com. But now ’tis odds beyond arithmetic; And manhood is call’d foolery when it stands Against a falling fabric.—Will you hence, Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend Like interrupted waters, and o’erbear What they are used to bear.

Men. Pray you, be gone: I’ll try whether my old wit be in request With those that have but little: this must be patch’d With cloth of any colour.

Com. Nay, come away.

[Exeunt Cor., Com., and others.

1 Pat. This man has marr’d his fortune.

Men. His nature is too noble for the world: He would not flatter Neptune for his trident, Or Jove for’s power to thunder. His heart’s his mouth: What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent; And, being angry, does forget that ever He heard the name of death. [.A noise within. Here’s goodly work!]

2 Pat. I would they were a-bed!

Men. I would they were in Tiber! What, the vengeance, Could he not speak ’em fair?

Re-enter Brutus and Sicinius, with the rabble.

Sic. Where is this viper That would depopulate the city and Be every man himself?

Men. You worthy tribunes,—

Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock With rigorous hands: he hath resisted law, And therefore law shall scorn him further trial Than the severity of the public power, Which he so sets at naught.

1 Cit. He shall well know The noble tribunes are the people’s mouths, And we their hands.

Citizens. He shall, sure on’t.

Men. Sir, sir,—

Sic. Peace!

Men. Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes’t that you Have help to make this rescue?

Men. Hear me speak:—

As I do know the consul’s worthiness, So can I name his faults,—

Sic. Consul!—what consul?

Men. The consul Coriolanus.

Bru. He consul!

Citizens. No, no, no, no, no.

Men. If, by the tribunes’ leave, and yours, good people, I may be heard, I would crave a word or two; The which shall turn you to no further harm Than so much loss of time.

Sic. Speak briefly, then;

For we are peremptory to despatch This viperous traitor: to eject him hence Were but one danger; and to keep him here Our certain death: therefore it is decreed He dies to-night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude Towards her deserved children is enroll’d In Jove’s own book, like an unnatural dam Should now eat up her own!

Sic. He’s a disease that must be cut away.

Men. O, he’s a limb that has but a disease; Mortal, to cut it off; to cure it, easy. What has he done to Rome that’s worthy death? Killing our enemies, the blood he hath lost,— Which I dare vouch is more than that he hath By many an ounce,—he dropt it for his country; And what is left, to lose it by his country Were to us all, that don’t and suffer it, A brand to the end o’ the world.

Sic. This is clean kaim.

Bru. Merely awry: when he did love his country,

It honour’d him.

Men. The service of the foot, Being once gangren’d, is not then respected For what before it was.

Bru. We’ll hear no more.— Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence; Lest his infection, being of catching nature, Spread further.

Men. One word more, one word. This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find The harm of unscann’d swiftness, will, too late, Tie leaden pounds to’s heels. Proceed by process; Lest parties,—as he is belov’d,—break out, And sack great Rome with Romans.

Bru. If it were so,—

Sic. What do you talk?

Have we not had a taste of his obedience? Our ædiles smote? ourselves resisted?—come,—

Men. Consider this:—he has been bred i’ the wars Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school’d
In bolted language; meal and bran together
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him
Where he shall answer, by a lawful form,
In peace, to his utmost peril.

1 Sen. Noble tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other course
Will prove too bloody; and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.

Sic. Noble Menenius,
Be you then as the people's officer.—
Masters, lay down your weapons.

Bru. Go not home.
Sic. Meet on the market-place.—We'll attend you there:
Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed
In our first way.

Men. I'll bring him to you.—
[To the Senators.] Let me desire your company:
he must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

1 Sen. Pray you, let's to him.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—ROME. A Room in Coriolanus's House.

Enter Coriolanus and Patricians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears;
present me
Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels;
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch
Below the beam of sight; yet will I still Be thus to them.

1 Pat. You do the nobler.

Cor. I muse my mother
Does not approve me further, who was wont
To call their woolen vassal, things created
To buy and sell with greats; to show bare heads
In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood up
To speak of peace or war.

Enter Volumnia.

I talk of you: [To VOLUMNIA.
Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me
False to my nature? Rather say, I play
The man I am.

Vol. O, sir, sir, sir,
I would have had you put your power well on
Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go. [you are

Vol. You might have been enough the man
With striving less to be so: lesser had been
The thwartings of your dispositions if

You had not show'd them how ye were dispos'd
Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor. Let them hang.

Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter Menenius and Senators.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough,
something too rough;
You must return and mend it.

1 Sen. There's no remedy;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray, be counsell'd;
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman!
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but that
The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.

Cor. What must I do?

Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. Well, what then? what then?

Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them?—I cannot do it to the gods;
Must I then do't to them?

Vol. You are too absolute;
Though therein you can never be too noble
But when extremities speak. I have heard you say,
Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,
I the war do grow together: grant that, and tell me
In peace what each of them by th' other lose
That they combine not there.

Cor. Tush, tush!

Men. A good demand.

Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem
The same you are not,—which for your best ends
You adopt your policy,—how is it less or worse
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour as in war; since that to both
It stands in like request?

Cor. Why force you this?

Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak
To the people; not by your own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you,
But with such words that are but rooted in
Your tongue, though but bastards, and syllables
Of no allowance, to your bosom's truth,
Now, this no more dishonours you at all
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune and
The hazard of much blood.

I would dissemble with my nature where
My fortunes and my friends at stake requir'd
I should do so in honour: I am in this
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general lusts
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon 'em
For the inheritance of their loves and safeguard
Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady!—
Come, go with us; speak fair: you may salve so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Vol. I pr'ythee now, my son,
Go to them with this bonnet in thy hand;
And thus far having stretch'd it,—here be with them,— Thy knee bussing the stones,—for in such Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant
More learned than the ears,—waving thy head,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble as the ripest mulberry
That will not hold the handling: or say to them
Thou art their soldier, and, being bred in broils,
Hast not the soft way which, thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim,
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far
As thou hast power and person.

Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were yours:
For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.

Vol. Pr'ythee now,
Go, and be rul'd: although I know thou had'st rather Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf
Than flatter him in a bower. There is Cominius.

Enter Cominius.

Com. I have been 't the market-place; and,
sir, 'tis fit
You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calmness or by absence: all's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech.

Com. I think 'twill serve, if he
Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol. He must, and will.—
Pr'ythee now, say you will, and go about it.

Cor. Must I go show them my unbarb'd scence? must I,
With my base tongue, give to my noble heart
A lie, that it must bear? Well, I will do't:
Yet, were there but this single plot to lose,
This mould of Marcius, they to dust should grind it,
And throw't against the wind.—To the market-

You have put me now to such a part which never
I shall discharge to the life.

Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.

Vol. I pr'ythee now, sweet son,—as thou hast said
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Well, I must do't:
Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,
Which quired with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice
That babies lulls asleep! the smiles of knaves
Tent in my cheeks; and school-boys' tears take up
The glasses of my sight! a beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips; and my arm'd knees,
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an alms!—I will not do';
Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth,
And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice, then:
To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin: let Thy mother rather feel thy pride than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me;
But owe thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray, be content:
Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves,
Cog their hearts from them, and come home
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul;
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
P' the way of flattery further.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.

Com. Away! the tribunes do attend you:
arm yourself
To answer mildly; for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong
Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The word is, mildly.—Pray you, let us go:
Let them accuse me by invention, I
Will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly.

Cor. Well, mildly be it then; mildly.

[Exeunt.]
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men I plant love among's!
Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,
And not our streets with war!

As enemy to the people and his country:

Citizens. It shall be so, it shall be so.

Cor. You common cry of curs! whose breath I hate
As reek o' the rotten fens, whose loves I prize
As the dead carcasses of unburied men
That do corrupt my air,—I banish you;
And here remain with your uncertainty!
Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!
Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes,
Fan you into despair! Have the power still
To banish your defenders; till at length
Your ignorance,—which finds not till it feels,— Making not reservation of yourselves,—
Still your own foes,—deliver you, as most Abated captives, to some nation
That won you without blows! Despising,
For you, the city, thus I turn my back:
There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt Cor., Com., Men., Senators, and Patricians.

Æd. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!

Citizens. Our enemy is banish'd! he is gone!
Hoo! hoo!

[Shouting, and throwing up their caps.

Sic. Go, see him out at gates, and follow him,
As he hath follow'd you, with all despite;
Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard
Attend us through the city. [gates; come.

Citizens. Come, come, let us see him out at
The gods preserve our noble tribunes!—Come.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—ROME. Before a Gate of the City.

Enter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virgilia, Menenius, Cominius, and several young Patricians.

Cor. Come, leave your tears; a brief farewell:—the beast
With many heads butts me away.—Nay, mother,
Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd to say extremity was the trier of spirits;
That common chances common men could bear;
That when the sea was calm all boats alike
Show'd mastership in floating; fortune's blows,
When most struck home, being gentle wounded,
craves
A noble cunning: you were us'd to load me
With precepts that would make invincible
The heart that conn'd them.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I pr'ythee, woman,—
Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,
And occupations perish!
Cor. What, what, what!
I shall be lovd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother,
Resume that spirit when you were wont to say,
If you had been the wife of Hercules,
Six of his labours you'd have done, and sav'd
Your husband so much sweat.—Cominius,
Droop not: adieu.—Farewell, my wife,—my mother:
I'll do well yet.—Thou old and true Menenius,
Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's,
And venomous to thine eyes.—My sometime general,
I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld Heart-hard'ning spectacles; tell these sad women
'Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes,
As 'tis to laugh at 'em.—My mother, you wot well
My hazards still have been your solace: and Believe't not lightly,—though I go alone,
Like to a lonely dragon, that his [son
Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen,—
Will or exceed the common or be caught
With cautious baits and practice.
Vol. My first son,
Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius
With thee awhile: determine on some course
More than a wild exposure to each chance
That starts i' the way before thee.
Cor. O the gods!
Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with thee
[of us,
Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear
And we of thee: so, if the time thrust forth
A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man;
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I' the absence of the needer.
Cor. Fare ye well:
Thou hast years upon thee; and thou art too full
Of the wars' surfeits to go rive with one
That's yet unbruised: bring me but out at gate.—
Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and
My friends of noble touch; when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.
While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still; and never of me aught
But what is like me formerly.
Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear.—Come, let's not weep.—
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd with thee every foot.
Cor. Give me thy hand:—
Come. [Exit.]

Scene II.—Rome. A Street near the Gate.
Enter Sicinius, Brutus, and an Edile.
Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no further.—
The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sided
In his behalf.
Bru. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done
Than when it was a-doing.
Sic. Bid them home:
Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.
Bru. Dismiss them home.
[Exit Edile.
Here comes his mother.
Sic. Let's not meet her.
Bru. Why?
Sic. They say she's mad. [your way.
Bru. They have ta'en note of us: keep on Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.
Vol. O, you're well met: the hoarded plague
Of the gods
Requite your love!
Men. Peace, peace, be not so loud.
Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,— [Nay. Nay, and you shall hear some.—Will you be To Brutus.
Vir. You shall stay too [To Sicinius]: I would I had the power
To say so to my husband.
Sic. Are you mankind?
Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame?—Note but this fool.—
Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words?—
Sic. O blessed heavens!
Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wise words;
Yet go:—
And for Rome's good.—I'll tell thee what:—
Nay, but thou shalt stay too:—I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.
Sic. What then?
Vir. What then!
He'd make an end of thy posterity.
Vol. Bastards and all. [Rome!
Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Men. Come, come, peace.
Sic. I would he had continu'd to his country
As he began, and not unknit himself
The noble knot he made.
Bru. I would he had.
Vol. I would he had! 'Twas you incens'd the rabble;—
Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth
As I can of those mysteries which heaven
Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone: [this,—
You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear
As far as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome, so far my son,—
This lady's husband here; this, do you see?—
Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Sic. Why stay we to be bated
With one that wants her wits?

Vol. Take my prayers with you.—I would the gods had nothing else to do [Exeunt Tribunes.

But to confirm my curses! Could I meet 'em
But once a day, it would unclog my heart
Of what lies heavy to't.

Men. You have told them home,
And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me?

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself,
And so shall starve with feeding.—Come, let's go:
Leave this faint puling, and lament as I do,
In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.

Men. Fie, fie, fie! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Volscian, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir; and you know me: your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vol. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.
Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are,
as you are, against 'em: know you me yet?

Rom. The same, sir.

Vol. You had more beard when I last saw you; but your favour is well approved by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state, to find you out there: you have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrection; the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vol. Hath been! Is it ended, then? Our state thinks not so; they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again: for the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever.

This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vol. Coriolanus banished!

Rom. Banished, sir.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate thus accidentally to encounter you: you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Vol. A most royal one: the centurions and their charges, distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vol. You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Antium. Before Aufidius's
House.

Enter Coriolanus, in mean apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium.—City,
'Tis I that made thy widows: many an heir
Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars
Have I heard groan and drop: then know me
not,
Lest that thy wives with spits and boys with
In puny battle slay me.

Enter a Citizen.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will,
Where great Aufidius lies: is he in Antium?

Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state
At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, beseech you?
Cit. This, here, before you.
Cor. Thank you, sir: farewell. [Exit Citizen.

O world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn,
Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart,
Whose house, whose bed, whose meal and exercise
Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love
Unseparable, shall within this hour,
On a dissension of a doit, break out
To bitterest enmity; so fallest foes, [sleep
Whose passions and whose plots have broke their
To take the one the other, by some chance,
Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends,
And interjoin their issues. So with me:—
My birthplace hate I, and my love's upon
This enemy town.—I'll enter: if he slay me,
He does fair justice; if he give me way,
I'll do his country service. [Exit.

SCENE V.—ANTIOCH. A Hall in Aufidius's House.

Music within. Enter a Servant.

1 Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here!
I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit.

Enter a second Servant.

2 Serv. Where's Cotus? my master calls for him.—Cotus! [Exit.

Enter Coriolanus.

Cor. A goodly house: the feast smells well;
but I
Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the first Servant.

1 Serv. What would you have, friend? whence are you? Here's no place for you: pray, go to the door.
Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertainment
In being Coriolanus.

Re-enter second Servant.

2 Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out.
Cor. Away!
2 Serv. Away! Get you away.
Cor. Now thou art troublesome.
2 Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter a third Servant. The first meets him.

3 Serv. What fellow's this?
1 Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house: pr'ythee, call my master to him.

3 Serv. What have you to do here, fellow?
Pray you, avoid the house.
Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

3 Serv. What are you?
Cor. A gentleman.

3 Serv. A marvellous poor one.
Cor. True, so I am.

3 Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you;
pray you, avoid: come.
Cor. Follow your function, go,
And batten on cold bits. [Pushes him away.

3 Serv. What, you will not?—Pr'ythee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

2 Serv. And I shall. [Exit.

3 Serv. Where dwellest thou?
Cor. I' the city of kites and crows.

3 Serv. I' the city of kites and crows!—What an ass it is!—Then thou dwellest with daws too?
Cor. No, I serve not thy master.

3 Serv. How, sir! Do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay; 'tis an honester service than to meddle with thy mistress:

Thou prat'st and prat'st; serve with thy trencher,
hence! [Beats him in.

Enter Aufidius and the second Servant.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

2 Serv. Here, sir: I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

Auf. Whence comest thou? what wouldst thou? thy name? [name?
Why speak'st not? speak, man: what's thy Cor.
If, Tullus, [Unmuffling.
Not yet thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost
not Think me for the man I am, necessity
Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name?

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name?
Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face
Bears a command in't; though thy tackle's torn,
Thou show'st a noble vessel: what's thy name?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown:—know'st thou me yet?

Auf. I know thee not:—thy name?
Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done
To thee particularly, and to all the Volscyes,
Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may
My surname, Coriolanus: the painful service,
The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood
Shed for my thankless country, are requited
But with that surname; a good memory,
And witness of the malice and displeasure
Which thou shouldst bear me: only that name remains;
The cruelty and envy of the people,
Permitted by our dastard nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devou'd the rest,
And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be Whoop'd out of Rome. Now, this extremity
I hath brought me to thy hearth: not out of hope, Mistake me not, to save my life; for if
I had fear'd death, of all the men I the world
I would have 'voided thee; but in mere spite,
To be full quit of those my banishers,
Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast
A heart of wreek in thee, that will revenge Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those mains [straight,
Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee
And make my misery serve thy turn: so use it
That my revengeful services may prove
As benefits to thee; for I will fight Against my cannker'd country with the spleen
Of all the under fiends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes
Thou'rt tir'd, then, in a word, I also am
Longer to live most weary, and present
My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice;
Which not to cut would thee show but a fool,
Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate,
Drawn tun's of blood out of thy country's breast,
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

AUF. O Marcius, Marcius!
Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from my heart
A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter
Should from yond cloud speak divine things,
And say 'Tis true, I'd not believe them more
Than thee, all noble Marcius.—Let me twine
Mine arms about that body, where against
My grained ash an hundred times hath broke
And scar'd the moon with splinters: here I clip
The anvil of my sword, and do contest
As hotly and as nobly with thy love
As ever in ambitious strength I did Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,
I lov'd the maid I married; never man
Sighed truer breath, but that I see thee here,
Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell thee,
We have a power on foot; and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn,
Or lose mine arm for't; thou hast beat me out
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me;
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbuckling helms, fistng each other's throat,
And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy Marcius,
Had we no other quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy; and, pouring war
Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome,
Like a bold flood o'erbear. O, come, go in,
And take our friendly senators by the hands;
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your territories,
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!

AUF. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou will have
The leading of thine own revenges, take
The one half of my commission; and set down,—
As best thou art experience'd, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weakness,—thine own ways;
Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in:
Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than c'er an enemy;
Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand:
most welcome!

[Exeunt Cor. and AUF.]

1 Serv. [Advancing.] Here's a strange alteration!

2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me his clothes made a false report of him.

1 Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: he had, sir, a kind of face, methought,—I cannot tell how to term it.

1 Serv. He had so; looking as it were,— would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: he is simply the rarest man i' the world.

1 Serv. I think he is: but a greater soldier than he you wot on.
2 Serv. Who, my master?
1 Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.
2 Serv. Worth six on him.
1 Serv. Nay, not so neither: but I take him to be the greater soldier.
2 Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that; for the defence of a town our general is excellent.
1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter third Servant.

3 Serv. O slaves, I can tell you news,—news, you rascals!
1 and 2 Serv. What, what, what? let's par—
3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lief be a condemned man.
1 and 2 Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?
3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general,—Caius Marcius.
1 Serv. Why do you say, thwack our general?
3 Serv. I do not say, thwack our general; but he was always good enough for him.
2 Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends: he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.
1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on't: before Coriolanus he scotched him and notched him like a carbonado.
2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broiled and eaten him to.
1 Serv. But more of thy news?
3 Serv. Why, he is so made on her within as if he were son and heir to Mars; set at upper end o' the table; no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand bawl before him: our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with 's hand, and turns up the white o' the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday; for the other has half, by the entreaty and grant of the whole table. He'll go, he says, and sowl the porter of Rome gates by the ears: he will mow all down before him, and leave his passage polled.
2 Serv. And he's as like to do't as any man I can imagine.
3 Serv. Do't! he will do't; for, look you, sir, he has as many friends as enemies; which friends, sir, as it were, durst not, look you, sir, show themselves, as we term it, his friends, whilst he's in dejectitude.
1 Serv. Dejectitude! what's that?
3 Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him.

1 Serv. But when goes this forward?
3 Serv. To-morrow: to-day; presently; you shall have the drum struck up this afternoon: 'tis as it were a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.
2 Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is good for nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.
1 Serv. Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; muled, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children than wars a destroyer of men.
2 Serv. 'Tis so: and as wars, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.
1 Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.
3 Serv. Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising, they are rising.

All. In, in, in, in!

[Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Sir. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him;
His remedies are tame 'I the present peace
And quietness of the people, which before
Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends:
Blush that the world goes well; who rather had,
Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold
Dissentious numbers pestering streets than see
Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going
About their functions friendly.

Bru. We stood to 't in good time.—Is this Menenius?

Sir. 'Tis he, 'tis he: O, he is grown most kind
Of late.

Enter Menenius.

Bru. Hail, sir!
Men. Hail to you both!
Sir. Your Coriolanus is not much miss'd
But with his friends: the commonwealth doth stand;
And so would do, were he more angry at it.

Men. All's well; and might have been much better if He could have temporiz'd.

Sir. Where is he, hear you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing: his mother and his wife
Hear nothing from him.
Enter three or four Citizens.

Citizens. The gods preserve you both! Sic. God-den, our neighbours.
Bru. God-den to you all, God-den to you all.
I Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees, Are bound to pray for you both.
Sic. Live and thrive!
Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish’d Coriolanus I had lov’d you as we did.
Citizens. Now the gods keep you!
Both Tri. Farewell, farewell. [Exeunt Citizens.

Sic. This is a happier and more comely time Than when these fellows ran about the streets Crying confusion.
Bru. Caius Marcius was A worthy officer in the war; but insolent, O’ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking, Self-loving,—
Sic. And affecting one sole throne, Without assistance.

Men. I think not so. [tion,
Sic. We should by this, to all our lamenta-
If he had gone forth consul, found it so.
Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Rome Sits safe and still without him.

Enter an Aedile.

Aed. Worthy tribunes, There is a slave, whom we have put in prison, Reports,—the Volscs with two several powers Are enter’d in the Roman territories; And with the deepest malice of the war Destroy what lies before ’em.

Men. ’Tis Aufidius, Who, hearing of our Marcius’ banishment, Thrusts forth his horns again into the world; Which were inshell’d when Marcius stood for Rome, And durst not once peep out.
Sic. Come, what talk you Of Marcius?
Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp’d.—It cannot be The Volscs dare break with us.
Men. Cannot be! We have record that very well it can; And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow, Before you punish him, where he heard this; Lest you shall chance to whip your information, And beat the messenger who bids beware Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me:
I know this cannot be.
Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going All to the senate-house: some news is come That turns their countenances.
Sic. ’Tis this slave,— Go whip him ’fore the people’s eyes:—his raising;
Nothing but his report.
Mess. Yes, worthy sir, The slave’s report is seconded; and more, More fearful, is deliver’d.
Sic. What more fearful?
Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths,— How probable I do not know,—that Marcius, Join’d with Aufidius, leads a power against Rome, And vows revenge as spacious as between The young’st and oldest thing.
Sic. This is most likely!
Bru. Rais’d only, that the weaker sort may wish God Marcius home again.
Sic. The very trick on’t.
Men. This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more atone Than violentest contrariety.

Enter a second Messenger.

2 Mess. You are sent for to the senate: A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius Associated with Aufidius, rages Upon our territories; and have already [took O’erborne their way, consum’d with fire, and What lay before them.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. O, you have made good work!
Men. What news? what news?
Com. You have hopp’d to ravish your own daughters, and To melt the city leads upon your pates; To see your wives dishonour’d to your noses,—
Men. What’s the news? what’s the news?
Com. Your temples burn’d in their cement; and Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin’d Into an auger’s bore.
Men. Pray now, your news?— You have made fair work, I fear me.—Pray, your news?
If Marcius should be join’d with Volscians,—
Com. If! He is their god: he leads them like a thing Made by some other deity than nature,
That shapes man better; and they follow him,
Against us brats, with no less confidence
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

-Men. You have made good work,
You and your apron men; you that stood so Upon the voice of occupation and
The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com. He will shake
Your Rome about your ears.

-Men. As Hercules
Did shake down mellow fruit.—You have made fair work!

Bru. But is this true, sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt; and who resist
Are only mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is 't can blame
him?

Your enemies and his find something in him.
-Men. We are all undone unless
The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?
The tribunes cannot do for shame; the people Deserve such pity of him as the wolf  [they Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if Should say, Be good to Rome, they charg'd him even
As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.

-Men. 'Tis true:
If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, Beseech you, cease.—You have made fair hands,
You and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

Com. You have brought
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.

Both Tri. Say not, we brought it.

-Men. How! Was it we? we lov'd him;
but, like beasts, [clusters,
And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your
Who did hoot him out o' the city.

Com. But I fear
They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his officer:—desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of Citizens.

-Men. Here comes the clusters.—
And is Aufidius with him?—You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast

Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head [combs
Which will not prove a whip: as many cox-
As you threw caps up will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Citizens. Faith, we hear fearful news.

1 Cit. For mine own part,
When I said banish him, I said 'twas pity.

2 Cit. And so did I.

3 Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us. That we did, we did for the best; and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com. You are goodly things, you voices!
-Men. You have made Good work, and your cry!—Shall's to the Capitol?

Com. O, ay; what else?

[Exeunt Com. and Men.

Sic. Go, masters, get you home; be not dis-may'd:
These are a side that would be glad to have
This true which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And show no sign of fear.

1 Cit. The gods be good to us!—Come, masters, let's home. I ever said we were i' the wrong when we banished him.

2 Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home.

[Exeunt Citizens.

Bru. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I.

[wealth

Bru. Let's to the Capitol;—would half my
Would buy this for a lie!

Sic. Pray, let us go. [Exeunt.

Scene VII.—A Camp at a small distance from Rome.

Enter AUFIDIUS and his Lieutenant.

Aufi. Do they still fly to the Roman?

Lieut. I do not know what witchcraft's in him, but
Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end;
And you are darken'd in this action, sir,
Even by your own.

Aufi. I cannot help it now,
Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
Of our design. He bears himself more proudlier.
Even to my person, than I thought he would
When first I did embrace him: yet his nature
In that 's no changeling; and I must excus:
What cannot be amended.

Lieut. Yet I wish, sir,—
I mean, for your particular,—you had not Join'd in commission with him; but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it solely. [sure,

AUF. I understand thee well; and be thou
When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him. Although it seems,
And so he thinks, and is no less apparent
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
And shows good husbandry for the Volscian state,
Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword: yet he hath left undone
That which shall break his neck or hazard mine
Whenc'er we come to our account. [Rome?

LIEU. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry
AUF. All places yield to him ere hosits down;
And the nobility of Rome are his:
The senators and patricians love him too:
The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal as hasty
To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome
As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. First he was A noble servant to them; but he could not Carry his honours even: whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgment,
To fail in the disposing of those chances
Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving
From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace
Even with the same austerity and garb
As he controll'd the war; but one of these,—
As he hath spices of them all, not all,
For I dare so free him,—made him fear'd,
So hated, and so banish'd: but he has a merit
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
Lie in the interpretation of the time:
And power, unto itself most commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a cheer
To extol what it hath done,
One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths do fail.

Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine, Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius,
Brutus, and others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear what he hath said

Which was sometime his general; who lov'd
him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me father:
But what o'that? Go, you that banish'd him;
A mile before his tent fall down, and kneel;
The way into his mercy: nay, if he coy'd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name:
I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have bled together. Coriolanus
He would not answer to: forbad all names;
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name o' the fire
Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so,—you have made good wor'
A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome,
To make coals cheap,—a noble memory!

Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to pardon
When it was less expected: he replied,
It was a bare petition of a state
To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well:
Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard For'st private friends: his answer to me was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome musty chaff: he said 'twas folly
For one poor grain or two to leave unburnt,
And still to nose the offence.

Men. For one poor grain
Or two! I am one of those; his mother, wife,
His child, and this brave fellow too, we are the grains:
You are the musty chaff; and you are smelt
Above the moon: we must be burnt for you.

Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse your aid
In this so never-heeded help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But, sure, if you Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue,
More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.

Men. No; I'll not meddle.

Sic. Pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do?

Bru. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome, towards Marcius.

Men. Well, and say that Marcius
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,
Unheard; what then?
But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness? Say't be so;

Sic. Yet your good-will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure
As you intended well.

Men. I'll undertake 't;
I think he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip
And hum at good Cominius much unhearts me.
He was not taken well: he had not din'd:
The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
We pout upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd
These pipes and these conveyances of our blood
With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls
Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore I'll watch him
Till he be dieted to my request,
And then I'll set upon him. [ness,
Bru. You know the very road into his kind-
And cannot lose your way.

Men. --- Good faith, I'll prove him, Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge
Of my success. [Exit.
Com. He'll never hear him.
Sir. Not?

Com. I tell you, he does sit in gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome; and his injury
The gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him;
'Twas very faintly he said Rise; dismiss'd me
Thus, with his speechless hand: what he would do,
He sent in writing after me; what he would
Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain,
Unless in's noble mother and his wife;
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him [hence,
For mercy to his country. Therefore, let's
And with our fair entreaties haste them on.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—An advanced Post of the Volscian Camp before Rome. The Guard at their stations.

Enter to them MENENIUS.

1 G. Stay: whence are you?
2 G. Stand, and go back.

Men. You guard like men; 'tis well: but, by your leave,
I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.
1 G. From whence?
Men. From Rome.
1 G. You may not pass, you must return:
our general
Will no more hear from hence. [before
2 G. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire
You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my friends,

If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it is lots to blank;
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.
1 G. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name
Is not here passable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow,

Thy general is my lover: I have been [read
The book of his good acts, whence men have
His fame unparallel'd, haply amplified;
For I have ever verified my friends,—
Of whom he's chief,—with all the size that verily
Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground, [praise
I have tumbled past the throw: and in his
Have almost stamp'd the leasing: therefore, fellow,
I must have leave to pass.

1 G. Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf as you have utter'd words in your own, you should not pass here: no, though it were as virtuous to lie as to live chastely.
Therefore, go back.

Men. Pr'ythee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.

2 G. Howsoever you have been his liar,—as you say you have,—I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass. Therefore, go back.

Men. Has he dined, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1 G. You are a Roman, are you?
Men. I am as thy general is.

1 G. Then you should hate Rome, as he does.
Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the pulsed intercession of such a decayed dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemned; our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here he would use me with estimation.

2 G. Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean thy general.

1 G. My general cares not for you. Back,
I say; go, lest I let forth your half pint of blood;—back; that's the utmost of your having:—back.

Men. Nay, but, fellow, fellow,— Enter Coriolanus and Aufidius.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for you; you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a jack gardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess but by my entertainment with him if thou standest not in the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectactum and crueller in suffering; behold now presently, and swoon for what's to come upon thee.—The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us; look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs; and conjure thee to pardon Rome and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee.

Cor. Away!

Men. How! away!

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My Are servanted to others: though I owe My revenge properly, my remission lies In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar, Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much.—Therefore, be gone. Mine ears against your suits are stronger than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov'd thee, Take this along; I writ it for thy sake,

[Give a letter.]

And would have sent it. another word, Menenius, I will not hear thee speak.—This man, Aufidius, Was my beloved in Rome: yet thou behold'st! Auf. You keep a constant temper.

[Exeunt Cor. and Auf.

1 G. Now, sir, is your name Menenius?

2 G. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power: you know the way home again.

1 G. Do you hear how we are sent for keeping your greatness back?

2 G. What cause, do you think, I have to swoon?

Men. I neither care for the world nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, ye're so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, away!

[Exit.

SCENE III.—The Tent of Coriolanus.

Enter Coriolanus, Aufidius, and others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome tomorrow
Set down our host.—My partner in this action, You must report to the Volscian lords how plainly I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends You have respected; stopp'd your ears against The general suit of Rome; never admitted A private whisper, no, not with such friends That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome, Lov'd me above the measure of a father; Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge Was to send him; for whose old love I have,— Though I show'd sourly to him,—once more offer'd The first conditions, which they did refuse, And cannot now accept, to grace him only, That thought he could do more, a very little I have yielded to: fresh embassies and suits, Nor from the state nor private friends, hereafter Will I lend ear to.—Ha! what shout is this?

[Shout within.

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter, in mourning habits, Virgilia, Volumnia, leading young Marcius, Valeria, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd mould Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand The grandchild to her blood. But, out, affliction: All bond and privilege of nature, break! Let it be virtuous to be obstinate.—[eyes, What is that curt'ly worth? or those doves' Which can make gods forsworn?—I melt, and am not [bows, Of stronger earth than others.—My mother As if Olympus to a molehill should In supplication nod: and my young boy Hath an aspect of intercession which Great nature cries, Deny not.—Let the Volscian Plough Rome and harrow Italy: I'll never Be such a gosling to obey instinct; but stand, As if a man were author of himself; And knew no other kin.
Vir. My lord and husband!
Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.
Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus chang'd Makes you think so.
Cor. Like a dull actor now,
I have forgot my part, and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,
Forgive my tyranny; but do not say,
For that, Forgive our Romans.—O, a kiss
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge;
Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss
I carried from thee, dear; and my true lip
Hath virgin'd it e'er since.—You gods! I prate,
And the most noble mother of the world
Leave unsaluted: sink, my knee, i' the earth;
[Kneels.]

Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons.
Vol. O, stand up bless'd!
Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,
I kneel before thee; and unproperly Show duty, as mistaken all this while Between the child and parent. [Kneels.]
Cor. What is this?
Your knees to me? to your corrected son?
Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds
Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun;
Murdering impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.
Vol. Thou art my warrior;
I hop to frame thee. Do you know this lady?
Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle
That's cur'd by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dian's temple:—dear Valeria!
Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which, by the interpretation of full time,
May show like all yourself.
Cor. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou mayst prove
To shame unvulnerable, and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee!
Vol. Your knee, sirrah.
Cor. That's my brave boy. [self,
Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and my-
Are suitors to you.
Cor. I beseech you, peace:
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before,—
The things I have forsworn to grant may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics.—Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not
To allay my rages and revenges with Your colder reasons.
Vol. O, no more, no more!
You have said you will not grant us anything;
For we have nothing else to ask but that
Which you deny already: yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness; therefore hear us.[we'd]
Cor. Aufidius, and you Volsces, mark: for Hear naught from Rome in private.—Your request?
[raiment]
Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our
And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself,
How more unfortunate than all living women
Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which should [comforts,
Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and sorrow;
Making the mother, wife, and child to see
The son, the husband, and the father tearing
His country's bowels out. And to poor we,
Thine enmity's most capital: thou barr'st us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy; for how can we,
Alas, how can we for our country pray, Whereeto we are bound,—together with thy victory,
Whereeto we are bound? alack, or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse; or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calamity, though we had [then
Our wish, which side should win; for either Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles thorough our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin,
And bear the palm for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on fortune till [there
These wars determine: if I cannot persuade Rather to show a noble grace to both parts
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country than to tread,— Trust to't, thou shalt not,—on thy mother's womb,
That brought thee to this world.
Vir. Ay, and mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name
Living to time.
Boy. 'A shall not tread on me;
I'll run away till I am bigger; but then I'll fight.
Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.
Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy The Volsces whom you serve, you might condemn us,
As poisonous of your honour: no; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volsces
May say, This mercy we have show'd; the Romans,
This we receiv'd; and each in either side
Give thee all-hail to thee, and cry, Be bless'd!
For making up this peace! Thou know'st, great son,
The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a name,
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses;
Whose chronicle thus writ,—The man was noble,
But with his last attempt he wip'd it out;
Destroy'd his country; and his name remains
To the ensuing age abhor'd. Speak to me, son:
Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods,
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air,
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?
Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs?—Daughter, speak you: [boy:
He cares not for your weeping.—Speak thou,
Perhaps thy childishness will move him more
Than can our reasons.—There is no man in the world
More bound to his mother; yet here he lets me
Like one i' the stocks. Thou hast never in thy life
Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy;
Whenshe,—poor hen,—fond of no second brood,
Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home,
Loaden with honour. Say my request 's unjust,
And spur me back: but if it be not so,
Thou art not honest; and the gods will plague thee,
That thou restrain'st from me the duty which
To a mother's part belongs.—He turns away:
Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees,
To his surname Coriolanus 'longs more pride
Than pity to our prayers. Down: an end;
This is the last.—So we will home to Rome,
And die among our neighbours.—Nay, behold's:
This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship,
Does reason our petition with more strength
Than thou hast to deny it.—Come, let us go:
This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioli, and his child
Like him by chance.—Yet give us our despatch:
I am hush'd until our city be asire,
And then I'll speak a little.
Cor. [After holding Volumnia by the hands in silence.] O mother, mother!
What have you done? Behold, the heavens do ope,
The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. O my mother, mother! O!
You have won a happy victory to Rome;
But for your son,—believe it, O, believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
If not most mortal to him. But let it come.—
Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Aufidius,
If you were in my stead, would you have heard
A mother less? or granted less, Aufidius?
Auf. I was mov'd withal.
Cor. I dare be sworn you were:
And, sir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir,
What peace you'll make, advise me; for my part,
I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and, pray you,
Stand to me in this cause.—O mother! wife!
Auf. I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour
At difference in thee: out of that I'll work
Myself a former fortune. [Aside.
[The Ladies make signs to Coriolanus.
Cor. Ay, by and by;
[To Volumnia, Virgilia, &c.
But we'll drink together; and you shall bear
A better witness back than words, which we,
On like conditions, will have counter-seal'd.
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you: all the swords
In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter Menenius and Sicinius.

Men. See you yond coigne o' the Capitol,— yond corner-stone?
Sic. Why, what of that?
Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say there is no hope in't: our throats are sentenced, and stay upon execution.
Sic. Is't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?
Men. There is difference between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcus is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me: and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight-year-old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading: he is able to pierce a corset with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him: there is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him we respected not them: and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house:
The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune,
And hale him up and down; all swearing, if
The Roman ladies bring not comfort home,
They'll give him death by inches.

Enter a second Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?

2 Mess. Good news, good news;—the ladies have prevail'd,
The Volscians are dislodg'd and Marcius gone:
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend,
Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain?

2 Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire:
Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt
of it?

Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown
As the recomfirmed through the gates. Why, hark you!

[Trumpets and hautboys sounded, drums beaten, and shouting within.
The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes,
Tabors and cymbals, and the shouting Romans,
Make the sun dance. Hark you!

[Shouting again.

Men. This is good news. I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia
Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full: of tribunes such as you, [to-day:
A sea and land full. You have pray'd well
This morning, for ten thousand of your throats
I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!

[Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings; next,
Accept my thankfulness.

2 Mess. Sir, we have all
Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city?

Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them,
And help the joy.

[Exeunt.

Scene V.—Rome. A Street near the Gate.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, Valeria, &c., accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and Citizens.

1 Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome!
Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,
And make triumphant fires; strew flowers
before them:
Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius,
Repeal him with the welcome of his mother;
Cry, Welcome, ladies, welcome!—

All. Welcome, ladies, welcome!

[A flourish with drums and trumpets.

[Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Antium. A public Place.

Enter Tullus Aufidius, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords of the city I am here:
Deliver them this paper: having read it,
Bid them repair to the market-place: where I,
Even in theirs and in the commons' ears,
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse
The city ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping
To purge himself with words: despatch.

[Exeunt Attendants.

Enter three or four Conspirators of Aufidius' faction.

Most welcome!

1 Con. How is it with our general?

Auf. Even so
As with a man by his own alms empoison'd,
And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble sir,
If you do hold the same intent wherein
You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you
Of your great danger.
Sir, I cannot tell:
We must proceed as we do find the people.

3 Con. The people will remain uncertain whilst
'Twixt you there's difference: but the fall of Makes the survivor heir of all.

AUF. I know it;
And my pretext to strike at him admits
A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd [heighten'd,
Mine honour for his truth: who being so
He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery,
Seducing so my friends; and to this end
He bow'd his nature, never known before
But to be rough, unswayable, and free.

3 Con. Sir, his stoutness,
When he did stand for consul, which he lost
By lack of stooping,—
AUF. That I would have spoke of:
Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth;
Presented to my knife his throat: I took him;
Made him joint-servant with me; gave him way
In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of my files, his projects to accomplish,
My best and freshest men; serv'd his design-ments
In mine own person; holp to reap the fame
Which he made all his; and took some pride
To do myself this wrong: till, at the last,
I seem'd his follower, not partner; and
He wag'd me with his countenance as if I had been mercenary.

1 Con. So he did, my lord:
The army marv'ld at it; and, in the last,
When he had carried Rome, and that we look'd
For no less spoil than glory;—
AUF. There was it;—
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon
him.
At a few drops of woman's rheum, which are
As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour
Of our great action: therefore shall he die,
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

Drums and trumpets sound, with great shouts of the people.

1 Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns
Splitting the air with noise.

2 Con. And patient fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their base throats
With giving him glory.

3 Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your sword,
Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury
His reasons with his body.

AUF. Say no more:
Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

Lords. You are most welcome home.
AUF. I have not deserv'd it.
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.
1 Lord. And grieve to hear't.
What faults he made before the last, I think
Might have found easy fines: but there to end
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge: making a treaty where
There was a yielding.—This admits no excuse.
AUF. He approaches: you shall hear him.

Enter Coriolanus, with drums and colours;
a crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier;
No more infected with my country's love
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know
That prosperously I have attempted, and
With bloody passage led your wars even to The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home
Do more than counterpoise a full third part
The charges of the action. We have made peace
With no less honour to the Antiates Than shame to the Romans: and we here deliver,
Subscribed by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o' the senate, what We have compounded on.
AUF. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor, in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor!—How now!
AUF. Ay, traitor, Marcius.
Cor. Marcius!
AUF. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius Dost thou think
I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n
name

Coriolanus in Corioli?—
You lords and heads o' the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up,
For certain drops of salt, your city Rome,—
I say your city,—to his wife and mother;
Breaking his oath and resolution, like
A twist of rotten silk; never admitting Counsel o' the war; but at his nurse's tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory;
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars?

AUF. Name not the god, thou boy of tears—

Cor. Ha!

AUF. No more.

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart

[slave!—

Too great for what contains it. Boy! O Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords, Must give this cur the lie: and his own notion,—
Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him;
that must bear
My beating to his grave,—shall join to thrust The lie unto him.

1 Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.

Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volsces; men and lads, Stain all your edges on me.—Boy! False hound! If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there, That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I Flutter'd your Volscians in Corioli:
Alone I did it.—Boy!

AUF. Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune, Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart, 'Fore your own eyes and ears?

Conspirators. Let him die for 't.

Citizens. Tear him to pieces, do it presently:— he killed my son;—my daughter;—he killed my cousin Marcus;—he killed my father,—

2 Lord. Peace, ho!—no outrage;—peace! The man is noble, ho!—his family folds in This orb o' the earth. His last offences to us Shall have judicious hearing.—Stand, Aufidius, And trouble not the peace.

Cor. O that I had him,

With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,
To use my lawful sword!

AUF. Insolent villain!

Conspirators. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!' [AUF. and the Conspirators draw, and kill Cor., who falls: AUF. stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold! AUF. My noble masters, hear me speak.

1 Lord. O Tullus,—

2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep. [quiet.

3 Lord. Tread not upon him.—Masters all, be Put up your swords. [this rage, AUF. My lords, when you shall know,—as in Provok'd by him, you cannot,—the great danger Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours To call me to your senate, I'll deliver Myself your loyal servant, or endure Your heaviest censure.

1 Lord. Bear from hence his body, And mourn for him. Let him be regarded As the most noble corse that ever herald Did follow to his urn.

2 Lord. His own impatience Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame. Let's make the best of it.

AUF. My rage is gone:
And I am struck with sorrow.—Take him up:— Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.— Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully: Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one, Which to this hour bewail the injury, Yet he shall have a noble memory.—

Assist.

[Exeunt, bearing the body of Coriolanus. A dead march sounded.

ACT I.

Scene I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Flavius, Marullus, and a rabble of Citizens.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home:
Is this a holiday? What! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk
Upon a labouring day without the sign
Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art thou?
1 Cit. Why, sir, a carpenter. [rule?
Mar. Where is thy leather apron and thy What dost thou with thy best apparel on?—
You, sir, what trade are you? [man,
2 Cit. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine work—
I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.
2 Cit. A trade, sir, that I hope I may use with a safe conscience; which is indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.
Mar. What trade, thou knave, thou naughty knave, what trade?
2 Cit. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend
you.
Mar. What meanest thou by that? mend me,
thou saucy fellow!
2 Cit. Why, sir, cobble you.
SCENE II.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter, in procession, with music, CAESAR; ANTONY, for the course; CALPHURNIA, PORTIA, DECIDUS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA; a great crowd following: among them a Soothsayer.

Cas. Calphurnia,—

Cas. Calphurnia,—

Cas. Here, my lord.

Cas. Stand you directly in Antonius' way When he doth run his course.—Antonius.

Ant. Caesar, my lord.

Cas. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius, To touch Calphurnia; for our elders say, The barren, touched in this holy chase, Shake off their sterile curse.

Ant. I shall remember: When Caesar says, Do this, it is perform'd. Ces. Set on; and leave no ceremony out. [Music.

Sooth. Caesar! Ces. Ha! who calls?

Casca. Bid every noise be still.—Peace yet again. [Music ceases.

Ces. Who is it in the press that calls on me? I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music, Cry, Caesar. Speak; Caesar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Ces. What man is that?

Bru. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of March.

Ces. Set him before me; let me see his face. Cas. Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Caesar.

Ces. What say'st thou to me now? speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March. [Pass. Ces. He is a dreamer; let us leave him.—

[Senet. Exeunt all but Bru. and Cas.

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?

Bru. Not I.

Cas. I pray you do. [part

Bru. I am not gamesome: I do lack some Of that quick spirit that is in Antony. Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires; I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of late: I have not from your eyes that gentleness And show of love as I was wont to have: You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius, Be not deceiv'd: if I have vail'd my look, I turn the trouble of my countenance Merely upon myself. Vex'd I am Of late with passions of some difference, Conceptions only proper to myself, [habours; Which gives some soil, perhaps, to my be- But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd,— Among which number, Cassius, be you one,— Nor construe any further my neglect Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war, Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion:

By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations. Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face? Bru. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself But by reflection, by some other things.

Cas. 'Tis just: And it is very much lamented, Brutus, That you have no such mirrors as will turn Your hidden worthinesse into your eye, That you might see your shadow. I have heard, Where many of the best respect in Rome,— Except immortal Caesar,—speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me,
Cassius,
That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me? [Hear:
Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to
And, since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common laughter, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protestor; if you know
That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard,
And after scandal them; or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish and shout.

Bru. What means this shouting? I do fear the people
Choose Caesar for their king.

Cas. Ay, do you fear it?
Then must I think you would not have it so.

Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him
well.—
But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it that you would impart to me?
If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye and death in the other,
And I will look on both indifferently;
For, let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, honour is the subject of my story.—
I cannot tell who you and other men
Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.
I was born free as Caesar; so were you:
We both have fed as well; and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he.
For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores,
Cesar said to me, *Darst thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?*—Upon the word,
Accoutred as I was, I plunged in,
And bade him follow: so indeed he did.
The torrent roar'd; and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside
And stemming it with hearts of controversy:
But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,
Cesar cried, Help me, Cassius, or I sink!
I, as Aeneas, our great ancestor,
Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber
Did I the tired Caesar: and this man
Is now become a god; and Cassius is
A wretched creature, and must bend his body
If Caesar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And, when the fit was on him, I did mark
How he did shake: 'tis true, this god did shake:
His coward lips did from their colour fly;
And that same eye, whose bend doth owe the world,
Did lose his lustre: I did hear him groan:
Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans
Mark him, and write his speeches in their books,
Alas! it cried, *Give me some drink, Titinius,
As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone. [Shout: flourish.

Bru. Another general shout!
I do believe that these applauds are
For some new honours that are heap'd on Caesar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.

Brutus and Caesar: what should be in that Caesar?
[yours?
Why should that name be sounded more than Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well;
Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with 'em,
Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Caesar. [Shout.
Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
That he has grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd!
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
When went there by an age, since the great flood,
But it was fam'd with more than with one man?
When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome,
That her wide walls encompass'd but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough,
When there is in it but one only man.
O! you and I have heard our fathers say,
There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd
The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome
As easily as a king. [jealous;

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing
What you would work me to, I have some aim.
SCENE II.

How I have thought of this, and of these times,
I shall recount hereafter; for this present,
I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
Be any further mov'd. What you have said
I will consider; what you have to say
I will with patience hear: and find a time
Both meet to hear and answer such high things.
Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this;
Brutus had rather be a villager
Than to repute himself a son of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad that my weak words
Have struck but thus much show of fire from Brutus.

Bru. The games are done, and Caesar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve;
And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to-day.

Re-enter Caesar and his Train.

Bru. I will do so.—But, look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Caesar's brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train:
Calphurnia's cheek is pale; and Cicero
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.

Cas. Antonius.

Ant. Caesar?

Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights:
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Caesar, he's not dangerous;
He is a noble Roman, and well given.

Cas. Would he were fatter!—But I fear him not:
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should a oid
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much;
He is a great observer, and he looks
Quite through the deeds of men: he loves no plays,
As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music:
Seldom he smiles; and smiles in such a sort
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mov'd to smile at anything.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease;
While they behold a greater than themselves;
And therefore are they very dangerous.
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd
Than what I fear,—for always I am Caesar.

Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Exeunt Caesar and his Train. Casca stays behind.

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; would you speak with me? [to-day,
Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd
That Caesar looks so sad?

Casca. Why, you were with him, were you
Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offered him:
and being offered him, he put it by with the rack of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a-shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too. [cry for?

Cas. They shouted thrice: what was the last Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting by mine honest neighbours shouted.

Cas. Who offered him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hanged as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown;
—yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets;—and, as I told you, he put it by once: but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again; then he put it by again: but, to my thinking, he was very loth to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time; he put it the third time by: and still, as he refused it, the rabblement hooted, and clapped their chapped hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Caesar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Caesar; for he swooned, and fell down at it: and for mine own part I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But, soft, I pray you: what, did Caesar swoon?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like,—he hath the falling sickness.

Cas. No, Caesar hath it not; but you, and I,
And honest Casca, we have the falling sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that; but I am sure Caesar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap down and hiss him, according as he pleased and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he when he came unto him?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceived the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet, and offered them his throat to cut.—An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, If he had done or said anything amiss, he desired their worship to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, Alas, good soul!
—and forgave him with all their hearts; but there's no head to be taken of them; if Caesar had stabbed their mothers they would have done
no less.

Bru. And after that he came, thus sad, away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say anything?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you in the face again: but those that understood him smiled at one another, and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Caesar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so: farewell, both. [Exit.

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be!

He was quick mettle when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now, in execution
Of any bold or noble enterprise,
However he puts on this tardy form.

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite. [you:

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave
To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,
I will come home to you; or, if you will,
Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so: till then, think of the world. [Exit BRUTUS.

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,
Thy honourable metal may be wrought
From that it is dispos'd: therefore it is meet

That noble minds keep ever with their likes;
For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd?

Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus:
If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius,
He should not humour me. I will this night,
In several hands, in at his windows throw,
As if they came from several citizens,
Writings, all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his name; wherein ob-scurely
Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at:
And, after this, let Cæsar seat him sure;
For we will shake him, or worse days endure.

[Exit.

SCENE III. — ROME. A Street.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good-even, Casca: brought you Cæsar
home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?

Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth
Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero,
I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds
Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen
The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam,
To be exal'ted with the threatening clouds:
But never till to-night, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.
Either there is a civil strife in heaven;
Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you anything more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave,—you know him well by sight,—

Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn
Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand,
Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.

Besides,—I ha' not since put up my sword,—

Against the Capitol I met a lion,
Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me: and there were drawn
Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women,
Transformed with their fear; who swore they

Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets.
And yesterday the bird of night did sit,
Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,
Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say,

These are their reasons;—they are natural;
For I believe they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time.
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.
Comes Caesar to the Capitol to-morrow?
Cas. He doth; for he did bid Antonius
Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.
Cas. Good-night, then, Casca: this disturbed
Is not to walk in.
Cas. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit Cicero.

Enter Cassius.

Cas. Who's there?
Cas. A Roman.
Cas. [To Casca.] What hast thou?
Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.
Cas. Who ever knew the heavens menace so?
Cas. Those that have known the earth so full
For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night;
And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have I'd my bosom to the thunder-stone;
And when the cross-blue lightning seem'd to open
The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it.
Cas. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?
It is the part of men to fear and tremble
When the most mighty gods, by tokens, send Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.
Cas. You are dull, Casca; and those sparks of life
That should be in a Roman you do want,
Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder,
To see the strange impiety of the heavens:
But if you would consider the true cause
Why all these fires, why all these flaming ghosts,
Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind,
Why old men faint, and children cry:
Why all these things change, from their ordinance,
Their natures, and pre-formed faculties,
To monstrous quality;—why, you shall find
That heaven hath infusion'd them with these spirits,
To make them instruments of fear and warning
Unto some monstrousstate.
Cas. How could I, Casca, name to thee a man
Most like this dread'd night
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars:
A doth the lion in the Capitol, —
A man no mightier than thyself or me
In personal action; yet prodigious grown,
And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.
Cas. Tis Caesar that you mean; is it not,
Cassius?
Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Have threes and lias like to their ancestors;
But, woe the while, our fathers' nobles are break'd,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' heads:
Our yoke and sufferance show us woman.
Cas. Indeed they say the senators are grown Mean to establish Caesar as a king:
And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.
Cas. I know where I will wear the danger
then;
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak more strong:
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stone tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airyless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure. [Thunder still.
Cas. So can I:
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.
Cas. And why should Caesar be a tyrant, then?
Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf,
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep:
He were no lion, were not Romans tame.
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire
Begin it with weak straws: what trash is Rome,
What rubbish, and what oft, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Caesar! But, O grief,
Where hast thou led me? I purpose speak this,
But now a willing bed is trimm'd: then I know
My answer must be made: but I am amid,
And dangers are to me indifferent. [man
Cas. You speak to Caesar; and to such a
That is no hearer tell-tale. Hold, my hand:
His factions for redress of all these griefs;
And I will set this foot of mine as far
As who goes farthest.
Cas. There's a bargain made.
Now know you, Cassius, I have now'd already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans
To undergo with me an encounter
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know by this they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful night,
There is no stir or walking in the streets;
And the complexion of the element
In favour's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.
Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna,—I do know him by his gait; He is a friend.

Enter Cinna.

Cin., where haste you so?

Cin. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this! [sighs.

There's two or three of us have seen strange

Cas. Am I not stay'd for? Tell me.

Cin. Yes, you are.

O Cassius, if you could

But win the noble Brutus to our party,

Cas. Be you content: good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,

Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this

In at his window; set this up with wax

Upon old Brutus's statue: all this done, [us.

Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find

Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?

Cin. All but Metellus Cimber; and he's gone

To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,

And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.

[Exit Cinna.

Come, Casca, you and I will yet, ere day,

See Brutus at his house: three parts of him

Is ours already; and the man entire,

Upon the next encounter, yields him ours.

Casca. O, he sits high in all the people's hearts:

And that which would appear offence in us,

His countenance, like richest alchemy,

Will change to virtue and to worthiness.

Cas. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him,

You have right well concei'd. Let us go,

For it is after midnight; and ere day

We will awake him, and be sure of him.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

Enter Brutus.

Brut. What, Lucius, ho!—

I cannot, by the progress of the stars,

Give guess how near to day,—Lucius, I say!—

I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly. —

When, Lucius, when? awake, I say! what, Lucius!

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius: When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit. Brutus. It must be by his death: and, for my part,

I know no personal cause to spurn at him,

But for the general. He would be crown'd:

How that might change his nature, there's the question:

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder;

And that craves wary walking. Crown him?—that—

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him,

That at his will he may do danger with.

The abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins

Remorse from power: and, to speak truth of Caesar,

I have not known when his affections sway'd

More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof

That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,

Whereeto the climber-upward turns his face;

But when he once attains the utmost round,

He then unto the ladder turns his back,

Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees

By which he did ascend. So Caesar may;

Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel

Will bear no colour for the thing he is,

Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,

Would run to these and these extremities:

And therefore think him as a serpent's egg,

Which, hatch'd, would as his kind grow mischievous;

And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.

Searching the window for a flint, I found

[Giving him a letter.

This paper, thus seal'd up; and I am sure

It did not lie there when I went to bed.

Bru. Get you to bed again, it is not day.

Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?

Luc. I know not, sir. [word.

Bru. Look in the calender, and bring me

Luc. I will, sir. [Exit. Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air,

Give so much light that I may read by them.

[Opens the letter and reads.

Brutus, thou sleepest: awake, and see thyself.

Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!

Brutus, thou sleepest: awake—

Such instagations have been often dropp'd; Where I have took them up.
Shall Rome, &c. Thus must I piece it out,—
Shall Rome stand under one man’s awe? What, Rome?
My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call’d a king.
Speak, strike, redress!—Am I entreated then
To speak and strike! O Rome! I make thee promise,
If the redress will follow, thou receivest
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

[Knocking within.

Bru. ’Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks.

Exit Lucius. Since Cassius first did whet me against Caesar,
I have not slept.
Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma or a hideous dream:
The genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, ’tis your brother Cassius at the door
Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck’d about their ears,
And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favour.

Bru. Let ’em enter.

[Exit Lucius.

They are the faction. O conspiracy, [night,
Sham’st thou to show thy dangerous brow by
When evils are most free? O, then, by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy; Hide it in smiles and affability;
For if thou hast thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter Cassius, Casca, Decius, Cinna,
Metellus Cimber, and Trebonius.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest:
Good-morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour; awake all
night.

Know I these men that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man
here
But honours you; and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself
Which every noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna;
And this, Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word?

[Brutus and Cassius whisper.

Dec. Here lies the east; doth not the day break here?

Cin. No.

Cas. O, pardon, sir, it doth; and yon grey lines
That fret the clouds are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceiv’d.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises;
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.
Some two months hence up higher toward the north
He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath: if not the face of men,
The sufferance of our souls, the time’s abuse,—
If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough
To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women; then, country-
men,
What need we any spur, but our own cause,
To prick us to redress? what other bond
Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word
And will not palter? and what other oath
Than honesty to honesty engag’d
That this shall be, or we will fall for it?
Swear priests, and cowards, and men cautious,
Old feeble carrions, and such suffering souls
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt: but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor the insupportive mettle of our spirits,
To think that or our cause or our performance
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass'd from him.
Cas. But what of Cicero? shall we sound him?
I think he will stand very strong with us.
Casca. Let us not leave him out.
Cin. No, by no means.
Met. O, let us have him; for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion,
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds:
It shall be said his judgment rule'd our hands;
Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.
Bru. O, name him not; let us not break with him:
For he will never follow anything
That other men begin.
Cas. Indeed he is not fit.
Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only Caesar?
Cas. Decius, well urg'd.—I think it is not meet
Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Caesar,
Should outlive Caesar: we shall find of him
A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means,
If he improve them, may well stretch so far
As to annoy us all: which to prevent,
Let Antony and Caesar fall together.
Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,
To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,—
Like wrath in death and envy afterwards;
For Antony is but a limb of Caesar:
Let's be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.
We shall stand up against the spirit of Caesar;
And in the spirit of men there is no blood:
O that we, then, could come by Caesar's spirit,
And not dismember Caesar! But, alas,
Caesar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully;
Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcase fit for hounds:
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make
Our purpose necessary, and not envious:
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers.
And for Mark Antony, think not of him;
For he can do no more than Caesar's arm
When Caesar's head is off.
Cas. Yet I fear him;
For in the engrafted love he bears to Caesar,— Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him:
If he love Caesar, all that he can do
Is to himself,—take thought and die for Caesar:
And that were much he should; for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.
TreB. There is no fear in him; let him not die;
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

[Clock strikes.

Bru. Peace, count the clock.
Cas. The clock hath stricken three.
TreB. 'Tis time to part.
Cas. But it is doubtful yet
Whether Caesar will come forth to-day or no:
For he is superstitious grown of late;
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies:
It may be these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustomed terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to-day.
Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolv'd
I can oversway him; for he loves to hear
That uncles may be betray'd with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,
Lions with toils, and men with flatterers:
But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says he does,—being then most flatter'd.
Let me work;
For I can give his humour the true bent,
And I will bring him to the Capitol.
Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

[Most?

Bru. By the eighth hour: is that the utter Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.
Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Caesar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey:
I wonder none of you have thought of him.
Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him:
He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;
Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.
Cas. The morning comes upon's: we'll leave you, Brutus:

[member

...I, friends, disperse yourselves: but all re-that you have said, and show yourselves true
Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;
Let not our looks put on our purposes;
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untir'd spirits and formal constancy;
And so, good-morrow to you every one.

[ExcusT all but Brutus.

Boy! Lucius!—Fast asleep? it is no matter;
Enjoy the heavy honey-dew of slumber:
Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.
Enter Portia.

Por. Brutus, my lord!

Bru. Portia, what mean you? whereto rise you now?

It is not for your health thus to commit Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You have ungently, Brutus, Stole from my bed: and yesternight, at supper, You suddenly arose, and walk'd about, Musing and sighing, with your arms across:

Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not; But with an angry wafture of your hand Gave sign for me to leave you: so I did;

And when I ask'd you what the matter was, You star'd upon me with ungentle looks: I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your head.

And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot: As it hath his hour with every man. It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep;

And, cou'd it work so much upon your shape As it much prevails on your condition, I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord, Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health, He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru. Why, so I do.—Good Portia, go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sick? and is it physical

To walk unbraceed, and seek up the humours Of the dark morning? What, is Brutus sick—

And will he steal out of his wholesome bed, To dare the vile contagion of the night, And tempt the rheumy and unpur'd air To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus: You have some sick offence within your mind, Which by the right and virtue of my place I sought to know of: and upon my knees I charm you, by my once-commend'd beauty, In all your vows of love, and that great vow Which did incorporate and make us one, That you unfold to me, yourself, your half, Why you are heavy: and what men to-night Have had resort to you,—for here have been Some six or seven, who did hide their faces Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need if you were gentle Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus, Is it excepted I should know no secrets

That appertain to you? Am I yourself But as it were in sort or limitation,—

To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed, And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs

Of your good pleasure? If it be no more, Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable wife;

As dear to me as are the ruddy drops That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.

I grant I am a woman: but withal

A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife:

I grant I am a woman: but withal

A woman weil-reputed,—Cato's daughter.

Think you I am no stronger than my sex, Being so father'd and so husbanded?

Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em:

I have made strong proof of my constancy,

Giving myself a voluntary wound Here in the thigh: can I bear that with patience,

And not my husband's secrets?

Bru. O ye gods, Render me worthy of this noble wife!

Knocking within.

Hark, hark! one knocks: Portia, go in within;

And by and by thy bosom shall partake The secrets of my heart:

All my engagements I will construe to thee, All the characters of my sad brows.

Leave me with haste.

[Exit Portia.]

Lucius, who's that knocker?

Enter Lucius and Ligarius.

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of—

Boy, stand a while.—Caius Ligarius,—how?

Lig. Vouchsafe good-morrow from a febile tongue.

Bru. O, what a time have you chose out, brave Caius,

To wear a kerchief! Would you were not sick!

Lig. I am not sick if Brutus have in hand Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius, Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before, I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome! Brave son, deriv'd from honourable joins! Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up My mortified spirit. Now bid me run, And I will strive with things impossible; Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.
But are not some whole that we must make sick? [Caes,
That must we also. What it is, my
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going to whom it must be done,
Set on your foot;
And with a heart new fir'd I follow you
To do I know not what: but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on.
Follow me, then. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Rome. A Room in Cæsar's
Palace.

Thunder and lightning. Enter Cæsar in his night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night:
Thrice hath Calpurnia in her sleep cried out, Help, ho! They murder Cæsar!—Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord?
Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.
Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter Calpurnia.

Cal. What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?
You shall not stir out of your house to-day.
Cæs. Cæsar shall forth: the things that threaten'd me
Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall
The face of Cæsar they are vanished.
Cal. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies,
Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelp'd in the streets;
And graves have yawn'd and yielded up their dead;
Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol;
The noise of battle hurried in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan:
And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.
O Cæsar, these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them!
Cæs. What can be avoided,
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth; for these predictions
Are to the world in general as to Cæsar.

Cal. When beggars die there are no comets seen; [of princes.
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death
Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear:
Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

Re-enter Servant.

What say the augurs?
Serv. They would not have you to stir to-day.
Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.
Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowardice:
Cæsar should be a beast without a heart
if he should stay at home to-day for fear.
No, Cæsar shall not: danger knows full well
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he:
We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible:—
And Cæsar shall go forth.
Cal. Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day: call it my fear
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house;
And he shall say you are not well to-day:
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.
Cæs. Mark Antony shall say I am not well;
And for thy humour I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.
Dec. Cæsar, all hail! Good-morrow, worthy Cæsar:
I come to fetch you to the senate-house.
Cæs. And you are come in very happy time,
To bear my greeting to the senators,
And tell them that I will not come to-day:
Cannot, is false; and that I dare not, falser:
I will not come to-day,—tell them so, Decius.
Cal. Say he is sick.
Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far,
To be afraid to tell graybeards the truth?
Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come.
Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some
cause,
Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so.
Cæs. The cause is in my will,—I will not come;
That is enough to satisfy the senate.
But for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know,—
Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:
She dreamt to-night she saw my statue,
Which, like a fountain with a hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
Came smiling and did bathe their hands in it:
And these does she apply for warnings and portents,
And evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg’d that I will stay at home to-day.
Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;
It was a vision fair and fortunate;
Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath’d,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Revolving blood; and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
This by Calphurnia’s dream is signified. [it.
Cas. And this way have you well expounded
Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say:
And know it now,—the senate have concluded
To give this day a crown to mighty Caesar.
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock,
Apt to be render’d, for some one to say,
Break up the senate till another time,
When Caesar’s wife shall meet with better dreams.
If Caesar hide himself, shall they not whisper,
Lo, Caesar is afraid?
Pardon me, Caesar; for my dear dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this;
And reason to my love is liable.
Cas. How foolish do your fears seem now,
Calphurnia!
I am ashamed I did yield to them.—
Give me my robe for I will go:
Enter Publius, Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Casca, Trebonius, and Cinna.
And look where Publius is come to fetch me.
Pub. Good-morrow, Caesar.
Cas. Welcome, Publius.—
What, Brutus, are you stirr’d so early too?—
Good-morrow, Casca.—Caius Ligarius,
Cesar was ne’er so much your enemy
As that same age which hath made you lean.
What is’t o’clock?
Bru. Cesar, ’tis stricken eight.
Cas. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.
Enter Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Caesar.
Cas. Bid them prepare within.
I am to blame to be thus waited for.—
Now Cinna;—now Metellus;—what, Trebonius!
I have an hour’s talk in store for you;
Remember that you call on me to-day;
Be near me, that I may remember you.
Tre. Caesar, I will;—and so near will I be, [Aside.
That your best friends shall wish I had been further.
Cas. Good friends, go in and taste some wine with me;
And we, like friends, will straightway go together.
Bru. That every like is not the same, O
Cesar,
The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon!
[Exeunt.

Scene III.—Rome. A Street near the Capitol.
Enter Artemidorus reading a paper.
Art. Caesar, beware of Brutus: take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Caesar. If thou beest not immortal, look about thee: security gives way to conspiracy.
The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, Artemidorus.

Here will I stand till Caesar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this.
My heart laments that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation,
If thou read this, O Caesar, thou mayst live;
If not, the fates with traitors do contrive.
[Exit.

Scene IV.—Rome. Another part of the same Street, before the House of Brutus.
Enter Portia and Lucius.
For. I pr’ythee, boy, run to the senate-
house:
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone:
Why dost thou stay?
Luc. To know my errand, madam.
For. I would have had thee there and here
again
Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do
there.—
O constancy, be strong upon my side!
Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue!
I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.
How hard it is for women to keep counsel!—
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?
And so return to you, and nothing else?
Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,
For he went sickly forth: and take good note
What Caesar doth, what suitors press to him.
Hark, boy! what noise is that?

Luc. I hear none, madam.
Por. Pr'ythee, listen well:
I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter Artemidorus.

Por. Come hither, fellow:
Which way hast thou been?
Art. At mine own house, good lady.
Por. What is 't o'clock?
Art. About the ninth hour, lady.
Por. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?
Art. Madam, not yet: I go to take my stand,
To see him pass on to the Capitol.
Por. Thou hast some suit to Caesar, hast thou not?
Art. That I have, lady: if it will please Caesar
To be so good to Caesar as to hear me,
I shall beseech him to befriend himself.
Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's inteneded towards him?
Art. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.

Good-morrow to you. Here the street is narrow:
The throng that follows Caesar at the heels
Of senators, of praetors, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death:
I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Caesar as he comes along.

[Exit.}

Por. I must go in.—Ah me! how weak a thing
The heart of woman is! O Brutus,
The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise!—
Sure the boy heard me.—Brutus hath a suit
That Caesar will not grant.—O, I grow faint.—
Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord;
Say I am merry: come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

[Exeunt severally.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. The Capitol; the Senate sitting.

A crowd of People in the street leading to the Capitol; among them Artemidorus and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter Caesar, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Meta-llus, Trebonius, Cinna, Antony,
Lepidus, Popilius, Publius, and others.

Cas. The ides of March are come.
Sooth. Ay, Caesar; but not gone.
Art. Hail, Caesar! Read this schedule.
Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er read,
At your best leisure, this his humble suit.
Art. O Caesar, read mine first; for mine's a suit [Cesar.
That touches Caesar nearer: read it, great Cas. What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd.
Art. Delay not, Caesar; read it instantly.
Cas. What, is the fellow mad?
Pub. Sirrah, give place.
Cas. What, urge you your suit in the street?

Come to the Capitol.

Caesar enters the Capitol, the rest following.
All the Senators rise.

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.
Cas. What enterprise, Popilius?
Pop. Fare you well.
[Advances to Caesar.
Bru. What said Popilius Lena?
Cas. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive. I fear our purpose is discovered.
Bru. Look how he makes to Caesar: mark
him.

Cas. Cassia, be sudden, for we fear prev-
Bru. what shall be done? If this be known,
Caesar or Caesar never shall turn back,
For I will slay myself.
Bru. Cassius, be constant:
Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes;
For, look, he smiles, and Caesar doth not change.
Cas. Trebonius knows his time; for, look you, Brutus,
He draws Mark Antony out of the way.
[Exeunt Ant. and Treb. Caesar and the Senators take their seats.

Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go,
And presently prefer his suit to Caesar.
Bru. He is address'd: press near and second
him.
Cin. Casen, you are the first that rears your hand.
Casen. Are we all ready?
Cas. What is now amiss
That Caesar and his senate must redress?
Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Caesar,
Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
An humble heart,— [Kneeling]
Cas. I must prevent thee, Cimber.
These couplings and these lowly courtesies
Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
And turn pre-ordinance and first decree
Into the law of children. Be not fond
To think that Caesar bears such rebel blood
That will be thwaid from the true quality
With that which melteth fools; I mean, sweet
words,
Low crooked curt'sies, and base spaniel lawning,
Thy brother by decree is banished:
If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for him,
I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.
Know, Caesar doth not wrong; nor without cause
Will he be satisfied.
Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own,
To sound more sweetly in great Caesar's ear
For the reaping of my banish'd brother?
Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Casar,
Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.
Cas. What, Brutus!
Cas. Pardon, Caesar; Caesar, pardon:
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,
To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.
Cas. I could be well mov'd if I were as you;
If I could pray to move, prayers would move me:
But I am constant as the northern star,
Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.
The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,—
They are all fire, and every one doth shine;
But there's but one in all doth hold his place:
So in the world,—'tis furnish'd well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;
Yet in the number I do know but one
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshak'd of motion: and that I am he,
Let me a little show it even in this,—
That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,
And constant do remain to keep him so.
Cin. O Caesar,—
Cas. Hence! wilt thou lift up Olympus?
Dec. Great Caesar,—
Cas. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?
That now on Pompey's basis lies along
No worthier than the dust!
Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd
The men that gave their country liberty.
Dec. What, shall we forth?
Cas. Ay, every man away:
Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels
With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.
Bru. Soft, who comes here?

Enter a Servant.

A friend of Antony's.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel;
Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:—
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving;
Say I lov'd Brutus, and I honour him; [him.
Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd
If Brutus vouchsafe that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus
Through the hazards of this untrod state
With all true faith. So says my master Antony.
Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman;
I never thought him worse.
Tell him, so please him come unto this place,
He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,
Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit.
Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.
Cas. I wish we may: but yet have I a mind
That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.
Bru. But here comes Antony.

Re-enter Antony.

Welcome, Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
Shrunk to this little measure?—Fare thee well.—
I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death's hour; nor no instrument
Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich
With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,
Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die:
No place will please me so, no mean of death
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,
As by our hands and this our present act
You see we do; yet see you but our hands,
And this the bleeding business they have done:
Our hearts you see not,—they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome,—
As fire drives out fire, so pity pity,—
Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark
Antony:
Our arms no strength of malice, and our hearts,
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any
In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand:
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;—
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;—
Now, Decius Brutus, yours;—now yours, Metellus;—
Yours, Cinna;—and, my valiant Casca, yours;—
Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.

Gentlemen all,—alas, what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground
That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
Either a coward or a flatterer.—
That I did love thee, Cæsar, O, 'tis true:
If then, thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death?
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius!—Here wast thou bay'd,
brave hart;
Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters
stand,
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy Lethe.—
O world, thou wast the forest to this har;
And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee.—

How like a deer strucken by many princes
Dost thou here lie!

Cas. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Caesar shall say this;
Then in a friend it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Caesar so;
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick’d in number of our friends;
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands; but was, indeed,
Sway’d from the point by looking down on Caesar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all;
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons
Why and wherein Caesar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle:
Our reasons are so full of good regard
That were you, Antony, the son of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That’s all I seek:
And am moreover suitor that I may Produce his body to the market-place;
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.

Cas. Brutus, a word with you.—
You know not what you do: do not consent
That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be mov’d
By that which he will utter?

[Aside to Brutus.

I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Caesar’s death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission;
And that we are contented Caesar shall
Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies.

It shall advantage more than do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may fall; I like it not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Caesar’s body.

You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Caesar;
And say you don’t by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral; and you shall speak
In the same pulpit where I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. I do desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow us.

Ant. O, pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers!

Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,—
Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips,
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue,—
A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile when they behold
Their infants quarter’d with the hands of war;
All pity chok’d with custom of fell deeds:
And Caesar’s spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Até by his side come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines with a monarch’s voice
Cry Havoc, and let slip the dogs of war;
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Caesar, do you not?

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Caesar did write for him to come to Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is com-
And bid me say to you by word of mouth,—

O Caesar!—

[Seeing the body.

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.

Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chance’d:
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet;
Hie hence and tell him so. Yet, stay awhile;
Thou shalt not back till I have borne this corse
Into the market-place: there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand.

[Exeunt with Caesar’s body.

SCENE II.—ROME. The Forum.

Enter Brutus and Cassius, and a throng of Citizens.

Citizens. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied. [friends.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience,
Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers.—
Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Cæsar's death.
1 Citt. I will hear Brutus speak.
2 Citt. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons,
When severally we hear them rendered.
[Exit CASSIUS, with some of the Citizens.
BRUTUS goes into the Rostrum.
3 Citt. The noble Brutus is ascended; silence!
Bru. Be patient till the last.
Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause; and be silent, that you may hear:
believe me for mine honour; and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom; and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Caesar's, to him I say that Brutus' love to Caesar was no less than his. If, then, that friend demand why Brutus rose against Caesar, this is my answer.—Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living, and die all slaves, than that Caesar were dead, to live all free men? As Caesar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate,
I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him:
but, as he was ambitious, I slew him: there is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition.
Who is here so base that would be a bondman?
If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman?
If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that will not love his country?
If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.
Citizens. None, Brutus, none.
Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Caesar than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death. Here comes his body, mourn'd by Mark Antony:

Enter Antony and others with Cæsar's body.

who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying,—a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart,—that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Citizens. Live, Brutus! live, live!
1 Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.
2 Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.
3 Cit. Let him be Cæsar.
4 Cit. Cæsar's better parts
Shall be crown'd in Brutus.
1 Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—
2 Citt. Peace, silence! Brutus speaks.
1 Citt. Peace, ho!
Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone,
And for my sake stay here with Antony:
Do grace to Cæsar's corse, and grace his speech Tending to Cæsar's glories; which Mark
Antony,
By our permission, is allow'd to make.
I do entreat you, not a man depart,
Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.
1 Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark
Antony.
3 Citt. Let him go up into the public chair;
We'll hear him.—Noble Antony, go up.
Ant. For Brutus' sake I am beholden to you.
[Go's up.

4 Cit. What does he say of Brutus?
3 Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake
He finds himself beholden to us all.
4 Cit. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.
1 Cit. This Caesar was a tyrant.
3 Cit. Nay, that's certain:
We are bless'd that Rome is rid of him.
2 Cit. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.
Ant. You gentle Romans,—
Cit. Peace, ho! let us hear him.
Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;
I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him.
The evil that men do lives after them;
The good is oft interred with their bones;
So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus
Hath told you Caesar was ambitious:
If it were so, it was a grievous fault;
And grievously hath Caesar answer'd it.
Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,—
For Brutus is an honourable man;
So are they all, all honourable men,—
Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.
He was my friend, faithful and just to me:
But Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill?
Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious?
Julius Caesar

When that the poor have cried, Caesar hath wept:
Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
You all did see that on the Lupercal
I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition?
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And, sure, he is an honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.
You all did love him once,—not without cause:
What cause withholds you, then, to mourn for him?
O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason!—Bear with me;
My heart is in the coffin there with Caesar,
And I must pause till it come back to me.

1. Citizens. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.

2. Citizens. If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Cesar has had great wrong.

3. Citizens. Has he, masters?
I fear there will a worse come in his place.

4. Citizens. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;
Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

1. Citizens. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.

2. Citizens. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with

3. Citizens. There's not a nobler man in Rome

4. Citizens. Now mark him, he begins again to Antony. Will you be patient? will you stay awhile?

I have o'ershot myself to tell you of it:
I fear I wrong the honourable men
Whose daggers have stabb'd Caesar; I do fear it.

4. Citizens. They were traitors: honourable men!

2. Citizens. The will! the testament!

2. Citizens. They were villains, murderers: the will! read the will! [Will?]

Antony. You will compel me, then, to read the Then make a ring about the corse of Caesar,
And let me show you him that made the will.
Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

Citizens. Come down.

3. Citizens. You shall have leave.

1. Citizens. Stand from the hearse, stand from the Antony. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far

Citizens. Stand back; room; bear back!

Antony. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
You all do know this mantle: I remember
The first time ever Caesar put it on;
'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii:

Look! in this place ran Cassius' dagger through:
See what a rent the envious Casca made:
Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd;
And, as he pluck'd his cursed steel away,
Mark how the blood of Caesar fellow'd it,
As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd
If Brutus so unkindly knock'd or no;
For Brutus, as you know, was Caesar's angel:
Judge, O you gods, how dearly Caesar loved him!
This was the most unkindness cut of all;
For when the noble Caesar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his mighty heart;
And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey's statue,
Which all the while ran blood, great Caesar fell.
O, what a fall was there, my countrymen! Then I, and you, and all of us fell down, Whilst bloody trea on flourish'd over us. O, now you weep: and I perceive you feel The dint of pity: these are gracious drops. Kind souls, what, weep you when you but behold Our Cesar's vesture wounded? Look you here. Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors.

1 Cit. O piteous spectacle!
2 Cit. O noble Cesar!
3 Cit. O woeful day!
4 Cit. O traitors, villains!
5 Cit. O most bloody sight!
6 Cit. We will be revenged: revenge,— about,—seek,—burn,—i.e.,—kill,—slay,—let not a traitor live!

Ant. Stay, countrymen.

1 Cit. Peace there! hear the noble Antony.
2 Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up
To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
They that have done this deed are honourable:—
What private griefs they have, alas, I know not, That made them do it;—they are wise and honourable,
And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.
I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:
I am no orator, as Brutus is;
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
That love my friend; and that they know full well
That gave me public leave to speak of him:
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth, Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
To stir men's blood: I only speak right on;
I tell you that which you yourselves do know;
Show you sweet Cesar's wounds, poor dumb mouths,
And bid them speak for me: but were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
In every wound of Cesar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Citizens. We'll mutiny.

1 Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.
2 Cit. Away, then! come seek the conspirators.

Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak.

Citizens. Peace, ho! hear Antony, most noble Antony.

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what:
Wherein hath Cesar thus deserv'd your loves?

Alas, you know not,—I must tell you, then.—
You have forgot the will I told you of.

Citizens. Most true;—the will:—let's stay
And hear the will.

Ant. Here is the will and under Cesar's seal.
To every Roman citizen he gives,
To every several man, seventy-five drachmas
2 Cit. Most noble Cesar!—we'll revenge his death.

3 Cit. O royal Cesar!

Ant. Hear me with patience.

Citizens. Peace, ho!

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,
His private arbours, and new-planted orchards.
On this side Tiber; he hath left them you,
And to your heirs for ever,—common pleasures,
To walk abroad and recreate yourselves.

Here was a Cesar! when comes such another?

1 Cit. Never, never.—Come away, away!
We'll burn his body in the holy place,
And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.
Take up the body.

2 Cit. Go, fetch fire.
3 Cit. Pluck down benches.
4 Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, anything.

[Execute Citizens with the body.

Ant. Now let it work: mischief, thou art afoot.
Take thou what course thou wilt!

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow!

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cesar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him:
He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry,
And in this mood will give us anything.

Serv. I heard him say Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Befitly they had some notice of the people,
How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius.

[Execute.

SCENE III.—ROME. A Street.

Enter Cinna the Poet.

Cit. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cesar,
And things unlucky charge my fantasy:
I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

1 Cit. What is your name?
2 Cit. Whither are you going?
3 Cit. Where do you dwell?
4 Cit. Are you a married man or a bachelor?
2 Cit. Answer every man directly.
1 Cit. Ay, and briefly.
4 Cit. Ay, and wisely.
3 Cit. Ay, and truly, you were best.
Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man or a bachelor? Then to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly.—Wisely, I say I am a bachelor.
2 Cit. That's as much as to say they are fools that marry: you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed; directly.
Cin. Directly, I am going to Caesar's funeral.
1 Cit. As a friend or an enemy?
Cin. As a friend.
2 Cit. That matter is answered directly.
4 Cit. For your dwelling;—briefly.
Cin. Briefly I dwell by the Capitol.
3 Cit. Your name, sir, truly.
Cin. Truly my name is Cinna.
1 Cit. Tear him to pieces; he's a conspirator.
Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.
3 Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.
Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.
4 Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.
3 Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! fire-brands: to Brutus', to Cassius'; burn all: some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius': away, go! [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—ROME. A room in Antony's House.

ANTONY, OCTaviUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

Ant. These many, then, shall die; their names are pricked.
Oct. Your brother too must die; consent you, Lepidus?
LeP. I do consent.
LeP. Upon condition Publius shall not live, Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.
Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.
But, Lepidus, go you to Caesar's house;
Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine
How to cut off some charge in legacies.

LeP. What, shall I find you here?
Oct. Or here or at the Capitol. [Exit Lepidus.

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man,
Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit,
The threefold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?
Oct. So you thought him;
And took his voice who should be prick'd to die,
In our black sentence and proscription. [you:
Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than
And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads,
He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
To groan and sweat under the business,
Either led or driven as we point the way;
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears
And graze in commons.
Oct. You may do your will:
But he's a tried and valiant soldier.
Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that I do appoint him store of provender:
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on,—
His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.
And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth;—
A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On abject orts and imitations,
Which, out of use and stall'd by other men,
Begin his fashion: do not talk of him
But as a property. And now, Octavius,
Listen great things.—Brutus and Cassius
Are levying powers: we must straight make head:
Therefore let our alliance be combin'd,
Our best friends made, our means stretch'd;
And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclos'd,
And open perils surest answered.
Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake,
And bay'd about with many enemies; [Usurp,
And some that smile have in their hearts, I Millions of mischiefs. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before Brutus's Tent, in the Camp near Sardis.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, Lucius, and Soldiers; Titinius and Pindarus meeting them.

Bru. Stand, ho!
Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand.
TULLIUS

What now, Lucilius! is Cassius near?

Lucil. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his master.

[Pin. gives a letter to Brutus.

Brut. He greets me well. — Your master, Lucilius,
In his own change, or by ill officers,
 Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done undone: but if he be at hand
I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt
But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.

Brut. He is not doubted. — A word, Lucilius;
How he receiv'd you let me be resolv'd.

Lucil. With courtesy and with respect
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference
As he hath us'd of old.

Brut. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling: ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sinken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith:
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle;
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd;
The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius.

Brut. Hark! he is arriv'd:
March gently on to meet him.

Enter Cassius and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!
Brut. Stand, ho! speak the word along.
Within. Stand!
Within. Stand!
Within. Stand!

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me
Brut. Judge me, you gods! wrong 1: the enemies?
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?
Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs;
And when you do them,—

Brut. Cassius, be content:
Speak your griefs softly. — I do know you well:—
Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love from us,
Let us not wrangle: bid them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

Brut. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no
Come to our tent, till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Within the Tent of Brutus.

Enter Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear
In this,—
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Brut. You wrong'd yourself, to write in such a case.

Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment.

Brut. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
To sell and mart your offices for gold
To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm!
You know that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Brut. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement!

Brut. Remember March, the ides of March remember!

Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice? What, shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world
But for supporting robbers, shall we now Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
And sell the mighty space of our large honours
For so much trash as may be grasped thus?—
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me,—
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself
To hedge me in; I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.

Brut. Go to; you are not, Cassius.

Cas. I am.

Brut. I say you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;
Have mind upon your health, tempt me no further.
Bru. Away, slight man!
Cas. Is't possible?
Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash choler?
Shall I be frightened when a madman stares?
Cas. O ye gods, ye gods! must I endure all this?
Bru. All this! ay, more: fret till your proud heart break;
Go, show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch

Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen
Though it do split you; for from this day forth
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.
Cas. Is it come to this?
Bru. You say you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well: for mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.
Cas. You wrong me every way; you wrong me, Brutus;
I said an elder soldier, not a better:
Did I say better?

Bru. If you did, I care not.
Cas. When Caesar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.
Bru. Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him.
Cas. I durst not!
Bru. No.
Cas. What, durst not tempt him.
Bru. For your life you durst not.
Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love;
I may do that I shall be sorry for.
Bru. You have done that you should be sorry.
There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me:—
For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash
By any indirection:—I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions, [Cassius?
Which you denied me: was that done like
Should I have answer'd Caesar Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.
Bru. You did.
Cas. You did not: he was but a fool that brought
My answer back.—Brutus hath riv'd my heart:
A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.
Bru. I do not, till you: practise them on me.
Cas. You love me not.
Bru. I do not like your faults.
Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults. [appear
Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do
As huge as high Olympus. [come,
Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aweary of the world;
Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his brother;
Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observed
Set in a notebook, learn'd, and cou'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes!—There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within, a heart
Dearer than Phatus' mine, richer than gold:
If that thou best a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my own heart:
Strike, as thou didst at Caesar; for I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better
Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. Sheathe your dagger:
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.
O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb,
That carries anger as the flint bears fire;
Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark;
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him?
Bru. When I spoke that I was ill-temper'd too.
Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your
Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus,—
Bru. What's the matter?
Cas. Have not you love enough to bear with me,
When that rash humour which my mother gave Makes me forgetful?

Bru. Yes, Cassius; and from henceforth,
When you are over-carnal with your Brutus,
He'll think your mother chide, and leave you so.
[Noise within.

Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals;
There is some grudge between 'em; 'tis not meet
They be alone.
Lucil. [Within.] You shall not come to them.

Poet [Within.] Not: what death shall stay me.

Enter Poet, followed by Lucilius and Titinius.

Cas. How now! what’s the matter?

Poet. For shame, you generals! what do you mean?

Love, and be friends, as two such men should For I have seen more years, I’m sure, than ye.

Cas. Ha! ha! how vilely doth this cynic rhyme! [hence!

Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow,

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.

Bru. I’ll know his humour when he knows his time: [fools?

What should the wars do with these jigging Companion hence!

Cas. Away, away, be gone! [Exit Poet.

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala with you Immediately to us. [Exeunt Lucil. and Tit.

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine!

Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use

If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better. — Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha! Portia!

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How scap’d I killing when I cross’d you so?—

O insupportable and touching loss!—

Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence,
And grief that young Octavius with Mark Antony Have made themselves so strong; for with her death
That tidings came;—with this she fell distract,
And, her attendants absent, swallow’d fire.

Cas. And died so?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods.

Enter Lucius with wine and tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her.—Give me a bowl of wine.—

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius.

[Drinks.

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.

Fill, Lucullus, till the wine overswell the cup;

I cannot drink too much of Brutus’ love.

[Drinks.

Bru. Come in, Titinius!

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Welcome, good Messala! —

Now sit we close about this taper here,

And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?

Bru. No more, I pray you.—

Messala, I have here received letters,

That young Octavius and Mark Antony

Come down upon us with a mighty power,

Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenor.

Bru. With what addition?

Mes. That, by proscription and bills of outlawry,

Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus

Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree;

Mine speak of seventy senators that died

By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one!

Mes. Cicero is dead,

And by that order of proscription. —

Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?

Bru. No, Messala.

Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?

Mes. That, methinks, is strange.

Bru. Why ask you? hear you aught of her in yours?

Mes. No, my lord.

Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.

Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:

For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia.—We must die,

Messala:

With meditating that she must die once,

I have the patience to endure it now.

Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cas. I have as much of this in art as you,

But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think

Of marching to Philippi presently?

Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?

Cas. This it is:

’Tis better that the enemy seek us:

So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
SCENE III.

JULIUS CAESAR.

331

Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.
The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground
Do stand but in a forc'd affection;
For they have grudg'd us contribution:
The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-aided, and encourag'd;
From which advantage shall we cut him off
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon.—You must note beside,
That we have tried the utmost of our friends,
Our legions are bruis'd, our cause is ripe:
The enemy increaseth every day;
We, at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a tide in the affairs of men
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat;
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on:
We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi. [talk,

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our
And nature must obey necessity;
Which we will niggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say?

Cas. No more. Good-night:
Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Bru. Lucius, my gown. [Exit Lucius.]

Farewell good Messala:—
Good-night, Titinius;—noble, noble Cassius,
Good-night, and good repose.

Cas. O my dear brother!
This was an ill beginning of the night:
Never come such division 'twixt our souls!
Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Everything is well.

Cas. Good-night, my lord.

Bru. Good-night, good brother.

Tit. and Mes. Good-night, Lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exeunt Cas., Tit., and Mes.

Re-enter Lucius with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily! Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'erwatch'd.

Call Claudius and some other of my men;
I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro and Claudius!

Enter Varro and Claudius.

Var. Calls my lord?

[sleep;

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and
It may be I shall raise you by and by
On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you we will stand and watch your pleasure.

[slirs;

Bru. I will not have it so; lie down, good
It may be I shall otherwise bethink me.—
Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so;
I put it in the pocket of my gown.

[Var. and Claud. lie down.

Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give me,

[forgetful.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much
Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,
And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does, my boy:
I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

[night;

Bru. I should not urge thy duty, thy will:
I know young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It was well done; and thou shalt sleep again;

I will not hold thee long: if I do live
I will be good to thee. [Music and a Song.
This is a sleepy tune.—O murderous slumber,
Lay'st thou thy headen mace upon my boy
That plays the music?—Gentle knife, good-
night:
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee:
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;
I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good-
night.—

Let me see, let me see;—is not the leaf turn'd
down
Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

[Sits down.

Enter the Ghost of Caesar.

How ill this taper burns!—Ha! who comes
here?
I think it is the weakness of mine eyes
That shapes this monstrous apparition.
It comes upon me.—Art thou anything?
Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold and my hair to star?—
Speak to me what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why com'st thou?
Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well;
Then I shall see thee again?

Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.
Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi, then.—[Exit Ghost.

Now I have taken heart thou vanishest:
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.—
Boy Lucius!—Varro! Claudius!—sirs, awake!— Claudius!
Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.
Bru. He thinks he still is at his instrument.—
Lucius, awake!
Luc. My lord?
Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?
Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.
Bru. Yes, that thou didst: didst thou see anything?
Luc. Nothing, my lord.
Bru. Sleep again, Lucius.—Sirrah, Claudius!

Fellow, thou, awake!
Var. My lord?
Clau. My lord?
Bru. Why did you cry so out, sirs, in your sleep?
Var. and Clau. Did we, my lord?
Bru. Ay: saw you anything?
Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.
Clau. Nor I, my lord.
Bru. Go and commend me to my brother Cassius;
Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.
Var. and Clau. It shall be done, my lord.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered:
You said the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so: their battles are at hand
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.
Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know
Wherefore they do it: they could be content
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking by this face
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.
Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left.
Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?
Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so.
[March.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army; Lucilius, Titinius, Messala, and others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.
Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk.
[March.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of
Ant. No, Caesar, we will answer on their charge.
[March.

Make forth; the generals would have some
Oct. Stir not until the signal. [March.

Bru. Words before blows: is it so, country?
Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.
Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:
Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart,
Crying, Long live! hail, Caesar!

Antony,
The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.
Ant. Not stingless too.
Bru. O yes, and soundless too;
For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.
Ant. Villains, you did not so when your vile daggers
Hack'd one another in the sides of Caesar:
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,
And how'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar's feet;
Whilst damned Cassius, like a cur, behind,
Struck Caesar on the neck. O you flatterers!
Cas. Flatterers!—Now, Brutus, thank yourself:
This tongue had not offended so to-day
If Cassius might have rul'd.
Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat,
The proof of it will turn to redder drops.
Look,—
I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?
Never till Caesar's three-and-thirty wounds
Be well aveng'd; or till another Caesar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.
Bru. Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands,
Unless thou bring'st them with thee.
Oct. So I hope;
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.
Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable.
Cas. A peevish school-boy, worthless of such honour,
Join'd with a masker and a reveller!
Ant. Old Cassius still!
Oct. Come, Antony; away!—
Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth:
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;
If not, when you have stomachs.
Cas. Why, now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
Bru. No, Lucilius! hark, a word with you.
Lucill. My lord.
[BRU. and LUCIL. converse apart.
Cas. Messala,—
Mes. What says my general?
Cas. This is my birth-day; as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand Messala:—
Be thou my witness that, against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set
Upon one battle all our liberties.
You know that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion: now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign
Two mighty eagles fell: and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands:
Who to Philippi here consorted us:
This morning are they fled away and gone;
And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites
Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.
Mes. Believe not so.
Cas. I but believe it partly;
For I am fresh of spirit; and resolv'd,
To meet all perils very constantly.
Bru. Even so, Lucilius.
Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may,
Lovers of peace, lead on our days to age!
But, since the affairs of men rest still incertain,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:
What are you, then, determined to do?
Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself.—I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life:—arming myself with patience
To stay the providence of some high powers
That govern us below.
Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Through the streets of Rome? [Roman,
Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou not:
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
He bears too great a mind. But this same day
Must end that work the ides of March began;
And whether we shall meet again I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take:
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then, this parting was well made.
Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus!
If we do meet again we'll smile indeed;
If not, 'tis true this parting was well made.
Bru. Why, then, lead on.—O that a man might know
The end of this day's business ere it come!
But it sufficeth that the day will end,
And then the end is known.—Come, be! away!
[Execute.

SCENE II.—The Plains of Philippi. The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messala.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give Unto the legions on the other side:
[Trumpet blown.
Let them set on at once: for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down.
[Execute.

SCENE III.—The Plains of Philippi. Another part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cas. O look, Titinius, look, the villains fly!
Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy:
This ensign here of mine was turning back:
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.
JULIUS CAESAR.

777. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early;
Who, having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil:
Whilst we by Antony are all enclos’d.

Enter Pindarus.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord!
Fly, therefore, noble Cassius! fly far off.
Cas. This hill is far enough.—Look, look,
Titinius;
Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?
Tit. They are, my lord.
Cas. Titinius, if thou lov’st me,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,
Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops
And here again, that I may rest assured
Whether yond troops are friend or enemy.
Tit. I will be here again even with a thought.

[Exit Pindarus.

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not’st about this field.—
[Exit Pindarus.

This day I breathed first: time is come round,
And where I did begin there shall I end;
My life is run his compass.—Sirrah, what news?
Pin. [Aside.] O my lord!
Cas. What news?
Pin. Titinius is enclosed round about
With horsemen, that make to him on the spur;
Yet he spurs on.—Now they are almost on
him:—
Now, Titinius!—now some light:—O, he’s lighted,
Too:
He’s ta’en;—and, hark! they shout for joy.

Cas. Come down, behold no more.
O, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta’en before my face!

Enter Pindarus.

Come hither, sirrah:
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath!
Now be a freeman; and with this good sword,
That ran through Caesar’s bowels, search this bosom.
Stand not to answer: here, take thou the hills;
And when my face is cover’d, as ’tis now,
Cuide thou the sword.—Cesar, thou art reveng’d,
Even with the sword that kill’d thee. [Dies.

Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been,
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius!
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him.

[Exit.

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Mess. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus’ power,
As Cassius’ legions are by Antony.
Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.
Mess. Where did you leave him?
Tit. All disconsolate,
With Pindarus, his bondman, on this hill.
Mess. Is not that he that lies upon the ground?
Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!
Mess. Is not that he?
Tit. No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more.—O setting sun,
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night,
So in his red blood Cassius’ day is set,—
The sun of Rome is set! Our day is gone;
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done!
Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.
Mess. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.
O hateful error, melancholy’s child,
Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O error, soon conceiv’d,
Thou never com’st unto a happy birth,
But kill’st the mother that engender’d thee!

Tit. What, Pindarus! where art thou, Pindarus?

Mess. Seek him, Titinius: whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears: I may say, thrusting it;
For piercing steel and darts envenomed
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus
As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala, [Exit Messala.

And I will seek for Pindarus the while.
Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
And bid me giv’t thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?
Alas, thou hast misconstru’d everything,
But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow;
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
Will do his bidding.—Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.—
By your leave, gods.—This is a Roman’s part:
Come, Cassius’ sword, and find Titinius’ heart.

[Dies.
JULIUS CAESAR.

Scene IV. Enter Messala, with Brutus, Young Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius.

Brutus. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie?

Messala. Lo, yonder; and Titinius mourning it.

Brutus. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Brutus. O Julius Cesar, thou art mighty yet!

Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords in our own proper entrails. [Low alarums.]

Cato. Brave Titinius!

Look, who' e r have not crown'd dead Cassius!

Brutus. Are yet two Romans living such as these?

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!

It is impossible that ever Rome [tears should breed thy fellow. — Fri.e. s, I owe more
To this dead man than you shall see me pay. —
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.
Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his body:
His funerals shall not be in our camp,
Lest it discomfort us. — Lucilius, come: —
And come, young Cato; let us to the field.

Labeo and Flavius, set our battles on: —
'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night
We shall try fortune in a second fight.

[Exeunt.]

Scene V. —Another part of the Field.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

Brutus. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Clitus. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but, my lord,
He came not back: he is or ta'en or slain.

Brutus. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the word;
It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.

Clitus. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Brutus. Peace, then, no words.

Clitus. I'll rather kill myself.

Brutus. Hark thee, Dardanius!

[Whispers him.]

Dardan. Shall I do such a deed?

Clitus. O Dardanius!

Dardan. O Clitus!

Clitus. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dardan. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Clitus. Now is that noble vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eyes. [word.

Brutus. Come hither, good Volumnius; list a Tell. What says my lord?

Brutus. Why, this, Volumnius: The ghost of Caesar hath appear'd to me
Two several times by night,—at Sardis once,
And this last night here in Philippi fields:
I know my hour is come.
Hence! I will follow.

[Ereunt Clu., Dnr., and Vol.]

I pr'ythee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord:
Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life hath had some smack of honour in it:
Hold, then, my sword, and turn away thy face,
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Strato. Give me your hand first: fare you well,
my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—Caesar, now be still:

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.

[He runs on his sword, and dies.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Octavius, Antony, and Army; Messala and Lucilius, prisoners.

Oct. What man is that?

Mes. My master's man.—Strato, where is thy master?

Strato. Free from the bondage you are in,
The conquerors can but make a fire of him;
For Brutus only overcame himself,
And no man else hath honour by his death.

Lucil. So Brutus should be found.—I thank thee, Brutus,
That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.

Oct. All that serv'd Brutus I will entertain them.

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Strato. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Oct. Do so, good Messala.

Mes. How died my master, Strato?

Strato. I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Oct. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my master.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all:

All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Caesar;
He only, in a general honest thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle; and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, This was a man!

Oct. According to his virtue, let us use him
With all respect and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.—
So, call the field to rest: and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day.

[Exeunt.]

ACT I.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Phil. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure: those his goodly eyes,
That o'er the files and muster of the war
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend,
How turn
The office and devotion of their view
Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper,
And is become the bellows and the fan
To cool a gipsy's lust. [Flourish within.

Look where they come:
Take but good note, and you shall see in him
The triple pillar of the world transform'd
Into a trumpet's fool: behold and see!

Enter Antony and Cleopatra, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Cleo. If it be love, indeed, tell me how much.
Ant. There's leggany in the love that can be reckoned.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd.
Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. Grates me:—the sum.

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony:
Fulvia perchance is angry; or, who knows
If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have not sent
His powerful mandate to you, Do this or this;
Taste in that kingdom and enfranchise that;
Perform't, or else we damn thee.

Ant. How, my love!

Cleo. Perchance! nay, and most like:—
You must not stay here longer,—your dismissal
Is come from Cæsar; therefore hear it, Antony.—
Where's Fulvia's process?—Cæsar's I would say?—both?—
[Queen, Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's Thou blushest, Antony; and that blood of thine
Is Cæsar's homager: else so thy cheek pays shame [senger!]
When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds.—The mes-Ant. Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch
Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space.
Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough
Cleopatra's health to drink.
Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.
Sooth. I make not, but foresee.
Char. Pray, then, forsee me one.
Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.
Char. He means in flesh.
Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.
Char. Wrinkles forbid!
Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.
Char. Hush!
Sooth. You shall be more beloved than beloved.
[drinking.
Char. I had rather heat my liver with Alex. Nay, hear him.
Char. Good now, some excellent fortune!
Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty,
to whom Hierod of Jewry may do homage:
find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar,
and companion me with my mistress.
Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.
Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.
Sooth. You have seen and prov'd a fairer former fortune
Than that which is to approach.
Char. Then belike my children shall have no names:—pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have?
Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fertile every wish, a million.
Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.
Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.
Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.
Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.
Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be—drunk to bed.
Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.
Char. Even as the overflowing Nilus presageth famine.
Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.
Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.—
Pr'ythee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.
Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.
Iras. But how, but how? give me particulars.
Sooth. I have said.
Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?
Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?
Iras. Not in my husband's nose.
Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend!—Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune!—O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee! And let her die too, and give him a worse! and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, cityfold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee!
Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a soul knave unceulked: therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!
Char. Amen.
Alex. Lo, now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do it!
Char. Not he; the queen.

Enter Cleopatra.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?
Eno. No, lady.
Cleo. Was he not here?
Char. No, madam. [sudden
Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth; but on the A Roman thought hath struck him.—Enobarbus,— Eno. Madam?
Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither.—Where's Alexas? [proaches.
Alex. Here, at your service.—My lord ap-
Cleo. We will not look upon him: go with us.
[Exeunt Cleo., Eno., Char., Iras, Alex. and Soothsayer.

Enter Antony, with a Messenger and Attendants.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.
Ant. Against my brother Lucius
Mess. Ay:
But soon that war had end, and the time's state Made friends of them, jointing their force'gainst Caesar;
Whose better issue in the war, from Italy, Upon the first encounter, drave them.
Ant. Well, what worst? [teller.
Mess. The nature of bad news infects the Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward.— On :— Things that are past are done with me.—'Tis thus;

Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus,—
This is stiff news,—hath, with his Parthian force, Extended Asia from Euphrates; His conquering banner shook from Syria To Lydia and to Ionia;

Whilst,—
Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say,—
Mess. O, my lord!
Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue:
Name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome; Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults
With such full license as both truth and malice Have power to utter. O, then we bring tooth weeds [told us
When our quick minds lie still; and our ills
Is as our earing. Fare thee well awhile.
Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit.
Ant. From Sicyon, ho, the news! Speak there!
1 Att. The man from Sicyon,—is there such an one?
2 Att. He stays upon your will.
Ant. Let him appear.—These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,
Or lose myself in dotage.—

Enter a second Messenger.

What are you?
2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.
Ant. Where did she?
2 Mess. In Sicyon: [serious
Her length of sickness, with what else more importeth thee to know, this bears.
[Gives a letter.
Ant. Forbear me. [Exit second Messenger.
There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it:
What our contempts do often hurl from us, We wish it ours again; the present pleasure, By revolution lowering, does become The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone: The hand could pluck her back that should her on.
I must from this enchanting queen break off: Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know, My idleness doth hatch.—Ho, Enobarbus!

Re-enter Enobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?
Ant. I must with haste from hence.
Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women: we
The empire of the sea; our slippery people,—
Whose love is never link'd to the deserer
Till his deserts are past,—begin to throw
Pompey the Great, and all his dignities,
Upon his son; who, high in name and power,
Higher than both in blood and life, stands up
For the main soldier: whose quality, going on,
The sides of the world may danger: much is breeding,
Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life,
And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure,
To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.
Eno. I shall do't.

Scene III.—Alexandria. A Room in Cleopatra's Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is he?
Char. I did not see him since.
Cleo. See where he is, who is with him, what he does:
I did not send you:—if you find him sad, Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report That I am sudden sick: quick, and return.

[Exit Alexas.

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?
Char. In each thing give him way; cross him in nothing,
Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool,—the way to lose him.
Char. Tempt him not so far; I wish, In time we hate that which we often fear.
But here comes Antony.
Cleo. I am sick and sullen.

[Enter Antony.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,—
Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian; I shall It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature Will not sustain it.
Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—
Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me.
Ant. What's the matter?
Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.
What says the married woman?—You may go: Would she had never given you leave to come! Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here,— I have no power upon you; hers you are.
Ant. The gods best know,—
Cleo. O, never was there queen
So mightily betray'd! Yet at the first
I saw the treasons planted.
Ant. Cleopatra,—
Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine and true,
Though you in swearing shake the throned gods,
Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,
To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,
Which break themselves in swearing!
Ant. Most sweet queen,— Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and go: when you su'd staying,
Then was the time for words: no going then;
Eternity was in our lips and eyes,
Bliss in our brows' bent; none our parts so poor
But was a race of heaven: they are so still,
Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.
Ant. I how now, lady!
Cleo. I would I had thy inches; thou shouldst
know
There were a heart in Egypt.
Ant. Hear me, queen:
The strong necessity of time commands
Our services awhile; but my full heart
Remains in use with you. Our Italy
Shines o'er with civil swords: Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the port of Rome:
Equality of two domestic powers [strength,
Breeds scrupulous faction: the hated, grown to
Are newly grown to love: the condem'd
Pompey,
Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace
Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;
And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change. My more particular,
And that which most with you should save my
going,
Is Fulvia's death. [me freedom.
Cleo. Though age from folly could not give
It does from childishness:—can Fulvia die?
Ant. She's dead, my queen;
Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read
The garboils she awak'd; at the last, best.
See when and where she died.
Cleo. O most false love!
Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill
With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death how mine receiv'd shall be.
Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know
The purposes I bear; which are, or cease,
As you shall give the advice. By the fire
That quickens Nihil's slime, I go from hence
Thy soldier, servant; making peace or war
As thou affect'st.
Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come;—
But let it be:—I am quickly ill and well,
So Antony loves.
Ant. My precious queen, forbear;
And give true evidence to his love, which stands
An honourable trial.
Cleo. So Fulvia told me.
pr'ythee, turn aside and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling; and let it look Like perfect honour.
Ant. You'll heat my blood: no more.
Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meantly.
Ant. Now, by my sword,—
Cleo. And target.—Still he menis;
But this is not the best:—look, pr'ythee,
Charmian,
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.
Ant. I'll leave you, lady,
Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.
Sir, you and I must part,—but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd,—but there's not it;
That you know well: something it is I would,—
O, my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.
Ant. But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.
Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me
Since my becomings kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you: your honour calls you hence;
Therefore be deaf to my unpithed folly,
And all the gods go with you! upon your sword
Sit laurel victory! and smooth success
Be strew'd before your feet!
Ant. Let us go. Come;
Our separation so abides, and flies,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee.
Away!
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—ROME. An Apartment in CAESAR'S House.

Enter OCTAVIUS CAESAR, LEPIDUS, and Attendants.

Caes. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth
know,
It is not Caesar's natural vice to hate
Our great competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news:—he fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamp of night in revel: is not more manlike
Than Cleopatra; nor the queen of Ptolemy for More womanly than he: hardly gave audience, Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners: you shall find there
A man who is the abstract of all faults
That all men follow.

Ces. I must not think there are
Evils enow to darken all his goodness;
His faults in him seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness: hereditary
Rather than purchas'd: what he cannot change
Than what he chooses.

Ces. You are too indulgent. Let us grant it is not
Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy;
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave;
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knaves that smell of sweat: say this becomes him,—
As his composure must be rare indeed
Whom these things cannot blemish,—yet must
Antony
No way excuse his soils when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Lull surfeits and the dryness of his bones
Call on him for': but to confound such time,
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
As his own state and ours,—tis to be chid
As we rate boys, who, being mature in knowledge,
Pawns their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Here's more news.

Ces. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour,
Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And it appears he is below'd of those
That only have fear'd Caesar: to the ports
The discontent's repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Ces. I should have known no less:
It hath been taught us from the primal state
That he which is was wish'd until he were;
And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd till ne'er worth love,
Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,

Goes to and back, lackey: the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Ces. Caesar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, fam'd pirates,
Make the sea serve them, which they ear and wound
With keels of every kind: many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime
Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth evolt:
No vessel can peep forth but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more Than could his war resisted.

Ces. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou once
Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consults thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,
Though daintily brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer: thou didst think
The tale of horses, and the gilded pudding;
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then Didst deign
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thy browsed'st; on the Alps
It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: and all this,—
It wounds thine honour: I speak it now,—
Was borne so like a soldier that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Ces. Let his shame's quickly
Drive him to Rome: 'tis time we twain
Did show ourselves 'i the field: and to that end Assemble we immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Ces. To-morrow, Caesar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able
To front this present time.

Ces. Till which encounter
It is my business too. Farewell. [meantime
Ces. Farewell, my lord: what you shall know
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Ces. Doubt not, sir;
I knew it for my bond.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian,—
Char. Madam?
Cleo. Ha, ha!—
Give me to drink mandragon.
This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,
To send the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent throne with kingdoms; all the east, Say thou, shall call her mistress. So he nodded,
And soberly did mount an arm-girl steed,
Who neigh'd so high that what I would have spoke
Was beastly dumb'd by him,
Cleo. What, was he sad or merry?
Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes
Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merry.
Cleo. O well-divided disposition!—Note him, Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him:
He was not sad,—for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his; he was not merry,—
Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy; but between both:
O heavenly mingle!—Be'st thou sad or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes,
So does it no man else.—Mett'st thou my posts?
Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers:
Why do you send so thick?
Cleo. Who's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony
Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper, Charmian.—
Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I, Charmian, Ever love Cæsar so?
Char. O that brave Cæsar!
Cleo. Be chok'd! with such another emphasis!
Say, the brave Antony.
Char. The valiant Cæsar!
Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth
If thou with Cæsar paragon again
My man of men.
Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.
Cleo. My salad days,
When I was green in judgment,—cold in blood,
To say as I said then!—but, come, away;
Get me ink and paper: he shall have every day
A several greeting, or I'll unpeople Egypt.
[Exit Alex.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—MESSINA. A Room in Pompey's House.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.
Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay they not deny.
Pom. While we are suitors to their throne, decays
The thing we sue for.
Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Reg often our own harms, which the wise powers
Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.
Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My powers are crescent, and my anguring hope
Says it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make No wars without doors: Cæsar gets money where
He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves
Nor either cares for him.
Men. Cæsar and Lepidus
Are in the field: a mighty strength they carry.
Pom. Where have you this? 'Tis false.
Men. From Silvius, sir.
Pom. He dreams: I know they are in Rome
Looking for Antony. But all the charms of love,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd lip!
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both!
Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks
Sharpen with cloyster sauce his appetite;
That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour
Even till a L Ard'd dullness.

Enter Varrius.

Varrius. How now, Varrius!
Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver:
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected: since he went from Egypt 'tis
A space for further travel.
Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear. — Menas, I did not think
This amorous surfeiter would have dom'd his helm
For such a petty war; his soldiership
Is twice the other twain: but let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The never lust-weary'd Antony.
Men. I cannot hope
Cæsar and Antony shall well greet together:
His wife that's dead did trespasses to Cæsar;
His brother warr'd upon him; although, I think,
Not mov'd by Antony.
Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we stand up against them all,
Cleopatra ("Antony, the last and greatest of my wrongs.

Euboeus, The last of my wrongs.

Burn'd on the wall,"
Like a harried queen
Up was broken gold

Act II. Sc. 4. p. 398.
Made out of her impatience,—which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too,—I grieving grant
Did you too much disquiet: for that you must
But say I could not help it.
Ces. I wrote to you
When rioting in Alexandria; you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did give my missive out of audience.
Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me ere admitted: then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i' the morning: but next day
I told him of myself; which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.
Ces. You have broken
The article of your oath; which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.
Lep. Soft, Caesar!
Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak:
The honour is sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack'd it.—But on, Caesar;
The article of my oath.
Ces. To lend me arms and aid when I requir'd them;
The which you both denied.
Ant. Neglected, rather;
And then when poison'd hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignomint motive, do
So far ask pardon as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.
Lep. 'Tis noble spoken.
Mec. If it might please you to enforce no further
The grieves between ye: to forget them quite
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone you.
Lep. Worthily spoken, Mecenas.
Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do.
Ant. Thou art a soldier only: speak no more.
Eno. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.
Ant. You wrong this presence; therefore speak no more.
Eno. Go to, then; your considerate stone.
Ces. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech; for't cannot be
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge to edge
O' the world I would pursue it.

Agr. Give me leave, Cæsar,—

Cæs. Speak, Agrippa.

Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,
Admir'd Octavia: great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Cæs. Say not so, Agrippa:
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproach
Were well deserved of rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Cæsar: let me hear Agrippa further speak.

Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife; whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men;
Whose virtue and whose general graces speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,
All little jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing: truths would then be Where now half tales be truths: her love to both
Would, each to other and all loves to both,
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke;
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Cæsar speak?

Cæs. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say, Agrippa, be it so,
To make this good?

Cæs. The power of Cæsar, and His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of impediment!—Let me have thy hand:
Further this act of grace; and from this hour
The heart of brothers govern in our loves
And sway our great designs!

Cæs. There is my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did ever love so dearly: let her live
To join our kingdoms and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen!

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword
'Gainst Pompey;
For he hath laid strange courtesies and great
Of late upon me: I must thank him only,

Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon's:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. Where lies he?

Cæs. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What's his strength
By land?

Cæs. Great and increasing: but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the same.
Would we had spoke together! I haste for it:
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despatch we
The business we have talk'd of.

Cæs. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I'll lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.

[Flourish. Exit Cæs., Ant., and Lep.]

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Cæsar, worthy Mecenas!—my honourable friend, Agrippa!—

Agr. Good Eno! baron! We have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested. You stay'd well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of contenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feasts, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony she purs'd up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

Agr. There she appeared indeed; or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfum'd that
The winds were love-sick with them; the ears were silver,

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and
The water which they beat to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description: she did lie
In her pavilion, cloth of gold of tissue,—
O'er-pictur'd that Venus where we see SCENE III.—ROME. A Room in Caesar's House.

Enter Caesar, Antony, Octavia between them, and Attendants.

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time
Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
To them for you.

Ant. Good-night, sir.—My Octavia,
Read not my blemishes in the world's report:
I have not kept my square; but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good-night, dear lady.—

Octa. Good-night, sir.

Cas. Good-night. [Exeunt Caesar and Octavia.

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah, you do wish yourself in Egypt? [hor you.

Sooth. Would I had never come from hence,
Thither I

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in My motion, have it not in my tongue: but yet
Hie you to Egypt again.

Ant. Say to me, [mine;
Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Caesar's or Cesar's
Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side:
Thy demon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Caesar's is not; but near him thy angel Becomes afraid, as being o'erpower'd: therefore Make space enough between you.

Ant. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee; no more but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose; and of that natural luck
He beats thee against the odds: thy lustre thickens
When he shames by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
But, he away, 'tis noble.

Ant. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius I would speak with him —
[Exit Soothsayer.

He shall to Parthia.—Be it art or hap,
He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him;—
And in our sports my better cunning faints
Under his chance: if we draw lots he speeds;
His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to naught; and his quails ever

ENVOY.
Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest
Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. [Exeunt.
Beat mine, inhoop’d, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
& the east my pleasure lies.

Enter Ventidius.

O, come, Ventidius,
You must to Parthia: your commission’s ready;
I follow me and receive it. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Lepidus, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further; pray you, hasten
Your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony
Will e’en but kiss Octavia, and we’ll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier’s dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall,
As I conceive the journey, be at the mount
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter;
My purposes do draw me much about:
You’ll win two days upon me.

Mec. and Agr. Sir, good success!

Lep. Farewell. [Exeunt.

Scene V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, Alexas,
and Attendants.

Cleo. Give me some music,—music, moody food
Of us that trade in love.

Attend. The music, ho!

Enter Mardian.

Cleo. Let it alone; let’s to billiards:
Come, Charmian.

Char. My arm’s sore; best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play’d
As with a woman.—Come, you’ll play with me,
sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good-will is show’d, though’t come too short,
The actor may plead pardon. I’ll none now:—
Give me mine angle,—we’ll to the river: there,
My music playing far off, I will betray
Tawny-finn’d fishes; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws; and as I draw them up
I’ll think them every one an Antony,
And say, Ah ha! you’re caught.

Char. ‘Twas merry when
You wager’d on your angling; when your diver

Did hang a salt fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time,—O times!
I laugh’d him out of patience; and that night
I laugh’d him into patience; and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippan.

Enter a Messenger.

O! from Italy!—
Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam,— Cleo. Antony’s dead!—
If thou say so, villain, thou kill’st thy mistress:
But well and free,
If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
My bluest veins to kiss,—a hand that kings
Have lipp’d, and trembled kissing.

Mess. First, madam, he’s well.
Cleo. Why, there’s more gold. But, sirrah, mark, we use
To say the dead are well: bring it to that,
The gold I give thee will I melt and pour
Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to, I will;
But there’s no goodness in thy face: if Antony
Be free and healthful,—why so tart a favour
To trumpet such good tidings! If not well,
Thou shouldst come like a fury crown’d with snakes,
Not like a formal man.

Mess. Will’t please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak’st:
Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well,
Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him,
I’ll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail
Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he’s well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Caesar.

Cleo. Thou’rt an honest man.

Mess. Caesar and he are greater friends than ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam,—

Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay
The good precedence; fie upon but yet!
But yet is as a gaoler to bring forth
Some monstrous malefactor. Pr’ythee, friend,
Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together; he’s friends with Cesar; [free.

In state of health, thou say’st; and, thou say’st,
He's bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn?

Mess. For the best turn I'm at ease.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee!

[Strikes him down.]

Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you?—Hence,

[Strikes him again.

Horrible villain! or I'll spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head:

[She hair him up and down.

Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire an' strew'd in brine,

Smarting in ling'ring pickle.

Mess. Gracious madam,

I that do bring the news made not the match.

Cleo. Say tis not so, a province I will give thee,

And make thy fortunes proud: the blow thou
Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage;
And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long.

[Draws a dagger.

Mess. Nay, then I'll run.—

What mean you, madam? I have made no fault.

[Exit.]

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself:

The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some innocents scape not the thunderbolt,—
Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures
Turn all to serpents!—Call the slave again:—
Though I am mad, I will not bite him:—call.

Char. He is afear'd to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him.

[Exit Charmian.

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
A meaner than myself; since I myself
Have given myself the cause.

Re-enter Charmian and Messenger.

Come hither, sir.

Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news; give to a gracious message
An host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell Themselves when they be felt.

Mess. I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worser than I do
If thou again say Yes.

Mess. He is married, madam.

Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still!

Mess. Should I lie, madam?

Cleo. O, I would thou didst,
So half my Egypt were submers'd, and made
A cistern for scale'd snakes! Go, get thee hence:
Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me
Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married?

Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.

Cleo. He is married?

Mess. Take no offence that I would not offend you:

To punish me for what you make me do
Seems much unequal: he is married to Octavia.

Cleo. O that his fault should make a knave of thee,

[hence:]

Thou art not what thou'rt sure of!—Get thee
The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome
And be undone by 'em! [Exit Messenger.

Char. Good your highness, patience.

Cleo. In praising Antony I have disprais'd Cæsar.

Char. Many times, madam.

Cleo. I am paid for 't now.

Lead me from hence;

I faint:—O Iras, Charmian! 'tis no matter.—
Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him
Report the feature of Octavia, her years,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The colour of her hair:—bring me word quickly.

[Exit Alexas.

Let him for ever go:—let him not—Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
T'other way he's a Mars.—Bid you Alexas
[To Mardian.

Bring me word how tall she is.—Pity me,
Charmian,
But do not speak to me.—Lead me to my chamber.

[Exit.

Scene VI.—Near Misenum.

Flourish. Enter Pompey and Menas at one side, with drum and trumpet; at the other, Cæsar, Antony, Lepidus, Enobarbus, Mecenas, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine;
And we shall talk before we fight.

Cæs. Most meet
That first we come to words; and therefore have we
Our written purposes before us sent;
Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know
If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword,
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth
That else must perish here.

_Pom._ To you all three,
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods,—I do not know
Wherefore my father should revengers want,
Having a son and friends; since Julius Caesar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghastled,
There saw you labouring for him. "What wasn't That mov'd pale Cassis to conspire; and what Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus,
With the arm’d rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom,
To drench the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it
Hath made me rig my navy; at whose burden
The anger’d ocean foams; with which I meant
To scourge the ingratitude that despitful Rome
Cast on my noble father.

_Ces._ Take your time.

_Ant._ Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails;
We’ll speak with thee at sea: at land thou know’st
How much we do o’er-count thee.

_Pom._ At land, indeed,
Thou dost o’er-count me of my father’s house:
But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
 Remain n’t as thou mayst.

_Lep._ Be pleas’d to tell us,—
For this is from the present,—how you take
The offers we have sent you.

_Ces._ There’s the point.

_Ant._ Which do not be entreated to, but weigh
What it is worth embrac’d.

_Ces._ And what may follow,
To try a larger fortune.

_Pom._ You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Kid all the sea of pirates; then to send Measures of wheat to Rome; this’greed upon,
To part with unhack’d edges, and bear back
Our targes undinted.

_Ces., Ant., and Lep._ That’s our offer

_Pom._ Know, then,
I came before you here a man prepar’d
To take this offer; but Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience:—though I lose
The praise of it by telling, you must know,
When Caesar and your brother were at blows,
Your mother came to Sicily, and did find
Her welcome friendly.

_Ant._ I have heard it, Pompey;
And am well studied for a liberal thanks
Which I do owe you.

_Pom._ Let me have your hand:
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.
Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Not what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas: if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men’s faces are true, whatsoever their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Caesar’s sister is called Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray you, sir?

Eno. ‘Tis true.

Men. Then is Caesar and he for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Caesar; and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is; he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir; we have used our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come, let’s away. [Exeunt.

Scene VII.—On board Pompey’s galley, lying near Misenum.

Music. Enter two or three Servants with a banquet.

1 Serv. Here they’ll be, man. Some of their plants are ill-rooted already: the least wind if the world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

1 Serv. They have made him drink all to-day.

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, we never reconcile them to his entreaty and him self to the drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men’s fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service as a particular I could not have.

1 Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in it, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A servant sounds. Enter Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, Agrippa, Mecenas, Enobarbus, Menas, with other Captains.

Ant. [To Caesar.] Thus do they, sir: they take the flow o’ the Nile

By certain scales i’ the pyramid; they know,

By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if death

Or poison follow: the higher Nilus swells

The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedman

Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,

And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You’ve strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so. [Lepidus]

Pom. Sit,—and some wine!—A health to

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I’ll ne’er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me you’ll be in till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies’ pyramids are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. [Aside to Pom.] Pompey, a word.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] Say in mine ear: what is’t?

Men. [Aside to Pom.] Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain,

And hear me speak a word.
Pom. [Aside to Men.] Forbear me till anon.

This wine for Lepidus!

Lep. What manner of thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs: it lives by that which nourisheth it; and, the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.

Ces. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] Go, hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that? away!

Do as I bid you. — Where's this cup I call'd for?

Men. [Aside to Pom.] If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,

Rise from thy stool.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] I think thou'rt mad.

The matter? [Rises and walks aside.

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith. What's else to say?—

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quicksands, Lepidus,

Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world?

That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it, and,

Although thou think me poor, I am the man Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove: Whate'er the ocean pales or sky inclips Is thine, if thou wilt have't.

Pom. Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors,

Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable;

And, when we are put off, fall to their throats:

All then is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou shouldst have done, And not have spoke on't! In me 'tis villainy; In thee 't had been good service. Thou must know 'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour; Mine honour it. Repent that ever thy tongue

I hath so betray'd thine act: being done unknown,

I should have found it afterwards well done;

But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. [Aside.] For this

I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more.

Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offer'd,

Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus!

Ant. Bear him ashore. I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas!

Men. Enobarbus, welcome!

Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off Lep.

Men. Why?

Eno. 'A bear

The third part of the world, man; see'st not?

Men. The third part, then, is drunk: would it were all,

That it might go on wheels!

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it.—Strike the vessels, ho!—

Here is to Caesar!

Ces. I could well forbear't.

It's monstrous labour when I wash my brain And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o' the time.

Ces. Possess it, I'll make answer:

But I had rather fast from all four days Than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave emperor!

[To Antony.

Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals, And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha't, good soldier.

Ant. Come, let's all take hands, [sense Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands.— Make battery to our ears with the loud music:— The while, I'll place you: then the boy shall sing:

The holding every man shall beat as loud As his strong sides can volley.

[Music plays. Eno. places them hand in hand.

SONG.

Come, thou monarch of the vine,

Plumpy Bacchus with pink eye!

In thy fats our cares be drown'd,

With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd:

Cup us, till the world go round,

Cup us, till the world go round!
Cæs. What would you more?—Pompey, good-night. Good brother,
Let me request you off: our graver business
       Frowns at this levity.—Gentle lords, let’s part;
You see we have burnt our cheeks: strong Enobarb
Is weaker than the wine; and mine own tongue
Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath
       [night.—
Antick’d us all. What needs more words. Good-Antony, your hand.
Pom. O Antony, you have my father’s house,—but, what? we are friends.
Come, down into the boat.
Eno. Take heed you fall not.
[Exeunt Pom., Cæs., Ant., and Attendants.
Menas, I’ll not on shore.
Men. No, to my cabin.—
These drums!—these trumpets, flutes! what!—
Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell
To these great fellows: sound and be hang’d, sound out!
    [A flourish of trumpets, with drums.
Eno. Hoo! says ‘a. —There’s my cap.
Men. Hoo!—noble captain, come. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIUS, in triumph, with Silius and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers;
the dead body of Pacorus borne in front.
Ven. Now, darts Parthia, art thou struck;
        and now
Pleas’d fortune does of Marcus Crassus’ death
Make me revenger.—Bear the king’s son’s body
Before our army.—Thy Pacorus, Orodés, Pays this for Marcus Crassus.
Sil. Noble Ventidius,
Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm
The fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Media,
Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither
The routed fly: so thy grand captain Antony Shall set thee on triumphant chariots, and Put garlands on thy head.
Ven. O Silius, Silius,
I have done enough: a lower place, note well,
May make too great an act; for learn this,
Silius,—
Better to leave undone, than by our deed
Acquire too high a fame when him we serve’s away.
Cæsar and Antony have ever won

More in their officer, than person: Sossius,
One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achiev’d by the minute, lost his favour.
Who does i’ the wars more than his captain can Becomes his captain’s captain: and ambition,
The soldier’s virtue, rather makes choice of loss
Than gain which darkens him.
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But ’twould offend him; and in his offence
Should my performance perish.
Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without which the soldier and his sword Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony?
Ven. I’ll humbly signify what in his name,
That magical word of war, we have effect’d;
How, with his banners, and his well-paid ranks,
The ne’er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia
We have jaded out o’ the field.
Sil. Where is he now?
Ven. He purposeth to Athens: whither, with what haste
The weight we must convey with’s will permit,
We shall appear before him.—On, there; pass along!
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Rome. An Ante-Chamber in Cæsar’s House.

Enter AGRIPPINA and ENOBARBUS, meeting.
Agr. What are the brothers parted?
Eno. They have despatch’d with Pompey, he is gone;
The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps
To part from Rome: Cæsar is sad; and Lepidus,
Since Pompey’s feast, as Menas says, is troubled
With the green sickness.
Agr. ’Tis a noble Lepidus.
Eno. A very fine one: O, how he loves
        Cæsar! [Antony!]
Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark
Eno. Cæsar? Why he’s the Jupiter of men.
Agr. What’s Antony? The god of Jupiter.
Eno. Speak you of Cæsar? How! the nonpareil!
Agr. Of Antony. O thou Arabian bird!
Eno. Would you praise Cæsar, say Cæsar,— go no further.
Agr. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises. [Antony:
Eno. But he loves Cæsar best;—yet he loves Hoo! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets cannot [hoo!—
Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number.—
His love to Antony. But as for Cæsar,
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.
[Trumpets within.] So—
This is to horse.—Adieu, noble Agrippa.
Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.

Enter Cæsar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Ant. No further, sir.

Cæs. You take from me a great part of myself; Use me well in't.—Sister, prove such a wife As my thoughts make thee, and as my furthest band Shall pass on thy approbation.—Most noble Antony, Let not the piece of virtue which is set Betwixt us be the cement of our love, To keep it builded, be the ram to batter The fortress of it; for better might we Have lov'd without this mean if on both parts This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended
In your distrust.

Cæs. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find, Though you be therein curious, the least cause For what you seem to fear: so, the gods keep you, And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends! We will here part.

Cæs. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well The elements be kind to thee, and make Thy spirits all of comfort! Fare thee well.

Octa. My noble brother!—

Ant. The April's in her eyes: it is love's spring, [cheerful.
And these the showers to bring it on.—Be Octa. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

Cæs. What, Octavia?

Octa. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can Her heart inform her tongue,—the swan's down feather, That stands upon the swell at the full of tide, And neither way inclines.

Eno. [Aside to Agrippa.] Will Cæsar weep?

Agr. [Aside to Eno.] He has a cloud in's face.

Eno. [Aside to Agrippa.] He were the worse for that, were he a horse;
So is he, being a man.

Agr. [Aside to Eno.] Why, Enobarbus, When Antony found Julius Caesar dead, He cried almost to roaring; and he wept When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. [Aside to Agrippa.] That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;
What willingly he did confound he wail'd:
Believe 'till I weep too.

Cas. No, sweet Octavia,
You shall hear from me still; the time shall not Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, sir, come;
I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:
Look, here I have you; thus I let you go,
And give you to the gods.

Cas. Adieu; be happy!

Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light
To thy fair way!

Cæs. Farewell, farewell! [Kisses Octavia.

Ant. [Trumpets sound within. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half as Fear'd to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to.

Enter a Messenger.

Come hither, sir.

Alex. Good Majesty,
Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you
But when you are well pleas'd,

Cleo. That Herod's head
I'll have: but how? when Antony is gone,
Through whom I might command it?—Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious Majesty,—

Cleo. Didst thou behold Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome
I look'd her in the face, and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? is she shrill tongue'd or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low voice'd. [her long.

Cleo. That's not so good:—he cannot like Char. Like her! O Isis! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian; dull of tongue and dwarfish!—
What majesty is in her gait? Remember, If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.
He vented them; most narrow measure lent me:
When the best hint was given him, he not took't.
Or did it from his teeth.

Octa. O my good lord,
Believe not all; or, if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady,
If this division chance, ne'er stood between,
Praying for both parts:
Sure the good gods will mock me presently
When I shall pray, O, bless my lord and husband!
Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
O, bless my brother! Husband win, win brother,
Prays and destroys the prayer; no midway
Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentle Octavia, Let your best love draw to that point which seeks
Best to preserve it: if I lose mine honour
I lose myself: better I were not yours
Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,
lady,
Yourself shall go between's: the meantime,
I'll raise the preparation of a war [haste;
Shall stain your brother: make your soonest
So your desires are yours.

Octa. Thanks to my lord,
The love of power make me, most weak, most weak,
be
Your reconciler! Wars'twixt you twain would
As if the world should cleave, and that skin men Should solder up the rift.

begins,
Ant. When it appears to you where this
Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults
Can never be so equal that your love Can equally move with them. Provide your going;
[best
Choose your own company, and command what
Your heart has mind to.
[Exit.

SCENE V.—Athens. Another Room in Antony's House.

Enter Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.

Eros. How now, friend Eros!

Eros. There's strange news come, sir.

Eros. Cesar and Lepidus have made wars

Eros. This is old: what is the success?

Eros. Cesar, having made use of him in the wars'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalry; would not let him partake in the glory of the action: and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal seizes him: so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.
Enter Enobarbus. Then world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no more;
And throw between them all the food thou hast,
They'll grind the one the other. Where's Antony?

Enobarbus. Our great navy's rigged.
Mecenas. For Italy and Cæsar. More, Domitius;
My lord desires you presently: my news
I might have told heretofore.

Cæsar. 'Twill be naught:
But let it be.—Bring me to Antony.

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, and Mecenas.

Cæsar. Contemning Rome, he has done all this, and more,
In Alexandria: here's the manner of it:—
If the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd,
Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold
Were publicly enthron'd: at the foot sat
Cæsarian, whom they call my father's son,
And all the unlawful issue that their lust [her Since then hath made between them. Unto
He gave the 'establishment of Egypt; made her
Of Lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, Lydia,
Absolute queen.

Mecenas. This in the public eye?

Cæsar. 'Tis the common show-place, where they exercise.

His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of kings:
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd Syria, Cilicia, and Phœnicia: she
In the habiliments of the goddess Isis were,
That day appear'd; and oft before gave audi-
As his reported, so.

Mecenas. Let Rome be thus Inform'd.

Agrippa. Who, queasy with his insolence
Already, will their good thoughts call from him.

Cæsar. The people know it: and have now receiving
His accusations.

Agrippa. Who does he accuse?

Cæsar. Cæsar: and that, having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him
His part o' the isle: then does he say he lent me
Some shipping, unrestor'd: lastly, he frets
That Lepidus of the triumvirate

Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain
All his revenue.

Agrippa. Sir, this should be answer'd.

Cæsar. 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone.
I have told him Lepidus was grown too cruel;
That he his high authority abus'd,
And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd
I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia
And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I Demand the like.

Mecenas. He'll never yield to that.

Cæsar. Nor must not, then, be yielded to in this.

Enter Octavia, with her Train.

Octavius. Hail, Cæsar, and my lord! hail, most dear Cæsar!

Cæsar. That ever I should call thee castaway!

Octavia. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.

Cæsar. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You
Like Cæsar's sister: the wife of Antony
Should have an army for an usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell of her approach
Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way
Should have borne men; and expectation
faint'd,
Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the roof of heaven, Rais'd by your populous troops: but you are
come
A market-maid to Rome; and have prevented
The ostentation of our love, which left unshown
Is often left unlook'd: we should have met you
By sea and land; supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.

Octavia. Good my lord,
To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it
On my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony,
Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted
My grieved ear withal: whereon I begg'd
His pardon for return.

Cæsar. Which soon he granted,
Being an obstruct 'twixt his lust and him.

Octavia. Do not say so, my lord.

Cæsar. I have eyes upon him,
And his affairs come: me on the wind.
Where is he now?

Octavia. My lord, in Athens.

Cæsar. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra [empire
Hath nod'd him to her. He hath given his
Up to a whore; who now are levying [bled
The kings o' the earth for war: he hath assembled
Bocchus, the king of Libya; Archelaus
Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, king
Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas;
King Malchus of Arabia; King of Pont;
Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king
Of Comagene; Polemon and Amyntas,
The kings of Mede and Lycaonia, with a
More larger list of sceptres.

Octa. Ay me, most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two friends
That do afflict each other!

Ces. Welcome hither:
Your letters did withhold our breaking forth,
Till we perceive'd both how you were wrong led
And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart:
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O'er your content these strong necessities;
But let determin'd things to destiny
Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome;
Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
Beyond the mark of thought; and the high gods,
To do you justice, make their ministers
Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort;
And ever welcome to us.

Agr. Welcome, lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear madam.
Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off;
And gives his potent regiment to a trull
That noises it against us.

Octa. Is it so, sir? [you

Ces. Most certain. Sister, welcome; pray
Be ever known to patience: my dear'st sister!

[Exeunt.

Scene VII.—Antony's Camp near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter Cleopatra and Enobarbus.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Eno. But why, why, why? [wars,
Cleo. Thou hast forspoke my being in these
And say'st it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it?

Cleo. If not denounce'd against us, why should not we
Be there in person?

Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply;—
If we should serve with horse and mares to-gather [bear
The horse were merely lost; the mares would
A soldier and his horse.

Cleo. What is't you say?

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle
Antony;
Take from his heart, take from his brain, from's
What should not then be spar'd. He is already Traduc'd for levity: and 'tis said in Rome
That Phoebus an eunuch and your maids
Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot
That speak against us! A charge we bear i' the war,
And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done.
Here comes the emperor.

Enter Antony and Canidius.

Ant. Is it not strange, Canidius,
That from Tarentum and Brundusium
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toryne?—You have heard on't, sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd
Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well become the best of men
To taunt at slackness.—Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! what else?
Can. Why will my lord do so?
Ant. For that he dares us to't.

Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.
Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia, Where Caesar fought with Pompey: but these offers,
Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd:
Your mariners are muleteers, reapers, people
Ingross'd by swift impress; in Caesar's fleet
Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey fought:
Their ships are yare; yours heavy: no disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar'd for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea.

Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiership you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard
From firm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea.

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Caesar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;
And, with the rest full-mann'd, from the head of Actium
Beat the approaching Caesar. But if we fail
We then can do't at land.
Enter a Messenger.

Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is described;

Cesar has taken Toryne. [possible;

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis int-

Strang that his power should be.—Canidius,

Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,

And our twelve thousand horse.—We'll to our ship:

Away, my Thetis!

Enter a Soldier.

How now, worthy soldier?

Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea;

Trust not to rotten planks: do you misdoubt

This sword and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians

And the Phænicians go a-ducking: we

Have used to conquer standing on the earth

And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well:—away.

[Exeunt Ant., Cleo., and Eno.

Sold. By Hercules, I think I am in the right.

Can. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action grows

Not in the power on 't: so our leader's led,

And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land

The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius,

Publicola, and Cælius are for sea:

But we keep whole by land. This speed of Cæsar's

Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome

His power went out in such distractions as Beguilk'd all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you?

Sold. They say one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls Canidius.

Can. With news the time's with labour: and threes forth

Each minute some. [Exeunt.

Scene VIII. — A Plain near Actium.

Enter Cæsar, Taurus, Officers, and others.

Cæs. Taurus,—

Taur. My lord?

Cæs. Strike not by land; keep whole; provoke not battle

Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed

The prescript of this scroll: our fortune lies

Upon this jump. [Exeunt.

Scene IX. — Another part of the Plain.

Enter Antiochus and Eno Barbusus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yon side o' the hill,

In eye of Cæsar's battle; from which place

We may the number of the ships behold,

And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.

Scene X. — Another part of the Plain.

Enter Canidius, marching with his land

Army one way: and Taurus, the Lieutenant of Cæsar, with his Army, the other way. After their going in, is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

Alarum. Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer:

The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,

With all their sixty, fly and turn the rudder:

To see 't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter Scarus.

Scar. Gods and goddesses,

All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion?

Scar. The greater canth of the world is lost

With very ignorance; we have kis'd away

Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?

Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence,

Where death is sure. Yon ribaudred nag of Egypt,—

[fight,

Whom leprosy o'ertake!—i' the midst o' the

When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,

Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,—

The breeze upon her, like a cow in June,—

Hoists sails and flies.

Eno. That I beheld: [not

Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof'd

The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,

Claps on his sea-wing, and, like a doting mallard,

Leaving the fight in height, flies after her:

I never saw an action of such shame;

Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before

Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter Canidius.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,

And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Scene XI.

Antony. Let me sit down. O Juno!
Ant. No, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you here, sir?
Ant. O fie, fie, fie!
Char. Madam,—
Iras. Madam, O good empress,—
Eros. Sir, sir,—
Ant. Yes, my lord, yes;—he at Philipp, kept
His sword e'en like a dancer; while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended; he alone
Dealt on lieutenanty, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war: yet now—no matter.

Cleo. Ah, stand by.
Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.
Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him:
He is unqualified with very shame.
Cleo. Well then,—sustain me:—O!
Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches:
Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her,
but
Your comfort make the rescue.
Ant. I have offended reputation,—
A most unnoible swerving.
Eros. Sir, the queen. [See
Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt?
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes
By looking back, what I have left behind
'Stroy'd in dishonour.
Cleo. O my lord, my lord,
Forgive my fearful sails! I little thought
You would have follow'd.
Ant. Egypt, thou knowst too well
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou shouldst tow me after: O'er my spirit
Thy full supremacy thou knewst, and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods Command me.
Cleo. O, my pardon!
Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treatises, dodge
And palter in the shits of lowness; who
With hal the bulk of the world play'd as I pleas'd,
Making and marring fortunes. You did know
How much you were my conqueror; and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.
Cleo. Pardon, pardon!
Ant. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates
All that is won and lost: give me a kiss;
Even this repays me.—We sent our schoolmaster;
Is he come back?—Love, I am full of lead.—
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT III.

Scene XII.—Caesar’s Camp in Egypt.

Enter Caesar, Dolabella, Thyreus, and others.

Caes. Let him appear that’s come from Antony.—
Know you him?

Dol. Caesar, ’tis his schoolmaster:
An argument that he is pluck’d, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers
Not many moons gone by.

Enter Euphronius.

Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.

Caes. Be’t so: declare thine office.

Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt: which not granted,
He lessens his requests; and to thee sue
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: this for him.

Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness;
Submits her to thy might; and of thee craves
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

Caes. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen
Of audience nor desire shall fail; so she
From Egypt drive her all-graccd friend,
Or take his life there: this if she perform
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Eup. Fortune pursue thee!

Caes. Bring him through the hands.

[Exit Euphronius.

To try thy eloquence, now ’tis time: despatch;
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise,
[To Thyrr.

And in our name, what she requires; add more,
From thine invention, offers: women are not In their best fortunes strong; but want will perjure.
The ne’er-touch’d vestal: try thy cunning,
Thyreus;
Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Caesar, I go.

Caes. Observe how Antony becomes his law,

And what thou think’st his very action speaks:
In every power that moves.

Thyr. Caesar, I shall. [Exit.

Scene XIII.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony or we in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What though you fled
From that great face of war, whose several ranges
Frighted each other? why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick’d his captainship; at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos’d, he being
The mered question: ’twas a shame no less Than was his loss to course your flying flags
And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Prythee, peace.

Enter Antony, with Euphronius.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Eno. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen shall then have courtesy, so she Will yield us up.

Eno. He says so.

Ant. Let her know it.—
To the boy Caesar send this grizzled head.
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again: tell him he wears the rose
Of youth upon him; from which the world should note
Something particular: his coins, ships, legions,
May be a coward’s; whose ministers would prevail
Under the service of a child as soon [fore
As if the command of Caesar: I dare him there-
To lay his gay comparisons apart,
And answer me declin’d, sword against sword, ourselves alone. I’ll write it: follow me.

[Exeunt Antony and Euphronius.

Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Caesar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag’d to the show Against a sworder.—I see men’s judgments are
A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,
Knowing all measures, the full Caesar will Answer his emptiness! — Caesar, thou hast subdu'd
His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. A messenger from Caesar.
Cleo. What, no more ceremony? — See, my women!
Against the blown rose may they stop their
That kneel'd unto the buds. — Admit him, sir.

Euno. [Aside.] Mine honesty and I begin to square.
The loyalty well held to fools does make
Our faith mere folly: — yet he that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fallen lord
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earn a place i' the story.

Enter Thyreus.

Thyr. Cesar's will?
Cleo. None but friends: say boldly.
Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.
Euno. He needs as many, sir, as Caesar has;
Or needs not us. If Caesar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend: for us, you know
Whose he is we are, and that is Caesar's.

Thyr. Thus then, thou most renown'd: Caesar entreats
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,
Further than he is Caesar.
Cleo. Go on: right royal.
Thyr. He knows that you embrace not Antony
As you did love, but as you fear'd him.
Cleo. O! the Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore,
Does pity, as constrained blemishes,
Not as deserv'd.
Cleo. He is a god, and knows
What is most right: mine honour was not yielded,
But conquer'd merely.

Euno. [Aside.] To be sure of that,
I will ask Antony. — Sir, sir, thou art so leaky
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee.

Thyr. Shall I say to Caesar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please him
That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud, who is
The universal landlord.
Cleo. What's your name?
Thyr. My name is Thyreus.
Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Caesar this: — in deputation
I kiss his conquering hand: tell him I am prompt
To lay my crown at's feet, and thence to kneel;
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. 'Tis your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Caesar's father
Oft, when he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter Antony and Eunoareus

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders! —
What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest;
To have command obey'd.

Euno. [Aside.] You will be whip'd.

Ant. Approach there! — Ay, you kite! — Now, gods and devils! Authority melts from me: of late, when I cried,
Like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth
And cry, Your will! Have you to curse? I am Antony yet.

Enter Attendants.

Take hence this Jack and whip him.

Euno. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whip
Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars!
Whip him. — Weren't twenty of the greatest tributaries
That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them
So saucy with the hand of such she, — what's her name
Since she was Cleopatra? — Whip him, fellows,
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face,
And whisper for mercy: take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony,

Ant. Tag him away: being whip'd,
Bring him again. — This Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an errand to him.

[Exeunt Attendants with Thyreus.

You were half blasted ere I knew you. — Ha!
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful face,
And by a gem of women, to be abused
By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord, —

Ant. You have been a boggler ever: —
But when we in our vicious-seers grow hard, —
O misery on't! — the wise gods seal our eyes.
In our own filth dorp our clear judgments;
make us
Adore our errors; laugh at’s, while we strut
To our confusion.
   Cleo. O, is’t come to this?
   Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon Dead Caesar’s trencher; nay, you were a fragmen tOf Cneius Pompey’s; besides what hotter hours, Unregister’d in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriouly pick’d out—for I am sure, [be.
Though you can guess what temperance should
You know not what it is.
   Cleo. Wherefore is this?
   Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards,
And say, God quit you! be familiar with
My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal
And plighter of high hearts!—O that I were Upon the hill of Basan, to offear
The horned herd! for I have savage cause;
And to proclaim it civilly were like
A halter’d neck which does the hangman thank
For being yare about him.

Re-enter Attendants with Tbyreus.

Is he whipp’d?
   1 Att. Soundly, my lord.
   Ant. Cried he? and begg’d he pardon?
   1 Att. He did ask favour.
   Ant. If that thy father live, let ’im repent
Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou sorry
To follow Caesar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipp’d for following him:
    henceforth
The white hand of a lady fever thee,
Shake thou to look on’t.—Get thee back to Cesar,
Tell him thy entertainment: look thou say
He makes me angry with him; for he seems Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was: he makes me angry;
And at this time most easy ’tis to do’t,
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abyss of hell. If he mislike
My speech and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranchis’d bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit me: urge it thou:
Hence with thy stripes, be gone.

[Exit Thyeus.

   Cleo. Have you done yet?
   Ant. Alack, our terrene moon
Is now eclips’d; and it portends alone
The fall of Antony!
   Cleo. I must stay his time.

   Ant. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?
   Cleo. Not know me yet?
   Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?
   Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven exister hail,
And poison it in the source: and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines, so Dissolve my life! The next Casariion smite I
Till, by degrees, the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptian all,
By the discarding of this pelleted storm,
Lie graceless,—til the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

   Ant. I am satisfied.
Cesar sits down in Alexandria; where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly hold: our sever’d navy too Have knit again, and fleet, threatening most sea-like.
   [hear, lady?
Where hast thou been, my heart?—Dost thou
If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood:
I and my sword will earn our chronicle:
There’s hope in’t yet.
   Cleo. That’s my brave lord!
   Ant. I will be treble-sinew’d, hearted,
    breath’d,
    And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
    Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
    Of me for jests; but now I’ll set my teeth,
    And send to darkness all that stop me.—Come,
Let’s have one other gaudy night: call to me
All my sad captains, fill our bowls; once more
Let’s mock the midnight bell.
   Cleo. It is my birthday.
I had thought to have held it poor; but since
my lord
Is Antony again I will be Cleopatra.
   Ant. We will yet do well.
   Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.
   Ant. Do so: we’ll speak to them: and tonight I’ll force
The wine peep through their scars.—Come on,
    my queen;
There’s sap in’t yet. The next time I do fight
I’ll make death love me; for I will contend
Even with his pestilent scythe.

   Eno. Now he’ll outstare the lightning. To be furious
Is to be frighted out of fear: and in that mood
The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still
A diminution in our captain’s brain
Restores his heart: when valour preys on rea.
On. It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him.

[Exit.
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Cæsar's Camp at Alexandria.

Enter Caesar reading a letter; AGRIPP, MECENAS, and Chides.

Cas. I: He calls me boy; and chides as he had power
To beat me out of Egypt; my messenger
Ist hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal Combat,
Cæsar to Antony:—let the old ruffian know
I have many other ways to die; meantime Laugh at his challenge.

Nor. Caesar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now Make boot of his distraction:—never anger Made good guard for itself.

Cas. Let our best heads
Know that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight.—Within our files there are,
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done:
And feast the army; we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, Cleopatra, ENOBARRUS, Charmian, IRAS, ALEXAS, and others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius.

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not? [fortune, Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight; or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woot thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike, and cry, Take all.

Ant. Well said; come on.—
Call forth my household servants: let's to-night Be bounteous at our meal.—

[Exeunt Servants.

Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest;—so hast thou:— Thou, and thou, and thou:—you have serv'd me well,
And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. [Aside to Eno.] What means this?
Eno. [Aside to Cleo.] 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

SCENE III.—Alexandria. Before the Palace.

Enter two Soldiers to their guard.

1 Sold. Brother, good-night: to-morrow is the day.

2 Sold. It will determine one way: fare you Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

2 Sold. Betike'tis but a rumour. Good-night

1 Sold. Well, sir, good-night.

[Exeunt.

Enter two other Soldiers.

2 Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch.

3 Sold. And you. Good-night, good-night.

[The first two place themselves at their posts.
ACT IV.

4 Sold. Here we: [The third and fourth take their posts.] and if to-morrow
Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up.

3 Sold. 'Tis a brave army,
And full of purpose.

[Music as of hautboys under the stage.

4 Sold. Peace, what noise?
1 Sold. List, list!
2 Sold. Hark!
1 Sold. Music i' the air.
3 Sold. Under the earth.
4 Sold. It signifies well, does it not?
3 Sold. No.
1 Sold. Peace, I say!

What should this mean?

[lov'd,

7 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony
Now leaves him.
1 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen
Do hear what we do.

[They advance to another post.

2 Sold. How now, masters!
Soldiers. [Speaking together.] How now!

1 w now! do you hear this?
1 Sold. Ay; is't not strange?
3 Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?
1 Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;
Let's see how it will give off.

Soldiers. [Speaking together.] Content. 'Tis strange.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony and Cleopatra; Charmian, Irias, and others attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my chuck.—Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter Eros with armour.

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that unbuckles this, till we do please
To doff't for our repose, shall hear a storm.—
Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's aquire
More tight at this than thou: despatch.—O love,
That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and
The royal occupation! thou shouldst see
A workman in't.—

Enter an Officer, armed.

Good-morrow to thee; welcome:
Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike
charge:
To business that we love we rise betime,
And go to't with delight.

Off. A thousand, sir,
Early though it be, have on their riveted trim,
And at the port expect you.

[Shout. Flourish of Trumpets within.

Enter other Officers and Soldiers.

2 Off. The morn is fair.—Good-morrow,
general.

All. Good-morrow, general.

Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads:
This morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to do of note, begins betimes.—
So, so; come, give me that: this way; we've said.—

Fare thee well, dame, what' er becomes of me:
This is a soldier's kiss; reprehensible,
[Byes her.
And worthy shameful check it were, to stand
On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave thee
Now, like a man of steel.—You that will fight,
Follow me close; I'll bring you to't.—Adieu.

[Exeunt Ant., Eros, Officers, and Soldiers.

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.

Cleo. Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Cæsar might
Determine this great war in single fight!
Then, Antony,—but now—Well, on.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—ANTONY'S Camp near Alexandria.

Trumpets sound within. Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!

Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevailed
To make me fight at land!

Sold. Hadst thou done so
The kings that have revolted, and the soldier,
That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow'd thy heels,
Ant. Who's gone this morning?
Sold. Who.
One ever near thee: call for Enobarbus,
He shall not hear thee; or from Cesar's camp
Say, I am none of thine.
Ant. What say'st thou?
Sold. Sir,
He is with Cesar.
Eno. Sir, his chests and treasure
He has not with him.
Ant. Is he gone?
Sold. Most certain.
Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it;
Detain no jot. I charge thee; write to him,—
I will subscribe,—gentle aliens and greetings;
Say that I wish he never find more cause
To change a master.—O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men!—Eros, despatch.
[Exit.

SCENE VI.—CEASAR'S Camp before Alexandria.

Flourish. Enter CAESAR, with AGrippA,
Enobarbus, and others.

Cesar. Go forth, Agrippa, and Agrippa, and begin the sight:
Our will is Antony be took alive;
Make it so known.

Agrippa. Cesar, I shall. [Exit.
Cesar. The time of universal peace is near:
Place this a prosperous day, the three morn'd
Wor'd
Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mrs. Antony

Is come into the field.

Cesar. Go charge Agrippa
I want these that have revok'd in the vein,
That Antony may seem to spend his fury
Upon himself. [Exit. Enter EROS, Train.

Eno. Alexas did revolt; and went to Jewry
On affairs of Antony; there did persuade Great Herod to incline himself to Cesar,
And leave his master Antony: for this pains
Cesar hath hang'd him. Canidius, and the rest
That fell away, have entertainment, but
No honourable trust. I have done ill;
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely
That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Cesar's.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony
Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with
His bounty overplus: the messenger
Came on my guard, and at thy tent is now
Unloading of his mules.

Eno. I give it you.
Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus.
I tell you true: best you said the bringer
Out of the host; I must attend mine office,
Or would have done't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove.

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth,
And feel I am so most. O Antony, [Exit
Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have
My better service, when my turpitude Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart:
If swift thought break it not, a swifter man
Shall outdash thought: but thought will do it.
I feel.
I fight against thee!—No, I will no seek
Some ditch wherein to die; the foal's best fits
My latter part of life. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the C주시

Ant. How we have engaged one too far;
Cesar himself his work, and can carry him.
Exceeds what we expected. [Exit.

Ant. Enter Antony, and Others.

Ant. O my! we conquer, where I fought indeed!
Had we done so at first, we had driven them
With clouts about their heads.

Ant. To a blue Jet space.

Ant. I had a wound like that was like a T,
But now, 'tis like an H.

Ant. They do none.

Ant. We'll hang the in Brothers, I have yet
Room for in matches more.

Exit EROS.

Eno. They are beaten, the; and our ad trees

For a fair victory.

Cesar. Let us score their backs,
And snatch 'em up, as we take hand, behind:
Tis sport to meat a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy sprightly comfort, and toold
For thy good valour. Come this on.

Cesar. I'll halt after. [Exit.
Scene VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Actum. Enter Antony marching; Scarus and forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp. Run one before, [morrow;
And let the queen know of our gists.—To
Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood
That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all;
For doughty-handed are you, and have fought
Not as you serv'd the cause, but as 't had been Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.
Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful feats [kiss
Wash the congealment from your wounds,
And the honour'd gashes whole.—Give me thy hand;
[73 Scarus.

Enter Cleopatra, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts, Make her thanks bless thee. O thou day o' the world, [all,
Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and Through proof of harness to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphing.
Cleo. Lord of lords!
O infinite virtue, com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?
Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl!
though grey [yet ha' we
Do something mingle with our younger brown;
A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man;
Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand;—
Kiss it, my warrior: he hath fought to-day
As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.
Cleo. I'll give thee, friend,
An armour all of gold; it was a king's.
Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it caruncled
Like holy Phoebus' car.—Give me thy hand:
Through Alexandria make a jolly march;
Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe
them;
Had our great palace the capacity
To camp this host, we all would sup together,
And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
Which promises royal peril.—Trumpeters,
With brazen din blast you the city's ear;
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines;
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds
Together,
Applauding our approach. [Exeunt.

Scene IX.—Caesar's Camp.

Sentinels at their Post.

1 Sold. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,
We must return to the court of guard: the
night
Is shiny; and they say we shall embattle
By the second hour if' the morn.
2 Sold. This last day was A shrewd one to's.

Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. O, bear me witness, night.—
3 Sold. What man is this?
2 Sold. Stand close and list to him.
Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,
When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before thy face repent!—
1 Sold. Enobarbus!
3 Sold. Peace!
Hark further.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,
The poisonous damp of night dispone upon
me,
That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me: throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault;
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony,
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular;
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver and a fugitive:
O Antony! O Antony!

[Die. 2 Sold. Let's speak
To him.
1 Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern Cesar.
3 Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.
1 Sold. Swoons rather; or so bad a prayer as his
Was never yet fore sleep.
2 Sold. Go we to him.
3 Sold. Awake, sir, awake; speak to us.
2 Sold. Hear you, sir?
1 Sold. The hand of death hath raught him.
[Drums afar off.] Hark! the drums
Do merrily wake the sleepers. Let us bear
him
To the court of guard; he is of note: our hour
Is fully out.
3 Sold. Come on, then;
He may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.
SCENE X.—Ground between the two Camps.

Enter Antony and Scarus, with Forces, marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea;
We please them not by land.
Scar. For both, my lord.
Ant. I would they’d fight i’ the fire or i’ the air;
We’d fight there too. But this it is; our foot
Upon the hills adjoining to the city
Shall stay with us—order for sea is given;
They have put forth the haven:—forward now,
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.

SCENE XI.—Another part of the Ground.

Enter Cæsar, with his Forces, marching.

Cæs. But being charg’d, we will be still by land,
Which, as I take’t, we shall; for his best force
Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt.

SCENE XII.—Another part of the Ground.

Enter Antony and Scarus.

Ant. Yet they’re not join’d: where yond pine does stand
I shall discover all: I’ll bring thee word Straight how ’tis like to go. [Exeunt. Scar.
Swallows have built
In Cleopatra’s sails their nests: the augurers
Say they know not,—they cannot tell;—look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony
Is vaunt and dejected; and, by starts,
His fretted fortunes give him hope and fear
Of what he has and has not.
[Alarum afar off, as at a sea-fight.

Re-enter Antony.

Ant. All is lost;
This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me:
My fleet hath yielded to the foe; and yonder
They cast their caps up, and carouse together
Like friends long lost.—Triple-turn’d where! ’tis thou Hast sold me to this novice; and my heart
Makes only wars on thee.—Bid them all fly;
For when I am reveng’d upon my charm,
I have done all.—Bid them all fly; begone.
[Exit Scarus.

SCENE XIII.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. Help me, my women! O, he is more mad
Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Theseus
Was never so emboss’d.

Char. To the monument! There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.

Cleo. To the monument!—Than greatness going off.

Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say that the last I spoke was Antony,
And word it, pry' thee, pitiously: hence, Mardian;
And bring me how he takes my death.—
To the monument!  [Exeunt.

SCENE XIV.—ALEXANDRIA. Another Room.
Enter Antony and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?
Eros. Ay, noble Lord.
Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish;
A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world,
And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these signs;
They are black vesper's pageants.
Eros. Ay, my lord.
Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought
The rack dislimns; and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.
Eros. It does, my lord. [is
Ant. My good knave Eros, now thy captain
Even such a body: here I am Antony;
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave,
I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen,—
Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine;
Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto't
A million more now lost,—she, Eros, has Packed cards with Caesar, and false-play'd my glory.
Unto an enemy's triumph.—
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.—

Enter Mardian.

O, thy vile lady!

She has robb'd me of my sword.

Mar. No, Antony; My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled
With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy enmity: peace!
She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once,
And that she has discharg'd: what thou wouldst
Is done unto thy hand: the last she spake
Was, Antony! most noble Antony!
Then in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips: she render'd life,
Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead then?
Mar. Dead.

Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is done,
And we must sleep.—That thou depart'st hence
Does thy labour richly; go.

[Exit Mardian.

Off, pluck off;—
The sevenfold shield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!
Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,
Crack thy frail case!—Apace, Eros, apace.—
No more a soldier.—Bruised pieces, go;—
You have been nobly borne. —From meanwhile.—

[Exit Eros.

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture. —Since the torch is out,
Lie down, and stray no further: now all labour
Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles
Itself with strength: seal then, and all is done.—
Eros!—I come, my queen.—Eros!—stay for me:

Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze:
Dido and her Eneas shall want troops,
And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros, Eros!

Re-enter Eros.

Eros. What would my lord?
Ant. Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in such dishonour that the gods
Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword
Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back
With ships made cities, o'er green Neptune's back
With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack
The courage of a woman; less noble mind
Than she which by her death our Caesar tells,
I am conqueror of myself. Thou art sworn, Eros,
That, when the exigent should come,—which now
Is come indeed,—when I should see behind me
The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command,
Thou then wouldst kill me: do't; the time is come:
Thou strik'st not me, 'his Caesar thou defeat'st.
Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that which all the Parthian darts,
Though enemy, lost aim, and could not?
Ant. Eros,
Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome, and see
Thy master thus with pleach'd arms, bending down
His corrugible neck, his face subdu'd,
To penetrative shame; whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded
His baseness that ensued?

Eros. I would not see 't.

Ant. Come, then; for with a wound I must be cur'd. [worn

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast
Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir, pardon me!

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then
To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once;
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents unpros'd. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance,
Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Lo thee! [Turning from him

Eros. My sword is drawn.

Ant. Then let it do at once
The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear master,
My captain and my emperor, let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said, man—and farewell. [now?

Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike

Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then [falls on his sword]:—
thus do I escape the sorrow
Of Antony's death. [Dies

Ant. Thrice nobler than myself!
Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what [Eros I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and I have, by their brave instruction, got upon me
A nobleness on record: but I will be
A bridegroom in my death, and run into't
As to a lover's bed. Come, then; and, Eros, Thy master dies thy scholar: to do thus

[falling on his sword

I learnt of thee. How! not dead? not dead?—
The guard, ho!—O, despatch me!

Enter Diomedes and Guard.

1 Guard. What's the noise?

Ant. I have done my work ill, friends: O, make an end
Of what I have begun.

2 Guard. The star is fallen.

1 Guard. And time is at its period.

Ant. Alas, and woe!

Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

1 Guard. Not I.

2 Guard. Not I.

3 Guard. Nor any one. [Exit Guard.

Dor. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers
fly. [ings,

This sword but shown to Caesar, with this tid-
Shall enter me with him.
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter, below, Diomedes.

Diom. How now! is he dead?

Enter, below, Antony, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O sun, Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in!—dark

The varying shore o' the world.—O Antony, Antony, Antony! —Help, Charmian; help, Iris, help,— Help, friends below;—let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace!

Not Caesar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,
But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself.

Cleo. So, it should be, that none but Antony
Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
There importune death awhile, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.

Cleo. I dare not, dear,—
Dear my lord, pardon,—I dare not,
Lest I be taken: not the im寝erous show
Of the full-fortun'd Caesar ever shall
Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents
Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe;
Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes
And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour Demurring upon me.—But come, come, Antony,—
Help me, my women,—we must draw thee
Assist, good friends.

Ant. O, quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's sport indeed!—How heavy
Weighs my lord! Our strength is all gone into heaviness,
That makes the weight: had I great Juno's
Power,
The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up,
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,— Wishers were ever fools.—O, come, come, come;
[They draw Antony up.
And welcome, welcome I die where thou hast liv'd :
Quicken with kissing: had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying:
Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high
That the false housewife Fortune break her
Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word, sweet queen:
Of Caesar seek your honour, with your safety.—

Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me:
None about Caesar trust but Proculeius.

Cleo. My resolution and my hands I'll trust;
None about Caesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end
Lament nor sorrow at: but please your thoughts
In feeding them with those my former fortunes.
Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o' the world,
The noblest; and do now not basely die,
Not cowardly put off my helmet to My countryman, a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my spirit is going:
I can no more.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die?
Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better than a sty?—O, see, my women, [ANTONY dies.

The crown o' the earth doth melt.—My lord!—
O, wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fallen: young boys and
Are level now with men: the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting moon.

[Flint's.

Char. O, quietness, lady!
Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.
Char. Lady,
Iras. Madam,—
Char. O madam, madam, madam,— Iras. Royal Egypt,
Empress,—

Char. Peace, peace, Iras! [manded

Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman, and com-
By such poor passion as the maid that milks
And does the meanest cares.—It were for me
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;
To tell them that this world did equal theirs
Till they had stol'n our jewel. All's but naught;
Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad: then is it sin
To rush into the secret house of death
Ere death dare come to us?—How do you, women?
[Charman!

What, what! good cheer! Why, how now,
My noble girls!—Ah, women, women, look,
Our lamp is spent, it's out!—Good sirs, take heart!—

[noble,
We'll bury him; and then, what's brave, what's Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come, away:
This case of that huge spirit now is cold:
Ah, women, women!—Come; we have no friend
But resolution, and the briefest end.
[Exeunt; those above bearing off Antony's body.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—CAESAR'S Camp before Alexandria.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Me-
Cænas, Gallus, Proculeius, and others.

Ces. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate, tell him that he mocks
The pauses that he makes.

Dol. Caesar, I shall. [Exit.

Enter Dercetas with the sword of Antony.

Ces. Wherefore is that? and what art thou that dar'st
Appear thus to us?

Der. I am call'd Dercetas;
Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy
Best to be serv'd: whilst he stood up and spoke,
He was my master; and I wore my life
To spend upon his haters. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I'll be to Caesar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Ces. What is't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Caesar, Antony is dead.

Ces. The breaking of so great a thing should make
A greater crack: the round world
Should have shook lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony
Is not a single doom; in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Caesar;
Not by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand
Which writ his honour in the acts it did
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart.—This is his sword;
I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd
With his most noble blood.

Ces. Look you sad, friends?
The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.

Mess. His taints and honours
Weigh'd equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity: but you, gods, will give us

Some faults to make us men. Caesar is touch'd.

Mess. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.

Ces. O Antony!
I have follow'd thee to this.—But we do lance
Diseases in our bodies: I must perforce
Have shown to thee such a declining day
Or look on thine; we could not stand together
In the whole world: but yet let me lament,
With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts,
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war,
The arm of mine own body, and the heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle,—that our stars,
Unreconcilable, should divide
Our equalness to this.—Hear me, go; I
friends,—
But I will tell you at some meneer season:

Enter a Messenger.

The business of this man looks out of him;
We'll hear him what he says.—Whence are you?

Mess. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my
mistress,
Confinc'd in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction,
That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she's forc'd to.

Ces. Bid her have good heart:
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her; for Caesar cannot learn
To be ungentle.

Mess. So the gods preserve thee! [Exit.

Ces. Come hither, Proculeius. Go, and say
We purpose her no shame: give her what comforts
The quality of her passion shall require
Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke
She do defeat us; for her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph: go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says,
And how you find of her.

Dol. Caesar, I shall. [Exit.

Ces. Gallus, go you along. [Exit Gallus.]
Where's Dolabella,
To second Proculeius?

Agr. and Mess. Dolabella!

Ces. Let him alone, for I remember now
How he's employ'd: he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my tent; where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this war;
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings: go with me, and see
What I can show in this. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Monument.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Caesar;
Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's knave,
A minister of her will: and it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds;
Which shackles accidents and Bolts up change;
Which sleeps, and never palates more the dag,
The beggar's nurse and Caesar's.

Enter, to the gates of the Monument, Proculeius, Gallus, and Soldiers.

Pro. Caesar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt:
And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.
Cleo. What's thy name?
Pro. My name is Proculeius.
Cleo. Antony
Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd,
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.
Pro. Be of good cheer:
You are fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing:
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace that it flows over
On all that need: let me report to him
Your sweet dependency; and you shall find
A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.
Cleo. Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience; and would gladly
Look him in the face.
Pro. This I'll report, dear lady.
Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied
Of him that causs'd it.
Gal. You see how easily she may be surpris'd:
[Here Proculeius and two of the Guard ascend the Monument by a ladder placed against a window, and, having descended, come behind Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates.
Guard her till Caesar come.
[To Pro. and the Guard. Exit.

Ir. Royal queen!
Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen!
Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.
[Drawing a dagger.
Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold:
[Seizes and disarms her.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd.
Cleo. What, of death too,
That rids our dogs of languish?
Pro. Cleopatra,
Do not abuse my master's bounty by
The undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.
Cleo. Where art thou, death?
Come hither, come! come, and take a queen
Worth many babes and beggars!
Pro. O, temperance, lady!
Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink,
sir;
If idle talk will once be accessory,
I'll not sleep neither: this mortal house I'll ruin,
Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I will not wait pinion'd at your master's court;
Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,
And show me to the shouting variety
Of censoring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave unto me! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark nak'd, and let the water-flies Blow me into abhorring! rather make
My country's high pyramids my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!
Pro. You do extend These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: as for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.
Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her.—
To Caesar I will speak what you shall please,
[To Cleopatra.
If you'll employ me to him.
Cleo. Say I would die.
[Exeunt Proculeius and Soldiers.

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?
Cleo. I cannot tell.
Dol. Assuredly you know me.
Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.
You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams; Is't not your trick?

DoL. I understand not, madam. Cleo. I dream'd there was an emperor Antony:—

O, such another sleep, that I might see But such another man!

DoL. If it might please you,— Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and there-in stuck

A sun and moon, which kept their course, and lighted The little O, the earth.

DoL. Most sovereign creature,— Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his rea'd arm

Crested the world: his voice was propertied As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends; But when he meant to quail and shake the orb, He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty, There was no winter in't; an autumn 'twas That grew the more by reaping: his delights Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above The element they liv'd in: in his livery Walk'd crowns and crownets: realms and islands were As plates dropp'd from his pocket.

DoL. Cleopatra,— Cleo. Think you there was or might be such a man As this I dream'd of?

DoL. Gentle madam, no. Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods. But if there be, or ever were, one such, It's past the size of dreaming: nature wants stuff To vie strange forms with fancy: yet to imagine An Antony were nature's peace 'gainst fancy, Cond'mining shadows quite. —

DoL. Hear me, good madam. Your loss is, as yourself, great; and you bear it As answering to the weight: would I might never O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel, By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites My very heart at root. —

Cleo. I thank you, sir. Know you what Caesar means to do with me?

DoL. I am loth to tell you what I would you knew. Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,— DoL. Though he be honourable,— Cleo. He'll lead me, then, in triumph? DoL. Madam, he will; I know it. [Flourish within.]

Within. Make way there,—Caesar!

Enter Caesar, Gallus, Proculeius, Mecenas, Seleucus, and Attendants.

Caes. Which is the Queen of Egypt?

DoL. It is the emperor, madam.

[Cleopatra kneels.]

Caes. Arise, you shall not kneel:—

I pray you rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods Will have it thus; my master and my lord I must obey.

Caes. Take to you no hard thoughts: The record of what injuries you did us, Though written in our flesh, we shall remember As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir of the world,

I cannot project mine own cause so well To make it clear: but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties which before Have often sham'd our sex.

Caes. We will extenuate rather than enforce: If you apply yourself to our intents,— [find] Which towards you are most gentle,—you shall A benefit in this change; but if you seek To lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself Of my good purposes, and put your children To that destruction which I'll guard them from, If thereon you rely. 'I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may, through all the world: his yours; and we,

Your scutcheons and your signs of conquest, shall [good lord. Hang in what place you please. Here, my Caes. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued; [seal Not petty things admitted.—Where's Seleucus? Sol. Here, madam. [my lord, Cleo. This is my treasurer: let him speak, Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sele. Madam,

I had rather seal my lips than to my peril Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back? Sele. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Caes. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Caesar! O, behold! How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours; [mine. And, should we shift estates, yours would be The ingratitude of this Seleucus does...
Even make me wild: O slave, of no more trust
Than love that’s hir’d!—What, goest thou back? thou shalt Go back, I warrant thee; but I’ll catch thine eyes [dog!
Though they had wings; slave, soulless villain,
O rarely base!

Ces. Good queen, let us entreat you.
Cleo. O Caesar, what a wounding shame is this—
That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honour of thy lordliness
To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Say, good Caesar,
That I some lady trifles have reserv’d,
Immolation toys, things of such dignity
As we greet modern friends withal; and say,
Some nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia and Octavia, to induce
Their mediation; must I be unfolded
With one that I have bred? The gods! It smites me Beneath the fall I have. Pr’ythee, go hence;
[To Seleucus.
Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits
Through the ashes of my chance.—Wert thou a man,
Thou wouldst have mercy upon me.

Cleo. Be it known that we, the greatest, are mistrusted
For things that others do; and when we fail
We answer others’ merits in our name,
And therefore to be pitied.

Ces. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reserv’d, nor what acknowledg’d,
But we i’ the roll of conquest: still be’t yours,
Restow it at your pleasure; and believe
Cesar’s no merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer’d;
Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear queen;
For we intend so to dispose you as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed and sleep:
Our care and pity is so much upon you
That we remain your friend; and so, adieu.

Cleo. My master and my lord!

[Flourish. Exeunt Caesar and his Train.

Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not
Be noble to myself: but hark thee, Charmian!

[Whispers Charmian.

Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done,
And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hie thee again:
I have spoke already, and it is provided;
Go put it to the haste.

Cleo. Madam, I will.

Re-enter Dolabella.

Dol. Where is the queen?

Cleo. Behold, sir. [Exit.

Dolabella.

Dol. Madam, as therto sworn by your command,
Which my love makes religion to obey,
I tell you this: Caesar through Syria
Intends his journey; and within three days
You with your children will be send before:
Make your best use of this: I have perform’d
Your pleasure and my promise.

Cleo. Dolabella,
I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your servant.

Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Caesar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks.

[Exit Dolabella.

Now, Iras, what think’st thou?
Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown
In Rome as well as I: mechanic slaves,
With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view; in their thick breaths,
Rank of gross diet, shall we be encloosed,
And forc’d to drink their vapour.

Iras. The gods forbid!

Cleo. Nay, ’tis most certain, Iras:—saucy lictors [rhymers
Will catch at us like strumpets; and scald
Ballad us out o’ tune: the quick comedians
Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels; Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness
I’ the posture of a whore.

Iras. O the good gods!

Cleo. Nay, that’s certain.

Iras. I’ll never see’t; for I am sure my nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why, that’s the way
To fool their preparation and to conquer
Their most absurd intents.

Enter Charmian.

Now, Charmian!—
Show me, my women, like a queen.—Go fetch
My best attires;—I am again for Cydnus,
To meet Mark Antony:—sirrah, Iras, go.—

Now, noble Charmian, we’ll despatch indeed;
And when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave.
To play till doomsday.—Bring our crown and Wherefore's this noise?
[Exit IRAS.  A noise within.

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard.  Here is a rural fellow
That will not be denied your highness' presence:
He brings you figs.

Cleo.  Let him come in.  [Exit Guard.
What poor an instrument
May do a noble deed! he brings ye liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: now from head to foot
I am marble-constant; now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guard, with Clown bringing a basket.

Guard.  This is the man.
Cleo.  Avoid, and leave him.  [Exit Guard.
I'lt thou the pretty worm of Nilus there
That kills and pains not?

Clown.  Truly, I have him: but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.  [on't?

Cleo.  Remember'st thou any that have died Clown.  Very many, men and women too.  I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday:
a very honest woman, but something given to lie; as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty: how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt,—truly she makes a very good report of the worm; but he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do: but this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo.  Get thee hence; farewell.
Clown.  I wish you all joy of the worm.

[Sets down the basket.

Cleo.  Farewell.

Clown.  You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo.  Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown.  Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people; for indeed there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo.  Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

Clown.  Very good.  Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo.  Will it eat me?

Clown.  You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not.  But truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make the devils mar five.

Cleo.  Well, get thee gone; farewell.

Clown.  Yes, forsooth: I wish you joy of the worm.

Re-enter IRAS, with a robe, crown, &c.

Cleo.  Give me my robe, put on my crown;
I have
Immortal longings in me: now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip:—
Yare, yare, good IRAS; quick.—Methinks I hear
Antony call; I see him raise himself
To praise my noble act; I hear him mock
The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men
To excise their after wrath.  Husband, I come;
Now to that name my courage prove my skill;
I am fire and air; my other elements
I give to baser life.—So, have you done?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.
Farewell, kind Charmian;—IRAS, long farewell.

[Akisses them.  [Exit IRAS.

Iras falls and dies.

Iras.  Have I the aspic in my lips?—Dost fall?
If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts and is desired.  Dost thou lie still?
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave-taking.

Char.  Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I may say
The gods themselves do weep!

Cleo.  This proves me base:
If she first meet the curled Antony,
He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss
Which is my heaven to have.—Come, thou mortal wretch,
[To an asp, which she applies to her breast.
With thy sharp teeth this knot inscrutable
Of life at once untie: poor venomous fool,
Be angry, and despaiich.  Goddess thou speakest,  That I might hear thee call great Caesar ass Unpoliced!

Char.  O eastern star!
Cleo.  Peace, peace!
Dost thou not see my baby at my breast
That sucks the nurse asleep?

Cleo.  O, break! O, break!
Clown.  As sweet as balm, as soft as air,
As gentle:—

O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too:—

[Affixing another asp to her arm.

What, should I stay,—

[Falls on a bed and dies.

Char.  In this vile world?—So, fare thee well.—

Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies
A lass unparallel'd.—Downy windows, close;
And golden Phæbus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown’s awry;
I’ll mend it and then play.

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

1 Guard. Where is the queen?
Char. Speak softly, wake her not.
1 Guard. Caesar hath sent,— Char. Too slow a messenger.

[Applies an asp.

O, come apace, despatch: I partly feel thee.
1 Guard. Approach, hol all’s not well:
Caesar’s beguil’d. [call him.
2 Guard. There’s Dolabella sent from Caesar;
1 Guard. What work is here!—Charmian, is this well done?
Char. It is well done, and fitting for a prin-
Descended of so many royal kings.
Ah, soldier! [Dies.

Re-enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it here?
2 Guard. All dead.
Dol. Caesar, thy thoughts
Touch their effects in this: thystself art coming
To see perform’d the dreaded act which thou
So sought’st to hinder.
Within. A way there, a way for Caesar!

Re-enter Caesar and his Train.

Dol. O, sir, you are too sure an augurer;
That you did fear is done.
Cas. Bravest at the last,
She levell’d at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way.—The manner of their deaths?
I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?
1 Guard. A simple countryman that brought her figs.

This was his basket.

Cas. Poison’d then.
1 Guard. This Charmian liv’d but now; she stood and spoke:
I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress; trembly she stood,
And on the sudden dropp’d.

Cas. O noble weakness!—
If they had swallow’d poison ’twould appear
By external swelling: but she looks like sleep,—
As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here on her breast
There is a vent of blood, and something blown:
The like is on her arm.

1 Guard. This is an aspic’s trail: and these fig-leaves
Have slime upon them, such as the aspic leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Cas. Most probable
That so she died; for her physician tells me)
She hath pursu’d conclusions infinite
Of easy ways to die.—Take up her bed,
And bear her women from the monument:—
She shall be buried by her Antony:
No grave upon the earth shall clip it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall
In solemn show attend this funeral;
And then to Rome.—Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity. [Exeunt.

ACT I.

Scene I.—Britain. The Garden behind Cymbeline’s Palace.
Enter two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns: our bloods
No more obey the heavens than our courtiers
Still seem as does the king.
2 Gent. But what’s the matter?
1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom, whom
He purpos’d to his wife’s sole son,—a widow
That late he married,—hath refer’d herself
Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She’s wedded;
Her husband banish’d; she imprison’d: all
Is outward sorrow; though I think the king
Be touch’d at very heart.
2 Gent. None but the king?
1 Gent. He that hath lost her too: so is the queen, [courtier,
That most desir’d the match. But not a
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king’s looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.
2 Gent. And why so?
1 Gent. He that hath miss’d the princess is a thing
Too bad for bad report: and he that hath her,—
I mean that married her—alack, good man!—

And therefore banish’d,—is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing
In him that should compare. I do not think
So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but he.
2 Gent. You speak him far.
1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself;
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly.
2 Gent. What’s his name and birth?
1 Gent. I cannot delive him to the root: his father
Was call’d Sicilurus, who did join his honour,
Against the Romans, with Cassibelan,
But had his titles by Tenantius, whom
He serv’d with glory and admir’d success,—
So gain’d the sur-addition Leonatus:
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who, in the wars of the time,
Died with their swords in hand; for which their father,—
Then old and fond of issue,—took such sorrow
That he quit being; and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas’d
As he was born. The king he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus Leonatus;
Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber:
Puts to him all the learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of; which he took,
As we do air, fast as ’twas minister’d;
And in's spring became a harvest: liv'd in court,—
Which rare it is to do,—most prais'd, most lov'd;
A sample to the youngest; to the more mature
A glass that feasted them; and to the graver
A child that guided dotards: to his mistress,
For whom he now is banish'd,—her own price
Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honour him
Even out of your report. But, pray you, tell me,
Do the solo child to the king?
1 Gent. His only child.
He had two sons,—if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it,—the eldest of them at three years old,
I' the swathing clothes the other, from their [knowledge
Were stol'n; and to this hour no guess in Which way they went.

2 Gent. How long is this ago?
1 Gent. Some twenty years. [convey'd!]
2 Gent. That a king's children should be so
So slackly guard'd? And the search so slow
That could not trace them!

1 Gent. Howsoe'er 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir,

2 Gent. I do well believe you.
1 Gent. We must forbear: here comes the

The queen, and princess. [Exeunt.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Queen. No, be assur'd you shall not find me,
daughter,
After the slander of most stepmothers,
Evil-eyed unto you: you're my prisoner, but
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys [muss,
That lock up your restraint.—For you, Posthu-
So soon as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate: marry, yet
The fire of rage is in him; and 'twere good
You lean'd unto his sentence with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day,
Queen. You know the peril.—
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The bane of barr'd affections; though the king
 Hath charg'd you should not speak together.

Imo. 0
Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband,
In one something fear my father's wrath; but noth-Always reserv'd my holy duty,—what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes; not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man! I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did ever plight troth;
My residence in Rome at one Philaret's,
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter: thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you

Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter Queen.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you:
If the king come I shall incur I know not
How much of his displeasure.—[Aside.] Yet
I'll move him
To walk this way: I never do him wrong
But he does buy my injuries to be friends,—
Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to air yourself,
Such parting were too petty. Look here,
love;
This diamond was my mother's: take it, heart;
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How, how! another?—
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And scar up my embraces from a next
With bonds of death!—Remain, remain thou
Here [Putting on the ring.
While sense can keep it on! And, sweetest, fairest,
As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles
I still win of you; for my sake wear this;
It is a manacle of love: I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a bracelet on her arm.

Imo. O the gods!
When shall we see again?

Post. Alack, the king!

Enter Cymbeline and Lords.

Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence from my sight!
If after this command thou fraught the court
SCENE I.]

CYMBELINE.

With thy unworthiness, thou diest: away! Thou art poison to my blood.
Post. The gods protect you! And bless the good remainders of the court! I am gone. [Exit.
Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death More sharp than this is.
Cym. O disloyal thing, That shouldst repair my youth, thou happiest A year's age on me! Imo. I beseech you, sir, Harm not yourself with your vexation: I Am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare Subdues all pangs, all fears.
Cym. Past grace? obedience? Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way Past grace. [my queen! Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of Imo. O bless'd that I might not! I chose an eagle, And did avoid a puttock.
Cym. Thou took'st a beggar! wouldst have made my throne A seat for baseness.
Imo. No; I rather added A lustre to it.
Cym. O thou vile one!
Imo. Sir, It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus: You bred him as my playfellow; and he is A man worth any woman; overbuys n.e Almost the sum he pays.
Cym. What, art thou mad? Imo. Almost, sir: heaven restore me!— Would I were A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus Our neighbour shepherd's son! Cym. Thou foolish thing!—

Re-enter Queen.

They were again together: you have done [To the Queen.
Not after our command. Away with her, And pen her up.
Queen. Beseech your patience.—Peace, Dear lady daughter, peace!—Sweet sovereign, Leave us to ourselves: and make yourself some comfort Out of your best advice.
Cym. Nay, let her languish A drop of blood a day; and, being aged, Die of this folly! [Exit, with Lords.
Queen. Pie! you must give way.

Enter PISANIO.

Here is your servant.—How now, sir! What news?

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.
Queen. Ha!
No harm, I trust, is done!
Pis. There might have been, But that my master rather play'd than fought, And had no help of anger: they were parted By gentlemen at hand.
Queen. I am very glad on't.
Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.— To draw upon an exile!—O brave sir!— I would they were in Afric both together; Myself by with a needle, that I might prick The goer back.—Why came you from your master? [Exe.
Pis. On his command: he would not suffer To bring him to the haven? jest these notes Of what commands I should be subject to, When't pleas'd you to employ me.
Queen. This hath been Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour He will remain so.
Pis. I humbly thank your highness.
Queen. Pray, walk awhile.
Imo. About some half hour hence, I pray you, speak with me: you shall at least Go see my lord aboard: for this time leave me. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—BRITAIN.—A Public Place.

Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice: where air comes out air comes in: there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.
Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it.—Have I hurt him?
2 Lord. [Aside.] No, faith; not so much as his patience.
1 Lord. Hurt him! His body's a passable carcase if he be not hurt: it is a throughfare for steel if it be not hurt.
2 Lord. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o' the back side the town.
Clo. The villain would not stand me.
2 Lord. [Aside.] No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.
1 Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own: but he added to your having; gave you some ground.
2 Lord. [Aside.] As many inches as you have, oceans.—Puppies!
Clo. I would they had not come between us.
2 Lord. [Aside.] So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!

2 Lord. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord. [Aside] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there ha' been some hurt done!

2 Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an eagle, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Na!—Come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Britain. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Imogen and Pisanio.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores of the haven, And questioned'st every sail: if he should write, And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost, As offer'd mercy is. What was the last That he spake to thee?

Pis. It was, His queen, his queen!

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier therein than I!

And that was all?

Pis. No, madam; so for long
As he could make me with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief
Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his mind
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, but
To look upon him, till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle;
Nay, follow'd him till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air; and then
Have turn'd mine eye and wept.—Eat, good Pisanio,
When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam,
With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had
Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him
How I would think on him, at certain hours,
Such thoughts and such; or I could make him swear
The she's of Italy should not betray [him
Mine interest and his honour; or have charg'd
At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,
To encounter me with orisons, for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss which I had set
Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,
And like the tyrannous breathing of the north
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them despatch'd.—I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt.

Enter Philario, Iachimo, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of: but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phil. You speak of him when he was less furnish'd than now he is with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter,—wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own,—words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment,—

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours, are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?
Cymbeline.

Phil. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life.—Here comes the Briton: let him be so entertained amongst you as suits with gentlemen of your knowing to a stranger of his quality.

Enter Posthumus.

I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman; whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine: how worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'errate my poor kindness: I was glad I did atone my countryman and you; it had been pity should you have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but, upon my mended judgment,—if I offend not to say it is mended,—my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords; and by such two that would, by all likelihood, have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching,—and upon warrant of bloody affirmation,—his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified, and less attemptible than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair and as good,—a kind of hand-in-hand comparison,—had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Brittany. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours out-lustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many: but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her: so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifling.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold or given, if there were wealth enough for the purchase or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too: so your brace of unprizeable estimations, the one is but frail and the other casual; a cunning thief or a that-way-accomplished courtier would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress; if in the holding or loss of that you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding I fear not my ring.

Phil. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation I should get ground of your fair mistress: make her go back even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something: but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse: though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more,—a punishment too.

Phil. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.
Iach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke!

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are afraid, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting: but I see you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return:—let there be covenants drawn between us: my mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match: here's my ring.

Post. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods, it is one.—If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours;—provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us.—Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy; she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced, —you not making it appear otherwise,—for your ill opinion and the assault you have made to her chastity you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand,—a covenant: we will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve: I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed. [Exeunt Post. and Iach.

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—BRITAIN. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Queen. Whilest yet the dew's on ground gather those flowers;
Make haste; who has the note of them?

I Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Despatch. [Exeunt Ladies.

Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay: here they are, madam: [Presenting a small box.

But I beseech your grace, without offence,—
My conscience bids me ask,—wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,
Which are the movers of a languishing death;
But, though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor, Thou ask'st me such a question. Have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so
That our great king himself doth woo me off
For my confections? Having thus far proceeded,— Unless thou think'est me devilish,—is't not meet
That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy compounds on such creatures as
We count not worth the hanging,—but none human,—
To try the vigour of them, and apply
Ailayments to their act; and by them gather
Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness
Shall from this practice but make hard your heart:
Besides, the seeing these effects will be
Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee. [Aside.

Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him
Will I first work: he's for his master,
And enemey to my son.—

Enter Pisanio.

How now, Pisanio!—
Doctor, your service for this time is ended;
Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam;
But you shall do no harm.

Queen. Hark thee, a word. [To Pisanio.
Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think she has strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit, and will not trust one of her malice with a drug of such damn’d nature. Those she has will stupefy and dull the sense awhile; [dogs, which first perchance she’ll prove on cats and then afterward up higher: but there is no danger in what show of death it makes, more than the locking up the spirits a time, to be more fresh, reviving. She is fool’d with a most false effect; and I the truer so to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor, until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave.

[Exit.]

Queen. Weeps she still, say’st thou? Dost thou think in time she will not quench, and let instructions enter where folly now possesses? Do thou work: When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son, I’ll tell thee on the instant thou art then as great as is thy master; greater,—for his fortunes all lie speechless, and his name is at last gasp: return he cannot, nor continue where he is: to shift his being is to exchange one misery with another; and every day that comes comes to decay a day’s work in him. What shall thou expect, to be depender on a thing that leans,—who cannot be new built, nor has no friends.

So much as but to prop him?—Thou tak’st up, thou know’st not what; but take it for thy labour:
It is a thing I made, which hath the king five times redeem’d from death: I do not know what is more cordial:—nay, I pr’ythee, take it; it is an earnest of a further good that I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how the case stands with her; do’st as from thyself. Think what a chance thou changest on; but think thou hast thy mistress still,—to boot, my son, who shall take notice of thee: I’ll move the king to any shape of thy preferment, such as thou’lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly, that set thee on to this desert, am bound to load thy merit richly. Call my women: Think on my words.

[Exit Pisanio.

The hand-fast to her lord.—I have given him that which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her of liers for her sweet; and which she after, except she bend her humour, shall be assur’d to taste of too.

Re-enter Pisanio and Ladies.

So, so;—well done, well done:
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses, bear to my closet.—Fare thee well, Pisanio; think on my words.

[Execut queen and Ladies.] And shall do:

But when to my good lord I prove untrue I’ll choke myself: there’s all I’ll do for you.

[Exit.]

SCENE VI.—BRITAIN. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. A father cruel and a step-dame false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady, [hand! That hath her husband banish’d;—O, that hus-
My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen, as my two brothers, happy! but most miserable is the desire that’s glorious: bless’d be those, how mean soe’er, that have their honest wills, which seasons comfort.—Who may this be? fie!

Enter Pisanio and Iachimo.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. The worthy Leonatus is in safety, and greets your highness dearly.

[Premits a letter.]

Imo. Thanks, good sir:
You’re kindly welcome.

Iach. [Aside.] All of her that is out of door if she be furnish’d with a mind so rare, she is alone the Arabian bird; and I have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend! arm me, audacity, from head to foot! or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight; rather directly fly.

Imo. [Reads.] He is one of the noblest note to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust. Leonatus.

So far I read aloud:
But even the very middle of my heart is war’d by the rest, and takes it thankfully.—
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.—
What, are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes
To see this vaulted arch, and the rich cope
Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above and the twinn’d stones
Upon th’ unnumber’d beach? and can we not Intuition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?
Iach. It cannot be i’ the eye; for apes and monkeys,
'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way and Contemn with mows the other; nor i’ the judge.
For idiots in this case of favour would
Be wisely definite; nor i’ the appetite;
Sluttery, to such neat excellence oppos’d,
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allur’d to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow?
Iach. The cloyed will,—
That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, [first
That tub both fill’d and running,—ravenging
The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps you? Are you well?
Iach. Thanks, madam; well.—Beseech you, sir, desire [To PISANIO.
My man’s abode where I did leave him: he
Is strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going, sir,
To give him welcome. [Exit.

Imo. Continues well my lord? His health, bring you?
Iach. Well, madam.

Imo. He is disposed to mirth? I hope he is.
Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger there
So merry and so g gamesome: he is call’d
The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here
He did incline to sadness; and oftentimes
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home: he furnaces [ton,—
The thick sighs from him: whilsts the jolly Bri—
Your lord, I mean,—laughs from ’s free lungs, cries, O, [knows
Can my sides hold, to think that man,—who
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be,—will his free hours languish for Assured bondage?

Imo. Will my lord say so?
Iach. Ay, madam; with his eyes in flood
With laughter.

It is a recreation to be by [heavens know,
And hear him mock the Frenchman. But,
Some men are much to blame.

Imo. Not he, I hope.
Iach. Not he: but yet heaven’s bounty towards him might
Be us’d more thankfully. In himself’tis much;
In you,—which I count his beyond all talents,— Whilst I am bound to wonder I am bound
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?
Iach. Two creatures heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?
You look on me: what wreck discern you in me
Deserves your pity?

Iach. Lamentable! What,
To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I’ the dungeon by a snuff?

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?
Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your—But
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on’t.

Imo. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me: pray you,— Since doubting things go ill often hurts more
Than to be sure they do; for certainties
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born,—discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the feeler’s soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here;—should I,—damn’d then,— Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands
Made hard with hourly falsehood,—falsehood as
With labour,—then bo-peeping in an eye
Base and unlustrous as the smoky light
That’s fed with stinking tallow,—it were fit
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I,
Inclin’d to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but ’tis your graces
That from my mutest conscience to my tongue
Charms this report out.
1mo. Let me hear no more.
Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my heart.
With pity that doth make me sick! A lady so fair, and fasten'd to an empery,
Would make the greatest king double,—to be partner'd
With tomboys, lir'd with that self-exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with disease'd ventures,
That play with all infirmities for gold! [stuff
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd
As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd;
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock.
1mo. Reveng'd!
How should I be reveng'd? If this be true,—
As I have such a heart that both mine ears
Must not in haste abuse,—if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?
Iach. Should he make me
Live like Diana's priest betwixt cold sheets,
While he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure;
More noble than that runagate to your bed;
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close as sure.
1mo. What ho, Pisanio!
Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.
1mo. Away!—I do condemn mine ears that have
So long attended thee.—If thou wert honourable Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st,—as base as strange.
Thou wrong'st a gentleman who is as far
From thy report as thou from honour; and Solicit'st here a lady that disdains
Thee and the devil alike.—What, ho, Pisanio!—
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit
A saucy stranger in his court to mart
As in a Romish stew, and to expound
His beastly mind to us,—he hath a court
He little cares for, and a daughter who
He not respects at all.—What, ho, Pisanio!—
Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say:
The credit that thy lady hath of thee [ness
Deserves thy trust; and thy most perfect good-
Her assurance.—Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir that ever
Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon.
I have spoke this to know if your alliance
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord
That which he is now o'er: and he is one
The truest manner'd; such a holy witch
That he enchants societies unto him;
Half all men's hearts are his.
1mo. You make amends.
Iach. He sits 'mongst men like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honour sets him off
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventure'd
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment.
In the election of a sir so rare, [him
Which you know cannot err: the love I bear
Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made you, [don. Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your par-
1mo. All's well, sir: take my power if the court for yours.
[got Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost for-
To entertain your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord, myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.
1mo. Pray, what is't?
Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord,— [sums
The best feather of our wing,—have mingled
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 'tis plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form; their values great;
And I am something curious, being strange
To have them in safe stowage: may it please you
To take them in protection?
1mo. Willingly;
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bedchamber.
Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you only for this night;
I must aboard to-morrow.
1mo. O, no, no. [word
Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my
By length'ning my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise
To see your grace.
1mo. I thank you for your pains:
But not away to-morrow!
Iach. O, I must, madam:
Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night;
I have outstood my time; which is material
To the tender of our present.
I will write.

Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept
And truly yielded you. You're very welcome.

[Exeunt]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—BRITAIN. Court before Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter Cloten and two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed the jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on’t; and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

2 Lord. [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtall his oaths,
ha?

2 Lord. No, my lord; [aside] nor crop the cars of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog!—I give him satisfaction?
Would he had been one of my rank!

2 Lord. [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool.

Clo. I am not vexed more at anything in the earth,—a pox on’t! I had rather not be so vaile as I am; they dare not fight me, because of the queen my mother: every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

2 Lord. [Aside.] You are cock and capon too;
and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Clo. Sayest thou?

1 Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence
to

Clo. No, I know that; but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that’s come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger, and I not know on’t!

2 Lord. [Aside.] He’s a strange fellow himself; and knows it not.

1 Lord. There’s an Italian come; and, ’tis thought, one of Leonatus’ friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he’s another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1 Lord. One of your lordship’s pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in’t.

1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. [Aside.] You are a fool granted; therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I’ll go see this Italian: what I have lost to-day at bowls I’ll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I’ll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt Cloten and first Lord.

That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this ass! a woman that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty, for his heart,
And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou enderst,—
Betwixt a father by thy stepdame govern’d:
A mother hourly coining plots; a wooer
More hateful than the foul expulsion is
Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
Of the divorce he’d make! The heavens hold
The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak’d
That temple, thy fair mind; that thou mayst
stand
To enjoy thy banish’d lord and this great land!

[Exit.

SCENE II.—BRITAIN. Imogen’s Bedchamber; in one part of it a Trunk.

IMOGEN in bed reading; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who’s there? My woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours, then: mine eyes are weak:
Fold down the leaf where I have left: to bed:
Take not away the taper, leave it burning;
And if thou canst awake by four of the clock,
I pray thee, call me. Sleep hath seiz’d me wholly.

[Exit Lady.

To your protection I commend me, gods!
From fairies and the tempters of the night
Guard me, beseech ye!

[Sleeps. Iachimo comes from the trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man’s o’erlabour’d sense
Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus
Did softly press the rushes ere he wake’d
The chastity he wounded.—Cytherea,
How bravely thou becom’st thy bed! fresh lily!
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!
But kiss; one kiss!—Rubies unparagon’d,
SCENE III.]

If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, is't not?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come: I am advised to give her music o' mornings; they say it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-conceived thing; after a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider.

SONG.

Hark, hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus' gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chalice'd flowers that lies);
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes;
With everything that pretty is:
My lady sweet, arise;
Arise, arise!

So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: if it do not, it is a vice in her ears; which horse-hairs and calves' guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend. [Execute Musicians.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late; for that's the reason I was up so early: he cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly.—

Enter Cymbeline and Queen.

Good-morrow to your majesty and to my gracious mother. [daughter?

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern
Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new;
She hath not yet forgot him: some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king,
Who lets go by no vantages that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself
To orderly solicits, and be friended
With aptness of the season; make denials
Increase your services; so seem as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which
You tender to her; that you in all obey her,
Save when command to your dismissal tends,
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless I not so.
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;
The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow.
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that’s no fault of his: we must receive him
According to the honour of his sender; [us,
And towards himself, his goodness forespent on
We must extend our notice.—Our dear son,
When you have given good-morning to your
mistress,
Attend the queen and us; we shall have need
To employ you towards this Roman.—Come, our queen.
[Exeunt Cym., Queen, Lords, and Mess.

Clo. If she be up, I’ll speak with her; if not,
Let her lie still and dream.—By your leave, ho!—
[Knocks.
I know her women are about her: what
If I do line one of their hands? ’Tis gold Which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and makes
Diana’s rangers false themselves, yield up
Their deer to the stand o’ the stealer; and ’tis gold [thief;
Which makes the true man kill’d and saves the Nay, sometimes hangs both thief and true man:
what
Can it not do and undo? I will make
One of her women lawyer to me; for
I yet not understand the case myself.
By your leave.
[Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who’s there that knocks?
Clo. A gentleman.
Lady. No more?
Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman’s son.
Lady. That’s more
Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours,
Can justly boast of. What’s your lordship’s pleasure?
Clo. Your lady’s person: is she ready?
Lady. Ay,
To keep her chamber.
Clo. There is gold for you; sell me your good report.
[of you
Lady. How! my good name? or to report
What I shall think is good?—The princess

Enter Imogen.

Clo. Good-morrow, fairest: sister, yoursweet hand.
Imo. Good-morrow, sir. You lay out too
For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still, I swear I love you.
Imo. If you but said so, ’twere as deep with me:
If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.
Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent, [faith,
I would not speak. I pray you, spare me:
I shall unfold equal discourtesy [knowing
To your best kindness: one of your great
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness ’twere my sin:
I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:
If you’ll be patient I’ll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady’s manners
By being so verbal; and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, dohere pronounce,
By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,—
To accuse myself,—I hate you; which I had rather
You felt than make’t my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For The contract you pretend with that base
wretch,—
One bred of alms and foster’d with cold dishes,
With scraps o’ the court,—it is no contract,
none:
And though it be allow’d in meaner parties,— Yet who than he more mean?—to knit their souls,—
On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggary,—in self-figur’d knot;
Yet you are curb’d from that enlargement by
The consequence o’ the crown; and must not soil
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A hilding for a livery, a squire’s cloth,
A pantler,—not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!
Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
But what thou art besides, thouwert too base
To be his groom: thouwert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if ’twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styl’d
The under-hangman of his kingdom; and hated
For being preferr’d so well.

Clo. The south fag rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more mischance than
come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meaneast garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
In my respect than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men.

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. His garment! Now, the devil,—
Imo. To Dorothy my woman he the present,—
Clo. His garment!
Imo. I am sprited with a fool;
Frighted, and anger'd worse.—Go, bid my woman
Search for a jewel that too casually
Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's; shrew
If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think
I saw't this morning; confident I am
Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kiss'd it;
I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.
Imo. I hope so: go and search.
[Exit PISANIO.

His meaneast garment?
Imo. Ay, I said so, sir:
If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't.
Clo. I will inform your father.
Imo. Your mother too:
She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,
But the worse of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent.
[Exit.

Clo. I'll be reveng'd:—
His meaneast garment!—Well.
[Exit.

SCENE IV.—ROME. An Apartment in Philario's House.

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would I were so sure
To win the king as I am bold her honour
Will remain hers.
Phi. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any; but abide the change of time
Quake in the present winter's state, and wish
That warmer days would come: in these scar'd hopes
I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.
Phi. Your very goodness and your company
O'erpays all I can do. By this your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do's commission througly: and I think He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,— Statist though I am none, nor like to be,—
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions now in Gallia sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more ordered than when Julius Caesar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at: their discipline,—
Now mingled with their courage,—will make known
To their approvers they are people such
That mend upon the world.

Phi. See! Iachimo!

Enter IACHIMO.

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land;
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.
Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.
Iach. Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.
Post. And therewithal the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.
Iach. Here are letters for you.
Post. Their tenor good, I trust.
Iach. 'Tis very like.
Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court
When you were there?
Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.
Post. All is well yet.—
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is 't not Too dull for your good wearing?
Iach. If I had lost it
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.
Post. The stone's too hard to come by.
Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.
Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.
Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant.
We were to question further: but I now.
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wringer
Of her or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.
Post. If you can make’t apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring is yours: if not, the soul opinion
You had of her pure honour gains or loses
Your sword or mine, or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.
Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe; whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which I doubt not You’ll give me leave to spare when you shall find
You need it not.
Post. Proceed.
Iach. First, her bedchamber,—
Where, I confess, I slept not; but profess Had that was well worth watching,—it was hang’d
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Loud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cyprian swell’d above the banks, or for
The press of boats or pride: a piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value; which I wonder’d
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on’t was,—
Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by me
Or by some other.
Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.
Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.
Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece
Chaste Dian bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves: the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.
Post. This is a thing
Which you might from relation likewise reap;
Being, as it is, much spoke of.
Iach. The roof o’ the chamber With golden cherubins is fretted: her andirons,—
I had forgot them,—were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands,
Post. This is her honour!—
Let it be granted you have seen all this,—and praise
Be given to your remembrance,—the description
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.
Iach. Then, if you can,
[Pulling out the bracelet.
Be pale; I beg but leave to air this jewel; see!—
And now ’tis up again: it must be married
To that your diamond, I’ll keep them.
Post. Jove!—
Once more let me behold it: is it that
Which I left with her?
Iach. Sir,—I thank her, that:
She stripp’d it from her arm; I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich’d it too: she gave it me, and said
She priz’d it once.
Post. Maybe she pluck’d it off
To send it me.
Iach. She writes so to you? doth she?
Post. O, no, no, no! ’tis true. Here, take this too;
[Give the ring.
It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on’t.—Let there be no honour
Where there is beauty; truth where semblance; love
Where there’s another man: the vows of women
Of no more bondage be to where they are made Than they are to their virtues; which is nothing.—
O, above measure false!
Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; ’tis not yet won:
It may be probable she lost it; or,
Who knows if one o’her women, being corrupted,
Hath stolen it from her?
Post. Very true;
And so I hope he came by’t.—Back my ring:
Rend’ring to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this; for this was stolen.
Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.
Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears. [sure
’Tis true,—nay, keep the ring,—’tis true: I am
She would not lose it: her attendants are All sworn and honourable:—they induc’d to steal it!
And by a stranger!—No, he hath enjoyed her:
The cognizance of her incontinency
Is this,—she hath bought the name of whose thus dearly.—
There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you!
Phi. Sir, be patient:
This is not strong enough to be believ’d
Of one persuaded well of,— Post. Never talk on’t;
She hath been colt’d by him.
Iach. If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast,—
Worthy the press, lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging: by my life,
I kiss'd it; and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?
Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.
Luc. Will you hear more?
Post. Spare your arithmetic: never count the Once, and a million!
Luc. I'll be sworn,—
Post. No swearing.
If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie:
And I will tell thee if thou dost deny
Thou'lt make me cuckold.
Luc. I'll deny nothing.
Post. O, that I had her here to tear her limb meal!
I will go there and do 't; if the court; before
Her father: I'1 do something,—[Exit.
Phil. Quite besides
The government of patience!—You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.
Luc. With all my heart. [Exit.

SCENE V.—ROME. Another Room in Philario's House.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women
Must be half-workers? We are all bastards:
And that most venerable man which I Did call my father was I know not where
When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools
Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother secund
The Dian of that time: so doth my wife
The nonpareil of this.—O, vengeance, vengeance!
Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd,
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with
A paddency so rosy, the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her
Achaste as unsunnd snow.—O, all the devils!
This yellow lichimo in an hour, was 't not?
Or less,—at first?—Perchance he spoke not,
but,
I like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,
Cried 'o! and mounted; found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
The woman's part in me! For there's no motion
That tends to vice in man but I affirm
It is the woman's part: be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers; [her;
 Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenge,
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
Nice longing, slanders, mutability,
All faults that have a name, nay, that hell knows,
Why, hers, in part or all; but rather all;
For ev'n to vice
They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
Detest them, curse them.—Yet his greater skill
In a true hate to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better.
[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—BRITAIN. A Room of State in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter, at one side, Cymbeline, Queen,
Clotho, and Lords; at the other Casar's
Lucius and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar with us? [brance yet
Luc. When Julius Caesar,—whose remembrance
Lives in men's eyes, and will to ears and tongues
Be theme and hearing ever,—was in this Britain,
And conquer'd it, Cassibalan, thine uncle,—
Famous in Caesar's praises no whit less Than in his feats deserving it,—for him
And his succession granted Rome a tribute Yearly three thousand pounds; which by true lively
Is left unattended.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Casars
Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself; and we will nothing say
For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity,
Which then they had to take from 's, to reserve
We have again.—Remember, sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors; together with
The natural bravery of your Isle, which stand's
As Neptune's park, ribbed and piled in
With rocks unscaleable and roaring waters;
With sands that will not bear your enemy's boats,
[conquest
But suck them up to the top-most. A kind of Cesar made here; I it made not here his bed;
Of came, and saw, and evermore with shame—
Cymbeline.

The first that ever touch’d him,—he was carried From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping,— Poor ignorant baubles!—on our terrible seas, Like egg-shells mov’d upon their surges, crack’d As easily ‘gainst our rocks: for joy whereof— The fam’d Cassibelan, who was once at point,— O, giglot fortune!—to master Caesar’s sword, Made Ludo’s town with rejoicing fires bright And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there’s no more tribute to be paid: our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Cæsars: other of them may have crooked noses; but to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say I am one; but I have a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know, Till the injurious Romans did extort This tribute from us, we were free: Cæsar’s ambition,— Which swell’d so much that it did almost stretch The sides o’ the world,—against all colour, here Did put the yoke upon’s; which to shake off Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be.

Clo. We do.

Cym. Say then to Cæsar, Our ancestor was that Mulmutius which Ordain’d our laws,—whose use the sword of Cæsar [franchise Hath too much mangled; whose repair and Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry:—Mulmutius made our laws, Who was the first of Britain which did put His brows within a golden crown, and call’d Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline, That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar,— Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants than Thyself domestic officers,—thine enemy: Receive it from me, then:—War and confusion In Cæsar’s name pronounce I’gainst thee: look For fury not to be resisted.—Thus defied, I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius. Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather’d honour; Which he to seek of me again, perferv, Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect That the Pannonians and Dalmatians for Their liberties are now in arms,—a precedent Which not to read would show the Britons cold: So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer: if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you; and there’s an end.

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master’s pleasure, and he All the remain is, welcome. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Britain. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Pisanio with a letter.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not What monster’s her accuser?—Leonatus! O master! what a strange infection Is fallen into thy ear! What false Italian,— As poisonous tongue as hanged,—hath prevail’d On thy too ready hearing?—Disloyal! No! She’s punish’d for her truth; and undergoes, More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults As would take in some virtue.—O my master! Thy mind to her is now as low as were Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder her? Upon the love, and truth, and vows which I Have made to thy command?—I, her?—her blood? If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look I, That I should seem to lack humanity So much as this fact comes to? [Reading.] Do’t: the letter

That I have sent her, by her own command Shall give thee opportunity:—O damn’d paper! Black as the ink that’s on thee! Senseless bauble, Art thou a sedary for this act, and look’st So virgin-like without? Lo, here she comes—I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. How now, Pisanio!

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord,— Leonatus?

O, learn’d indeed were that astronomer, That knew the stars as I his characters; He’d lay the future open. You good gods,
Let what is here contain’d relish of love,
Of my lord’s health, of his content,—yet not
That we two are asunder,—let that grieve him;
Some griefs are medicable; that is one of
them,
For it doth physic love;—of his content he
All but in that!—Good wax, thy leave:—bless’d
You bees that make these locks of counsel!
Lovers
And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike:
Though forfeits you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid’s tables.—Good news,
gods!

Justice, and your father’s wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would even renewe me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven:
what you own love will, out of this, advise you, follow. So he wishes you all happiness that remains loyal to his vow, and your,
in love,
Leonatus Posthumus.
O for a horse with wings!—Hearst thou,
Pisianio?
He is at Milford-Haven: read, and tell me
How far’tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day?—Then, true Pisanio,— Who long’st, like me, to see thy lord; who long’st—
O, let me haste—but not like me; yet long’st,
But in a fainter kind: O, not like me;
For mine’s beyond beyond,—say, and speak thick,—
Love’s councillor should fill the bores of hearing
To the smothering of the sense,—how far it is To this same blessed Milford: and, by the way,
Tell me how Wales was made so happy as
To inherit such a haven: but, first of all,
How we may steal from hence; and for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going
[hence:]
And our return, to excuse. But first, how get
Why should excuse be born or e’er begot?
We’ll talk of that hereafter. Pr’ythee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
’Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score ’twixt sun and sun,
Madam, ’s enough for you, and too much too.

Ino. Why, one that rode to’s execution, man, Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding
wagars,
Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That ran i’t the clock’s behalf;—but this is foolery:
Go bid my woman feign a sickness; say

She’ll home to her father: and provide me presently
A riding suit no costlier than would fit
A franklin’s housewife.

Pis. Madam, you’re best consider.

Ino. I see before me, man, not here, no here,
Nor what ensues; but have a fog in them
That I cannot look through. Away, I pr’ythee;
Do as I bid thee: there’s no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — WALES. A Mountainous Country with a Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such [gate

Whose roof’s as low as ours! Stoop, boys: this Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you
To a morning’s holy office: the gates of monarchs
Are arch’d so high that giants may jet through,
And keep their impious turbans on, without Good-morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven!
We house ’t the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.

Gut. Hail, heaven!

Arv. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now for our mountain sport: up to yond hill,
Your legs are young; I’ll tread these flats.

Cons. When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lesser and sets on:
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you
Of counts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
This service is not service so being done,
But being so allow’d: to apprehend thus
Draws us a profit from all things we see;
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing’d eagle. O, this life
Is nobler than attending for a check,
Richer than doing nothing for a bauble,
Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk:
Such gain the cap of him that makes ’em fine,
Yet keeps his book uncross’d: no life to ours.

Gut. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor unfledg’d,

[know not

Have never wing’d from view o’ the nest; nor
What air ’s from home. Haply this life is best,
If quiet life be best: sweeter to you
That have a sharper known; well corresponding With your stiff age: but unto us it is
A cell of ignorance: travelling abed,
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arv. What should we speak of
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how;
In this our pinching cage, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing:
We are beastly; subtle as the fox for prey;
Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat:
Our valour is to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Gut. How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the art of the court,
As hard to have as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery that
The fear's as bad as falling: the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame and honour; which dies i' the search,
And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph
As record of fair act; nay, many times
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must court'sy at the censure.—O, boys, this story
The world may read in me; my body's mark'd
With Roman swords; and my report was once
First with the best of note: Cymbeline lov'd me;
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: then was I as a tree [night
Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but in one
A storm or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gut. Uncertain favour?

Arv. My fault being nothing,—as I have told you oft,—[say'd
But that two villains, whose false oaths pre-
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline
I was confederate with the Romans: so
Follow'd my banishment; and this twenty years
This rock and these desmesnes have been my world:
Where I have liv'd at honest freedom; paid
More pious debts to heaven than in all
The fore-end of my time.—But up to the mountains!
This is not hunters' language.—He that strikes
The venison first shall be the lord of the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys. [Exeunt Gut. and Arv.

Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine: and though train'd up thus meanly
In the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do
The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things, to prize it much Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,—
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, who
The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out Into my story: say, Thus mine enemy fell,
And thus I set my foot on'ts neck; even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger brother, Cad-
Once Arviragus,—in as like a figure
Strikes life into my speech, and shows much more
His own conceiving. Hark, thegameisrons'd!—
O Cymbeline! heaven and my conscience knows
Thou didst unjustly banish me: whereon
At three and two years old, I stole these babes;
Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou reft'st me of my lands. Euriphe, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father. The game is up.
[Exit.

Scene IV. —Wales, near Milford-Haven.

Enter Pisanio and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand. —Ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first as I have now. —Pisanio! Man!
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From the inward of thee? One but painted thus
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: put thyself
Into a 'aviour of less fear, ere wildness
Vanquish my steadier senses. What's the matter?
Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with
A look unattended? If't be summer news,
Smile to't before; if winterly, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still. —My husband's hand!

That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-craftie'd him,
And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man; thy tongue
May take off some extremity; which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me as a wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. Thy mistress, Pisania, hath played the instrument in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surprizes; but from proof as strong as my grim and as certain as I expect my revenge.
That part thou, Pisania, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life; I shall give thee an opportunity at Milford Haven: she hath my letter for the purpose: where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the slander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword?
the paper
Hath cut her throat already.—No, 'tis slander; Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue
Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath
Rides on the post wind, and doth believe
All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,
Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters.—What cheer;
madam? [false?

Imo. False to his bed? What is it to be
To lie in watch there, and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? If sleep charge
nature,
To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? That's false to his bed,
Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady! [Iachimo,
Imo. I false! Thy conscience witness:—
Thou didst accuse me of incontinency;
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, me—
thinks,
Thy favour's good enough.—Some jay of Italy,
Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd
him:
Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
And for I am richer than to hang by the walls
I must be ripp'd: to pieces with me!—O,
Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,
By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
Put on for villany; not born where 't grows,
But worn a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false
Kneas, [weeping
Were, in his time, thought false: and Simon's

Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity
From most true wretchedness: so thou, Posthumus,
Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men;
Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjur'd
From thy great fail.—Come, fellow, be thou honest:

Do thou thy master's bidding: when thou see'st
A little witness my obedience: look!
I draw the sword myself: take it, and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:

Fear not; 'tis empty of all things but grief:
Thy master is not there; who was indeed
The riches of it: do his bidding: strike.
Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument?
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's: against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine [heart:
That cravens my weak hand. Come, here is my Something's afore't. — Soft, soft! We'll no defence;

Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! Thou shall no more Bestomachers to my heart. Thus may poor fools Believe false teachers: though those that are betray'd
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse ease of woe.

And thou, Posthumus, that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself
To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her
That now thou tir'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Pr'y thees, despach:
The lamb entreats the butcher: where's thy knife?

Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,
Since I receiv'd command to do this business
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eyeballs blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles with a pretence? This place?
Mine action and thine own? Our horses' labour?—
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court.
For my being absent; whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be inbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment; in which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Ino. Talk thy tongue weary: speak:
I have heard I am a strumpet; and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Ino. Most like,—
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be
But that my master is absid'd:
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Ino. Some Roman courtezan.

Pis. No, on my life:
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do: you shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Ino. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? where bide? how live?
Or in my life what comfort when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court,—

Ino. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple nothing,—
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Ino. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day,
night,
Are they not but in Britain? I' the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in't;
In a great pool a swan's nest: pr'ythee, think There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That which to appear itself must not yet be,
But by self-danger, you should tread a course Privy and full of view; yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus,—so nigh at least

That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

Ino. O, for such means,
Though peril to my modesty, not death can't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear and niceness,—
The handmaids of all women, or, more truly,
Woman its pretty self,—into a waggish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the waspel; nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it,—but, O, the harder heart!
Alack, no remedy!—to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan; and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Ino. Nay, be brief;
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit,—
'Tis in my cloak-bag,—doublet, hat, hose, all
That answer to them: would you, in their serving,
And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Lucius
Present yourself, desire his service, tell him
Wherin you are happy,—which you'll make
If that his head have ear in music,—doubtless
With joy he will embrace you; for he's honourable
And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad
You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplyment.

Ino. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Pr'ythee, away:
There's more to be consider'd; but we'll even
All that good time will give us: this attempt
I am soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell,
Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of [tress.
Your carriage from the court. My noble mis-
Here is a box; I had it from the queen;
What's in't is precious: if you are sick at sea
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper.—To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood:—may the gods
Direct you to the best!

Ino. Amen: I thank thee.

[Exit.]
Scene V.—Britain. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.

My emperor hath wrote; I must from hence; and am right sorry that I must report ye my master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir, will not endure his yoke; and for ourself to show less sovereignty than they, must needs appear ungallant.

Luc. So, sir, I desire of you a conduct over land to Milford-Haven.—Madam, all joy befall his grace and you.

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office; the due of honour in no point omit. So farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.

Clo. Receive it friendly: but from this time forth I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event is yet to name the winner: fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords, till he have cross'd the Severn.—Happiness!

[Execut Lucius and Lords.

Queen. He goes hence frowning: but it honours us that we have given him cause.

Clo. Tis all the better; your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor how it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely.

Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness: the powers that he already hath in Gallia will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves his war for Britain.

Queen. Tis not sleepy business; but must be look'd to speedily and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen, where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd the duty of the day: she looks us like a thing more made of malice than of duty: We have noted it.—Call her before us; for we have been too slight in sufferance.

Queen. Royal sir, since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord, 'tis time must do. Beseech your majesty, forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady so tender of rebukes that words are strokes, and strokes death to her.

Re-enter Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How can her contempt be answer'd?

Attent. Please you, sir, her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no answer. That will be given to the loud'st of noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her, she pray'd me to excuse her keeping close; whereeto constrain'd by her infirmity she should that duty leave unpaid to you. Which daily she was bound to proffer: this she wish'd me to make known; but our great court made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her door's lock'd? Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that which I fear prove false!

[Exit.

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king. [Exit, Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old ser-

I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.—[Exit Cloten.

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!—He hath a drug of mine; I pray his absence proceed by swallowing that; for he believes it is a thing most precious. But for her, where is she gone? Haply despair hath seiz'd or, wing'd with favour of her love, she's flown to her desire Posthumus: gone she is to death or to dishonour; and my end can make good use of either: she being down, I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter Cloten.

How now, my son!

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled. Go in and cheer the king; he rages; none dare come about him.

Queen. All the better: may this night forestall him of the coming day!—[Exit.

Clo. I love and hate her; for she's fair and royal, [quissete and that she hath all courtly parts more ex-

Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one the best she hath, and she, of all compounded, outsells them all.—I love her therefore: but, Disdaining me, and throwing favours on
The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgment
That what's else rare is chok'd; and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her. For when fools shall—

Enter PISANIO.

Who is here? What, are you packing, sirrah?
Come hither: ah, you precious pander! Villain,
Where is thy lady? In a word; or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O, good my lord!

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter—
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord,
How can she be with him? When was she miss'd?

He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer;
No further halting: satisfy me home
What is become of her.

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain!
Discover where thy mistress is at once,
At the next word,—no more of worthy lord,— Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.

Clo. Let's see't.—I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. [Aside.] Or this or perish.
She's far enough; and what he learns by this
May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Hum!

Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen,
Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again!

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't.—
Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry,—that is, what villany soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly,—
I would think thee an honest man: thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me?—for since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine,—wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse.
Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven!—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remembrance anon:
even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these garments were come.
She said upon a time,—the bitterness of it I now beech from my heart,—that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour,
which will then be a torment to her contempt.
He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body,—and when my lust hath dined,—which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,—to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is 't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee.—
My revenge is now at Milford: would I had wings to follow it!—Come, and be true.

[Exit.

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss: for true to thee
Were to prove false, which I will never be,
To him that is most true. To Milford go,
And find not her whom thou pursu'st.—Flow, flow,
You heavenly blessings on her!—This fool's speed
Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his meed!

[Exit.
SCENE VI.—WALES. Before the Cave of Belarius.

Enter Imogen, in boy's clothes.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one:
I have tire'd myself; and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick,
But that my resolution helps me.—Milford,
When from the mountain-top Tisania show'd thee,
Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I think
Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me
I could not miss my way: will poor folks lie,
That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis
A punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true: to lapse in fulness
Is sorrier than to lie for need; and Falsehood
Is worse in kings than beggars.—My dear lord!
Thou art one of the false ones: now I think on thee
My hunger's gone; but even before, I was
At point to sink for food.—But what is this?
Here is a path to 't; 'tis some savage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call: yet famine,
Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant.
Plenty and peace breeds cowards; hardness ever
Of hardiness is mother.—Ho! who's here?
If anything that's civil, speak; if savage,
Take or lend.—Ho!—No answer? then I'll enter.

Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't.

Such a foe, good heavens! [Goes into the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman,
And are master of the feast: Cadwal and I
Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match:
The sweat of industry would dry and die
But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs
Will make what's homely savoury: weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when restive sloth
Finds the down pillow hard.—Now, peace be here,
Poor house, that keep'st thyself!

Gui. There is cold meat in the cave; we'll Browse on that
Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.
Bel. Stay; come not in.

[Looking into the Cave.

But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, sir?
Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not,
An earthly paragon!—Behold divinity;
No elder than a boy!

Re-enter Imogen.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not:
Before I enter here I call'd; and thought
To have begg'd or bought what I have took:
Good truth,
I have stol'n nought; nor would not, though
I had found
Gold strew'd o' the floor. Here's money for My meat:
I would have left it on the board, so soon
As I had made my meal; and parted
With prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth?
Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dust!
And 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you are angry:
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died had I not made it.

Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven.

Bel. What's your name?

Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford;
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am fallen in this offence.

Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth, hink us no churls, nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd!
'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart; and thanks to stay and eat it.—
Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. 'Ere you a woman, youth,
I should woo hard but be your groom.—In honesty
I'd bid for you as I do buy.

Arv. I'll make't my comfort
He is a man; I'll love him as my brother:—
And such a welcome as I'd give to him,
After long absence, such as yours:—most welcome!

Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends, if brothers.—[Aside.] Would it had been so that they
Had been my father's sons! then had my prize
Been less; and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. Would I could free't!

Arv. Or I; whate'er it be,
What pain it cost, what danger! gods!

Bel. Marly, boys. [Whispering.

Ino. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them,— laying by
That nothing gift of differing multitudes,—
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods!
I'll change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus' false.

Bel. It shall be so.
Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth, come in:
Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arv. The night to the owl and morn to the dark less welcome.

Ino. Thanks, sir.

Arv. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt.

Scene VII.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter two Senators and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenor of the Emperor's wit:
That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians,
And that the legions now in Gallia are Fell weak to undertake our wars against
The fallen-off Britons, that do incite
The gentry to this business. He creates
Lucius pro-consul: and to you, the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commends
His absolute commission. Long live Cæsar!

1 Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

2 Sen. Ay.

1 Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1 Sen. With those legions
Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy
Must be supplyant: the words of your commission
Will tie you to the numbers, and the time
Of their despatch.

1 Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Wales. Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, Belarius, Guiderius,
Arviragus, and Imogen.

Bel. [To Imogen.] You are not well: remain here in the cave;
We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. [To Imogen.] Brother, stay here:
Are we not brothers?

Ino. So man and man should be;
But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting. I'll abide with him.

Ino. So sick I am not,—yet I am not well;
But not so citizen a wanton as [me;
To seem to die ere sick: so please you, leave
Stick to your journal course: the breach of custom
Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by Cannot amend me: society is no comfort
To one not sociable: I am not very sick,
Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me here:
I'll rob none but myself; and let me die,
Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it:
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do love my father.

Bel. What? how! how!
Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault: I know not why
I love this youth; and I have heard you say
Lovelace's reason's without reason: the bier at door,
And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say
My father, not this youth.

Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain!
O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
Cowards father cowards, and base wrack base:
Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace.
I'm not his father; yet who this should be Dostth miracle itself, lovd before me.
'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn.

Arv. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arv. You health,—so please you, sir.

Arv. [Aside.] These are kind creatures.

Gods, what lies I have heard!
Our courtiers say all's savage but at court:
Experience, 0, thou disprovest report!
The imperious seas breed monsters; for the dish,
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
I am sick still; heart-sick.—I am no
I'll now taste of thy drug. [Swallows some.

Gui. I could not stir him:
He said he was gentle, but unfortunate;
D. honestly afflicted, but yet honest. [after

Bel. Thus did he answer me; yet said here:
I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field!
We'll leave you for this time: go in and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our housewife.

Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you.

Bel. And shall be ever.

[Exit Imogen into the Case.

This youth, how'er distress'd, appears he hath had Good ancestors.

Arv. How angel-like he sings!

Gui. But his neat cookery! He cut our roots in characters;
And sauce'd our broths as Juno had been sick,
And he her dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh,—as if the sigh
Was that it was for not being such a smile:
The smile mocking the sigh that it would fly
From so divine a temple to commix
With winds that sailors ral at.

Gui. I do note,
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs together.

Arv. Grow, patience!
And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine!
His perilous root with the increasing vine!

Bel. It is great morning. Come, away!—
Who's there?

Enter Cloten.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that villain Hath mock'd me. I am faint.

Bel. Those runagates!
Means he not us? I partly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush.
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he. We are held as outlaws: hence!

Gui. He is but one: you and my brother search
What companies are near: pray you, away;
Let me alone with him.

[Exit Belarius and Arviragus.

Clo. Soft!—What are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?
I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?

Gui. A thing More slavish did I ne'er than answering
A slave without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain: yield thee, thief.

Gui. To whom? to thee? What art thou? have not I

An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art,
Why I should yield to thee?

Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, maketh thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence, then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loth to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name?
Cl. Clo. Cloten, thou villain.
Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name, I cannot tremble at it; were it toad, or adder, spider, 'Twould move me sooner.

Cl. To thy further fear; Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know I'm son to the queen.

Gui. I'm sorry for't; not seeming so worthy as thy birth.

Cl. Art not afraid?

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear,—the wise:
It fools I laugh, not fear them.

Cl. Die the death:
When I have slain thee with my proper hand, I'll follow those that even now fled hence, And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads: Yield, rustic mountaineer. [Exeunt fighting.

Re-enter Belarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No company's abroad.
Arv. None in the world: you did mistake him, sure.

Bel. I cannot tell: long is it since I saw him, But time hath nothing blur'd those lines of favour Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice, And burst of speaking, were as his: I am absolute 'Twas very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them: I wish my brother make good time with him, You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up, I mean to man, he had not apprehension Of roaring terrors; for defect of judgment Is oft the cure of fear.—But, see, thy brother.

Re-enter Guiderius with Cloten's head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse,— There was no money in't: not Hercules Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none: Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne My head as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?
Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's head, Son to the queen, after his own report; Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore, With his own single hand he'd take us in, I'll take our heads where,—thank the gods!— they grow, And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose But that he swore to take, our lives? The law Protects not us: then why should we be tender, To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us; Play judge and executioner all himself, For do we fear the law? What company Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul Can we set eye on, but in all safe reason He must have some attendants. Though his humour Was nothing but mutation,—ay, and that From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have raved, To bring him here alone: although perhaps It may be heard at court that such as we Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time May make some stronger head: the which he hearing,— As it is like him,—might break out, and swear He'd fetch us in'; yet is't not probable To come alone, either he so undertaking [fear, Or they so suffering: then on good ground we If we do fear this body hath a tail More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance Come as the gods foresay it: howsoe'er, My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword, Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en His head from him: I'll throw 't into the creek Behind our rock; and let it to the sea, And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten: That's all I reck. [Exeunt.

Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd; Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done't! though valour Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. Would I had done't, So the revenge alone pursued me!—Polydore, I love thee brotherly; but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would revenges, [just through, That possible strength might meet, would seek And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done:— We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger Where there's no profit. I pr'ythee, to our rock; You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay Till haste Polydore return, and bring him To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
Scene II.

Cymbeline.

I'll willingly to him: to gain his colour
I'd let a parish of such Cloten's blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine nature, how thyself thou blazon'st
In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood encafl'd, as the rud'st wind
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonder
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd; honour untainted;
Civility not seen from other; valour
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd. Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter Guiderius.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpell down the stream,
In embassy to his mother: his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn music.

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother
It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys
Is jollity for apes and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms
Of what we blame him for!

Re-enter Arviragus, bearing Imogen as dead
in his arms.

Arv. The bird is dead
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch,
Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one half so well
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O melancholy
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The ooze to show what coast thy sluggish crare
Might easiest harbour in?—Thou blessed thing!
Jove knows what man thou might'st have made;
but I,

Thou diest, a most rare boy, of melancholy!
How found you him?

Arv. Stark, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at: his right cheek
Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where?

Arv. O the floor;
His arms thus leagu'd: I thought he slept; and Put rudeness
My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers,
Whilst summer lasts and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: thou shalt not lack
The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose; or
The azure hare-bell, like thy veins; no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock would,
With charitable bill,—O bill, sore shaming
Those rich-left heirs that let their fathers lie
Without a monument!—bring thee all this;
Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are none,

To winter-ground thy corse.

Gui. Pr'ythee, have done;
And do not play in wen-ch-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt.—To the grave!

Arv. Say, where shall's lay him?

Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arv. Be't so:
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,
As once our mother; use like note and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee;
For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.

Arv. We'll speak it, then.

Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less:
for Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys:
And though he came our enemy, remember,
He was paid for that: thou mean and mighty,
rotting
Together, have one dust, yet reverence,—
That angel of the world,—doth make distinction Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely;
And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.

Thersites' body is as good as Ajax',
When neither are alive.

Avr. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst.—Brother, begin.

[Exit Belarius.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;
My father hath a reason for't.

Avr. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on, then, and remove him.

Avr. So.—Begin.

SONG.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rage;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages:
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Avr. Fear no more the frown o' the great;
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke:
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;
Gui. Fear not slander, censure rash;
Avr. Thou hast finish'd joy and mean:
Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. No exorciser harm thee!
Avr. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!
Gui. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!
Avr. Nothing ill come near thee!
Both. Quiet consummation have;
And renown be thy grave!

Re-enter Belarius with the body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obsequies: come, lay him down.
[night, more:

Bel. Here's a few flowers; but 'bout mid-
The herbs that have on them dew o' the night faces.—
Are strewings fitt'st for graves.—Upon their
You were as flowers, now wither'd: even so
These herblets shall, which we upon you strew.—
Come on, away: apart upon our knees.
The ground that gave them first has them again:
Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

[Exit Bel., Gui., and Avr.

Jmo. [Awaking.] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven;
which is the way?

I thank you.—By you bush?—Pray, how far thither?

Ods pittikins! can it be six mile yet?—
I have gone all night. Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

But, soft! no bedfellow:—O gods and goddesses!

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;
This bloody man, the care on 't.—I hope I dream;
For so I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures: but 'tis not so;
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the brain makes of fumes: our very eyes
Are sometimes, like our judgments, blind.

Good faith,
I tremble still with fear: but if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
The dream's here still: even when I wake it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.

A headless man!—The garments of Posthumus!
I know the shape of's leg: this is his hand;
His foot Mercurial: his Martial thigh;
The brawns of Hercules: but his jovial face—
Murder in heaven?—How!—'Tis gone.—Pisanio,

All curses maddened! Icuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspir'd with that irregulous devil, Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord.—To write and read
Be henceforth treacherous!—Damn'd! Pisanio
Hath with his forged letters, damn'd! Pisanio,—
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top!—O Posthumus! alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Ay me!
where's that?
Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left thy head on.—How should this be?
Pisanio?

'Tis he and Cloten: malice and lure in them
Have laid this woe here. O 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
The drug he gave me, which he said was precious
And cordial to me, have I not found it? home
Murderous to the senses? That confirms it
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!—
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrider may seem to those
Which chance to find us: O, my lord, my lord!

Enter Lucius, a Captain and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them, the legions garrison'd in Gallia,
After your will, have cross'd the sea: attending
You here at Milford-Haven with your ships:
They are in readiness.
Scene II.—Britain. A Room in Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, Pisanio, and Attendants.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how ’twixt her and her son; a fever with the absence of her son;

[Exit an Attendant.

A madness, of which her life’s in danger,—Heavens, How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen, The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen Upon a desperate bed, and in a time When fearful wars point at me; her son gone, So needful for this present: it strikes me, past The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow, Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we’ll enforce it from thee By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours, [tress, I humbly set it at your will: but, for my mis- I nothing know where she remains, why gone, Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness, Hold me your loyal servant.
Lord. [To PISANIO.] Nay, than there Lord. Lord. Aye many. For Cloten,— There wants no diligence in seeking him, And will no doubt be found. Cym. The time is troublesome,— We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy Does yet depend. Lord. So please your majesty, The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn, Are landed on your coast; with a supply Of Roman gentlemen by the senate sent. Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!— I am amazed with matter. Lord. Good my liege, Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of: come more, for more you're ready: The want is but to put those powers in motion That long to move. Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw, And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us; but We grieve at chances here.—Away! [Exeunt all but PISANIO.

Pis. I heard no letter from my master since I wrote him Imogen was slain: 'tis strange; Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise To yield me often tidings; neither know I What is betid to Cloten; but remain Perplex'd in all: the heavens still work. Wherein I am false I am honest; not true to be true: These present wars shall find I love my country, Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them. All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd; Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. [Exit.

SCENE IV. — WALES. Before the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it. Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope Have we in hiding us? this way the Romans Must or for Britons slay us or receive us For barbarous and unnatural revolts During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons, We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us, To the king's party there's no going: newness Of Cloten's death,—we being not known, not muster'd Among the bands,—may drive us to a render Where we have liv'd; and so extort from's That which we've done, whose answer would be death, Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt In such a time nothing becoming you Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely That when they hear the Roman horses neigh, Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes And ears so clays'd importantly as now, That they will waste their time upon our note, To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known Of many in the army: many years, Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him From my remembrance. And, besides, the king Hath not deserv'd my service nor your loves; Who find in my exile the want of breeding The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd, But to be still hot summer's tanlings and The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Than be so, Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army: I and my brother are not known; yourself So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown, Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines, I'll thither: what thing is it that I never Did see man die! scarce ever look'd on blood, But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison! Never bestrid a horse, save one that had A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel Nor iron on his heel! I am asham'd To look upon the holy sun, to have The benefit of his blessed beams, remaining So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens, I'll go: If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave, I'll take the better care; but if you will not, The hazard therefore due fall on me by The hands of Romans!

Arv. So say I,—Amen.

Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set So slight a valuation, should reserve My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys!
If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead.—[Aside.] The time seems long;
their blood thinks scorn
Till it fly out, and show them princes born.
[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—BRITAIN. A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter Posthumus with a bloody handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for
I wish'd
Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married
one,
If each of you should take this course, how many
Must murder wives much better than themselves
For wryng but a little! O Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands:
No bond but to do just ones.—Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I ever
Had liv'd to put on this: so had you sav'd
The noble Imogen to repent; and struck Me, wretch more worth your vengeance. But alack,
You snatch some hence for little faults; that's
love,
To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the doers' thirst.
But Imogen is your own: do your best wills,
And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought hither
Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'tis enough
That, Britain, I have kil'd thy mistress; peace!
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens,
Hear patiently my purpose:—I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life is every breath a death; and thus unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More service in me than my habits show.
Gods, put the strength of the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise of the world, I will begin
The fashion,—less without and more within.
[Exit.]

SCENE II.—BRITAIN. A Field between the Camps.

Enter, at one side, Lucius, Iachimo, Imogen, and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army; Leonatus Posthumus following it like a poor soldier. They march over and go out. Alarums. Then enter again, in skirmish, Iachimo and Posthumus: he vanquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't
Revealing enfeebles me; or could this ear,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours borne
As I wear mine are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This out as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men, and you are gods.
[Exit.]

The battle continues; the Britons fly; Cymbeline is taken; then enter to his rescue Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground;
The lane is guarded: nothing routs us but
The villany of our fears.

Guu. and Arv. Stand, stand, and fight!
Re-enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britons:
they rescue Cymbeline, and exent. Then re-enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save ythysel;
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hoodwink'd.
Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-enforce or fly
[Exit.]

SCENE III.—BRITAIN. Another part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus and a British Lord.

Lord. Canst thou from where they made the stand?
Post. I did:
Though you, it seems, come from the flyers.

Lord. I did.
Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,
But that the heavens fought: the king himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying
Through a straight lane; the enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work
More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling Merely through fear; that the strait path was
With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living,
To die with lengthen'd shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?
Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf,
Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,—
An honest one, I warrant; who deserv'd
So long a breeding a: his white beard came to,
In doing this for 's country;—athwart the lane
Lie, with two striplings,—lads more like to run
The country bas: than to commit such slaughter;
With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame,—
Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,
Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men:
To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards!

Stand;
Or we are Romans, and will give you that
Like beasts which you shun beastly, and may save,
But to look back in frown: stand, stand!—
These three,
Three thousand confident, in act as many,—
For three performers are the file when all
The rest do nothing,—with this word, Stand, stand!
Accommodated by the place, more charming
With their own nobleness,—which could have turn'd
A distaff to a lance,—gilded pale looks,
Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some,
Turn'd coward
But by example,—O, a sin in war
Damn'd in the first beginners!—'gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like lions
Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
A stop i' the chaser, a retire; anon
A rout, confusion thick: forthwith they fly,
Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles; slaves,
[cowards,—
The strides they victors made: and now our Like fragments in hard voyages,—became
The life o' the need; having found the back-open [wound! Of the unguarded hearts, heavens, how they
Some slain before; some dying; some their friends
O'erborne i' the former wave: ten chas'd by one
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
Those that would die or ere resist are grown
The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance,—
A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys!
Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon't,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane,
Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.
Post. 'Lack, to what end?
Who dares not stand his foe I'll be his friend;
For if he'll do as he is made to do
I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you're angry.

Post. Still going?—This is a lord! 'O noble misery,—
To be in the field and ask what news of me!
To-day how many would have given their honour:
To have sav'd their carcasses! took heed to do't,
And yet die too! I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death where I did hear him groan, [monster,
Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly
'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,
Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we
That draw his knives i' the war.—Well, I will find him:
For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resum'd again
The part I came in: fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind that shall [is Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter
Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take: for me, my ransom's death;
On either side I come to spend my breath;
Which neither here I'll keep nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken:
'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels.
2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
That gave the affront with them.

1 Cap. So 'tis reported:
But none of 'em can be found.—Stand! who's there?

Post. A Roman;
Who had not now been drooping here if seconds
Had answer'd him.

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!—
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell What crows have peck'd them here:—he brags his service,
As if he were of note: bring him to the king.
Enter Cymbeline attended; Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanius, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler: after which all go out.

Scene IV.—Britain. A Prison.

Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.

1 Gaol. You shall not now be stolen, you have locks upon you;
So, graze as you find pasture.

2 Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.

[Exeunt Gaolers.]

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art
a way,
I think, to liberty: yet am I better. [rather Than one that's sick o' the gout; since he had Groan so in perpetuity than be cur'd
By the sure physician death, who is the key
To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd [give me
More than my shanks and wrists: you good gods,
The penitent instrument to pick that bolt,
Then free for ever! Is't enough I am sorry
So children temporal do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desir'd more than constrain'd: to satisfy,
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me than my all.
I know you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement: that's not my desire:
For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it:
'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp;
Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being yours: and so, great powers,
If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds.—O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence. [Sleeps.

Solemn Music. Enter, as in an apparition, Sicilius Leonatus, father to Posthumus, an old man attired like a warrior, leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife and mother to Posthumus, with music before them: then, after other music, follow the two young Leonati, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds, as they died in the wars. They circle Posthumus round as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies:

With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending nature's law:
Whose father then,—as men report
Thou orphans' father art,—
Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ripp'd,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair
That he deserv'd the praise o' the world
As great Sicilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel;
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was hemock'd,
To be exil'd, and thrown
From Leonati' seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck and scorn
O' the other's villany?

2 Bro. For this from stiller seats we came,
Our parents and us twain,
That, striking in our country's cause,
Fell bravely and were slain;
Our fealty and Tenantius' right
With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due;
Being all to dolours turn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise
Upon a valiant race thy harsh
And potent injuries.
Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.
Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help;
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest
Against thy deity.

Both Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

Jupiter descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle: he throws a thunderbolt.
The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low,
Offend our hearing; hush!—Now dare you ghosts
Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers;
Be not with mortal accidents oppress'd;
No care of yours it is; you know 'tis ours.
Whom best I love I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in Our temple was he married.—Rise, and fade!—
He shall be lord of Lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine:
And so away: no further with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.—
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Ascends.

Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle
Stoop'd, as to foot us: his ascension is
More sweet than our bless'd fields: his royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloys his beak,
As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter!
Sici. The marble pavement closes, he isenter'd
His radiant roof.—Away! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest.

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot
A father to me; and thou hast created
A mother and two brothers: but, O scorn!
Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born.
And so I am awake.—Poor wretches that depend
On greatness' favour dream as I have done,
Wake and find nothing.—But, alas, I swerve:
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I,

That have this golden chance, and know not why.

What fairies haunt this ground? A book? Oh Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment,Nobler than that it covers; let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise.

[Reads.] Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking fund, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

'Tis still a dream; or else such stuff as madmen Tongue, and brain not: either both or nothing: Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such As sense cannot untie. Be what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaoler.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death?
Post. Over-roasted rather; ready long ago.
Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir: if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.
Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir. But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills; which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty,—the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: O, of this contradiction you shall now be quit.—O, the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge:—your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquaintance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die than thou art to live.

Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache: but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer; for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.

Gaol. Your death has eyes in's head, then:
I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know: or jump the after-inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink and will not use them.

Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bringest good news,—I am called to be made free.

Gaol. I'll be hanged, then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead.

[Exeunt Post. and Messenger.

Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too that die against their wills; so should I if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O, there were desolation of gaolers and gallowses! I speak against my present profit; but my wish hath a preferment in't.

[Exit.

SCENE V.—Britain. Cymbeline's Tent.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart That the poor soldier that so richly fought, Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast Stepp'd before targets of proof, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw
Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
Such precious deeds in one that promis'd naught But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living;
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am

The heir of his reward, which I will add To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain,

[To Bel., Guir., and Arv.]

By whom I grant she lives. 'Tis now the time To ask of whence you are:—report it.

Bel. Sir,

In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen: Further to boast were neither true nor modest, Unless I add we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees.

Arise my knights o' the battle: I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There's business in these faces.—Why so sadly Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king! To sour your happiness, I must report The queen is dead.

Cym. Would this report become? But I consider By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life; Which, being cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd I will report, so please you: these her women Can trip me if I err; who with wet cheeks Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Pr'ythee, say.

Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; only Affected greatness got by you, not you: Married your royalty, was wife to your place; Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this;
And but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore a hand to love With such integrity, she did confess Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life, But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate friend! Who is't can read a woman?—Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had For you a mortal mineral; which, being took, Should by the minute feed on life; and, lingering, By inches waste you: in which time she pur-pos'd,

By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show; and in time, When she had fitted you with her craft, to work
Her son into the adoption of the crown:
But, failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes: repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effect'd; so,
Despairing, died.

Cyn. Heard you all this, her women?
I Lady. We did, so please your highness.
Cyn. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart
That thought her like seeming; it had been vicious
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me thou mayst say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded; Posthumus behind, and Imogen.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute; that
The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss
Of many a bold one, whose kinsmen have made
That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter
Of their captives, which ourself have
So, think of your estate. [day

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the
Was yours by accident; had it gone with us
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd
Our prisoners with the sword. But since the Gods
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficeth
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer:
Augustus lives to think on't: and so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat; my boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd: never master had
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like; let his virtue join
With my request, which I'll make bold your highness
Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm
Though he have serv'd a Roman: save him, sir,
And spare no blood beside.

Cyn. I have surely seen him:
His favour is familiar to me.—
Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own.—I know not why nor
wherefore
To say live, boy: ne'er thank thy master; live:
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it;
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad;
And yet I know thou wilt.

Cyn. No, no: alack,
There's other work in hand: I see a thing
Bitter to me as death: your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me,
He leaves me, scorns me: briefly die their joys
That place them on the truth of girls and boys:—
Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cyn. What wouldst thou, boy?
I love thee more and more: think more and more [on? speak,
What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st
Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me Than I to your highness; who, being born your vassal,
Am something nearer.

Cyn. Wherefore ey'st him so?

Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cyn. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cyn. Thou 'rt my good youth, my page;
I'll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely.

[Cyn. and Imo. converse apart.

Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?

Arv. One sand another
Not more resembles that sweet rosy lad
Who died, and was Fidele.—What think you?

Gui. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear;
Creatures may be alike: were 't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. [Aside.] It is my mistress:
Since she is living, let the time run on
To good or bad.

[Cyn. and Imo. come forward.

Cyn. Come, stand thou by our side;
Make thy demand aloud.—[To Iach.] Sir,
step you forth;
Give answer to this boy, and do it freely;
Or, by our greatness and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnor the truth from falsehood.—On, speak
to him.

Imo. My boon is that this gentleman may
Of whom he had this ring.
Post. [Aside.] What's that to him?

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say, I how came it yours?

Iach. Thou 'lt torture me to leave unspoken Which to be spoke would torture thee.

Cym. How! me?

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that which Torments me to conceal. By villany I got this ring: 'twas Leonatus' jewel, Whom thou didst banish; and,—which more may grieve thee, As it doth me,—a nobler sir ne'er liv'd 'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter.— For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits Quail to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength:
I had rather thou shouldst live while nature will Than die ere I hear more: strive, man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time,—unhappy was the clock That struck the hour!—it was in Rome,—accurs'd would The mansion where!—'twas at a feast,—O, Our viands had been poison'd, or t least Those which I heav'd to head!—the good Posthumus,—

What should I say? he was too good to be Where ill men were; and was the best of all Amongst the rar'st of good ones,—sitting sadly, Hearing us praise our loves of Italy For beauty that made banter the swell'd boast Of him that best could speak; for feature laming The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva, Postures beyond brief nature; for condition, A shop of all the qualities that man Loves woman for; besides that hook of wiving, Fairness which strikes the eye,—

Cym. I stand on fire:
Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly.—This Posthumus,— Most like a noble lord in love, and one That had a royal lover,—took his hint; And not disparising whom we prais'd,—therein He was as calm as virtue,—he began His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made, And then a mind put in't, either our brags Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description Prov'd us un-speaking sots.
Post. Shall’s have a play of this? Thou scornful page.
There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls.

Pis. O, gentlemen, help! [mus! My Lord Posthumous, thine eye and thine arm is turned away from me:
Mine and your mistress!—O, my lord Posthumous,
You never felt my heart till now. Help, help!—
Mine honour’d lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?
Post. How come these staggering on me?
Pis. Wake, my mistress!

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
To death with mortal joy.
Pis. How fares my mistress?
Imo. O, get thee from my sight;
Thou gav’st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!

Cym. Breathe not where princes are.
Pis. The tune of Imo.

The gods throw stones of sulfur on me if
That box I gave you was not thought by me.
A precious thing: I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still?
Imo. It poison’d me.
Pis. O gods!—

I left out one thing which the queen confess’d,
Which must approve the honest: If Pisanius
Have, said she, given his mistress that confection
Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv’d
As I would serve a rat.

Cym. What’s this, Cornelius?

Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun’d me
To temper poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta’en, would cease
The present power of life; but in short time
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions.—Have you ta’en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
You had a motive for it.

[To Guiderius and Arviragus.

Cym. My tears that fall
Prove holy water on thee! Imo.

Thy mother’s dead.

Imo. I am sorry for ‘t, my lord.

Cym. O, she was taught; and long of her it was
That we meet here so strangely: but her son
Is gone, we know not how nor where.
Pis. My lord,

Now fear is from me, I’ll speak troth. Lord Cloten,
Upon my lady’s missing, came to me
With his sword drawn; foam’d at the mouth, and swore,
If I discover’d not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident
I had a feigned letter of my master’s
Then in my pocket; which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master’s garments,
Which he enforce’d from me, away he posts
With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate
My lady’s honour: what became of him
I further know not.

Gui. Let me end the story:

Bel. I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods foresee’d!

I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: pr’ythee, valiant youth,
Deny’t again.

Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince. [me

Gui. A most incivil one: the wrongs he did
Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the sea,
If it could so roar to me: I cut off’s head;
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee:

Bel. By thine own tongue thou art condemn’d, and must Endure our law: thou’rt dead.

Imo. That headless

Cym. I thought had been my lord.

Bind the offender,

And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king:

This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself; and hath
More of thee merited than a band of Cloten
Had ever scar’d. Let his arms alone;

[To the Guard.

They were not born for bondage.
Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?
Arv. In that he spake too far.
Cym. And thou shalt die for't.
Bel. We will die all three:
But I will prove that two on's are as good
As I have given out him.—My sons, I must,
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.
Arv. Your danger's
Ours.
Gui. And our good his.
Bel. Have at it, then!—
By leave,—thou hast, great king, a subject who Was call'd Belarius.
Cym. What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.
Bel. If it is that hath Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how a traitor.
Cym. Take him hence:
The whole world shall not save him.
Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all so soon,
As I have receiv'd it.
Cym. Nursing of my sons!
Bel. I am too blunt and saucy: here's my knee:
Ere I arise I will prefer my sons;
Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege,
And blood of your begetting.
Cym. How! my issue!
Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,
Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment
Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes,—
For such and so they are,—these twenty years
Have I train'd up: those arts they have as I Could put into them; my breeding, was, sir, as Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphele,
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't;
Having receiv'd the punishment before
For that which I did then: beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason: their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world:
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew I for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.
Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st.
The service that you three have done is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children:
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.
Bel. Be pleas'd awhile.—
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius;
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son; he, sir, was happ'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,
I can with ease produce.
Cym. Guiderius had Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.
Bel. This is he;
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp:
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.
Cym. O, what, am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother
Rejoic'd deliverance more.—Bless'd may you be,
That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now!—O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.
Imo. No, my lord;
I have got two worlds by't.—O my gentle brothers,
Have we thus met? O, never say hereafter
But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother
When I was but your sister; I you brothers
When you were so indeed.
Cym. Did you e'er meet?
Arv. Ay, my good lord.
Gui. And at first meeting lov'd;
Continued so until we thought he died.
Cor. By the queen's dran she swallowed.
Cym. O rare instinct!
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment
Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in.—Where? how liv'd you?
And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with your brothers? how first met
them?
[These, Why fled you from the court? and whither?
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded;
And all the other by-dependencies, [place
From chance to chance: but nor the time nor CYMBELINE. [ACT V.

Will serve our long inter'gatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen; And eye
She, like harmless lightning, throws her
On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting
Each object with a joy: the counterchange
Is severally in all.—Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.—
Thou art my brother; so we'll hold thee ever.

[To BELARSIUS.

Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve me,
To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'erjoy'd,
Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd
The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching; 'twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd.—That I was he, Speak, Iachino: I had you down, and might Have made you finish.

Iach. I am down again: [Kneeling.
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech
you,
Which I so often owe: but your ring first;
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you: live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd!
We'll learn our farness of a son-in-law;
Pardon's the word to all.

Avr. You holp us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my lord
Call forth your soothsayer: as I slept, methought
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back,
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd I found
This label on my bosom: whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness that I can Make no collection of it: let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus.—

Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] Whenas a lion's whelp shall,
To himself unknown, without seeking find,
And be embraced by a piece of tender air;
And when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches,
Which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much:
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

[To CYMBELINE.

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mulier: which mulier I divine
Is this most constant wife; who even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee: and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth, who, by Belarius stol'n,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd; whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
By peace we will begin:—and, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Caesar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wanted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
Whom heavens, in justice both on her and hers,
Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision,
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant,
Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams of the sun
Sovanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle,
The imperial Caesar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shin'd here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods;
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils
From our bless'd altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward: let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together; so through Lud's town march:
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there!—Never was a war did cease, Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace.

[Exeunt.
Act I.

Scene 1.—Rome. Before the Capitol.

The Tomb of the Andronici appearing: the Tribunes and Senators aloft. Enter, below, Saturninus and his followers on one side, and Bassianus and his followers on the other, with drums and colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right, Defend the justice of my cause with arms; And, countrymen, my loving followers, Plead my successive title with your swords: I am the first-born son that was the last That wore the imperial diadem of Rome: Then let my father's honours live in me, Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans,—friends, followers, favourers of my right,— If ever Bassianus, Caesar's son, Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome, Keep, then, this passage to the Capitol; And suffer not dishonour to approach The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate, To justice, continence, and nobility: But let desert in pure election shine; And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus aloft, with the crown.

Marc. Princes,—that strive by factions and by friends

| SATURINUS, Son to the late Emperor of Rome, and afterwards declared Emperor. | AEMILIUS, a noble Roman. |
| BASSIANUS, Brother to SATURNINUS, in love with LAVINIA. | ALARBUS, |
| TITUS ANDRONICUS, a noble Roman, General against the Goths. | DEMETRIUS, Sons to TAMORA. |
| MARCUS ANDRONICUS, Tribune of the People, and Brother to Titus. | CHIRON, |
| LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, Young LUCIUS, a Boy, Son to LUCIUS. | AARON, a Moor, beloved by TAMORA. |
| PUBLIUS, Son to MARCUS the Tribune. | A Captian, Tribune, Messenger, and Clown,—Romans. |
| TAMORA, Queen of the Goths. | Goths and Romans. |
| LAVINIA, Daughter to Titus Andronicus. | TAMORA, Queen of the Goths. |
| A Nurse, and a black Child. | LAVINIA, Daughter to Titus Andronicus. |
| Kinsmen of Titus, Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants. | A Nurse, and a black Child. |

AMBITION.
Thy noble brother Titus and his sons,
And her to whom my thoughts are humbled all,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends;
And to my fortunes and the people's favour
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exeunt the Followers of BAS.

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,
I thank you all, and here dismiss you all;
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and the cause.

[Exeunt the Followers of SAT.

Rome, he as just and gracious unto me
As I am confident and kind to thee.—
Open the gates, tribunes, and let me in.
Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.

[Flourish. Enter Titus and BAS. go up into the Capitol.

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans, make way. The good Andronicus,
Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion,
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd
From where he circumscribed with his sword,
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Flourish of trumpets, &c. Enter Martius and Mutius; after them two Men bearing a coffin covered with black; then LUCIUS and QuINTUS. After them Titus ANDRONICUS; and then Tamora, with Alarbus, Demetrius, Chiron, Aaron, and other Goths, prisoners; Soldiers and People following.
The bearers set down the coffin, and Titus speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds!
Lo, as the bark that hath discharge'd her fraught
Returns with precious loading to the bay
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,
Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears,—
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.—
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!—
Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that King Priam had,
Behold the poor remains, alive and dead!
These that survive let Rome reward with love;
These that I bring unto their latest home,
With burial amongst their ancestors:
Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my sword.
Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?—
Make way to lay them by their brethren.—

[The tomb is opened.

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars!
O sacred receptacle of my joys,
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more!

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths,
That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh
Before this earthly prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you,—the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren!—Gracious conqueror,
Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son;
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O, think my son to be as dear to me!
Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs and return,
Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets
For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O, if to fight for king and common weal
Were piety in thine, it is in these.
Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood:
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them, then, in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge:
Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.
These are their brethren, whom you Goths beheld
Alive and dead; and for their brethren slain
Religiously they ask a sacrifice:
To this your son is mark'd; and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight;
And with our swords, upon a pile of wood
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.

[Exeunt Luc., Quin., Marc., and Mut., with Alarbus.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!
Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dom. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.
Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive
To tremble under Titus' threatening looks,
Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope with I
The self-same gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy
With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,
May favour Tamora, the queen of Goths,—
When Goths were Goths and Tamara was queen,—
To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd
Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entails feed the sacrificing fire,
Whosesmoke like incense doth perfume the sky,
Remaineth naught but to inter our brethren,
And with loud laments welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.
[Trumpets sounded and the coffin laid in the tomb.
In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned grudges; here are no storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:

Enter Lavinia.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Luc. In peace and honour live Lord Titus long;
My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo, at this tomb my tributary tears
I render for my brethren's obsequies;
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome:
Oh, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud!

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd
The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!—
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Enter, below, Marcus Andronicus and Tribunés; re-enter Saturninus, Bassianus, and Attendants.

Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus.

Marc. And welcome, nephews, from success—
You that survive and you that sleep in fame!

Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your swords;
But safer triumph is this funeral pomp
That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.—
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,
This palliament of white and spotless hue;
And name thee in election for the empire
With these our late-deceased emperor's sons:
Be candidatus, then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness:
What, should I don this robe and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamations to-day,
To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all?
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully,
And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country:
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world:
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou

Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right;—
Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor,—
Andronicus, would thou were shipp'd to hell
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to thee
Thine own, [selves.

The people's hearts, and wean them from them.
Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die:
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankful be; and thanks to men
Of noble minds is honourable meed.

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes
I ask your voices and your suffrages:
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you: and this suit I make,
That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this commonweal:
Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say, Long live our emperor!

Marc. With voices and applause of every sort,
Patricians and plebeians, we create
Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor;
And say, Long live our emperor Sat: nine!

A long flourish.

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
To us in our election this day
I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness;
And for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my empress,
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her espousé:
Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and in this
I hold me highly honour'd of your grace:
And here, in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,—
King and commander of our commonweal,
The wide world's emperor,—do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;
Presents well worthy Rome's imperial lord:
Receive them, then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!
How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts
Rome shall record; and when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. [To TAMORA.] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;
To him that for your honour and your state
Will use you nobly and your followers.

Sat. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue
That I would choose were I to choose anew.—
Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance:
Though chance of war hath wrought this change
of cheer,
Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome:
Princely shall be thy usage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: madam, he comforts you
Can make you greater than the Queen of Goths.—

Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this?

Lav. Not I, my lord; sith true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia.—Romans, let us go:
Ransomless here we set our prisoners free:

Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum.

[Flourish. Sat. courts TAMORA in dumb show.

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine.

Seizing LAVINIA.

Tit. How, sir! are you in earnest, then, my lord?

Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolv'd withal
To do myself this reason and this right.

Marc. Suum cuique is our Roman justice:
This prince in justice seizeth but his own.

Luc. And that he will and shall, if Lucius live.

peror's guard?—

Tit. Traitors, avaunt!—Where is the em-

Treason, my lord,—Lavinia is surpris'd!

Sat. Surpris'd! by whom?

Bas. By him that justly may
Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.

Exeunt Bas. and MAR. with LAV.

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,

And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.

Exeunt LUC., QUIN., and MAR.

Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What, villain boy!

Barr'st me my way in Rome?

[Stabbing MUTIUS.

Mut. Help, Lucius, help?

[Dies.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust; and more than so,
In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou nor he are any sons of mine;

My sons would never so dishonour me:

Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor.

Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife,

That is another's lawful promis'd love.

Exit.

Sat. No, Titus, no; the emperor needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock:
I'll trust by leisure him that mocks me once;
Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
Confederates all thus to dishonour me.
Was there none else in Rome to make a stale
But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus,
Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine,
That said'st I begg'd the empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these?

Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that chang.
To him that flourish'd for her with his sword;
A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy;

Act I.
One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,
To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart. [Goths,—

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of
That, like the stately Phoebe 'mongst her nymphs,
Dost overshine the gallant'st dames of Rome,—
If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,
Rehob, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,
And will create thee empress of Rome.
Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?
And here I swear by all the Roman gods,— Sith priest and holy water are so near,
And tapers burn so bright, and everything
In readiness for Hymenaeus stand,— i will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
Or climb my palace, till from forth this place
I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear,
If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths,
She will a handmaid be to his desires,
A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon.—Lords, accompany
Your noble emperor and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine,
Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered:
There shall we consummate our spousal rites:
[Exeunt Sat. and his Followers; Tam. and her sons; Aaron and Goths.

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.—
Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,
Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs?

Re-enter Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Marius.

Marc. O Titius, see, O see what i thou hast done!
In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,—
Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed
That hath dishonour'd all our family;
Unworthy brother and unworthy sons!

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes;
Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb;—
This monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified:
Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors
Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls:—
Bury him where you can, he comes not here.

Marc. My lord, this is impiety in you:
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him;
He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. and Mart. And shall, or him we will accompany. [that word?

Tit. And shall! What villain was it spake Quin. He that would vouch it in any place but here. [spite?

Tit. What, would you bury him in my de-
Marc. No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest, [wounded:
And with these boys mine honour thou hast
My foes I do repute you every one;
So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Marc. He is not with himself; let us withdraw.

Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.
[Marcus and the Sons of Titus kneel.
Marc. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead,— [speak,—

Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature
Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us
all,—

Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter
His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause:
Thou art a Roman,—be not barbarous.
The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax,
That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son
Did graciously plead for his funerals:
Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise:
The dismall'est day is this that e'er I saw,
To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!—
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.
[Mutius is put into the tomb.

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,
Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb.

All. [Kneeling.] No man shed tears for noble Mutius;
He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Marc. My lord,—to step out of these dreary cumps,—
How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths
Is of a sudden thus advance'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus; but I know it is,— Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell:
Is she not, then, beholden to the man
That brought her for this high good turn so far?

Marc. Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.
Flourish. Re-enter, at one side, Saturninus attended; Tamora, Demetrius, Chiron, and Aaron: at the other, Bassianus, Lavinia, and others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play’d your prize:

God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride!

Bas. And you of yours, my lord! I say no more,

Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have power,

Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own,

My true-betrothed love, and now my wife? But let the laws of Rome determine all;

Meanwhile I am possess’d of that is mine. [us;

Sat. ’Tis good, sir: you are very short with

But if we live we’ll be as sharp with you.

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,

Answer I must, and shall do with my life.

Only thus much I give your grace to know,—

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,

This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here,

Is in opinion and in honour wrong’d,

That, in the rescue of Lavinia,

With his own hand did slay his youngest son,

In zeal to you, and highly mov’d to wrath

To be controll’d in that he frankly gave:

Receive him, then, to favour, Saturnine,

That hath express’d himself, in all his deeds,

A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds:

’Tis thou and those that have dishonour’d me.

Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge

How I have lov’d and honour’d Saturnine!

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora

Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,

Then hear me speak indifferently for all;

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What, madam! be dishonour’d openly,

And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome

forbend

I should be author to dishonour you:

But, on mine honour dare I undertake

For good Lord Titus’ innocence in all,

Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs:

Then at my suit look graciously on him;

Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,

Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.—

My lord, be rul’d by me, be won at last;

Aside.

Dissemble all your griefs and discontents:

You are but newly planted in your throne;

Lest, then, the people and patricians too,

Upon a just survey, take Titus’ part,

And so suppliant you for ingratitude,—

Which Rome reputed to be a heinous sin,—

Yield at entreats; and then let me alone.

I’ll find a day to massacre them all,

And raze their faction and their family,

The cruel father and his traitorous sons,

To whom I sued for my dear son’s life;

And make them know what ’tis to let a queen

Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.—

Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Andronicus,—

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart

That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath prevail’d.

Tit. I thank your majesty and her, my lord:

These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,

A Roman now adopted happily,

And must advise the emperor for his good.

This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;—

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,

That I have reconcile’d your friends and you.—

For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass’d

My word and promise to the emperor

That you will be more mild and tractable.

And fear not, lords,—and you, Lavinia,—

By my advice, all humbled on your knees,

You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do; and vow to heaven and to his highness

That what we did was mildly as we might,

Tendering our sister’s honour and our own.

Marc. That on mine honour here I do protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no more.

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends:

The tribunal and his nephews kneel for grace;

I will not be denied: sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake and thy brother’s here,

And at my lovely Tamora’s entreats,

I do remit these young men’s heinous faults:

Stand up,—

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,

I found a friend; and sure as death I swore,

I would not part a bachelor from the priest.

Come, if the emperor’s court can feast two brides,

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty

To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound we'll give your grace bonjour.
Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning's flash;
Advance'd above pale envy's threatening reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hill;
So Tamora:
Upon her will doth earthly honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart and fit thy thoughts
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long
Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains,
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.
Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made empress.
To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
This syren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwreck and his commonwealth's—
Holla! what storm is this?

Enter Demetrius and Chiron braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge
And manners, to intrude where I am græc'd;
And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.
Chri. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all;
And so in this, to bear me down with braves.
'Tis not the difference of a year or two
Makes me less gracious or thee more fortunate:
I am as able and as fit as thou
To serve and to deserve my mistress' grace;
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,
And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. [Aside.] Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvis'd,
Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate grown to threat your friends?

Go to; have your lath glu'd within your sheath
Till you know better how to handle it. [have,
Chri. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I
Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.
Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave?

[They draw.

Aar. [Coming forward.] Why, how now, lords!
So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly?
Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge:
I would not for a million of gold
The cause were known to them 'tis most concerns;
Nor would your noble mother for much more
Lie so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.
For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and withal
Thrust these reproachful speeches down his throat.
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.
Chri. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd,— [tongue,
Foul-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy
And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

Aar. Away, I say!—
Now, by the gods that warlike Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.—
Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous
It is to jet upon a prince's right?
What, is Lavinia, then, become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd
Without controlment, justice, or revenge?
Young lords, beware! and should the empress know
[please.
This discord's ground, the music would not Chri. I care not, I, knew she and all the world:
I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meanner choice:
Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are you mad? or know ye not in Rome
How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brook competitors in love?
I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chri. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose to achieve her whom I love.
Aar. To achieve her!—I know
Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore may be won;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.
What, man! more water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know:
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

_Aar._ [Aside.] Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.

_Dem._ Then why should he despair that knows to court it
With words, fair looks, and liberality?
What, hast not thou full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

_Aar._ Why, then, it seems some certain snatch or so
Would serve your turns.

_Chi._ Ay, so the turn were serv'd.

_Dem._ Aaron, thou hast hit it.

_Aar._ Would you had hit it too!
The 1 should not be tir'd with this ado,
Why, hark ye, hark ye,—and are you such fools
To square for this? Would it offend you, then,
That both should speed?

_Chi._ Faith, not me.

_Dem._ Nor me, so I were one.

_Aar._ For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar:
'Tis policy and stratagem must do
That you affect; and so must you resolve
That what you cannot as you would achieve,
You must perforce accomplish as you may.
Take this of me,—Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.
A speedier course than lingering languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.
My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand;
There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:
The forest-walks are wide and spacious;
And many unfrequented plots there are Tittered by kind for rape and villany:
Single you thither, then, this dainty doe,
And strike her home by force if not by words:
This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.
Come, come, our empress, with her sacred wit
To villany and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend;
And she shall file our engines with advice
That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
But to your wishes' height advance you both.
The emperor's court is like the house of fame,
The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears:
The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull;
There speak and strike, brave boys, and take your turns;
There serve your lust, shadow'd from heaven's
And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

_Chi._ Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

_Dem._ Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream
To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,
_Per Styga, per manes velor._

_SCENE II._—A Forest near Rome: a Lodge seen at a distance. Horns and cry of hounds heard.

_Enter Titus Andronicus, with Hunters, &c.,
Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius._

_Tit._ The hunt is up, the morn is bright and gay,
The fields are fragrant, and the woods are green.
Uncouple here, and let us make a bay,
And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,
And rouse the prince, and ring a hunter's peal,
That all the court may echo with the noise.
Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the emperor's person carefully:
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

_Horns wind a peal._ Enter Saturninus,
Tamora, Bassianus, Lavinia, Demetrius, Chiron, and Attendants.

_Many good-morrows to your majesty;—
Madam, to you as many and as good:—
I promised your grace a hunter's peal._

_Sat._ And you have rung it lustily, my lord;
Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

_Bas._ Lavinia, how say you?

_Laz._ I say no;
I have been abroad awake two hours and more.

_Sat._ Come on, then, horse and chariots let us have,
And to our sport,—[To Tamora.] Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting.

_Marc._ I have dogs, my lord,
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top.

_Tit._ And I have horse will follow where the game
Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

_Dem._ Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse
nor hound,
But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.

[Exeunt._

_SCENE III._—A lonely part of the Forest._

_Enter Aaron with a bag of gold._

_Aar._ He that had wit would think that I had none,
To bury so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me so abjectly
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villany:
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest
[Hides the gold.
That have their arms out of the empress' chest.

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherfore look'st thou sad
When every thing doth make a gleeble boast?
The birds chant melody on every bush;
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun;
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground:
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down and mark their yelping noise;
And,—after conflict such as was supposed
The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,—
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;
Whiles hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds
Be unto us as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
Saturn is dominator over mine:
What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence and my cloudy melancholy,
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls
Even as an adder when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution?
No, madam, these are no venereal signs,
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora,—the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee,—
This is the day of doom for Bassianus:
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day;
Thy sons make palliate of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll.—
Now question me no more,—we are espied;
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!

Aar. No more, great empress, Bassianus
Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be.

[Exit.

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's roy empress,
Unfinish'd of her well-beseeming troop?
Or is it Dian, habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy groves
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps!
Had I the power that some say Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Acteon's; and the hounds
Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,
Unmannerly intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning;
And to be doubted that your Moor and you
Are singled forth to try experiments:
[day!
Jove shield your husband from his hounds to—
'Tis pity they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cimmerian
Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, detested, and abominable.
Why are you sequester'd from all your train,
Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor,
If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport,
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness,—I pray you, let us hence,
And let her joy her raven-colour'd love;
This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bas. The king my brother shall have note of this.

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him
Good king, to be so mightily abus'd!

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!
Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?

These two have 'tis'd me hither to this place:
A barren detested vale you see it is;
The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
O'ercome with moss and baleful mistletoe:
Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,
Unless the nightly owl or fatal raven:
And when they show'd me this abhorred pit
They told me, here at dead time of the night
A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,
Would make such fearful and confused cries
As any mortal body hearing it
Should straight fall mad or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale
But straight they told me they would bind me here
Unto the body of a dismal yew,
And leave me to this miserable death:
And then they call'd me foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms
That ever ear did hear to such effect:
And had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me they had executed.
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.
Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs Bassianus.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.

[Also stabs Bas., who dies.

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis,—nay, barbarous Tamora,
For no name fits thy nature but thy own!
Tam. Give me thy poniard;—you shall know,
your boys;
Your mother's hand shall right your mother's Dem. Stay, madam; here is more belongs to her;
First thrust the corn, then after burn the
This minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And shall he carry this unto her grave?
Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.
Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,
Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.
Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.

Come, mistress, now performe we will enjoy
That nice, preserved honesty of yours.
Lav. O Tamora! thou beart a woman's Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her!
Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but
Dem. Listen, fair madam: let it be your
To see her tears; but be your heart to them
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.
Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach
0, do not learn her wrath,—she taught it thee;
The milk thou suck'ldst from her did turn to marble;
Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.—
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike:
Do thou entreat her show a woman pity.

[To Chiron.
Re-enter Aaron, with Quintus and Martius.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before:
Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit
Where I espied the panther fast asleep.
Quin. My sight is very dull, whate’er it bodes.
Mart. And mine, I promise you; were ’t not for shame,
Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.
[Falls into the pit.

Quin. What, art thou fallen?—What subtle hole is this, [briers,
Whose mouth is cover’d with rude-growing
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood
As fresh as morning’s dew distill’d on flowers?
A very fatal place it seems to me.— [fall?
Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the Mart. O brother, with the drossmallst object hurt
That ever eye with sight made heart lament!
Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to find them here,
That he thereby may give a likely guess
How these were they that made away his brother. [Exit.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out
From this unhallow’d and blood-stained hole?
Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear;
A chilling sweat o’er-runs my trembling joints;
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.
Mart. To prove thou hast a true divining
heart,
Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.
Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate
heart
Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise:
O, tell me how it is; for ne’er till now
Was I a child to fear I know not what.
Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter’d lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.
Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know
’tis he?
Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring that lights all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man’s earthly cheeks,
And shows the ragged entrails of the pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus
When he by night lay bath’d in maiden blood.
O brother, help me with thy fainting hand,—
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,—

Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocytus’ misty mouth.
Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;
Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluck’d into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus’ grave.
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.
Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.
[again,
Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not lose
Till thou art here aloft, or I below:
Thou canst not come to me,—I come to thee.
[Falls in.

Enter Saturninus with Aaron.

Sat. Along with me: I’ll see what hole is
here,
And what he is that now is leap’d into it.—
Say, who art thou that lately didst descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?
Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus,
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead. [jest:
Sat. My brother dead! I know thou dost but
He and his lady both are at the lodge
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
’Tis not an hour since I left him there.
Mart. We know not where you left him all alive;
But, out, alas! here have we found him dead.

Re-enter Tamora, with Attendants; TITUS
ANDRONICUS and Lucius.

Tam. Where is my lord the king?
Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev’d with killing grief.
Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?
Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound:
Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.
Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ, [Giving a letter.
The complot of this timeless tragedy;
And wonder greatly that man’s face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.
Sat. [Reads.] An if we miss to meet him handsomely,—
Sweet huntsman, Bassianus ’tis we mean,—
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him:
Thou know’st our meaning. Look for thy reward
Among the nettles at the elder tree
Which overshades the mouth of that same pit
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.
Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.
O Tamora! was ever heard the like?—
This is the pit and this the elder tree:—
Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.

[Showing it.]

Sat. [To Titus.] Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life.—
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison:
There let them bide until we have devis'd
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,—
Accursed if the fault be prov'd in them,—

Sat. If it be prov'd! you see it is apparent.—
Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail;
For, by my father's reverend tomb, I vow
They shall be ready at your highness' will
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see thou follow me.— [murderers:

Some bring the murder'd body, some the
Let them not speak a word,—the guilt is plain;
For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,
That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king:
Fear not thy sons; they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them.

[Exeunt several. Attendants bearing the body.

Scene IV.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Demetrius and Chiron, with Lavinia ravished; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, and if thy tongue can speak,
Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee.

Chir. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so,
And if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe.

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrawl. [hands.

Chir. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy

And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Dem. If thou hast hands to help thee knit.

[Exeunt Dem. and Chir.]
ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome.  A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with Martius and Quintus bound, passing on to the place of execution; Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. I hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent in dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept; For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed; For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd; And for these bitter tears, which now you see Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks; Be pitiful to my condemned sons, Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought. For two-and-twenty sons I never wept, Because they died in honour's lofty bed. For these, good tribunes, in the dust I write [Throwing himself on the ground.

My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad tears: Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite; My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

[Exeunt Sen., Trib., &c., with the prisoners.

O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain, That shall distil from these two ancient ruins, Than youthful April shall with all his showers: In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still; In winter, with warm tears I'll melt the snow, And keep eternal spring-time on thy face, So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter Lucius with his sword drawn.

O reverend tribunes! O gentle aged men! Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death; And let me say, that never wept before, My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain: The tribunes hear you not, no man is by; And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead.—Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you.

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did They would not mark me; or if they did mark They would not pity me; yet plead I must, And bootless unto them. Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones; Why, though they cannot answer my distress, Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale: When I do weep they humbly at my feet Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me; And were they but attired in grave weeds Rome could afford no tribune like to these. A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones; A stone is silent, and offiendeth not,— And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death. [Kisses. But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn? [Death:

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their For which attempt the judges have pronounce'd My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended thee.

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers? Tigers must prey; and Rome affords no prey But me and mine: how happy art thou, then, From these devourers to be banished!— But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep; Or if not so, thy noble heart to break: I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it then.

Marc. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ay me! this object kills me! [Her—

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight? What fool hath added water to the sea, Or brought a fagot to bright-burning Troy?

My grief was at the height before thou came'st; And now, like Nilus, it di-daineth bounds. Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too; For they have sought for Rome, and all in vain; And they have nurs'd this woe in feeding life; In bootless prayer have they been held up, And they have serv'd me to effectless use: Now all the service I require of them Is that the one will help to cut the other.— 'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands; For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?

Marc. O, that delightful engine of her thoughts, That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence, Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage, Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear!

Luc. O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed?
Marc. O, thus I found her, straying in the park,
Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer
That hath receiv'd some unrecurring wound.

Tit. It was my deere; and he that wounded her
Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me dead:
For now I stand as one upon a rock,
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea;
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
Expecting ever when some envious surge
Will in his brinish bowls swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sons are gone;
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man;
And here my brother, weeping at my woes:
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.—

Had I but seen thy picture in this plight
It would have madd'd me: what shall I do
Now I behold thy lively body so?
Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,
Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:
Thy husband he is dead; and for his death
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.—

Look, Marcus!—ah, son Lucius, look on her!
When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears
Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey dew
Upon a gather'd fly almost wither'd.

Marc. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband:
Perchance because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,
Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.—
No, no; they would not do so foul a deed;
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.—

Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;
Or make some sign how I may do thee ease:
Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain,
Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks
How they are stain'd, as meadows, yet not dry,
With miry slime left on them by a flood?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we cut away our hands like thine
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows
Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues,
Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wonder'd at in time to come.

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for at your grief
See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Marc. Patience, dear niece.—Good Titus, dry thine eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine
own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs:
Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee:
His napkin, with his true tears all betew,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
O, what a sympathy of woe is this,—
As far from help as limbo is from bliss!

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor
Sends thee this word,—that if thou love thy sons,
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand
And send it to the king: he for the same
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive;
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O gracious emperor! O gentle Aaron!
Did ever raven sing so like a lark
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?
With all my heart I'll send the emperor
My hand:
Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?

Luc. Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine,
That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent: my hand will serve the turn:
My youth can better spare my blood than you;
And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.

Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
And rear'd aloof the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?
O, none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath been but idle; let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death;
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along,
For fear they die before their pardon come.

Marc. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go!

Tit. Sirs, strive no more: such wither'd herbs
As these
Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son,
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Marc. And for our father's sake and mother's care,
Now let me show a brother's love to thee.
TITUS. Agree between you; I will spare my hand.

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Marc. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them both:
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. [Aside.] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never whilst I live deceive men so:—
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say ere half an hour pass.
[He cuts off Titus's hand.

Re-enter Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Now stay your strife: what shall be is despatch'd.

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:
Tell him it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers; bid him bury it;
More hath it merited,—that let it have.
As for my sons, say I account of them
As jewels purchas'd at an easy price;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus: and for thy hand
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee:—
Their heads I mean. O, how this villany

[Aside.

Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it!
Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron wilt have his soul black like his face.

[Exit.

Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth:
If any power pities wretched tears,
To that I call!—[To Lavinia.] What wilt thou kneel with me?

Do, then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers;
Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim,
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Marc. O brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom?
Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Marc. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes:
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threatening the welkin with his black swoln face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil?
I am the sea; hark, how her sighs do flow!

She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd:
For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.
Then give me leave; for losers will have leave
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid
For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons;
And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back,—
Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd:
That woe is me to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my father's death.

Marc. Now let hot AETNA cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell!
These miseries are more than may be borne.
To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal;
But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet detested life not shrink thereat!
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe!

Marc. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfortless
As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end?

Marc. Now, farewell, flattery: die, Andronicus; heads,

Thou dost not slumber; see thy two sons!
Thy warlike hand, thy mangled daughter here;
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,
Even like a stony image, cold and numb.
Ah ! now no more will I control thy griefs:
Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight
The closing up of our most wretched eyes:

Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha! [this hour.

Marc. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed:
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watery eyes,
And make them blind with tributary tears:
Then which way shall I find revenge's cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me I shall never come to bliss.
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

[ACT III.

Till all these mischiefs be return’d again
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do.—
You heavy people circle me about,
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.—
The vow is made.—Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I bear.
Lavinia, thou shalt be employ’d in these things;
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.
As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:
On to the Goths, and raise an army there:
And if you love me, as I think you do,
Let’s kiss and part, for we have much to do.

{Exit Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble
father,—
The woefullst man that ever liv’d in Rome;
Farewell, proud Rome; till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life:
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;
O, would thou wert as thou ’tore hast been!
But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives
But in oblivion and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will requite thy wrongs,
And make proud Saturnine and his empress
Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power
To be reveng’d on Rome and Saturnine.

Exit.

A Banquet set out.

Enter Titus, Marcus, Lavinia, and Young
Lucius, a boy.

TITUS. So, so; now sit: and look you eat no more
Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus, unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot:
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want ourhands,
And cannot passionate our tenfold woe With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast;
And when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.—
Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!

{To Lavinia.

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.

Wound it with sighing, girl; kill it with groans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole,
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
May run into that sink, and, soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears.

MARC. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay
Such virulent hands upon her tender life.

TITUS. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?
Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.
What violent hands can she lay on her life?
Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands;—
To bid Æneas tell the tale ‘twice o’er
How Troy was burnt and he made miserable?
O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still that we have none.—
Fie, fie, how frantically I square my talk,—
As if we should forget we had no hands,
If Marcus did not name the word of hands!—
Come, let’s fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this.— Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she says;—
I can interpret all her martyr’d signs;—
She says she drinks no other drink but tears, Brew’d with her sorrow, mesh’d upon her cheeks:—
Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect
As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to
heaven,
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I of these will wrest an alphabet, [ing.
And by still practice learn to know thy mean—

Y. LUC. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments:
Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

MARC. Alas, the tender boy, in passion mov’d,
Doth weep to see his grandsire’s heaviness.

TITUS. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears,
And tears will quickly melt thy life away,—

MARCUS strikes the dish with a knife.

What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

MARC. At that that I have kill’d, my lord,— a fly.

TITUS. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill’st my
heart;
Mine eyes are cloy’d with view of tyranny:
A deed of death done on the innocent
Becomes not Titus’ brother: get thee gone;
I see thou art not for my company.

MARC. Alas, my lord, I have but kill’d a fly.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before Titus's House.

Enter Titus and Marcus. Then enter Young Lucius running, with books under his arm, and Lavinia running after him.

L. Luc. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia

Follows me everywhere, I know not why.—

Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes!

Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Marc. Stand by me, Lucius: do not fear thine aunt. [harm.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee

Luc. Ay, when my father was in Rome she did.

Marc. What means my niece Lavinia by these

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: somewhat doth she mean:—

See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee:

Somewhither would she have thee go with her.

Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care

Read to her sons than she hath read to thee

Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator.

Marc. Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus? [guess,

L. Luc. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I

Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her:

For I have heard my grandsire say full oft

Extremity of griefs would make men mad;

And I have read that Hecuba of Troy

Ran mad through sorrow: that made me to fear;

Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt

Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,

And would not, but in fury, fright my youth:

Which made me down to throw my books, and

fly,—

Causeth, perhaps: but pardon me, sweet aunt:

And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,

I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Marc. Lucius, I will.

[Lavinia turns over with her stumps the books which Lucius has let fall.

Tit. How now, Lavinia!—Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see,

Which is it, girl, of these?—Open them, boy.—

But thou art deeper read and better skill'd:

Come, and take choice of all my library,

And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens

Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.—

Why lift's she up her arms in sequence thus?

Marc. I think she means that there was more than one

Confederate in the fact:—ay, more there was,

Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge.

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?

L. Luc. Grand sire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphosis;

My mother gave it me.

Marc. For love of her that's gone,

Perhaps she call'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! see how busily she turns the leaves!

Help her:

What would she find?—Lavinia, shall I read?

This is the tragic tale of Philomel,

And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape;

And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Marc. See, brother, see; note how she quotes the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,

Ravish'd, and wrong'd, as Philomela was,

For'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?—

See, see!—

Ay, such a place there is where we did hunt.—

O, had we never, never hunted there!—

Pattern'd by that the poet here describes,

By nature made for murders and for rapes,
Marc. O, why should nature build so foul a den,

Unless the gods delight in tragedies?

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl,—for here are none but friends,—

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed?

Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,

That left the camp to sin Lucrece’ bed?

Marc. Sit down, sweet niece:—brother, sit down by me.

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,

Inspire me, that I may this treason find!—

My lord, look here:—look here, Lavinia:

This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,

This after me, when I have writ my name

Without the help of any hand at all.

[He writes his name with his staff, guiding it with his foot and mouth.

Curs’d be that heart that forc’d us to this shift!—

Write thou, good niece; and here display at

What God will have discover’d for revenge:

Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,

That we may know the traitors and the truth!

[She takes the staff in her mouth, guides it with her stumps, and writes.

Tit. O, do ye read, my lord, what she hath writ?

Stuprum—Chiron—Demetrius. [Tamora

Marc. What, what!—the lustful sons of Performers of this heinous, bloody deed?

Tit. Magni Dominator poli,

Tam lentus audis sceleris? tam lentus avidus?

Marc. O, calm thee, gentle lord; although I

know

There is enough written upon this earth

To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts,

And arm the minds of infants to exclaims,

My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;

And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector’s hope;

And swear with me,—as, with the woeful fere

And father of that chaste dishonour’d dame,

Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece’ rape,—

That we will prosecute, by good advice,

Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,

And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. ’Tis sure enough, an you knew how.

But if you hunt these bear-whelps, then beware:

The dam will wake; and if she wind you once,

She’s with the lion deeply still in league,

And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,

And when he sleeps will she do what she list.

You are a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone;

And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,

And with a gad of steel will write these words,

And lay it by: the angry northern wind

Will blow these sands, like Sybil’s leaves, abroad,

And where’s your lesson then?—Boy, what say

Y. Luc. I say, my lord, that if I were a man,

Their mother’s bedchamber should not be safe

For these bad-bondmen to the yoke of Rome.

Marc. Ay, that’s my boy! thy father hath full o’th

For his ungrateful country done the like.

Y. Luc. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury;

Lucius, I’ll fit thee; and withstand, my boy,

Shalt carry from me to the empress’ sons

Presents that I intend to send them both:

Come, come; thou’lt do thy message, wilt thou not?

[grand sire.

Y. Luc. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms,

Tit. No, boy, not so; I’ll teach thee another course.—

Lavinia, come.—Marcus, look to my house;

Lucius and I’ll go brave it at the court;

Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we’ll be waited

[Exeunt Tit., Lav., and Y. Luc.

v. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan,

And not relent, or not compassion him?

Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy,

That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart

Than foemen’s marks upon his batter’d shield;

But yet so just that he will not revenge:—

Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus!

[Exit.

Scene II.—Rome. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Aaron, Demetrius and Chiron, at one door; at another door, Young Lucius and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here’s the son of Lucius;

He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Y. Luc. My lords, with all the humbleness I

I greet your honours from Andronicus,—

And pray the Roman gods confound you both!

[Aside.

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: what’s the news?

Boy. [Aside.] That you are both decipher’d,

that’s the news, [you,

For villains mark’d with rape.—May it please

My grandsire, well-advise’d, hath sent by me

The goodliest weapons of his armoury
To gratify your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome; for so he bade me say;
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that whenever you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well:
And so I leave you both,—[aside] like bloody villains.

[Exeunt Y. Luc. and Attendant.

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and written round about?

Let's see:—
[Reads.] Integer vitae, scelerisque purus,
Non eget Maevi jaculis, nec amra.
Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it well:
I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just,—a verse in Horace;—right, you have it.—
Now, what a thing it is to be an ass! [aside.
Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt;
And sends them weapons wrap'd about with
That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick.
But were our witty empress well a-foot,
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit.
But let her rest in her unrest awhile.—
And now, young lords, was't not a happy star
Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good before the palace gate
To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good to see so great a lord
Basely insinuate and send us gifts.

Aar. Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly?

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames
At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go; and pray to all the gods
For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. [Aside.] Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over.

[FLOURISH WITHIN.

Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a blackamoor Child in her arms.

Nur. Good-morrow, lords: O, tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor?

Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all,
Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O gentle Aaron, we are all undone!
Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep!
What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?

Nur. O, that which I would hide from heaven's eye,
Our empress' shame and stately Rome's dish:
She is deliver'd, lords,—she is deliver'd.

Aar. To whom?

Nur. I mean, she's brought a bed.

Aar. Well, God give her good rest! What hath he sent her?

Aar. Why, then she is the devil's dam; a joyful issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful
Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime:
The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.

Aar. Zounds, ye whore! is black so base a hue?—
Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?

Aar. That which thou canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undo our mother.

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone.

[choice! Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loafed
Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend!

Chi. It shall not live.

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must; the mother wills it so.

Aar. What, must it, nurse? then let no man
but I
Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point:—

Nurse, give it me; my sword shall soon despatch it.

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels (Takes the Child from the Nurse, and drops.
Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shone so brightly when this boy was got,
He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point
That touches this my first-born son and heir!
I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,
With all his threatening band of Typhon's brood,
Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war,
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.
What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!
Ye white-lim'd walls! ye alhouse-painted signs!
Coal-black is better than another hue,
In that it scorcs to bear another hue;
For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn a swan's black legs to white,
Although she love them hourly in the flood.
Tell the empress from me, I am of age
To keep mine own,—excuse it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus?
Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this, my—
The vigour and the picture of my youth:
This before the world do I prefer;
This maugre all the world will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother is for ever sham'd,
Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The emperor, in his rage, will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignominy.
Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears:
I've, treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing
The close enacts and counsels of the heart!
Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer:
Look how the black slave smiles upon the father,
As who should say, Old lad, I am thine own.
He is your brother, lords; sensibly fed
Of that self-blood that first gave life to you;
And from that womb where you imprison'd were
He is enfranchised and come to light;
Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice:
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.

Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult;
My son and I will have the wind of you;
Keep there: now talk at pleasure of your safety.

[They sit.

Dem. How many women saw this child of his?
Aar. Why, so, brave lords! when we join in league
I am a lamb: but if you brave the Moor,
The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,
The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.
But say, again, how many saw the child?

Nur. Cornelia the midwife and myself;
And no one else but the deliver'd empress.

Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself:
Two may keep counsel when the third's away:
Go to the empress, tell her this I said:
[Stabs her, and she dies.

Weke, weke!—so cries a pig prepar'd to the spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore didst thou this?

Aar. O Lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy:
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours,—
A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? no, lords, no:
And now be it known to you my full intent.
Not far, one Muliteus lives, my countryman;
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed;
His child is like to her, fair as you are:
Go pack with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all;
And how by this their child shall be advanc'd,
And be received for the emperor's heir,
And substituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempest whirling in the court;
And let the emperor dandle him for his own.
Hark ye, lords; ye see I have given her physic.

[Pointing to the Nurse.

And you must needs bestow her funeral;
The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms:
This done, see that you take no longer days,
But send the midwife presently to me.
The midwife and the nurse well made away,
Then let the ladies tattle what they please.

Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air
With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.

[Exeunt Dem. and Chi., bearing off the dead Nurse.

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies;
There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,
And secretly to greet the empress' friends.—
Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you hence;
For it is you that puts us to our shifts:
I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,
And cabin in a cave; and bring you up
To be a warrior and command a camp. [Exit.

SCENE III.—ROME. A public Place.

Enter Titus, bearing arrows, with letters at the ends of them; with him Marcus, Young Lucius, and other Gentlemen, with bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come:—kinsmen, this is the way.—
Sir boy, now let me see your archery;
Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight.—
Terres Astrea reliquit:
Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.

Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins,
Go sound the ocean and cast your nets;
Happily you may catch her in the sea;
Yet there's as little justice as at land.—
No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;
'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade,
And pierce the inmost centre of the earth:
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you deliver him this petition;
Tell him it is for justice and for aid,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.—
Ah, Rome!—Well, well; I made thee miserable
What time I threw the people's suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me.—
Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd:
This wicked emperor may have ship'd her

And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.
Marc. O Publius, is not this a heavy case,
To see thy noble uncle thus distract? [cerns
Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us con-
By day and night to attend him carefully,
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
Till time beget some careful remedy.
Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Join with the Goths; and with revengeful war
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.
Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my masters!
What, have you met with her? [word,
Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you
If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall:
Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd, [else,
He thinks, with Love in heaven, or somewhere
So that perforce you must needs stay a time.
Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays.
I'll dive into the burning lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.—
Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we,
No big-bon'd men, fram'd of the Cyclops' size;
But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back,
Yet wrung with wrongs more than our backs
can bear:
And, sith there is no justice in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven, and move the gods
To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs.—
Come, to this gear.—You are a good archer,
Marcus. [He gives them the arrows.
Ad Jove, that's for you:—here, ad Apollini-

Ad Martem, that's for myself:—
Here, boy, to Pallas:—here, to Mercury:—
To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine;
You were as good to shoot against the wind.—
To it, boy.—Marcus, loose when I bid,—
Of my word, I have written to effect;
There's not a god left unsolicited. [court:
Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the
We will afflict the emperor in his pride.
Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O,
well said, Lucius!
Good boy, in Virgo's lap; give it Pallas.
Marc. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon:
Your letter is with Jupiter by this.
Tit. Ha! ha!
Publius, Publius, what hast thou done?
See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.
Marc. This was the sport, my lord: when Publius shot,
The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock That down fell both the Ram's horns in the court;
And who should find them but the empress'
villain?
She laugh'd, and told the Moor he should not choose
But give them to his master for a present.
Tit. Why, there it goes: God give his lordship joy!
Enter a Clown, with a basket and two pigeons in it.

News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is
come.
Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters?
Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?
Clo. Ho, the gibbet-maker? he says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week.
Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?
Clo. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.
Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?
Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.
Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?
Clo. From heaven! alas, sir, I never came there: God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men.
Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.
Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?
Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Sirrah, come hither: make no more ado,
But give your pigeons to the emperor:
By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.
Hold, hold; meanwhile here's money for thy charges.—
Give me pen and ink.—[tition?]
Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplica-

Then here is a supplication for you.
And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel, then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

I warrant you, sir, let me alone.
Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see it.

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration: [ant:—
For thou hast made it like an humble suppli-
And when thou hast given it to the emperor,
Knock at my door, and tell me what he says.
God be with you, sir; I will.
Come, Marcus, let us go.—Publius,

Scene IV.—Rome. Before the Palace.

Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius.

Chiron, Lords, and others; Saturninus with the arrows in his hand that Titus shot,

Why, lords, what wrongs are these! was ever seen
An emperor in Rome thus overborne,
Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the extent
Of legal justice, us'd in such contempt?
My lords, you know, as do the mighty gods,
However these disturbers of our peace
Buzz in the people's ears, there naught hath pass'd,
But even with law, against the wilful sons
Of old Andronicus. And what an if
His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his freaks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness?
And now he writes to heaven for his redress:
See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury;
This to Apollo; this to the god of war;—
Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome!
What's this 'tis libelling against the senate,
And blazoning our injustice everywhere?
A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?
As who would say, in Rome no justice were.
But if I live, his feigned ecstasies
Shall be no shelter to these outrages:
But he and his shall know that justice lives

In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep,
He'll so awake as she in fury shall
Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,
Calm thee, and hear: he faults Titus' age,
The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons,
Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep, and scar'd his heart;
And rather comfort his distressed plight
Than prosecute the meanest or the best
For these contempts.—[Aside.] Why, thus it shall become
High-witted Tamora to gloze with all:
But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
Thy life-blood on't; if Aaron now be wise,
Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.—

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow! wouldst thou speak with us?

Yes, forsooth, an your mistership be imperial.

Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor.

'Tis he.—God and Saint Stephen give you—good-den: I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him pre-ently.

How much money must I have?

Hang'd! By'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. [Exit guarded.

Despightful and intolerable wrongs!

Shall I endure this monstrous villany?

I know from whence this same device proceeds:
May this be borne,—as if his traitorous sons,
That died by law for murder of our brother,
Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully?—
Go, drag the villain hither by the hair;
Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege.—
For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughter-man;
Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter Emilius.

What news with thee, Emilius?

Arm, my lord! Rome never had more cause!

The Goths have gather'd head; and with a
power,
Of high resolved men, bent to the spoil,
They hither march amain, under conduct
Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus;
Who threatens, in course of this revenge, to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths?
These tidings nip me; and I hang the head
As flowers with frost, or grass beat down with storms:
Ay, now begin our sorrow to approach:
'Tis he the common people love so much;
Myself hath often heard them say,—
When I have walked like a private man,—
That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully,
And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

Tam. Why should you fear? is not your city strong?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name.
Is the sun dim'd, that gnats do fly in it?
The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wing
He can at pleasure stint their melody:
Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit: for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
Than baits to fish or honey-stalks to sheep,
Whenas the one is wounded with the bait,
The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will:
For I can smooth and fill his aged ear
With golden promises that, were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.—
Go thou before [to ÆMILIIUS]; be our ambassador:
Say that the emperor requests a parley
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting
Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably:
And if he stand on hostage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him
best.

Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually.
[Exit.]

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him, with all the art I have,
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike
Goths.
And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successfully, and plead to him.
[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Plains near Rome.

Enter Lucius and Goths, with drum and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors and my faithful
friends,
I have received letters from great Rome,
Which signify what hate they bear their emperor,
And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore, great lords, be as your titles witness,
Imperious and impatient of your wrongs;
And wherein Rome hath done you any scath
Let him make treble satisfaction.

1 Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,
Whose name was once our terror, now our com-
Whose high exploits and honourable deeds
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt,
Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,—
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day,
Led by their master to the flowered fields,—
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.
[him.

Goths. And as he saith, so say we all with Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you
all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading AARON with his Child
in his arms.

2 Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops
I stray'd
To gaze upon a ruined monastery;
And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall.
I made unto the noise; when soon I heard
The crying babe controul'd with this discourse:
Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam!
Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art,
Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
Villain, thou mightest have been an emperor:
But where the bull and cow are both milk-white
They never do beget a coal-black calf.
Peace, villain, peace!—even thus he rates the babe,—
For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
Who, when he knows thou art the empress' babe,
Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake.
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,
Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither,
To use as you think needful of the man.
[devil

Luc. O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate
That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand;
This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye;
And here's the base fruit of his burning lust.—
Say, wall-ey'd slave, whither wouldst thou convey
This growing image of thy fiend-like face?
Why dost not speak? what, deaf? No; not a word—
A halter, soldiers; hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy,
Aar. Touch not the boy,—he is of royal blood.
Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.—
First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl,—
A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
Get me a ladder.

[A ladder brought, which AARON is obliged to ascend.

Aar. Lucius, save the child,
And bear it from me to the empress.
If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things
That highly may advantage thee to hear;
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more,—but vengeance rot you all!
Luc. Say on: an if it please me which thou speak'st,
Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.
Aar. An if it please thee! why, assure thee, Lucius,
'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;
For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,
Acts of black night, abominable deeds,
Complots of mischief, treason, villanies,
Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd:
And this shall all be buried by my death,
Unless thou swear to me my child shall live.
Luc. Tell on thy mind; I say thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will
Luc. Who should I swear by? thou believest no god:
That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?
Aar. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not;
Yet, for I know thou art religious,
And hast a thing within thee called conscience,
With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies
Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
Therefore I urge thy oath;—for that I know
An idiot holds his bauble for a god,
And keeps the oath which by that god he swears;
To that I'll urge him:—therefore thou shalt vow
By that same god,—what god soever it be
That thou adorest and hast in reverence,—
To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up;
Or else I will discover naught to thee.
Luc. Even by my god I swear to thee I will.
Aar. First, now thou, I begot him on the empress.
Luc. O most insatiate luxurious woman!

Aar. Tut, Lucius, this was but a deed of charity
To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.
'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus;
They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,
And cut her hands, and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O detestable villain! call'st thou that
Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd; and 'twas Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.
Luc. O barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself!

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct
That coddling spirit had they from their mother,
As sure a card as ever won the set;
That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,
As true a dog as ever fought at head.
Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.
I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole
Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay:
I wrote the letter that thy father found,
And hid the gold within the letter mention'd,
Confederate with the queen and her two sons:
And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,
Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in't?
I play'd the cheatere for thy father's hand;
And when I had it, drew myself apart,
And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter:
I pray'd me through the crevice of a wall
When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads;
Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily
That both mine eyes were rainy like to his:
And when I told the empress of this sport,
She swooned almost at my pleasing tale,
And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses.
Goth. What, canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.
Luc. Art thou not sorry for these hemous deeds?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand
Even now I curse the day,—and yet, I think,
Few come within the compass of my curse,—
Wherein I did not some notorious ill:
As, kill a man, or else devise his death;
Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it;
Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself;
Set deadly enmity between two friends;
Make poor men's cattle stray and break their necks;
Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,
And bid the owners quench them with their tears.
Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,
And set them upright at their dear friends' doors,
Even when their sorrows almost were forgot;
And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,
I have with my knife carved in Roman letters,
Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.
Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things
As willingly as one would kill a fly;
And nothing grieves me heartily indeed
But that I cannot do ten thousand more. [die
Luc. Bring down the devil; for he must not
So sweet a death as hanging presently.
Aar. If there be devils, would I were a devil,
To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,
But to torment you with my bitter tongue!
Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter a Goth.

3 Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome Desires to be admitted to your presence.
Luc. Let him come near.

Enter æmilius.
Welcome, æmilius: what's the news from Rome?
[goths, æmilius. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the
The Roman emperor greets you all by me;
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages,
And they shall be immediately deliver'd.
1 Goth. What says our general?
Luc. æmilius, let the emperor give his pledges
Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,
And we will come.—March away. [Exeunt.

Enter tamora, demetrius, and chiron, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habitation
I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say I am Revenge, sent from below
To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.
Knock at his study, where they say he keeps
To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge;
Tell him Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies.
[They knock.

Enter Titus, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?
Is it your trick to make me ope the door,
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my study be to no effect?

You are deceiv'd: for what I mean to do
Sce here in bloody lines I have set down;
And what is written shall be executed.
Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.
Tit. No, not a word: how can I grace my talk,
Wanting a hand to give it action?
Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.
Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me.
Tit. I am not mad; I know thee well enough:
Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines;
Witness these trenches made by grief and care;
Witness the tiring day and heavy night;
Wanting all sorrow, that I know thee well.
For our proud empress, mighty Tamora:
Is not thy coming for my other hand?
Tam. Know thou, sad man, I am not Tamora;
She is thy enemy and I thy friend.
I am Revenge; sent from the infernal kingdom
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind
By working wretched vengeance on thy foes.
Come down and welcome me to this world's light;
Confer with me of murder and of death:
There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place,
No vast obscurity or misty vale,
Where bloody murder or detested rape
Can couch for fear but I will find them out;
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,—
Revenge, which makes the soul offenders quake.
Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me
To be a torment to mine enemies? [come me.
Tam. I am; therefore come down and wel-
Tit. Do me some service ere I come to thee.
Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands;
Now givesome'surance that thou art Revenge,—
Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels;
And then I'll come and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globe.
Provide thee two proper palfreys, black as jet,
To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,
And find out murderers in their guilty caves;
And when thy car is loaden with their heads
I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel
Trot, like a servile footman, all day long,
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east
Until his very downfall in the sea:
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rape and Murder there.
Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me.
Tit. Are these thy ministers? what are they call'd?
Tam. Rapine and Murder; therefore called so 'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.
Tit. Good lord, how like the empress' sons they are!
And you the empress! But we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.
O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee;
And, if one arm's embrace will content thee,
I will embrace thee in it by and by.

[Exit from above.

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy:
Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick fits,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;
And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius his son;
And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter Titus.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee:
Welcome, dread fury, to my woeful house;—
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too:—
How like the empress and her sons you are!
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor;
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?—
For well I wot the empress never wags
But in her company there is a Moor;
And, would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil;
But welcome as you are. What shall we do?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?
Dom. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with
Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,
And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong,
And I will be revenged on them all. [Rome,
Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of
And when thou findest a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer.—
Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine, stab him; he's a ravisher.—
Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court
There is a queen, attended by a Moor; [tion,
Well mayst thou know her by thy own propor-
For up and down she doth resemble thee;
I pray thee, do on them some violent death;
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we do.
But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy three-valiant son,
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike
Goths,
And bid him come and banquet at thy house;
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,
I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes;
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.
What says Andronicus to this device? [calls.

Tit. Marcus, my brother!—tis sad Titus

Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius;
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths:
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths;
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are:
Tell him the emperor and the empress too
Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.
This do thou for my love; and so let him
As he regards his aged father's life.

Marc. This will I do, and soon return again.

[Exit.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.
Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay
with me,
Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [Aside to them.] What say you, boys?
will you abide with him,
While I go tell my lord the emperor
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,
And tarry with him till I come again.

Tit. [Aside.] I know them all, though they assume me mad, [vices,—
And will o'er-reach them in their own de-
A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam.

Dom. Madam, depart at pleasure; leave us here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now
To lay a complot to betray thy foes.
Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge, farewell! [Exit TAMORA.

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd?

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine!

Enter Publirius and others.

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you these two?
Receive the blood: and when that they are dead,
Let me go grind their bones to powder small,
And with this hateful liquor temper it:
And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.
Come, come, be every one affl'd
To make this banquet: which I wish may prove
More stern and bloody than the Centaur's feast.
So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook,
And see them read against their mother comes.
[Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.]

SCENE III.—ROME. A Pavilion in Titus's Gardens, with tables, &c.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and Goths, with Aaron prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind
That I repair to Rome, I am content.
I Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.
[Moan.
Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous
This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil;
I let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought unto the empress' face
For testimony of her foul proceedings:
And see the ambush of our friends be strong;
I fear the emperor means no good to us.
Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,
And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth
The venomous malice of my swelling heart!
Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!—
Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.— [Exeunt Goths with Aar. Flourish within.
The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Enter Saturninus and Tamora, with Aemilius, Tribunes, Senators, and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more sons
Than the sun?
Luc. What boots it then to call thyself the sun?
Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the peace:
These quarrels must be quietly debated.
The feast is ready, which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end.
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome:
[Places.
Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your seats.
Sat. Marcus, we will.
[Hautboys sound. The company sit at table.

Enter Titus, dressed like a cook, I war, roasted, Young Lucius, and others. Titus places the dishes on the table.

Titi. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dead queen;
Welcome, ye warlike Goths; welcome, Lucius; And welcome all: although the cheer be poor, 'Twill fill your stomachs: please you eat of it. Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus? Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well To e'rtain your highness and your empress. Tam. We are beholden to you, good Andronicus. Tit. And if your highness knew my heart, yo. My lord the emperor, resolve me this: Was it well done of rash Virginius To slay his daughter with his own right hand, Because she was enforce'd, stain'd, and deflower'd? Sat. It was, Andronicus. Tit. Your reason, mighty lord, [shame, Sat. Because the girl should not survive her And by her presence still renew his sorrows. Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual; A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant For me, most wretched, to perform the like:— Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee; [Kills Lavinia. And with thy shame thy father's sorrow die! Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind? Tit. Kill'd her for whom my tears have made me blind. I am as woeful as Virginius was, And have a thousand times more cause than he To do this outrage;—and it is now done. Sat. What, was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed. Tit. Will 't please you eat? will 't please your highness feed? Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus? Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius: They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue; And they, 'twas they that did her all this wrong. Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently. Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie, Whereof their mother daintily hath fed, Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred. 'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point. [Kills Tamora. Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed! [Kills Titus. Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed? [Kills Saturninus. A great tumult. Lucius, Marcus, and their partisans, ascend the steps before Titus's house. Marc. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome, By uproar sever', like a flight of fowl Scatter'd by wind and high tempestuous gusts, O, let me teach you how to knit again This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf, These broken limbs again into one body; Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself, And she whom mighty kingdoms court'sy to, Like a forlorn and desperate castaway, Do shameful execution on herself. But if my frosty signs and chaps of age, Grave witnesses of true experience, Cannot induce you to attend my words,— Speak, Rome's dear friend [to Lucius]: as erst our ancestor, When with his solemn tongue he did discourse To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear The story of that baleful burning night When subtle Greeks surpris'd King Priam's Troy,— Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears, Or who hath brought the fatal engine in That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound. My heart is not compact of flint nor steel; Nor can I utter all our bitter grief, But floods of tears will drown my oratory And break my very utterance, even in the time When it should move you to attend me most, Lend; your kind commiseration. Here is a captain, let him tell the tale; Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak. Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to you: That cursed Chiron and Demetrius Were they that murdered our emperor's brother; And they it were that ravished our sister: For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded; Our father's tears despit'd, and basely cozen'd Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel. And sent her enemies unto the grave. Lastly, myself unkindly banished, The gates shut on me, and turn'd repining o'er, To beg relief among Rome's enemies; Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears, And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend; And I am the turn'd-forth, be it known to you, That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood; And from her bosom took the enemy's point, Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body. Alas! you know I am no vaunter, I; My scars can witness, dumb although they are, That my report is just and full of truth. But, soft! methinks I do digress too much, Citing my worthless praise: O, pardon me; For when no friends are by, men praise themselves. [chill. Marc. Now is my turn to speak. Behold this: [Pointing to the Child in an Attendant's arms.
Of this was Tamora delivered;
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes:
The villain is alive in Titus’s house,
Damn’d as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge
These wrongs unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say you,
Romans?
Have we done aught amiss,—show us wherein,
And, from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remainder of Andronici
Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our house.
Speak, Romans, speak; and if you say we shall,
Lc, Land in hand, Lucius and I will fall.
Æmil. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome,
And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius our emperor; for well I know
The common voice do cry it shall be so.
Romans. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail,
Rome’s royal emperor!
Marc. Go, go into old Titus’ sorrowful house,
[To Attendants, who go into the house.
And hither haie that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudg’d some direful slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life.
[Lucius, Marcus, &c., descend.
Romans. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail,
Rome’s gracious governor! [s
Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans: may I govern
To heal Rome’s harms and wipe away her woe!
But, gentle people, give me aim awhile,—
For nature puts me to a heavy task:—
Stand all aloof;—but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk.—
O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips, [kisses Titus.
These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain’d face,
The last true duties of thy noble son!
Marc. Tear for tear and loving kiss for kiss
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:
O, were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them!
Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us [well:
To melt in showers: thy grandsire lov’d thee
Many a time he danc’d thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
Many a matter bath he told to thee,
Meet and agreeing with thine infancy;
In that respect, then, like a loving child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender spring,
Because kind nature doth require it so:
Friends should associate friends in grief and woe:
Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.
Y. Luc. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart
Would I were dead, so you did live again!—
O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choke me if I ope my mouth.
Re-enter Attendents with Aaron.
Æmil. You sad Andronicus, have done with woes:
Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.
Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and punish him;
There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food:
If any one relieves or pities him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
Some stay to see him fasten’d in the earth.
Aar. O, why should wrath be mute and fury dumb?
I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
I should repent the evils I have done:
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will:
If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul. [hence,
Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor
And give him burial in his father’s grave:
My father and Lavinia shall forthwith
Be closed in our household’s monument.
As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,
No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial:
But throw her forth to beasts and bir’d: of prey:
Her life was beast-like and devoid of pity;
And, being so, shall have like want of pity.
See justice done on Aaron, that damn’d Moor,
By whom our heavy haps had their beginning;
Then, afterwards, to order well the state,
That like events may ne’er it ruinate. [Exeunt.

ACT I.

Enter Gower.

Before the Palace of Antioch.

To sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come;
Assuming man's infirmities,
To glad your ear and please your eyes.
It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eyes and holy-ales;
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restoratives:
The purchase is to make men glorious;
Et bonus quo antiquius, co melius.
If you, born in these latter times,
When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
And that to hear an old man sing
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you, like taper-light,—
This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great
Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat;
The fairest in all Syria,—
I tell you what mine authors say:
This king unto him took a fere,
Who died and left a female heir,
So buxom, blithe, and full of face,
As heaven had lent her all his grace;
With whom the father liking took,
And her to incest did provoke:—
Bad child; worse father: to entice his own
To evil should be done by none:
But custom what they did begin
Was with long use account no sin.
The beauty of this sinful dame

Made many princes thither frame
To seek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage-pleasures play-fellow:
Which to prevent he made a law,—
To keep her still, and men in awe,—
That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life:
So for her many a wight did die,
As you grim looks do testify.
What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit.

SCENE I.—ANTIOCH. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antiochus, Pericles, and Attendants.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
The danger of the task you undertake.
Per. I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul
Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
Think death no hazard in this enterprise.
Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
For the embraces even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd,
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The senate-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Music Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See where she comes, apparel'd like the spring,
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every virtue gives renown to men!
Her face the book of praises, where is read
Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever rapt, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.
Ye gods, that made me man, and sway in love.
That have inflam'd desire in my breast
To taste the fruit of you celestial tree,
Or die in the adventure, be my help,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd:
For death-like dragons here arefright thee hand;
Her face, like heaven, entice thee to view
Her countless glory, which desert must gain;
And which, without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
Yon sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
Tell thee, with speechless tongues and semblance pale,
That, without covering, save thy field of stars,
Here they stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist
For going on death's net, whom none resist.

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hast taught
My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what must;
For death remember'd should be like a mirror,
Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it error.
I'll make my will, then; and, as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but, feeling woe,
Gripe not at earthly joys, as erst they did;
So I beseech a happy peace to you
And all good men, as every prince should do;
My riches to the earth from whence they came;

But my unsported fire of love to you.

[To the Daughter of Antiochus.

Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow, Antiochus.

Ant. Scorning advice,—read the conclusion,
then:
Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
As these before thee, thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daugh. In all save that, mayst thou prove prosperous!
In all save that, I wish thee happiness!

Per. Like a bold champion I assume the lists,
Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness and courage.

[Reads the Riddle.

I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother's flesh which did me breed.
I sought a husband, in which to lay
I found it at kindness in a father.
He's father, son, and husband in me;
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.

Sharp physic is the last: but, O you powers
That give heaven countless eyes to view men's arts,
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?

Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,
[Grasps hold of the hand of the Princess.
Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill:
But I must tell you,—now my thoughts revolt;
For he's no man on whom perfection's wait,
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings;
Who, finger'd to make his lawful music,
Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to hearken;

But, being play'd upon before your time,
Hast only dancest at so harsh a chime.

Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life.
For that's an article within our law
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd:
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king,

Few love to hear the sins they love to act:
'Would braid yourself too near for me to tell it.
Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut than shown:
For vice repeated is like the wandering wind,
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes we clear:
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind
Mole casts throng'd
Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is
By man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for't,

[Their will:
Kings are earth's gods: in vice their law's
And if I love stray, who dares say love doth ill?
It is enough you know; and it is fit,
What being more known grows worse, to Smother it.

All love the womb that their first being bred.
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. [Aside.] Heaven, that I had thy hold he has found the meaning: [Tyre.
But I will groze with him.—Young Prince of Though by the temper of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,
We might proceed to cancel of your days;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise:
Forty days longer we do repose you;
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son:
And until then your entertain shall be
As doth bestit our honour and your worth.

[Exeunt Ant., his Daughter, and Attendants.

Per. How courteously would seem to cover sin,
When what is done is like an hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in sight!
If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain you were not so bad
As with foul incest to abuse your soul;
Where now you're both a father and a son,
By your untimely clasplings with your child,—
Which pleasure fits an husband, not a father;—
And she an eater of her mother's flesh,
By the defiling of her parent's bed;
[feed
And both like serpents are, who, though they
On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.

Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men
Blush not in actions blacker than the night.
Will shun no course to keep them from the light.
One sin I know another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to lust as flame to smoke:
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets to put off the shame:
Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.

[Exit.

Enter a Messenger.

Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.
Mess. My lord, Prince Pericles is dead.
[Exit. As thou

Wilt live, fly after: and as an arrow shot
From a well-experience'd archer hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so thou ne'er return
Unless thou say Prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My lord,
If I can get him once within my pistol's length I'll make him sure enough: so, farewell to your highness.

Ant. Thal. adieu! [Exit Thal.] Till
Pericles be dead
My heart can lend no succour to my head.

[Exit.

Scene II.—Tyre. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Pericles.

Per. [To those without.] Let none disturbus.—
Why should this change of thoughts,
The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
Be my so us'd a guest as not an hour
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night,—
The tomb where grief should sleep,—can breed me quiet?
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes
shun them,
And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
Whose aim seems far too short to hit me here:
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
Then it is thus: the passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
I have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done,
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
And so with me:—the great Antiochus,—
'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act,—
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence;
Nor boots it me to say I honour him,
If he suspect I may dishonour him:
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known;
With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
And with the ostent of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought offence:
Which care of them, not pity of myself,—
Who once no more but as the tops of trees.
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them,—
Makes both my body pine and soul to languish,
And punish that before that he would punish.

Enter Helicanus and other Lords.

1 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast! [to us,
2 Lord. And keep your mind till you return Peaceful and comfortable! Hel. Peace, peace, my lords, and give experience tongue.
They do abuse the king that flatter him:
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
The thing which is flatter'd, but a spark,
To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing;
Whereas reproof, obedient, and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err.
When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace
He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
Prince, pardon me, or strike me if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees.
Per. All leave us else; but let your cares o'erlook
What shipping and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us. [Exeunt Lords.] Helicanus, thou Hast moved us: what seest thou in our looks?
Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.
Per. If there be such a dart in princes' frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?
Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence
They have their nourishment?
Per. Thou know'st I have power to take thy life from thee. [self:
Hel. [Aside.] I have ground the axe myself.
Do you but strike the blow.
Per. Rise, pr'ythee, rise.
Sit down, sit down: thou art no flatterer:
I thank thee for it; and heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults chid!
Fit counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant,
What wouldst thou have me do?
Hel. To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.
Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus,
That minister's a potion unto me
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.
Attend me, then: I went to Antioch,
Where, as thou know'st, against the face of death,
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,
Are arms to princes, and bring joys to subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;
The rest,—hark in thine ear,—as black as incest:
Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father
Seem'd not to strike, but smooth: but thou know'st this,
'Tis time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss.
Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled,
Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector; and, being here,
Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.
I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than their years:
And should he doubt it,—as no doubt he doth,—
That I should open to the listening air
How many worthy princes' bloods were shed To keep his bed of blackness un laid, ope,
To lop that doubt, he'll fill this land with arms,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done him;
When all, for mine, if I may call offence,
Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:
Which love to all,—of which thyself art one,
Who now reprov'st me for it,—
Hel. Alas, sir!
Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,
Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts
How I might stop this tempest ere it came;
And, finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them.
Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,
Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear,
And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,
Who either by public war or private treason
Will take away your life.
Therefore, my lord, go travel for awhile,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life,
Your rule direct to any; if to me,
Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.
Per. I do not doubt thy faith;
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?
Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,
From whence we had our being and our birth.
Per. Tyre, I now look from thee, then, and to Tharsus
Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee;
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.
The care I had and have of subjects' good
On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.
I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath:
Who shuns not to break one will sure crack both:
But in our orbs we'll live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,
Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince.
[Exeunt.

Scene III.—Tyre.  An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this the court.
Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do it now, I am sure to be hanged at home: 'tis dangerous.—Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets. Now do I see he had some reason for 't: for a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.—Hush! here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter Helicanus, Escanes, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,
Further to question me of your king's departure;
His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,
Doth speak sufficiently he's gone to travel.
Thal. [Aside.] How! the king gone!
Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied,
Why, as it were unlicensed of your loves,
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
Being at Antioch,—
Thal. [Aside.] What from Antioch?
Hel. Royal Antiochus,—on what cause I know not,— Took some displeasure at him; at least he judg'd
And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd,
To show his sorrow, he'd correct himself;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,
With whom each minute threatens life or death.
Thal. [Aside.] Well, I perceive
I shall not be hang'd now although I would;
But since he's gone, the king's ears it must please
He 'scap'd the land to perish on the seas.
I'll present myself.—Peace to the lords of Tyre!
Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come
With message unto princely Pericles;
But since my landing I have understood
Your lord has betook himself to unknown travels,
My message must return from whence it came.
Hel. We have no reason to desire it,
Commended to our master, not to us;
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,—
As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre.
[Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Tharsus.  A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Cleon, Dionyza, and Attendants.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?
Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it;
For who digs hills because they do aspire
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.
O my distressed lord, even such our griefs are;
Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's eyes,
But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.
Cle. O Dionyza,
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep
Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder;
[want,
That, if heaven slumber while their creatures
They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And, wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.
Dio. I'll do my best, sir.
Cle. This Tharsus, o'er which I have the government,
A city on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd herself even in the streets;
Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd the clouds,
And strangers ne'er beheld but wonder'd at;
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,
Like one another's glass to trim them by:
Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight;
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.
Dio. O 'tis too true.
Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change,
These mouths, whom but of late earth, sea, and
Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are defil'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise:
Those palates who, not us'd to savour hunger,
Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
Those mothers who, to nuzzle up their babes,
Thought naught too curious, are ready now
To eat those little dainties whom they lov'd.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife
Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life:
Here stands a lord and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true? [it.

Div. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness

Cle. O, let those cities that of Plenty's cup
And her pros persities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears!
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor?

Cle. Here. [haste,
Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in
For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbourly shore,
A portly sail of ships, which hitherward.

Cle. I thought as much.
One sorrow never comes but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours: some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery, [power,
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their
To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy we,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear; for by the semblance

Of their white flags display'd, they bring us
And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat:
Who makes the fairest show means most deceit;
But bring they what they will, and what they can,
What need we fear? [there.
The ground's the lowest, and we are half way.
Go tell their general we attend him here;
To know for what he comes, and when he comes,
And what he crave's.

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit.

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;
If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter Pericles, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men
Be, like a beacon sir'd, to amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets:
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load:
And these our ships, you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse war-stuff'd within
With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are stuff'd with corn to make your needy bread,
And give them life whom hunger starv'd half dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you!
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Rise, I pray you, rise:
We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harbouriage for ourself, our ships, and men.

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Do it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!

[seen,-
Till when,—the which I hope shall never be
Your grace is welcome to our town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here a while,
Until our stars that frown lend us a smile.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, to incest bring:
A better prince, and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet, then, as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in troubles reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,—
To whom I give my benison,—
Is still at Tharsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can;
And, to remember what he does,
Gild his statue to make him glorious:
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes: what need speak I?

Dumb show.

Enter, at one side, Pericles, talking with Cleon; their Trains with them. Enter, at the other, a Gentleman with a letter to Pericles, who shows it to Cleon, then gives the Messenger a reward, and knaves him. Exeunt Pericles and Cleon with their Trains, severally.

Good Helicane hath stay'd at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone
From others' labours; for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive;
And, to fulfil his prince' desire,
Sends word of all that hap in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin
And hid intent to murder him;
And that in Tharsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He, knowing so, put forth to seas,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease;
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above and deeps below
Make such unquiet that the ship
Should house him safe is wreck'd and split;
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is toss'd;
All perishe of man, of pelf,
Ne aught escape but himself;
Till fortune, tir'd with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad:
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gower,—this longs the text.

[Exit.

Scene I.—Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea-side.

Enter Pericles, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven! [man
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you:
Alas, the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me breath.
Nothing to think on but ensuing death:
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having thrown him from your watery grave,
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1 Fish. What, ho, Pilch!
2 Fish. I ho, come and bring away the nets!
1 Fish. What, Patchbreech, I say!
3 Fish. What say you, master?
1 Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wanian.
3 Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even now.
1 Fish. Alas, poor souls, it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.
3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpus how he bounced and tumbled? they say they're half fish half flesh:
a plague on them, they ne'er come but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.
1 Fish. Why, as men do a-land,—the great ones eat up the little ones: I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale;
'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful:
such whales have I heard on the land,
who never leave gaping till they've swallow'd the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and
all.

Per. [Aside.] A pretty moral.
3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton,
I would have been that day in the bellry.
2 Fish. Why, man?
3 Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too: and when I had been in his belly
I would have kept such a jangling of the bells that he should never have left till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,—
Per. [Aside.] Simonides!
3 Fish. He would purge the land of these drones that rob the bee of her honey.
Per. [Aside.] How from the finny subject of the sea
These fishers tell the infirmities of men;
And from their watery empire recollect
All that may men approve or men detect!—
Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.
2 Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that?
if it be not a day fits you, scratch it out of the calendar, and nobody will look after it.

Per. Nay, see the sea hath cast upon your coast,—
2 Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea to cast thee in our way. [wind

Per. A man, whom both the waters and the
In that vast tennis-court hath made the ball
For them to play upon, entreats you pity him;
He asks of you that never used to beg.
1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working.
2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then?

Per. I never practised it.
2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to know;
But what I am want teaches me to think on:
A man throng'd up with cold; my veins are chill,
And have no more life than may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help;
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,
For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die quoth-a? Now gods forbid! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afores me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays; fish for fasting-days, and more o'er puddings and flapjacks; and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2 Fish. Hark ye, my friend, you said you couldn't beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave! Then I'll turn crave too, and so I shall scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped, then?

2 Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exeunt with Third Fisherman.

Per. [Aside.] How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

1 Fish. Hark ye, sir, do you know where ye are?

Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.

Per. The good King Simonides, do you call him?

1 Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves so to be called for his peaceable reign and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

1 Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey: and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and tomorrow is her birthday; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to joust and tourney for her love.

Per. Were but my fortunes equal my desires I could wish to make one there.

1 Fish. O, sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get he may lawfully deal for—his wife's soul.

Re-enter Second and Third Fishermen, drawing up a net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! bots on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.—

Thanks, fortune, yet, that after all my crosses Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself; And though it was mine own, part of my heritage,

Which my dead father did bequeath to me,

With this strict charge, even as he left his life,

Keep it, my Pericles; it hath been a shield 'Twixt me and death;—and pointed to this brace:—

For that it sav'd me, keep it; in like necessity,—
The which gods protect thee from!—may defend thee.

It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it: Till the rough seas, that spare not any man, Took it in rage, though calm'd have given it again:

I thank thee for't: my shipwreck now's no ill;

Since I have here my father's gift in's will.

1 Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,

For it was sometime target to a king; I know it by this mark. 'Tis lov'd me dearly, And for his sake I wish the having of it; And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court,

Where with it I may appear a gentleman; And if that ever my low fortunes better, I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debtor.

1 Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

1 Fish. Why, do you take it, and the gods give thee good on't!

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters: there are certain condolements, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe't, I will.

By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel; And spite of all the rupture of the sea This jewel holds his building on my arm: Unto thy value I will mount myself Upon a courser, whose delightful steps Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.—

Only, my friends, I yet am unprovided Of a pair of bases.

2 Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will; This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exeunt.
Scene II.—Pentapolis. A public Way or Platform leading to the Lists. A Pavilion by the side of it for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, &c.

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

1 Lord. They are, my liege; And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter,
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a Lord.

Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express
My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. It's fit it should be so; for princes are
A model which heaven makes like to itself:
As jewels lose their glory if neglected,
So princes their renown if not respected.
'Tis now your labour, daughter, to explain
The honour of each knight in his device.

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour,
I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Æthiop reaching at the sun;
The word, Luc tua vita mihii.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you.

[The Second Knight passes.

Who is the second that presents himself?

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady;
The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu for duiuara que for fuerza.

[The Third Knight passes.

Sim. And what's the third?

Thai. The third of Antioch;
And his device a wreath of chivalry;
The word, Me pompe provexit apex.

[The Fourth Knight passes.

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning torch that's turned upside down;
The word, Quod me alit, me extinguuit.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,
Which can as well inflame as it can kill.

[The Fifth Knight passes.

Thai. The fifth, an arm environed with c'uds,
Holding out gold that's by the touchstone
The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

[The Sixth Knight (Pericles) passes.

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, the which the knight himself
With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?

Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is
A with'er'd branch, that's only green at top;
The motto, In hac scep tro.

Sim. A pretty moral;
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1 Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show
Can any way speak in his just commend;
For, by his rusty outside, he appears
To have practis'd more the whipstock than the 2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes

To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust
Until this day, to scour it in the dust.

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming: we will withdraw
Into the gallery.

[Great shouts within, all crying “The mean knight!”

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Lords, Knights, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights,
To say you are welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are princes and my guests.

Thai. But you my knight and guest;
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness—

Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than by merit.

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is
And here I hope is none that envies it.
In framing an artist, art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed,
And you're her labour'd scholar.—Come,
queen o' the feast,— [place:
For, daughter, so you are,—here take your Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.

Sim. Your presence glads our days: honour
For who hates honour hates the gods above.

Marshal. Sir, yonder is your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

1 Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen
That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes
Envy the great, nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sir, sirs, sit.

Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of
thoughts,
These cates resist me, she but thought upon.

That. By Juno, that is queen
Of marriage, all viands that I eat
Do seem unsavoury, wishing him my meat.
Sure he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but a country gentleman;
Has done no more than other knights have done;
Has broken a staff or so; so let it pass.

That. To me he seems like diamond to glass.

Per. Yon king's to me like to my father's picture,
Which tells me in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun, for them to reverence;
None that beheld him but, like lesser lights,
Did vail their crowns to his supremacy:
Where now his son's like a glowworm in the
night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light:
Whereby I see that Time's the king of men,
For he's their parent, and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights?

1 Knight. Who can be other in this royal presence?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim,—
As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,—
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause awhile:
Yon knight, methinks, doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa!

That. What is it
To me, my father?

Sim. O, attend, my daughter:
Princes, in this, should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes
To honour them:
And princes not doing so are like to gnats,
Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd at.
Therefore to make his entrance more sweet,
Here, say we drink this standing-bowl of wine
to him.

That. Alas, my father, it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold:
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How!
Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

That. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.

Sim. And furthermore tell him, we desire to know of him
Of whence he is, his name and parentage.

That. The king my father, sir, has drunk
to you.

Per. I thank him.

That. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge

That. And further he desires to know of you
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre,—my name,
Pericles;
My education been in arts and arms;—
Who, looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas rest of ships and men,
And after shipwreck driven upon this shore.

That. He thanks your grace; names himself
Pericles,
A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas,
Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholy.—
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time which looks for other revels.
Even in your armours, as you are address'd,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.
I will not have excuse, with saying this
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads,
Since they love men in arms as well as beds.

[The Knights done.

So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.—
Come, sir:
Here is a lady that wants breathing too:
And I have often heard you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip;
And that their measures are as excellent.—
Per. In those that practise them they are, my lord. [denied
Sim. O, that's as much as you would be Of your fair courtesy. [The Knights and Ladies dance.]—Unclasp, unclasp:
Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well, But you the best. [To PERICLES.]—Pages and lights, to conduct [Yours, sir.
These knights unto their several lodgings!—We have given order to be next our own.
Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.
Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love, And that's the mark I know you level at: Therefore each one betake him to his rest; To-morrow all for speeding do their best.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—TYRE. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Helicanus and Escanes.

Hel. No, Escanes, no; know this of me,—Antiochus from incest liv'd not free: For which, the most high gods not minding longer [store,
To withhold the vengeance that they had in Due to this heinous capital offence, Even in the height and pride of all his glory, When he was seated in a chariot [him,
Of an inestimable value, and his daughter with A fire from heaven came, and shrivell'd up Their bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk That all those eyes ador'd them ere their fall Scorn now their hand should give them burial. Esc. 'Twas very strange.
Hel. And yet but justice; for though This king were great, his greatness was no guard To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward. Esc. 'Tis very true.

Enter three Lords.

1 Lord. See, not a man in private conference Or council has respect with him but he.
2 Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof. [second it.
3 Lord. And curs'd be he that will not 1 Lord. Follow me, then.—Lord Helicanus, a word. [my lords.
Hel. With me? and welcome: happy day, 1 Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks. Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not your prince you love. [Helicanus;
1 Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, noble But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolv'd he lives to govern us,
Or dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral,
And leaves us to our free election.
2 Lord. Whose death's indeed the strongest in our censure:
And knowing this kingdom, if without a head, Like goodly buildings left without a roof, Will soon to ruins fall,—your noble self, That best know'st how to rule and how to reign, We thus submit unto,—our sovereign.
All. Live, noble Helicane! [frages:
Hel. For honour's cause, forbear your suf.
If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas, Where's hour's trouble for a minute's ease. A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you To forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time expir'd, he not return, I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like nobles, like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous worth;
Whom if you find, and win unto return, You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.
1 Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield;
And since Lord Helicane enjoineth us, We with our travels will endeavour it.
Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasps hands:
When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—PENTAPOLIS. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Simonides, reading a letter; the Knights meet him.

1 Knight. Good-morrow to the good Simonides. [you know,
Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake A married life.
Her reason to herself is only known, Which yet from her by no means can I get. 2 Knight. May we not get access to her, my lord? [tied her
Sim. Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly To her chamber that it is impossible. [livery;
One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd, And on her virgin honour will not break it.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

Scene V.

3 Knight. Loth to bid farewell, we take our leaves.
[Exeunt Knights.

Sim. So,
They are well despatch'd; now to my daughter's
She tells me here she'll wed the stranger knight,
Or never more to view nor day nor light.
'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine.
I like that well: nay, how absolute she's in 't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no!
Well, I do commend her choice;
And will no longer have it be delay'd.—
Soft! here he comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter Pericles.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!
Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholden to you
For your sweet music this last night: I do
Protest my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.
Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend;
Not my desert.
Sim. Sir, you are music's master.
Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.
Sim. Let me ask you one thing:
What do you think of my daughter, sir?
Per. A most virtuous princess.
Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?
Per. As a fair day in summer,—wondrous fair.
Sim. Sir, my daughter thinks very well of Ay, so well that you must be her master, [it.
And she will be your scholar: therefore look to
Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.
Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.

Per. [Aside.] What's here?
A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre!
'Tis the king's subtilty to have my life,—
O, seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman,
That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.
[thou art
Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and A villain.
Per. By the gods, I have not:
Never did thought of mine levy offence;
Nor never did my actions yet commence
A deed might gain her love or your displeasure.
Sim. Traitor, thou liest.
Per. Traitor!
Sim. Ay, traitor.
Per. Even in his throat,—unless it be the king,—
That calls me traitor, I return the lie.

Sim. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent,
I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.
Sim. No?
Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter Thaisa.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father if my tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you.
That. Why, sir, say if you had, [glad?
Who takes offence at that would make me
Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?—
[Aside.] I am glad on't with all my heart. —
I'll tame you; I'll bring you in subjection.
Will you, not having my consent,
Bestow your love and your affections
Upon a stranger?—[aside] who, for aught I know,
May be,—nor can I think the contrary,—
As great in blood as I myself.—
Therefore, hear you, mistress; either frame
Your will to mine,—and you, sir, hear you,
Either be ruin'd by me, or I will make you—
Man and wife.
Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal it too:
And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes de-
And for further grief,—God give you joy! —
What, are you both pleas'd?
That. Yes, if you love me, sir
Per. Even as my life, or blood that fosters it.
Sim. What, are you both agreed?
Both. Yes, if't please your majesty.
Sim. It pleaseth me so well that I will see you wed;
And then, with what haste you can, get you to bed.
[Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Now sleep yslaked hath the rout;
No din but snores the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
Of this most pompous marriage feast.
The cat, with eyne of-burning coal,
Now couches fore the mouse's hole;
And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,
Aye the blither for their drouth.
Ilymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded. —Be attent,
And time that is so briefly spent
With your fine fancies quaintly echo:
What's dumb in show I'll plain with speech.

Dumb Show.

Enter Pericles and Simonides at one side, with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a letter: he shows
it to Simonides; the Lords kneel to Pericles.
Then enter Thaisa, with child, and Lychorida. Simonides shows his daughter the letter; she receives: she and Pericles take leave of her father, and depart with Lychorida and their Attendants. Then event Simonides, &c.

By many a durn and painful perch
Of Pericles the careful search,
By the four opposing coigns
Which the world together joins,
Is made with all due diligence
That horse and sail and high expense
Can stead the quest. At last from Tyre,— Fame answering the most strange inquire,—
To the court of King Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenor these:—
Antiochus and his daughter's dead;
The men of Tyre on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none:
The mutiny he there hastes t' oppress;
Says to 'em, if King Pericles
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Y-ravished the regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
Our heir-apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
His queen with child makes her desire,—
Which who shall cross?—along to go:—
Omit we all their dole and woe:—
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow; half the flood
Laden their keel cut: but fortune's mood
Varies again; the grizzly north
Disgorges such a tempest forth
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives:
The lady shrieks, and, well-a-nar,
Does fal in travail with her fear:
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey;
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-toss'd Pericles appears to speak.

[Exit.]

Scene I. —Enter Pericles, on a ship at sea.

Per. Thou god of this great vast, rebuke these surges,
[that hast
Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass,
Having call'd them from the deep! O, still Thy deafening, dreadful thunders; gently quench Thy nimble, sulphurous flashes! —O, how Lychorida,
Fously;
How does my queen?—Thou stormest venom.
Wilt thou spit all thyself?—The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death,
Unheard.—Lychorida!—Lucina, O
Divinest patroness, and midwife gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity
Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travail!

Enter Lychorida, with an Infant.

Ly. Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I Am like to do: take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

Per. How, how, Lychorida!

Ly. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Here's all that is left living of your queen,—
A little daughter: for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods!
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We here
Recall not what we give, and therein may
Vie in honour with you.

Ly. Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge,

Per. Now, mild may be thy life!
For a more blusterous birth had never babe:
Quiet and gentle thy conditions! for
Thou art the rudest weeleom'd to this world That ever was prince's child. Happy what follows!
Thou hast as chiding a nativity.
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make.
To herald thee from the womb: even at the first
Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit,
With all thou canst find here.—Now, the good Gent. gods
Throw their best eyes upon’t!

Enter two Sailors.

1 Sail. What courage, sir? God save you!
Per. Courage enough: I do not fear the flaw;
It hath done to me the worst. Yet, for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh-new seafarer,
I would it would be quiet.
1 Sail. Slack the billows there!—Thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself.
2 Sail. But sea-room, and the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.
1 Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard: the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.
Per. That’s your superstition.
1 Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed; and we are strong in custom.
Therefore briefly yield her; for she must o’erboard straight. [queen!
Per. As you think meet.—Most wretched
Lye. Here she lies, sir,
Per. A terrible childbed hast thou had, my dear;
No light, no fire: the unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time
To give thee hallow’d to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin’d, in the coze;
Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And eye-remaining lamps, the belching whale
And humming water must o’erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells.—O Lychorida,
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels: and bid Nicander
Bring me the satin coffer: lay the babe
Upon the pillow: his thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.

[Exit Lychorida.

2 Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulked and bitumed ready.
Per. I thank thee.—Mariner, say what coast is this?
2 Sail. We are near Tharsus.
Per. Thither, gentle mariner, Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?
2 Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.
Per. O, make for Tharsus!—
There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyre: there I’ll leave it
At careful nursing.—Go thy ways, good mariner:
I’ll bring the body presently. [Exit.

Scene II.—Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon’s House.

Enter Cerimon, a Servant, and some persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter Philemon.

Phil. Doth my lord call?
Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men:
It has been a turbulent and stormy night.
Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as this,
Till now, I ne’er endur’d. [turn;
Cer. Your master will be dead ere you re—
There’s nothing can be minister’d to nature
That can recover him.—Give this to the ’pothecary,
And tell me how it works. [To Philemon.
[Exeunt all but Cerimon.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Good-morrow, sir.
2 Gent. Good-morrow to your lordship.
Cer. Gentlemen, Why do you stir so early?
1 Gent. Sir,
Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,
Shook as the earth did quake;
The very principals did seem to rend,
And all to topple: pure surprise and fear
Made me to quit the house. [early;
2 Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so
’Tis not our husbandry.
Cer. O, you say well.
1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having
Rich tire about you, should at these early hours
Shake off the golden slumber of repose,
It is most strange
Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compell’d.
Cer. I held it ever,
Virtue and cunning were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches: carelesse.—
May the two latter darken and expend;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a man a god. ’Tis known I ever
Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o’er authorities, I have,—
Together with my practice,—made familiar
To me and to my aid the blest infusions
That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones;
And I can speak of the disturbances
That nature works, and of her cures; which give me
A more content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the fool and death. [pour'd forth
2 Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus
Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd:
And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even
Your purse, still open, hath built Lord Cerimon
Such strong renown as time shall never raze.

Enter two Servants with a chest.

1 Serv. So; lift there.
Cer. What is that?
1 Serv. Sir, even now
Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest:
'Tis of some wreck.
1 Gent. 'Tis down, let's look upon 't.
2 Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.
Cer. Whate'er it be,
'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight:
If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,
It is a good constraint of fortune that
It becalms upon us.
2 Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.
Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bitum'd!--
Did the sea cast it up?
1 Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,
As toss'd it upon shore.
Cer. Wrench it open;
Says—it smells most sweetly in my sense.
2 Gent. A delicate odour.
Cer. As ever hit my nostril.—So, up with it.
O you most potent gods! what's here? a Corse!
1 Gent. Most strange! [entreasur'd
Cer. Shrouded] in cloth of state; balm'd and
With bags of spices full! A passport too!—
Apollo, perfect me in the characters!
[Reads from a scroll.

Here I give to understand,—
If e'er this coffin drive a-land,—
I, King Pericles, have lost
This queen, worth all our mundane cost.
Who finds her, give her burying;
She was the daughter of a king:
Besides this treasure for a fee,
The gods requite his charity!

I, thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart
That even cracks for woe!—This chance'd to-night.
2 Gent. Most likely, sir.
Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;
For look how fresh she looks!—They were too rough

That threw her in the sea.—Make a fire within:
Fetch hither all my boxes in my closet.
[Exit a Servant.

Death may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again
The o'erpress'd spirits. I heard of an Egyptian
That had nine hours lien dead,
Who was by good appliances recover'd.

Re-enter a Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and cloths.—
The rough and woeful music that we have,
Cause it to sound, beseech you.
[block!—
The viol once more:—how thou stir'st, thou
The music there!—I pray you, give her air.—

Gentlemen,
This queen will live: nature awakes; a warmth
Breathes out of her: she hath not been entranc'd
Above five hours: see how she 'gins to blow
Into life's flower again!
1 Gent. The heavens,
Through you, increase our wonder, and set up
Your fame for ever.
Cer. She is alive; behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
Which Pericles hath lost,
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
The diamonds of a most praised water
Do appear, to make the world twice rich.—Live,
And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,
Rare as you seem to be.

[She moves.
That.
O dear Diana,
Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this?
2 Gent. Is not this strange?
1 Gent. Most rare.
Cer. Hush, my gentle neighbours!
Lend me your hands; to the next chamber bear
her.
Get linen: now this matter must be look'd to,
For her relapse is mortal. Come, come;
And Æsculapius guide us!
[Exeunt, carrying out Thaisa.

Scene III.—Tharsus. A Room in Cleon's
House.

Enter Pericles, Cleon, Dionyza, and Lychorida with Marina in her arms.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone;
My twelvemonths are expir'd, and Tyrus stands
In a litigious peace. You and your lady
Scene III.] Pericles, Prince of Tyre.

Take from my heart all thankfulness! The gods
Make up the rest upon you!
Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you mortally,
Yet glance full wanderingly on us.
Dion. O your sweet queen!
That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought her hither,
To have bless'd mine eyes!
Per. We cannot but obey
The powers above us. Could I rage and roar
As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end
Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina,— whom,
For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so,—
here
I charge your charity withal, leaving her
The infant of your care; beseeching you
To give her princely training, that she may be Manner'd as she is born.
Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think
Your grace, that fed my country with your corn,—
For which the people's prayers still fall upon you,— Must in your child be thought on. If negligence Should therein make me vile, the common body, By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty: But if to that my nature need a spur, The gods revenge it upon me and mine To the end of generation!
Per. I believe you;
Your honour and your goodness teach me to't Without your vows. Till she be married, madam,
By bright Diana, whom we honour, all Unscissar'd shall this hair of mine remain, Though I show ill in't. So I take my leave. Good madam, make me blessed in your care In bringing up my child.
Dion. I have one myself,
Who shall not be more dear to my respect Than yours, my lord.
Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.
Cle. We'll bring your grace e'en to the edge o' the shore,
Then give you up to the vast Neptune and
The gentlest winds of heaven.
Per. I will embrace
Your offer. Come, dearest madam.—O, no tears,
Lychorida, no tears:
Look to your little mistress, on whose grace You may depend hereafter.—Come, my lord.
[Exeunt.]
She would with rich and constant pen
Vail to her mistress Dian; still
This Philothen contends in skill
With absolute Marina: so
With the dove of Paphos might the crow
Vie feathers white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,
And not as given. This so darks
In Philothen all graceful marks
That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
A present murderer does prepare
For good Marina, her daughter
Might stand peerless by this slaughter.
The sooner her vile thoughts to steal,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead:
And cursed Dionyza hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prest for this blow. The unborn event
I do commend to your content:
Only I carry winged time
Post on the lane feet of my rhyme;
Which never could I so convey Unless your thoughts went on my way.—
Dionyza does appear,
With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.

Scene I.—Tharsus. An open Place near the Sea-shore.

Enter Dionyza and Leonine.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do't.

'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
You canst not do a thing 'tis the world so soon
To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience, [bosom,
Which is but cold, inflaming love in thy
I blame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I will do't; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter, then, the gods should have Here she comes weeping for her only mistress' death.
Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter Marina with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed,
To strew thy green with flowers: the yellows,
Blues,
The purple violets, and marigolds
Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave [maid,
While summer-days do last. Ay me! poor
Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is like a lasting storm,
Whirring me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you keep alone?
How chance my daughter is not with you?
Do not
Consume your blood with sorrowing: you
A nurse of me. Lord, how your favour's chang'd
With this unprofitable woe! Come,
Give me your flowers ere the sea mar them.
Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there,
And it pierces; and sharpens the stomach.—
Come,
Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you;
I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come;
I love the king your father, and yourself,
With more than foreign heart. We every day
Expect him here: when he shall come, and find
Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of this great voyage;
Blame both my lord and me that we have taken
No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you.
Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve
That excellent complexion, which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for me
Can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it. [you.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least:
Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for awhile:
Pray, walk softly, do not heat your blood:
What! I must have a care of you.

Mar. My thanks, sweet madam.—
[Exit. Dionyza.

Is this wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born the wind was north.

Leon. Was't so?

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,
But cried, 'Good seamen!' to the sailors, galling
His kindly hands with hauling of the ropes;
And, clasping to the mast, endured a sea
That almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born:
Never was waves nor wind more violent;
And from the ladder-tackle washes off
A canvas-climber: Hal! says one, will out?
And with a dropping industry they skip
From stem to stern: the boatswain whistles, and
The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come, say your prayers.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

SCENE II.]  PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.  1015

Mar.  What mean you?
Leon.  If you require a little space for prayer, I grant it: pray; but be not tedious, For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn To do my work with haste.
Mar.  Why will you kill me?
Leon.  To satisfy my lady.
Mar.  Why would she have me kill’d?
Now, as I can remember, by my troth, I never did her hurt in all my life: I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn To any living creature: believe me, I, I never kill’d a mouse, nor hurt a fly: I trod upon a worm against my will, But I wept for it.  How have I offended, Wherein my death might yield her profit, Or my life imply her danger?
Leon.  My commission Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.  [hope.
Mar.  You will not do’t for all the world, I You are well-favour’d, and your looks foreshow You have a gentle heart.  I saw you lately When you caught hurt in parting two that fought:
Good sooth, it show’d well in you: do so now: Your lady seeks my life; come you between, And save poor me, the weaker.
Leon.  I am sworn, And will despatch.

Enter Pirates whilst Marina is struggling.
1 Pirate.  Hold, villain!
[Leonine runs away.
2 Pirate.  A prize! a prize!
3 Pirate.  Half-part, mates, half-part.  Come, let’s have her aboard suddenly.
[Execut Pirates with Marina.
Re-enter Leonine.
Leon.  These roving thieves serve the great pirate Valdes, And they have seiz’d Marina.  Let her go: There’s no hope she will return.  I’ll swear she’s dead And thrown into the sea.—But I’ll see further: Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her, Not carry her aboard.  If she remain, Whom they have ravish’d must by me be slain.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—Mitylene.  A Room in a Brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and Boult.

Pand.  Boult,— Boult.  Sir?
Pand.  Search the market narrowly: Mity-

e is full of gallants.  We lost too much money this mart by being too wenchless.
Bawd.  We were never so much out of creatures.  We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.
Pand.  Therefore let’s have fresh ones, whate’er we pay for them.  If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade we shall never prosper.
Bawd.  Thou sayest true; tis not our bringing up of poor bastards,—as, I think, I have brought up some eleven,— Boult.  Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again.—But shall I search the market?
Bawd.  What else, man?  The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sudden.
Pand.  Thou sayest true; they are too unwholesome, o conscience.  The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.
Boult.  Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms.—But I’ll go search the market.  [Exit.
Pand.  Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.
Bawd.  Why to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?
Pand.  O, our credit comes not in like the commodity; nor the commodity wagers not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, ’twere not amiss to keep our door hatch’d.  Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.
Bawd.  Come, other sorts offend as well as we.
Pand.  As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse.  Neither is our profession any trade; it’s no calling.—But here comes Boult.

Re-enter Boult, with Marina and the Pirates.
Boult.  [To Marina.]  Come your ways.—My masters, you say she’s a virgin?
1 Pirate.  O, sir, we doubt it not.
Boult.  Master, I have gone through for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.
Bawd.  Boult, has she any qualities?
Boult.  She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes: there’s no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.
Bawd.  What’s her price, Boult?
Boult.  It cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE. [ACT IV.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters; you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

[Exit Pand and Pirates.

Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her,—the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity; and cry, He that will give most shall have her first. Such a maidhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boult. Performance shall follow. [Exit.

Mar. That I am pretty. [in you.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault.

To 'scape his hands where I was like to die.

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well: you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bow’d as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up.—Boult’s returned.

Re-enter Boult.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I pr’ythee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. Faith, they listened to me as they would have hearkened to their father’s testament. There was a Spaniard’s mouth so watered that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cows i’ the hams?

Bawd. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boult. Ay: he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he doth but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Bawd. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. [To Mar.] Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly; to despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do makes pity in your lovers: seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O, take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou sayest true, i’ faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,— Bawd. Thou mayst cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so.

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boult, spend thou in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you’ll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,
Untied I still my virgin knot will keep.
Diana, aid my purpose!

_Bawd._ What have we to do with Diana?
Pray you, will you go with us?  [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—THARSUS. A Room in Cleon's House.

  _Enter Cleon and Dionyza._

  _Dion._ Why, are you foolish?  Can it be undone?

  _Cle._ O Dionyza, such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon!

  _Dion._ I think
You'll turn a child again.  [world,
  _Cle._ Were I chief lord of all the spacious I'd give it to undo the deed.  O lady,
Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess
To equal any single crown o' the earth
I' the justice of compare!  — O villain Leonine!
Whom thou hast poison'd too;
If thou hast drunk to him, 't had been a kind
Becoming well thy fact: what canst thou say
When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

  _Dion._ That she is dead.  Nurses are not the fates,
To foster it, nor ever to preserve.  [it?
She died at night; I'll say so.  Who can cross
Unless you play the pious innocent,
And for an honest attribute cry out,
_She died by foul play._

  _Cle._ O, go to.  Well, well.
Of all the faults beneath the heavens the gods
Do like this worst.

  _Dion._ Be one of those that think
The petty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles.  I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

  _Cle._ To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his pre-consent, he did not flow
From honourable sources.

  _Dion._ Be it so, then:
Yet none does know, but you, how she came dead,
Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.
She did distain my child, and stood between
Her and her fortunes: none would look on her,
But cast their gazes on Marina's face;
Whilst ours was blurted at, and held a malkin,
Not worth the time of day.  It pierc'd me through;
And though you call my course unnatural,
You not your child well loving, yet I find
It greets me as an enterprise of kindness
Perform'd to your sole daughter.

_Cle._ Heavens forgive it!

  _Dion._ And as for Pericles,  [hear, What should he say?  We wept after her
And yet we mourn: her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 'tis done.

  _Cle._ Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's face,
Seize with thine eagle's talons.

  _Dion._ You are like one that superstitiously
Doth swear to the gods that winter kills the flies:
But yet I know you'll do as I advise.

  _Enter Gower, before the Monument of Marina at Tharsus._

  _Gow._ Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;
Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for't;
Making,—to take your imagination,—
From bourn to bourn, region to region.
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language in each several clime,
Where our scenes seem to live.  I do beseech you
To learn of me, who stand I' the gaps to teach
The stages of our story.  Pericles
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,
Attended on by many a lord and knight,
To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
Old Escanes, whom Heliacus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate,
Is left to govern.  Bear you it in mind,
Old Heliacus goes along behind.  [brought Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have
This king to Tharsus,—think his pilot thought;
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on,—
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.
Like motes and shadows see them move awhile;
Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

  _Dumb show._

_Enter, at one side, Pericles with his Train;  _Cleon and Dionyza at the other.  _Cleon shows Pericles the Tomb of Marina, whereas Pericles makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs.
Then exeunt Cleon and Dionyza._

See how belief may suffer by foul show!
This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through and biggest tears o'er-shower'd,
Leaves Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears.

Never to wash his face nor cut his hairs;
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
A tempest which his mortal vessel teares,
And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit
The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionysus.

[Reads the inscription on Marina's Monument.]

The fairest, sweetest, and best lies here,
Who wither'd in her spring of year,
She was of Tyrus the king's daughter,
On whom foul death hath made this slaughter;
Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,
Thetis, being proud, swallowed some part of the earth:
Therefore the earth, fearing to be overflow'd,
Hath Thetis' birth child on the heavens bestowed:
We refuse she doeth, and she will never stint—
Make raging battery upon shores of earth.

No visard does become black villany
So well as soft and tender flattery.
Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered
By Lady Fortune; while our scene must play
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day
In her unholy service. T'ence, then,
And think you now are all in Mitylene.

[Exit.]

Scene IV.—MITYLENE. A Street before the Brothel.

Enter, from the Brothel, two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like?
2 Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.
1 Gent. But to have divinity preached there! did you ever dream of such a thing?
2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more livery-houses: shall's go hear the vestals sing?
1 Gent. I'll do anything now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting for ever.

[Exeunt.]

Scene V.—MITYLENE. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and Boult.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she is able to ease the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation. We must either get her ravished or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll dishonour us all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests.

[For me!]

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness.

Bawd. Faith, there's no way to be rid on't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and clown if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now, the gods to bless your honour!

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your resorts stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity? Have you that man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would —but there never came her like in Mitylene.

Lys. If she'd do the deed of darkness, thou would'st say. [well enough.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say.

Lys. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. What, prythee?

Boult. O, sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste. [Exit Boult.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk,— never plucked yet, I can assure you.

Re-enter Boult with Marina.

Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you:— leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. First, I would have you note this is an honourable man.

[To Mar., whom she takes aside.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

Mar. If he govern the country you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that I know not.

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? I'll line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha' you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together.—Go thy ways.—[Execunt Bawd, Vander, and Boult.] Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. What I cannot name but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profes-

Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to't so young? Were you a gamer at five or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into't? I hear you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place: come, come. [now;]

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it If put upon you, make the judgment good That thou knowst worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this?—Some more;—be sage.

Mar. For me, That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune Hath plac'd me in this sty, Where, since I came, Diseases have been sold dearer than physic,— O that the good gods Would set me free from this unhallow'd place, Though they did change me to the meanest bird That flies i' the purer air!

Lys. I did not think Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou couldst.

Mar. If I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee;

Lys. For me, be you thoughten

Mar. The good gods preserve you!

That I came with no ill intent; for to me

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.

Lys. Avaunt, thou damned doorkeeper! Your house, for this virgin that doth prop it, Would sink and overwhelm you. Away!

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no more gentle-

That I came with no ill intent; for to me

The very doors and windows savour vilely.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too.

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure: crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE. [ACT V.

ACT V.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel scopes, and chances
Into an honest house, our story says.
She sings like one immortal, and she dances
As goddess-like to her admired lays;
Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her needle
composes berry,
Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or
That even her art sisters the natural roses;
Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry:
That pupils lacks she none of noble race.
Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain
She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place;
And to her father turn our thoughts again,
Where we left him, on the sea. We there him
lost;
Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd
Here where his daughter dwells; and on this coast
Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd God Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence
Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,
His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense;
And to him in his barge with fervour hies.
In your supposing once more put your sight
Of heavy Pericles, think this his bark:
Where what is done in action, more, if might,
Shall be discover'd; please you, sit, and hark.

[Exit.

Scene I.—On board Pericles' ship, off Mitylene. A Pavilion on deck with a curtain before it; PERICLES within it, reclining on a couch. A barge lying beside the Tyrian vessel.

Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge; to them HEli-CANUS.

Tyr. Sail. Where is Lord Helicanus? he can resolve you.

[To the Sailor of Mitylene.

O, here he is.—Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene,
And in it is Lysimachus the governor, [will?
Who craves to come aboard. What is your Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.
Enter two or three Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Doth your lordship call?
Hel. Gentlemen, [pray.
There is some of worth would come aboard; I
Greet them fairly.
[The Gentlemen and the two Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.
Enter, from thence, Lysimachus and Lords, with the Gentlemen and the two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir,
This is the man that can, in aught you would,
Resolve you.
Lys. Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve
you!
Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.
Lys. You wish me well.
Being onshore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,
Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I made to it, to know of whence you are.
Hel. First, what is your place?
Lys. I am the governor
Of this place you lie before.
Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king; [spoken
A man who for this three months hath not
To any one, nor taken sustenance,
But to prologue his grief.
Lys. Upon what ground is his distemper?
Hel. 'Twould be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.
Lys. May we not see him?
Hel. You may;
But bootless is your sight,—he will not speak to any.
Lys. Yet let me obtain my wish.
Hel. Behold him [Pericles discovered].
This was a goodly person
Till the disaster that one mortal night
Drove him to this.
Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods preserve
you!
Hail, royal sir!
Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.
1 Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mitylene, I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.
Lys. 'Tis well bethought.
She, questionless, with her sweet harmony
And other choice attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd parts,
Which now are midway stopp'd:
She is all happy as the fairest of all,
And, with her fellow maids, is now upon
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.
[He whispers first Lord, who goes off in the barge of Lysimachus.
Hel. Sure, all's effectual; yet nothing we'll omit [kindness
That bears recovery's name. But, since your
We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staledness.
Lys. O, sir, a courtesy
Which if we should deny, the most just gods
For every girth would send a caterpillar,
And so afflict our province.—Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.
Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you:
but, see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the barge, First Lord, with Marina and a young Lady.

Lys. O, here is
The lady that I sent for.—Welcome, fair one!—
Is't not a goodly presence?
Hel. She's a gallant lady.
Lys. She's such a one that, were I will assur'd
Came of gentle kind and noble stock, [wed —
I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely
Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:
If that thy prosperous and artificial fact
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.
Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided
That none but I and my companion maid
Be suffer'd to come near him.
Lys. Come, let us leave her;
And the gods make her prosperous!
[MARINA SINGS.

Lys. Mark'd he your music?
Mar. No, nor look'd on us.
Lys. See, she will speak to him.
Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.
Per. Hum, ha!
Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a comet: she speaks,
My lord, that, may be, hath endure'd a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.
Though wayward fortune did malign my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings:
But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties
Bund me in servitude.—[Aside.] I will desist;
But there is something grows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear, Go not till he speak.

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—[you?]
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say
Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage
You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so.—
I pray you, turn your eyes upon me. [woman?]
You are like something that—What country
Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores.
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear. [weeping.
Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one [square brow;
My daughter might have been: my queen's
Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;
A silver voile'd; her eyes as jewel-like,
And cas'd as richly; in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry [you live?
The more she gives them speech.—Where do

Mar. Where I am but a stranger: from the deck
You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred?
And how achiev'd you these endowments, which
You make more rich to owe? [seem
Mar. If I should tell my history, it would Like lies, disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Prythee, speak:
Falseness cannot come from thee; for thou look'st
Mostly as Justice, and thou seem'st a palace
For the crown'd Truth to dwell in: I will believe thee,
And make my senses credit thy relation
To points that seem impossible; for thou look'st
Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends?
Dost thou not say, when I did push thee back,—
Which was when I perceiv'd thee,—that thou

Mar. From good descending?

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou said'st
Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might Equal mine,
If both were open'd.

Mar. Some such thing

I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story;
If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl: yet thou dost look Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling
Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?

Recount, I do beseech thee: come, sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. O, I am mock'd,
And thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startling me.
To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name
Was given me by one that had some power,—
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter?
And call'd Marina?

Mar. You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy?
Motion!—Well; speak on. Where were you born?

And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina

Per. For I was born at sea.

Mar. At sea! what mother?

Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king;
Who died the minute I was born,
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Deliver'd weeping.

Per. O, stop there a little!—

[Aside.] This is the rarest dream that e'er dull
sleep
Did mock sad fools withal: this cannot be:
My daughter's buried.—Well:—where were you bred?

I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,
And never interrupt you.

Mar. You'll scarce believe me: 'twere best I did give o'er.

Per. I will believe you by the syllable
Of what you shall deliver. Yet give me leave,—
How came you in these parts? where were you bred?

[leave me;

Mar. The king my father did in Tharsus
Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

SCENE 1.

Did seek to murder me: and having woo'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do't,
A crew of pirates came and rescu'd me;
Brought me to Mitylene. But, good sir, Whither will you have me? Why do you weep?
It may be
You think me an imposter: no, good faith;
I am the daughter to King Pericles, If good King Pericles be.
Per. No, Helicanus!
Hel. Calls my lord?
Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor, Most wise in general: tell me, if thou canst, What this maid is, or what is like to be, That thus hath made me weep?
Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene Speaks nobly of her.
Lys. She would never tell Her parentage; being demanded that, She would sit still and weep.
Per. O Helicanus, strike me, honour'd sir; Give me a gash, put me to present pain; Let this great sea of joys rushes upon me O'erbear the shores of my mortality, [lithis, And drown me with their sweetness.—O, come Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget; Thou that was born at sea, buried at Tharsus, And found at sea again!—O Helicanus, Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud As thunder threatens us: this is Marina.— What was thy mother's name? tell me but that, For truth can never be confirm'd enough, Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray, What is your title?
Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me now My drown'd queen's name,—as in the rest you said [of kingdoms, Thou'rst been godlike perfect,—thou'rt the heir And another life to Pericles thy father.
Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than To say my mother's name was Thaisa? Thaisa was my mother, who did end The minute I began. [my child. —
Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art Give me fresh garments.—Mine own Helicanus,— She is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have been By savage Cleon: she shall tell thee all; When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge She is thy very princess.—Who is this? Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene, Who, hearing of your melancholy state, Did come to see you.
Per. I embrace you.—

Give me my robes.—I am wild in my beholding. — [music?
O heavens bless my girl!—But, hark, what Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt, How sure you are my daughter.—But, what music?

Hel. My lord, I hear none.
Per. None!
The music of the spheres!—List, my Marina.
Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him way.
Lys. A pillow for his head:—
So, leave him all.—Well, my companion-friends, If this but answer to my just belief, I'll well remember you.
[Execute all but Pericles.

DIANA appears to PERICLES as in a vision.
Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus: hie thee thither,
And do upon mine altar sacrifice. [gether,
There, when my maiden priests are met to—
Before the people all,
Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife:
To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call,
And give them repetition to the life.
Or perform my bidding or thou liv'st in woe;
Do it, and happy; by my silver bow!
Awake and tell thy dream.

[Disappear.
Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,
I will obey thee.—Helicanus!

Re-enter HELICANUS, LYSIMACHUS, MARINA, &c.

Hel. Sir? [strike
Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to The inhospitable Cleon; but I am For other service first: toward Ephesus Turn our blown sails; eftsoms I'll tell thee why. — [To HELICANUS.
Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore, [To LYSIMACHUS.
And give you gold for such provision As our intents will need?
Lys. Sir,
With all my heart; and when you come ashore I have another suit.
Per. You shall prevail,
Were it to woo my daughter; for it seems You have been noble towards her.
Lys. [To your arm.
Per. Come, my Marina. [Exit.
Enter Gower, before the Temple of Diana at Ephesus.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run; More a little, and then done. This, my last boon, give me,— For such kindness must relieve me, — That you aptly will suppose What pageantry, what feats, what shows, What minstrelsy, and pretty din, The regent made in Mytilin, To greet the king. So he thriv'd, That he is promis'd to be wiv'd To fair Marina; but in no wise Till he had done his sacrifice, As Dian bade: wheroeto being bound The interim, pray you, all confound. In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd, And wishes fall out as they're will'd. At Ephesus the temple see, Our king, and all his company, That he can hither come so soon, Is by your fancy's thankful boon. [Exit.

Scene II.—The Temple of Diana at Ephesus; Thaisa standing near the altar as high priestess; a number of Virgins on each side; Cerimon and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter Pericles, with his Train; Lysimachus, Helicanus, Marina, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command, I here confess myself the King of Tyre; Who, frighted from my country, did wed At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa. At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth A maid-child, call'd Marina; who, O goddess, Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tharsus Was nurs'd with Cleon; who at fourteen years He sought to murder; but her better stars Brought her to Mitylene; 'gainst whose shore Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us, [she Where, by her own most clear remembrance, Made known herself my daughter. Thai. Voice and favour! — You are, you are — O royal Pericles! — [Faints. Per. What means the woman? she dies! help, gentlemen! Cer. Noble sir, If you have told Diana's altar true, This is your wife. Per. Reverend appearer, no; I knew her o'erboard with these very arms. Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'Tis most certain.
Cer. Look to the lady;— O, she's but o'er-joy'd.— Early in blustering morn this lady was Thrown upon this shore. I op'd the coffin. Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and plac'd her Here in Diana's temple.
Per. May we see them?
Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house, Whither I invite you.— Look, Thaisa is Recover'd.
Thai. O, let me look!
If he be none of mine, my sanctity Will to my sense bend no licentious ear, But curb it, spite of seeing.— O, my lord, Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak, Like him you are: did you not name a tempest, A birth and death?
Per. The voice of dead Thaisa! That. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead And drown'd.
Per. Immortal Dian!
Thai. Now I know you better. — When we with tears parted Pentapolis, The king my father gave you such a ring.

Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness[well, Makes my past miseries sport: you shall do That on the touching of her lips I may Melt, and no more be seen. O, come, be buried A second time within these arms.
Mar. My heart Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom. [Kneels to Thaisa.

Per. Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa; Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina For she was yielded there.
Thai. Bless'd, and mine own! Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen! Thai. I know you not.
Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre, I left behind an ancient substitute: Can you remember what I call'd the man? I have nam'd him oft.
Thai. 'Twas Helicanus then.
Per. Still confirmation:
Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he. Now do I long to hear how you were found; How possibly preserv'd; and who to thank, Besides the gods, for this great miracle.
Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord: this man, through whom
The gods have shown their power; 'tis he
That can from first to last resolve you.
Per. Revere sir,
The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?
Cer. I will, my lord.
Reseech you, first go with me to my house,
Where shall be shown you all was found with her;
How she came placed here in the temple;
No needful thing omitted.
Per. Pure Dian, bless thee for thy vision!
Will offer night-oblations to thee.—Thaisa,
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,
Shall marry her at Pentapolis.—And now,
This ornament
Makes me look dismal will I clip to form;
And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,
To grace thy marriage-day I'll beautify.
That. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,
My father's dead.
Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet there,
my queen,
We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves
Will in that kingdom spend our following days:
Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.—
Lor' Cerimon, we do our longing stay
To hear the rest untold: sir, lead's the way.
[Exeunt.

Enter Gower.

Gow. In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard
Of monstrous lust the due and just reward:
In Pericles, his queen and daughter, seen,— Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,— Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast,
Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last:
In Helicanus may you well descry
A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:
In reverend Cerimon there well appears
The worth that learned charity aye wears:
For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame
Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd name
Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,
That him and his they in his palace burn;
The gods for murder seemed so content
To punish them,—although not done, but meant.
So, on your patience evermore attending,
New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending.
[Exit.

ACT I.

Scene I.—A Room of State in King Lear's Palace.

Enter Kent, Gloster, and Edmund.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weighed that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge him that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could: whereupon she grew round-wombed, and had indeed, sir, a son for her cradie ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this knave came something saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair: there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My Lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.
Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again.—The king is coming.

[Senet within.

Enter Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Goneril, Regan, Cordelia, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France and Burgundy,

Gloster.

Glo. I shall, my liege.

Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.—[Divide]

Give me the map there.—Know that we have In three of our kingdom: and 'tis our fast intent To shake all cares and business from our age: Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburden'd crawl toward death.—Our son of Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany, We have this hour a constant will to publish Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife May be prevented soon. The princes, France and Burgundy, Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love, Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn, [daughters,—

And here are to be answer'd.—Tell me, my Since now we will divest us both of rule, Interest of territory, cares of state,—
Which of you shall we say doth love us most?
That we our largest bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge.—
Goneril,
Our eldest-born, speak first.

Cor. Sir, I love you more than words can wield the matter;
Dearer than eyesight, space, and liberty;
Beyond what can be valu’d, rich or rare;
No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honor;
As much as child e’er lov’d, or father found;
A love that makes breath poor and speech unable;
Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. [Aside.] What shall Cordelia do? Love, and be silent. [to this,] Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line
With shadowy forests and with champains rich’d,
With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,
We make thee lady: to thine and Albany’s issue
Be this perpetual.—What says our second daughter,
Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak.
Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short,—that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys [possesses;
Which the most precious square of sense
And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness’ love.

Cor. [Aside.] Then poor Cordelia!
And yet not so; since, I am sure, my love’s
More ponderous than my tongue.

Lear. To thee and thine hereditary ever
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;
No less in space, validity, and pleasure
Than that conferr’d on Goneril.—Now, our joy,
Although the last, not least; to whose young love
The vines of France and milk of Burgundy
Strive to be interest’d; what can you say to draw [Speak.
A third more opulent than your sisters?
Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing!
Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing: speak
Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
According to my bond; nor more nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia! mend your speech a little,
Lest you may mar your fortunes.

Lear. Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov’d me: I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
LEAR. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

KENT. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade That region of my heart: be Kent unmannerly When Lear is mad. What wouldst thou do, old man? [speak Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour's bourn?]
When majesty falls to folly. Reserve thy state; And in thy best consideration check This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment,
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least; Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sound Reverbs no hollowness.

LEAR. Kent, on thy life, no more.

KENT. My life I never held but as a pawn To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.

LEAR. Out of my sight!

KENT. See better, Lear; and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye.

LEAR. Now, by Apollo,—

KENT. Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.

LEAR. O, vassal! miscreant! [laying his hand on his sword.

ALB. and CORN. Dear sir, forbear.

KENT. Do;
Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow Upon the soul disease. Revoke thy gift; Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat, I'll tell thee thou dost evil.

LEAR. Hear me, recreant! On thine allegiance, hear me!— Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,— Which we durst never yet,—and with strain'd pride To come betwixt our sentence and our power,— Which nor our nature nor our place can bear,— Our potency made good, take thy reward. Five days we do allot thee for provision To shield thee from disasters of the world; And on the sixth to turn thy hated back Upon our kingdom: if, on the tenth day following, Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions, The moment is thy death. Away! by Jupiter, This shall not be revoked.

KENT. Fare thee well, king: sith thus thou wilt appear, Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.— The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid, [To Cordelia.}

That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said! And your large speeches may your deeds approve, [To Goneril and Regan.]
That good effects may spring from words of love.—
Thus Kent, O princes, bids you all adieu; He'll shape his old course in a country new. [Exit.

FLOURISH. RE-enter GLOSTER, with FRANCE, BURGUNDY, and ATTENDANTS.

GLO. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.

LEAR. My lord of Burgundy, We first address toward you, who with this king Hath rival'd for our daughter: what in the least Will you require in present dower with her, Or cease your quest of love?

BUR. Most royal majesty, I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd, Nor will you tender less.

LEAR. Right noble Burgundy, When she was dear to us we did hold her so; But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there she stands: It aught within that little seeming substance, Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd, And nothing more, may fitly like your grace, She's there, and she is yours.

BUR. I know no answer.

LEAR. Will you, with those infirmities she owes, Unfriend'd, new-adopted to our hate, [oath, Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our Take her or leave her?

BUR. Pardon me, royal sir; Election makes not up on such conditions.

LEAR. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power That made me, I tell you all her wealth.—For you, great king, [To France.]

I would not from your love make such a stray, To match you where I hate; therefore beseech you To avert your liking a more worthy way Than on a wretch whom nature is ashamed Almost to acknowledge hers.

FRANCE. This is most strange, That she, who even but now was your best object, The argument of your praise, balm of your age, Most best, most dearest, should in this trice of time Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle So many folds of favour. Sure her offence Must be of such unnatural degree That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection
Fall into taint: which to believe of her
Must be a faith that reason without miracle
Could never plant in me.

Cor. I yet beseech your majesty,—
It for I want that glib and oily art [intend,
To speak and purpose not; since what I well
I'll do't before I speak,—that you make known
Is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness,
No unchassic action or dishonour'd step,
That hath deprived me of your grace and favour; [richer,—
But even for want of that for which I am
A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue [it
That I am glad I have not, though not to have Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou
Hast not been born than not to have pleas'd me better.

France. Is it but this,—a tardiness in nature,
Which often leaves the history unspoke
That it intends to do?—My lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the lady? Love's not love
When it is mingled with regards that stand
As a salt from the entire point. Will you have her?
She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal king.
Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.

Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father
That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy!
Since that respects of fortune are his love
I shall not be his wife. [being poor:

France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich,
Most choice, forsaken; and most lov'd, despir'd!
Thou and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful, I take up what's cast away.
Gods, gods! 'tis strange that from their cold'st neglect
My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,
Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy
Can buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.—
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind:
Thou lostest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine; for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of hers again.—Therefore be gone
Without our grace, our love, our benison.—
Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Burgundy, Cornwall, Albany, Gloster, and Attendants.

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.
Cor. Ye jewels of our father, with wash'd
eyes
Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are;
And, like a sister, am most loth to call Your faults as they are nam'd. Love well our father:
To your professed bosoms I commit him:
But yet, alas, stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So, farewell to you both.

Reg. Prescribe not us our duty.

Gon. Let your study
Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd you
At fortune's alms. You have obedience scant'd,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

[hides:

Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning
Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.

[Exeunt France and Cordelia.

Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you;
next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is;
the observation we have made of it hath not been little: he always loved our sister most;
and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age: yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash: then must we look to receive from his age not alone the imperfections of long engraffed condition, but therewithal the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and i the heat.

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Hall in the Earl of Gloster's Castle.

Enter Edmund with a letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law
My services are bound. Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom, and permit
The curiosity of nations to deprive me,
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines [base?
Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore
When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true
As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us
With base? with baseness? bastardy? base, base?
Who, in the dusty stealth of nature, take
More composition and fierce quality
Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed,
Go to the creating a whole tribe of pops
Got 'tween asleep and wake?—Well, then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must have your hand:
Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund.
As to the legitimate: fine word,—legitimate!
Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I prosper.—
Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus! and France in choler parted! [power!
And the king gone to-night! subscrib'd his Confin'd to exhibition! All this done Upon the gad!—Edmund, how now! what news?
Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Putting up the letter.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?
Edm. I know no news, my lord.
Glo. What paper were you reading?
Edm. Nothing, my lord.
Glo. No? What needed, then, that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see: come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.
Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother that I have not all over-read; and for so much as I have perus'd, I find it not fit for your over-looking.
Glo. Give me the letter, sir.
Edm. I shall offend either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.
Glo. Let's see, let's see.
Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] This policy and reverence of are makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us till our old-ness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged fury; who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother,

Edgar.

Hum—Conspiracy!—Sleep till I waked him,— you should enjoy half his revenue,—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and a brain to breed it in? When came this to you? who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord, there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet. [brother's?
Glo. You know the character to be your Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but in respect of that,
I would fain think it were not.
Glo. It is his.
Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but I hope his heart is not in the contents.
Glo. Hath he never before sounded you in this business?
Edm. Never, my lord: but I have heard him oft maintain it to be fit that sons at perfect age and fathers declined, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain!—His very opinion in the letter!—Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detest'd, brutish villain! worse than brutish!
—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him.—
Abominable villain!—Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Think you so?
Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.
Edm. Nor is not, sure.
Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth—
Edmund, seek him oat; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide; in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked 'twixt son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction: there's son against father; the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves. —Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing: do it carefully. —And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty! —Tis strange. [Exit.

Edm. This is the excellent soppy of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune,—often the surfeit of our own behaviour,—we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and traitors by spherical predomination: drunkards, liars, and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail, and my nativity was under ursa major; so that it follows I am rough and lecherous. —Tut, I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing.

Enter Edgar.

Pat! — he comes like the catastrophe of the old comedy: my cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam. — O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! fa, sol, la, mi.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund! what serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and maladies against king and nobles; needless difidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical? [father last?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my

Edg. The night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? I found you no displeasure in him by word nor countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty forget his presence till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you, have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak: pray you, go; there's my key. —If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother!

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; I am no honest man if there be any good meaning toward you: I have told you what I have seen and heard but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it: pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.

[Exit Edgar.

A credulous father! and a brother noble, Whose nature is so far from doing harms That he suspects none; on whose foolish honesty My practices ride easy! — I see the business. — Let me, if not by birth, have hands by wit: All with me's meet that I can fashion fit.

[Exit.

Scene III.—A Room in the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Goneril and Oswald.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osw. Ay, madam. [hour

Gon. By day and night, he wrongs me; every He flashes into one gross crime or other, That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it:
His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us.

On every trifle.—When he returns from hunting, I will not speak with him; say I am sick.—If you come slack of former services, you shall do well; the fault of it I will answer. Osw. He's coming, madam; I hear him. [Horns within.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please,
You and your fellows; I'd have it come to
If he disdaine it, let him to my sister,
Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one,
Not to be overruled. Idle old man,
That still would manage those authorities.
That he hath given away!—Now, by my life,
Old fools are babes again; and must be us'd
With checks as flatteries,—when they are seen abus'd.

Remember what I have said.

Osw. Well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you;
What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows
To hold my course.—Prepare for dinner.

[Exeunt.

Scene IV.—A Hall in Albany's Palace.

Enter Kent, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech diffuse, my good intent
May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I rais'd my likeness.—Now, banish'd Kent,
If thou canst serve where thou dost stand con-
So may it come, thy master, whom thou lov'rt,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter King Lear, Knights,
and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner; go get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now! what art thou?

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem;
to serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise and says little; to fear judgment;
to fight when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be'st as poor for a subject as he's for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old to dote on her for any-things I have years on my back forty-eight.

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me: if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho, dinner!—Where's my knife? my fool?—Go you and call my fool hither.

[Exit an Attend.

Enter Oswald.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter?

Osw. So please you,— [Exit.

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back. [Exit a Knight.]—Where's my fool, ho?—I think the world's asleep.

Re-enter Knight.

How now! where's that mongrel?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I called him?

Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great alatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants as in the duke himself also and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! sayest thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent when I think your highness wronged.

Lear. Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception: I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into 't. — But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.—Go you and tell my daughter I would speak with her. [Exit an Attendant.]—Go you, call thither my fool.

[Exit another Attendant.

Re-enter Oswald.

O, you sir, you, come you hither, sir: who am I, sir?

Osw. My lady's father.

Lear. My lady's father! my lord's knave: you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Osw. I am none of these, my lord; I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? [Striking him.]

Osw. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither, you base football player. [Tripping up his heels.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away! I'll teach you differences: away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry: but away! go to; have you wisdom? so.

[pushes Oswald out.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there's earnest of thy service.

[Giving Kent money.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too; here's my coxcomb.

Lear. How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why, for taking one's part that's out of favour. Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'll catch cold shortly: there, take my coxcomb: why, this fellow has banished two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb. — How now, nuncle! Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself. There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah,—the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipped out, when the lady brach may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilential gall to me!

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:—

I have more than thou showest,

Speak less than thou knowest,

Lend less than thou owest,

Ride more than thou goest,

Learn more than thou tronest,

Set less than thou throwest;

Leave thy drink and thy whore,

And keep in-a-door,

And thou shalt have more

Than two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer,—you gave me nothing for 't.—Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy: nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to: he will not believe a fool.

[To Kent.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet one?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsel'd thee

To give away thy land,

Come place him here by me,—

Do thou for him stand:

The sweet and bitter fool

Will presently appear;

The one in motley here,

The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on 't, and loads too: they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.—Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i' the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou borest thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt: thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so.

Fools had ne'er less grace in a year; [Singing.]
For wise men are grown fo'lish,
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?
Fool. I have used it, nuncle, e'er since thou madest thy daughters thy mothers: for when thou gavest them the rod, and puttest down thine own breeches,

Then they for sudden joy did weep, [Singing.]
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep,
And go the fools among.

Pr'ythee, nuncle, keep a school-master that can teach thy fool to lie: I would fain learn to lie. [whipped.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you.
Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind of thing than a fool; and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' the middle:—here comes one of the parings.

Enter Goneril.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes that frontlet on? Methinks you are too much of late i' the frown.
Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure: I am better than thou art; I am a fool, thou art nothing. —Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face [to GON.] bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum,

He that keeps nor crust nor crumb,
Weary of all, shall want some.—
That's a sheathed peacod. [Pointing to Lear.
Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool,
But other of your insolent retinue
Do hourly carp and quarril; breaking forth
In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir, I had thought, by making this well known unto you,

To have found a safe redress; but now grow
By what yourself too late have spoke and done,
That you protect this course, and put it on
By your allowance; which if you should, the

Would not escape censure, nor the redressess sleep,
Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which else were shame, that then necessity
Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For, you know, nuncle,
The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long
That it had its head bit off by its young.

So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter?
Gon. I would you would make use of your good wisdom,
Whereof I know you are fraught; and put away
These dispositions, which of late transport you
From what you rightly are.
Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse?—Whoop, Jug! I love thee.
Lear. Does any here know me?—This is not Lear: [his eyes]
Does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are Either his notion weakens, his discernings
Are lethargied.—Ha! waking? 'tis not so.—
Who is it that can tell me who I am?
Fool. Lear's shadow. [of sovereignty,
Lear. I would learn that; for, by the marks Knowledge, and reason,
I should be false persuaded I had daughters.
Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.

Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman?
Gon. This admiration, sir, is much o' the favour
Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you
To understand my purposes aright:
As you are old and reverend, should be wise.
Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires;
Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd and bold,
That this our court, infected with their manners,
Shows like a riotous inn: epicurism and lust
Make it more like a tavern or a brothel
Than a grac'd palace. The shame itself doth speak
For instant remedy: be, then, desir'd
By her that else will take the thing she begs,
A little to disquint your train;
And the remainder, that shall still depend,
To be such men as may besort your age,
Which know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils!—
Saddle my horses; call my train together.—
Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee:
Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people; and your dis-order'd rabble
Make servants of their betters.
Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents,—[to Alb.] O, sir, are you come? [horses.—
Is it your will? Speak, sir.—Prepare my Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend, More hideous when thou show'st thee in a child Than the sea-monster!

Alb. Pray, sir, be patient.
Lear. Detested kite! thou liest:
[To Goneril.

My train are men of choice and rarest parts, That all particulars of duty know; And in the most exact regard support [fault, The worships of their name.—O most small How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show! Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature [love, From the fix'd place; drew from my heart all And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear! Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in [Striking his head.

And thy dear judgment out!—Go, go, my people. [ignorant

Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am Of what hath mov'd you.

Lear. It may be so, my lord. Hear, nature, hear; dear goddess, hear Suspend thy purpose if thou didst intend To make this creature fruitful! Into her womb convey sterility! Dry up in her the organs of increase; And from her derogate body never spring A babe to honour her! If she must teem, Create her child of spleen, that it may live And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her! Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth; With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks; Turn all her mother's pains and benefits To laughter and contempt; that she may feel How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child!—Away, away! [Exit Alb.

Lear. Now, gods that we adore, wherefore comes this? [it;

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know more of But let his disposition have that scope That detage gives it.

Re-enter Lear.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers at a clap! Within a fortnight!

Alb. What's the matter, sir?
Lear. I'll tell thee,—Life and death!—I am ashame'd [To Goneril.

That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus;

That these hot tears, which break from me perforce, Should make thee worth them.—Blasts and fogs upon thee! The untentend wounding of a father's curse, Pierce every sense about thee!—Old fond eyes, Beweep this cause again, I'll pluck you out, And cast you, with the waters that you lose, To temper clay.—Ha!

Let it be so: I have another daughter, Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable: When she shall hear this of thee, with her man's She'll lay thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think I have cast off for ever.

[Exeunt Lear, Kent, and Attendants.

Gon. Do you mark that?

Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril, To the great love I bear you,—[ho! Gon. Pray you, content,—What, Oswald, You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master. [To the Fool.

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry,—take the fool with thee.—

A fox, when one has caught her, And such a daughter, Should sure to the slaughter, If my cap would buy a halter: So the fool follows after. [Exit.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel.—A hundred knights!

'Tis politic and safe to let him keep [dream, At point a hundred knights: yes, that on every Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike, He may enguird his dotage with their powers, And hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I say!—

Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far: Let me still take away the harms I fear, Not fear still to be taken: I know his heart. What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister: If she sustain him and his hundred knights, When I have show'd the unfitness,—

Re-enter Oswald.

How now, Oswald!
What, have you writ that letter to my sister? Osw. Ay, madam. [horse:

Gon. Take you some company, and away to Inform her full of my particular fear; And thereto add such reasons of your own As may compact it more. Get you gone; And hasten your return. [Exit Oswald.

No, no, my lord, This milky gentleness and course of yours, Though I condemn it not, yet, under pardon, SCENE V.—Court before the Duke of Albany’s Palace.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these letters: acquaint my daughter no further with anything you know than comes from her demand out of the letter. If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there afore you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. [Exit.

Fool. If a man’s brains were in’s heels, were’t not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I pr’ythee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slipshod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she’s as like this as a crab’s like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. What canst tell, boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one’s nose stands in the middle on’s face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why to keep one’s eyes of either side’s nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong,—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind a father!—Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about’em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed: thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take’t again perforce!—Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I’d have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How’s that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old till thou hast been wise.

[heaven! Lear. O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet Keep me in temper: I would not be mad!—

Enter Gentleman.

How now! are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy. [my departure,

Fool. She that’s a maid now, and laughs at Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of Gloster.

Enter Edmund and Curan, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will be here with him this night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not.—You have heard of the news afoot; I mean, the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments?

Edm. Not I: pray, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, ’twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business.

My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a queasy question, Which I must act:—brevity and fortune work!—

Brother, a word:—descend:—brother, I say!

Enter Edgar.

My father watches:—O sir, fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are hid;

You have now the good advantage of the night.—

[well?

I have you not spoken ’gainst the Duke of Cornwall? He’s coming hither; now, i’ the night, i’ the haste,

And Regan with him: have you nothing said
Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany?
Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on 't, not a word.
Edm. I hear my father coming:—pardon me; In cunning I must draw my sword upon you:— Draw: seem to defend yourself: now quit you well.— [here! Yield:—come before my father.—Light, ho, Fly, brother.—Torches, torches!—So, farewell.]

[Exit Edgar.

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion
Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards
Do more than this in sport.—Father, father! Stop, stop! No help?

Enter Gloster, and Servants with torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?
Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,
Mambling of wicked charms, conjuring the To stand auspicious mistress,— Glo. But where is he?
Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.
Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?
Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could,—
Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after. [Exeunt Servants.]—By no means what?
Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;
But that I told him the revenging gods
'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend;
Spoke with how manifold and strong a bond
The child was bound to the father;—sir, in fine,
Seeing how lothly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion,
With his prepared sword, he charges home
My unprovided body, lanc'd mine arm:
But when he saw my best alarum'd spirits,
Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to the encounter,
Or whether gasted by the noise I made,
Fell suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him fly far:
Not in this land shall he remain uncaught;
And found, despatch'd.—The noble duke my master,
My worthy arch and patron, comes to-night:
By his authority I will proclaim it, [thanks,
That he which finds him shall deserve our bringing
The murderous coward to the stake;
He that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to do it, with curst speech I threaten'd to discover him: he replied,
Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think,

If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of any trust, virtue or worth, in thee [deny,—
Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should As this I would; ay, though thou didst produce
My very character,—I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spur
To make thee seek it.

Glo. O strong and fasten'd villain!
Would he deny his letter?—I never got him.

[Trumpets within.

Hark, the duke's trumpets! I know not why he comes.—
All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not scape;
The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend! since I came hither,—
Which I can call but now,—I have heard strange news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too Which can pursue the offender. How dost,
my lord?

Glo. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd,— it's crack'd! [life?

Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your He whom my father nam'd? your Edgar?

Glo. O lady, lady, shame would have it hid!

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights
That tend upon my father?

Glo. I know not, madam:—
It is too bad, too bad.

Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.

Reg. No marvel, then, though he were ill affected:
'Tis they have put him on the old man's death, To have the expense and waste of his revenues.
I have this present evening from my sister
Been well inform'd of them; and with such cautions,
That if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.— Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father A child-like office.

Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice; and receiv'd This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.
KING LEAR.

Corn. Is he pursu’d?

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Corn. If he be taken he shall never more
Be fear’d of doing harm: make your own purpose, [Edmund,

How in my strength you please.—For you,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours:
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir,

Truly, however else.

Glo. For him I thank your grace.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit you,—
[night:

Reg. Thus out of season, threading dark’ey’d
Occasions, noble Gloster, of some poise,
Wherein we must have use of your advice:—
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best thought it fit
To answer from our home; the several messengers

friend,
From hence attend despatch. Our good old
Lay comforts to your bosom; and bestow
Your needful counsel to our businesses,
Which crave the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, madam:
Your graces are right welcome. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Before Gloster’s Castle.

Enter Kent and Oswald severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend: art of this house?

Kent. Ay.

Osw. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I’ the mire.

Osw. Pr’ythee, if thou lovtest me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Osw. Why, then, I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold I would make thee care for me. [thee not.

Osw. Why dost thou use me thus? I know

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Osw. What dost thou know me for?

Kent. A knife, a rascal, an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knife; a lily-livered, action-taking whoreson, glass-gazing, superserviceable, finical rogue;
one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knife, beggar, coward, pander, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou denyest the least syllable of thy addition.

Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee nor knows thee?

Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me! Is it two days since I tripped up thy heels and beat thee before the king? Draw, you rogue: for, though it be night, yet the moon shines: I’ll make a sop o’ the moonshine of you: draw, you whoreson cullionly barber-monger, draw.

[Drawing his sword.

Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king; and take vanity the puppets part against the royalty of her father:
draw, you rogue, or I’ll so carbonado your shanks:—draw, you rascal; come your ways.

Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand;
you near slave, strike. [Beating him.

Osw. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter Edmund, Cornwall, Regan,
Gloster, and Servants.

Edm. How now! What’s the matter?

Kent. With you, goodman boy, if you please:
come, I’ll flesh you; come on, young master.

Glo. Weapons! arms! What’s the matter
here?

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives;
He dies that strikes again. What is the matter?

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the Corn. What is your difference? speak.

Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestir’t your valour. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee: a tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spared at suit of his gray beard,—

Kent. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter!—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolte’d villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him.—Spare my gray beard, you wagtail?

Corn. Peace, sirrah!

You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear
a sword,
Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues
as these,
Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain
Which are too intrinsic t'unloose; smooth every passion
That in the natures of their lords rebel;
Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;
Reneg, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks
With every gale and vary of their masters,
Knowing naught, like dogs, but following.—
A plague upon your epileptic visage!
Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool?
Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain
I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.
Corn. What, art thou mad, old fellow?
Glo. How fell you out?
Say that.
Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy
Than I and such a knave. [is his fault?
Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What Kent. His countenance likes me not.
Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers.
Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain:
I have seen better faces in my time
Than stands on any shoulder that I see
Before me at this instant.
Corn. This is some fellow Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect
A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb
Quite from his nature: he cannot flatter, he,—
An honest mind and plain,—he must speak truth!
An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.
These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness
Harbour more craft and more corrupter ends
Than twenty silly ducking observers
That stretch their duties nicely.
Kent. Sir, in good faith, in sincere verity,
Under the allowance of your great aspect,
Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire
On flickering Phoebus' front,—
Corn. What mean'st by this?
Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer: he that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't.
Corn. What was the offence you gave him?
Osul. I never gave him any:
It pleas'd the king his master very late
To strike at me, upon his misconstruction;
When he, compact, and flattering his displeasure,
Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted,
rail'd,
And put upon him such a deal of man,
That worthied him, got praises of the king
For him attempting who was self-sub'd;
And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me here again.
Kent. None of these rogues and cowards
But Ajax is their fool.
Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!—
You stubborn ancient knave, you reverence braggart,
We'll teach you,—
Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:
Call not your stocks for me: I serve the king;
On whose employment I was sent to you:
You shall do small respect, show too bold malice
Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.
Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!—
As I have life and honour, there shall he sit till noon. [night too.
Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog
You should not use me so.
Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will.
Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour
Our sister speaks of.—Come, bring away the stocks! [Stocks brought out.
Glo. Let me beseech your grace not to do so:
His fault is much, and the good king his master. [resection
Will check him for't, your purpos'd low con-
Is such as basest and contemned'st wretches
For pilferings and most common trespasses.
Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill
That he, so slightly valu'd in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.
Corn. I'll answer that.
Reg.: My sister may receive it much more worse
To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
For following her affairs.—Put in his legs.—
[Kent is put in the stocks.
Come, my lord, away.
[Exeunt all but Gloster and Kent.
Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,
Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for thee.
Kent. Pray, do not, sir: I have watch'd, and travell'd hard;
Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.
A good man’s fortune may grow at heels:
Give you good-morrow!

Glo. The duke’s to blame in this; ’twill be ill taken.

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw,— Thou out of heaven’s benediction com’st
To the warm sun!
Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may Peruse this letter!—Nothing almost sees miracles
But misery:—I know ’tis from Cordelia,
Who hath most fortunately been inform’d
Of my obscured course; and shall find time
From this enormous state,—seeking to give Losses their remedies,—All weary and over-watch’d,
Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shamefull lodging.
Fortune, good-night: smile once more; turn thy wheel! [He sleeps.]

SCENE III.—The open Country.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim’d; And by the happy hollow of a tree Escap’d the hunt. No port is free; no place, That guard and most unusual vigilance Does not attend my taking. While I may scape I will preserve myself: and am besought To take the basest and most poorest shape That ever penury, in contempt of man, [filth; Brought near to beast: my face I’ll grime with Blanket my loins; elf all my hair in knots; And with presented nakedness outface The winds and persecutions of the sky. The country gives me proof and precedent Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices, Strike in their numb’d and mortified bare arms Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary; And with this horrible object, from low farms, Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes, and mills, Sometime with lunatic band, sometime with prayers, [Tom! Enforce their charity.—Poor Turlygod! poor That’s something yet:—Edgar I nothing am. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before Gloster’s Castle. Kent in the Stocks.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. ’Tis strange that they should so depart from home, And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn’d,
The night before there was no purpose in them Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!

Lear. Ha!

Mak’st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha! he wears cruel garters. Horses are tied by the head; dogs and bears by the neck, monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

Lear. What’s he that hath so much thy place mistook
To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do’t.
They could not, would not do’t; ’tis worse than murder,
To do upon respect such violent outrage:
Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way Thou might’st deserve or they impose this usage,
Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness’ letters to them, Ere I was risen from the place that showed My duty kneeling, came there a recking post, Stew’d in his haste, half breathless, panting forth From Goneril his mistress salutations;
Deliver’d letters, spite of intermission, Which presently they read: on whose contents They summon’d up their meiny, straight took horse;
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer; gave me cold looks: And meeting here the other messenger, Whose welcome I perceived had poison’d mine,—
Being the very fellow which of late Display’d so saucily against your highness,— Having more man than wit about me, drew: He rais’d the house with loud and coward cries. Your son and daughter found this trespass worth The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter’s not gone yet, if the wild-geese fly that way. Fathers that wear rags
Do make their children blind;
But fathers that bear bags
Shall see their children kind.
Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to the poor.—
But, for all this, thou shalt have as many doleurs for thy daughters as thou canst tell in a year.

_Lea_r. O, how this mother swells up toward my heart!
_Hysterica passio,—down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's below!—Where is this daughter?
_Kent._ With the earl, sir, here within.
_Lea_r. Follow me not;
_Stay here._
_Gent._ Made you no more offence but what you speak of?
_Kent._ None.
_How chance the king comes with so small a Fool._ An thou hast'd been set in't the stocks for that question, thou hast'd well deserved it.
_Kent._ Why, fool?
_Fool._ We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring in the winter.
All that follow their noses are led by their eyes but blind men; and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That sir which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,
Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.
But I will tarry; the fool will stay,
And let the wise man fly:
The knave turns fool that runs away,
The fool no knave, perdy.
_Kent._ Where learn'd you this, fool?
_Fool._ Not i' the stocks, fool.

_Re-enter Lear, with Gloucester._

_Lea_r. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? they are weary?
They have travell'd all the night? More fetches;
The images of revolt and flying off.
Fetch me a better answer.

_Glo._ My dear lord.
You know the fiery quality of the duke;
How unremovable and fix'd he is
In his own course.

_Lea_r. Vengeance! plague! death! con-
Fiery? what quality? why, Gloucester, Gloucester, I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife.

_Glo._ Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.
_Lea_r. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man?
_Glo._ Ay, my good lord.
_Lea_r. The king would speak with Cornwall;
the dear father
_Would with his daughter speak, commands her Are they inform'd of this?—My breath and blood!—
Fiery? the fiery duke?—Tell the hot duke
No, but not yet:—may be he is not well.
Infirmitv doth still neglect all office
Where'to our health is bound; we are not ourselves

When nature, being oppress'd, commands the
To suffer with the body: I'll forbear;
And am fall'n out with my more headier will
To take the indispos'd and sickly fit
For the sound man.—Death on my state!—
wherefore

_Should he sit here? This act persuades me
That this remotion of the duke and her
Is practice only. Give me my servant forth.
Go tell the duke and's wife I'd speak with
them,
Now, presently: bid them come forth and hear
me,
Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum
Till it cry Sleep to death.

_Glo._ I would have all well betwixt you.

_Lea_r. O me, my heart, my rising heart!—
Down!

_Fool._ Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the eels when she put them i' the pasty alive; she knocked 'em o' the coxcombs with a stick, and cried, Down, wantons, down!
'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, buttered his hay.

_Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloucester, and Servants._

_Lea_r. Good-morrow to you both.
_Corn._ Hail to your grace!

_Reg._ I am glad to see your highness.
_Lea_r. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason
I have to think so: if thou shouldest not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,
Sepulchring an adulthood.—O, are you free?

_To Kent._

_Some other time for that._—Beloved Regan,
Thy sister's naught: O Regan, she hath tied Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture,
here,—
I can scarce speak to thee; thou ’lt not believe
With how deprav’d a quality—O Regan! [hope
Reg. I pray you sir, take patience: I have
You less know how to value her desert
Than she to scant her duty.
Lear. Say, how is that?
Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least
Would fail her obligation: if, sir, perchance
She have restrain’d the riots of your followers,
’Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,
As clears her from all blame.
Lear. My curses on her!
Reg. O, sir, you are old;
Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine: you should be rul’d and led
By some discretion, that discerns your state
Better than you yourself. Therefore, I pray you,
That to our sister you do make return;
Say you have wrong’d her, sir.
Lear. Ask her forgiveness?
Do you but mark how this becomes the house:
Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;
[Kneeling.
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg
That you’ll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.
Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks:
Return you to my sister.
Lear. [Rising.] Never, Regan:
She hath abated me half my train;
Look’d black upon me; struck me with her
tongue,
Most serpent-like, upon the very heart:—
All the stor’d vengences of heaven fall
On her ingratitude top! Strike her young bones,
You taking airs, with lameness!
Corn. Fie, sir, fie!
Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck’d fogs, drawn by the powerful sun,
To fall and blast her pride!
Reg. O the blest gods!
So will you wish on me when the rash mood is
on.
Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse:
Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give Thee o’er to harshness: her eyes are fierce;
but thine
Do comfort, and not burn. ’Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in: thou better know’st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
Effects of courtesy, duc’s of gratitude;
Thy half o’ the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow’d.
Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.
Lear. Who put my man i’ the stocks?
[Trumpet within.
Corn. What trumpet’s that?
Reg. I know’t,—my sister’s: this approves her letter,
That she would soon be here.

Enter Oswald.

Is your lady come?
Lear. This is a slave whose easy-borrow’d pride
Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.—
Out, varlet, from my sight!
Corn. What means your grace?
Lear. Who stock’d my servant? Regan, I have good hope [O heavens,
Thou didst not know on’t.—Who comes here?

Enter Goneril.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old, [part!—
Make it your cause; send down, and take my Art not amash’d to look upon this beard?—
[To Goneril.
O Regan, wilt thou take her by the hand?
Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have
I offended?
All’s not offence that indiscretion finds,
And dotage terms so.
Lear. O sides, you are too tough!
Will you yet hold?—How came my man i’ the stocks?
[orders
Corn. I set him there, sir: but his own dis-
Deserv’d much less advancement.
Lear. You! I did you?
Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
If, till the expiration of your month,
You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me:
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needful for your entertainment.
Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss’d?
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage against the enmity o’ the air;
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,—
Necessity’s sharp pinch!—Return with her?
Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took
Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg
To keep base life a-foot.—Return with her?
Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter
To this detested groom. [Pointing to Oswald.
Gon. At your choice, sir.
LEAR. I pr'ythee, daughter, do not make me mad:
I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell:
We'll no more meet, no more see one another:—
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter;
Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,
A plague-sores, an embossed carbuncle
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove:
Mend when thou canst; be better at thy leisure:
I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
And my hundred knights.

REG. Not altogether so:
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister;
For those that mingle reason with your passion
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

LEAR. Is this well spoken?
REG. I dare avouch it, sir: what, fifty followers?
Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yea, or so many, sith that both charge and danger
Speak 'gainst so great a number? How in one Should many people under two commands
Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.

GON. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance
From those that she calls servants, or from

REG. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack you,
We could control them. If you will come to
For now I spy a danger,—I entreat you
To bring but five-and-twenty: to no more
Will I give place or notice.

LEAR. I gave you all,—

REG. And in good time you gave it.
LEAR. Made you my guardians, my depositaries;
But kept a reservation to be follow'd
With such a number. What, must I come to
With five-and-twenty, Regan? said you so?

REG. And speak't again, my lord; no more
With five-and-twenty, Regan? said you so?
LEAR. These wicked creatures yet do look
When others are more wicked; not being the worst Stands in some rank of praise.—I'll go with

GON. Hear me, my lord:
What need you five-and-twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

REG. What need one?
LEAR. O, reason not the need. Our basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous:
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's: thou art a lady;
If only to go warm were gorgeous, [wea'rst,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous Which scarcely keeps thee warm.—But, for true need,—

You heavens, give me that patience, patience I
You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age; wretched in both!
If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger,
And let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks!—No, you unnatural bags,
I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall,—I will do such things,—

What they are yet I know not; but they shall
The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep;
No, I'll not weep:
I have full cause of weeping; but this heart
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws
Or ere I'll weep.—O fool, I shall go mad!

Exeunt Lear, Gloster, Kent, and Fool.
Storm heard at a distance.

CORN. Let us withdraw; 'twill be a storm.

REG. This house is little: the old man and his people Cannot be well bestow'd.

GON. 'Tis his own blame; hath put himself
And must needs taste his folly. [gladly,
REG. For his particular, I'll receive him
But not one follower.

GON. So am I purposed.

Where is my lord of Gloster?

CORN. Follow'd the old man forth:—he is re-

Re-enter Gloster.

GLO. The king is in high rage.

CORN. Whither is he going?

GLO. He calls to horse; but I know not whither.

CORN. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads

GON. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay. [winds

GLO. Alack, the night comes on, and the high
Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about
There's scarce a bush.
Reg.

O, sir, to wilful men.
The injuries that they themselves procure
Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors:
He is attended with a desperate train;
And what they may incense him to, being apt
To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear.
Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night:
My Regan counsels well: come out o' the storm.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

Scene I.—A Heath.

A storm, with thunder and lightning. Enter
Kent and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's there, besides foul weather?
Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king?
Gent. Contending with the fretful elements;
Bills the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change or cease; tears his white hair,
Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of;
Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro conflicting wind and rain.
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch,
The lion and the belted-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?
Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-jest
His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my note,
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,
Although as yet the face of it be cover'd
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;
Who have,—as who have not, that their great
Throne and set high?—servants who seem no less,
Which are to France the spies and speculations
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
Either in sniffs and packings of the dukes;
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne
Against the old kind king; or something deeper,
Whereof perchance these are but furnishings:—
But true it is, from France there comes a power
Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,

Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner.—Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding;
And from some knowledge and assurance offer
This office to you.

Gent. I will talk further with you.
Kent. No, do not.
For confirmation that I am much more Than my out wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,—
As fear not but you shall,—show her this ring;
And she will tell you who your fellow is
That yet you do not know. Tie on this storm!
I will go seek the king. [to say?

Gent. Give me your hand: have you no more Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet,—
[your pain
That when we have found the king,—in which
That way, I'll this,—he that first lights on him
Holla the other. [Exeunt severely.

Scene II.—Another part of the Heath.

Storm continues.

Enter Lear and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks!
Rage! blow!
You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!
You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vant couriers of oak-cleaning thunderbolts,
Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,
Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world!
Crack nature's moulds, all germens spill at once,
That make ingratitude so!

Fool. O nuncle, court holy water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door.
Good nuncle, in; ask thy daughters' blessing;
Here's a night pities neither wise men nor fools.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful! Spit, fire!
spout, rain!

Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:
I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness;
I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children;
You owe me no subscription: then let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man:—
But yet I call you servile ministers,
That will with two pernicious daughters join Come on, my boy: how dost, my boy? art cold? I am cold myself.—Where is this straw, my

That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has and a little tiny wit, — [Singing:
With heigh, ho, the wind and the rain,—
Must make content with frightsome fits,
Though the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, boy.—Come, bring us to this holv. [Exeunt Lear and Kent.
Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courte-zan.—
I'll speak a prophecy ere I go:—
When priests are more in word than matter;
When brewers mar their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailors' tutors;
No heretics burn'd, but wench'd sutors;
When every case in law is right;
No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
When slanders do not live in tongues;
Nor cutpurses come not to throncs;
When userers tell their gold if the field;
And bawds and whores do churches build;—
Then shall the realm of Albion
Come to great confusion:
Then comes the time, who lives to see't,
That going shall be us'd with feet.
This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Gloster and Edmund.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing. There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that: I have received a letter this night; 'tis dangerous to be spoken;—I have locked the letter in my closet: these injuries
the king now bears will be revenged home;
there is part of a power already husht: we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privily relieve him: go you and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: if he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace and a cod-piece;
that's a wise man and a fool. [love night

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all
I will say nothing.

Enter Kent.

Fool. Marry, here's grace and a cod-piece;
that's a wise man and a fool. [love night

Lear. Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pothcr o'er our heads,

That under covert and convenient seeming Hast practis'd on man's life: close pent-up guils,
Rive your concealing continents, and cry

More sinn'd against than sinning.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.—

Your high-engender'd battles 'gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put his head in has a good head-piece.

The cod-piece that will house
Before the head has any,
The head and he shall house;
So beggars marry many.

The man that makes his toe

And turn his sleep to wake.

Such groans of roaring wind and rain I never Remember to have heard: man's nature cannot carry
The affliction nor the fear.

Knt. Alack, bare-headed!

Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel;
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest:
Repose you there, while I to this hard house,—
More harder than the stones whereof'tis rais'd;
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Demned me to come in,—return, and force

There is strange things toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful.

Edm. This courtesy, forbidd thee, shall the duke Instantly know; and of that letter too:—
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses,—no less than all:
The younger rises when the old doth fall.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A part of the Heath with a Hovel.
Storm continues.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter:
The tyranny of the open night's too rough
For nature to endure.
Lear. Let me alone.
Kent. Good my lord, enter here.
Lear. Wilt break my heart?
Kent. I had rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.
Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much that this con-
Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee
But where the greater malady is fix'd, [bear;
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a

The mind's free
The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else
Save what beats there.—Filial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand
For lifting food to't?—But I will punish home:
No, I will weep no more.—In such a night
To shut me out!—Pour on; I will endure:—
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!—
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave
all,—
O, that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that.
Kent. Good my lord, enter here.
Lear. Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease:
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more.—But I'll go in.
In, boy; go first [to the Fool].—You houseless
Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.
[ Fool goes in.]
Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend
you
From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,
That thou mayst shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.
Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!
[Enter Fools out of the hovel.
Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit.
Help me, help me!
Kent. Give me thy hand—Who's there?
Fool. A spirit, a spirit: he says his name's poor Tom.
[ The straw?]
Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there Come forth.

Enter Edgar, disguised as a madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!—
Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.—
Hum! go to thy cold bed and warm thee.
Lear. Didst thou give all to thy daughters?
And art thou come to this?
Edg. Who gives anything to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, o'er beg and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inch'd bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor.
—Bless thy five wits!—Tom's a-cold.—O, do de, do de, do de.—Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes:—there coul'd I have him now,—and there,—and there, and there again, and there.

[Storm continues.]

Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?—
Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.
Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pendulous air [daughters!]

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.
Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdu'd nature
To such a lowness but his unkind daughters.—
Is it the fashion that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?
Judicious punishment! this flesh begot
Those pelican daughters.
Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill:—
Halloo, halloo, loo loo!
Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o’ the foul fiend: obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man’s sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom’s a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair; wore gloves in my cap; served the lust of my mistress’s heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it: wine loved I deeply, dice dearly; and in women out-paramoured the Turk: false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman: keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders’ books, and defy the foul fiend.—Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind: says sumn, mun, nonny. Dolphin my boy, boy, sessa! Let him trot by.

[Storm still continues.

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here’s three on’s are sophisticated! Thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings!—Come, unbutton here.

[Fool. Pr’ythee, uncle, be contented; ’tis a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher’s heart,—a small spark, all the rest on’s body cold.—Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the soul fiend Fibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Swithold footed thrice the old;
He met the nightmare and her nine-fold;
Bid her alight,
And her troth plight,
And, aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!

Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter Gloster with a torch.

Lear. What’s he?

Kent. Who’s there? What is’t you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets; swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog: drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tithing to tithing, and stock’d, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear:—

But mice and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom’s food for seven long year.
Beware my follower.—Peace, Smulkin; peace, thou fiend!

That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom’s a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me: my duty cannot suffer
To obey in all your daughters’ hard commands:
Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,
Yet have I ventur’d to come seek you out,
And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher.—

What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer;
Go into the house.

KING LEAR.

ACT III.

SCENE V.—A Room in GLOSTER’S Castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

CORN. I will have my revenge ere I depart his house.

EDM. Now, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

CORN. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother’s evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself.

EDM. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector?

CORN. Go with me to the duchess.

EDM. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

CORN. True or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

EDM. [Aside.] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully. I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

CORN. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Chamber in a Farm house adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOSTER, LEAR, KENT, FOOL, and EDMUND.

GLO. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

KENT. All the power of his wits have given way to his impatience:—the gods reward your kindness! [Exit GLOSTER.

EDG. Frateretto calls me; and tells me Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. —Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

FOOL. Pr’ythee, uncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman?

LEAR. A king, a king!

FOOL. No; he’s a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son; for he’s a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him. [spits

LEAR. To have a thousand with red burning
Come hissing in upon ’em,—

EDG. The foul fiend bites my back.

FOOL. He’s mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse’s health, a boy’s love, or a whore’s oath.

LEAR. It shall be done; I will arrange them
Come, sit thou here, most learned justice;—

[To EDMUND.

Thou, sapient sir, sit here [To the Fool].—Now, you she-foxes!—

EDG. Look, where he stands and glares!—
Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?
Come o’er the bourn, Bessy, to me,—

FOOL. Her boat hath a leak,
And she must not speak
Why she dares not come over to thee.

EDG. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. 1 Hopdance cries in Tom’s belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee. [amaz’d;

KENT. How do you, sir? Stand you not so
Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?
LEAR. I’ll see their trial first.—Bring in the evidence.—

Thou robed man of justice, take thy place;—

[To EDMUND.

And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity,

[To the Fool.

Bench by his side:—you are o’ the commission, Sit you too. [To KENT.

EDG. Let us deal justly.
Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?
Thy sheep be in the corn;
And for one blast of thy minikin mouth
Thy sheep shall take no harm.

PUR! the cat is gray.
LEAR. Arraign her first; ’tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

FOOL. Come hither, mistress. Is you name Goneril?

LEAR. She cannot deny it.

FOOL. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.
KING LEAR.

LEAR. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim [there!]
What store her heart is made on.—Stop her Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place!—
False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?
Edg. Bless thy five wits!
Kent. O pity!—Sir, where is the patience now That you so oft have boasted to retain?
Edg. [Aside.] My tears begin to take his part so much,
They'll mar my counterfeiting.
LEAR. The little dogs and all, [at me.
Tray, Blanch, and Sweetheart, see, they bark
Edg. Tom will throw his head at them.—
Avaunt, ye curs!
Be thy mouth or black or white,
Tooth that poisons if it bite;
Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,
Hound or spaniel, brach or lyn,
Or bobtail tike or trundle-tail,—
Tom will make them weep and wail:
For, with throwing thus my hand,
Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.
Do de, de, de. Sessa! Come, march to wakes and fairs and market-towns.—Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.
LEAR. Then let them anatomize Regan; see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts?—
[To Edgar.] You, sir, I entertain you for one of my hundred; only I do not like the fashion of your garments; you will say they are Persian; but let them be changed. [awhile.
Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here and rest
LEAR. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains:
So, so. We'll go to supper 't the morning.
Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter Gloster.

Glo. Come hither, friend: where is the king my master? [wits are gone.
Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not,—his
Glo. Good friend, I pray thee, take him in thy arms;
I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him:

If thou shouldst daily half an hour, his life,
With thine, and all that offer to defend him,
Stand in assured loss: take up, take up;
And follow me, that will to some provision

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps:—

This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken sinews,
Which, if convenience will not allow,
Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy master;
 Thou must not stay behind. [To the Fool.
Glo. Come, come, away.
[Execute Kent, Gloster, and the Fool, bearing off Lear.
Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes,
We scarcely think our miseries our foes.
Who alone suffers suffers most if 't the mind,
Leaving free things and happy shows behind:
But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erbear
When grief hath mates and bearing fellowship.
How light and portable my pain seems now,
When which makes me bend makes the king bow;
He childed as I father'd!—Tom, away!
Mark the high noises; and thyself bewray,
When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee,
In thy just proof escapes and reconciles thee.
What will hap more to-night, safe 'scape the king!
Lurk, lurk. [E. P.

SCENE VII.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Goneril, Edmund, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter:—the army of France is landed. — Seek out the traitor Gloster. [Execute some of the Servants.

Reg. Hang him instantly.
Gon. Pluck out his eyes.
Corn. Leave him to my displeasure.—Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most exact preparation: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister:—farewell, my lord of Gloster.

Enter Oswald.

How now! where's the king? [hence:
Osw. My lord of Gloster hath convey'd him
Some five or six and thirty of his knights,
Hot questists after him, met him at gate;
Who, with some other of the lord's dependents
Are gone with him toward Dover; where they boast
To have well-armed friends.
KING LEAR.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.
Corn. Farewell, sweet lord and sister.
Corn. Edmund, farewell.

[Exeunt Corn., GON., and OSW.
Go seek the traitor Gloster,
Finion him like a thief, bring him before us.

[Exeunt other Servants.

Though well we may not pass upon his life
Without the form of justice, yet our power
Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men
May blame, but not control.—Who’s there?
the traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with Gloster.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he.
Corn. Bind fast his coryk arms.
Glo. What mean your prayers?—Good my friends, consider
You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.
Corn. Bind him, I say. [Servants bind him.
Reg. Hard, hard.—O filthy traitor!
Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm none.
Corn. To this chair bind him.—Villain, thou shalt find,—[Regan plucks his beard.
Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done
To pluck me by the beard.
Reg. So white, and such a traitor!
Glo. Naughty lady,
These hairs which thou dost ravish from my chin
Will quicken, and accuse thee: I am your host:
With robbers' hands my hospitable favours
You should not tussle thus. What will you do?
Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you left from France?
Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors
Late footed in the kingdom? [Lunatic king?
Reg. To whose hands have you sent the Speak.
Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down,
Which came from one that’s of a neutral heart,
And not from one oppos’t.
Corn. Cunning.
Reg. And false.
Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?
Glo. To Dover.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou not charg’d at parli—
Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer
that.
Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand
Reg. Wherefore to Dover?
Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails
Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister
In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
In hell-black night endur’d, would have buoy’d up,
And quench’d the stelled fires: yet, poor old heart,
Hee help the heavens to rain.
If wolves had at thy gate howl’d that stern time
[the key.
Thou shouldst have said, Good porter, turn
All cruel else subscribe—: but I shall see
The winged vengeance overtake such children.
Corn. See’t shall thou never.—Fellows, hold the chair.—

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

[Reg. is held down in his chair, while CORNWALL plucks out one of his eyes and sets his foot on it.
Glo. He that will think to live till he be old
Give me some help!—O cruel!—O you gods!
Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.
Corn. If you see vengeance,—

1 Serv. Hold your hand, my lord:
I have serv’d you ever since I was a child;
But better service have I never done you
Than now to bid you hold.
Reg. How now, you dog!
1 Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,
I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?
Corn. My villain! [Draws, and runs at him.
I Serv. Nay, then, come on, and take the chance of anger.
[Draws. They fight. CORN. is wounded.
Reg. Give me thy sword [to another Servant].
—A peasant stand up thus!
[Snatches a sword, comes behind, and stabs him.
I Serv. O, I am slain!—My lord, you have one eye left
To see some mischief on them.—O! [Dies.
Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it.—Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now?
[Thorns out Gloster's other eye, and throws it on the ground.
Glo. All dark and comfortless.—Where’s my son Edmund?
Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature,
To quit this horrid act.
Reg. Out, treacherous villain!
Thou call’st on him that hates thee: it was he
That made the overtune of thy treasons to us;
Who is too good to pity thee.
Glo. O my follies!
Then Edgar was abus’d.—
Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!
Reg. Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell [look you?]
His way to Dover.—How is't, my lord? How Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt:—follow me, lady,—
Turn out that eyeless villain;—throw this slave
Upon the dunghill.—Regan, I bleed apace:
Untimely comes this hurt: give me your arm.
[Exit CORNWALL, led by REGAN; Servants
unbind GLOSTER and lead him out.
2 Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do
If this man come to good.
3 Serv. If she live long,
And in the end meet the old course of death,
Women will all turn monsters.
2 Serv. Let's follow the old earl, and get the Bedlam
To lead him where he would: his roguish mad
Allows itself to anything.
3 Serv. Go thou: I'll fetch some flax and whites of eggs
To apply to his bleeding face. Now, heaven help him! [Exeunt severally.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be con-temn'd,
Than still contemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,
The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,
Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear:
The lamentable change is from the best;
The worst returns to laughter. Welcome, then,
Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace!
The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst
Owes nothing to thy blasts.—But who comes here?

Enter GLOSTER, led by an Old Man.

My father, poorly led?—World, world, O
world!
But that thy strange mutations make us hate
Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O, my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these four score years.
Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be Thy comforts can do me no good at all;
Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. You cannot see your way. [eyes;
Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no
I stumbled when I saw: full oft 'tis seen
Our means secure us, and our mere defects

Prove our commodities.—O dear son Edgar,
The food of thy abused father's wrath!
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now! Who's there?
Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who is't can say,
I am at the worst?
I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.
Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet;
the worst is not
So long as we can say, This is the worst.

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?
Glo. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg,
I' the last night's storm I such a fellow saw;
Which made me think a man a worm: my son came then into my mind; and yet my mind Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since.

As flies to wanton boys are we to the gods,—
They kill us for their sport.
Edg. [Aside.] How should this be?—
Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow,
Angering itself and others.—Bless thee, master!

Glo. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.
Glo. Then, pr'ythee, get thee gone: if, for my sake,
Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain.
I' the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love;
And bring some covering for this naked soul,
Which I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir, he is mad.

Glo. 'Tis the times plague when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;
Above the rest, be gone. [I have,

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that Come on't what will. [Exit.

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow,—

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.—[Aside.] I cannot daub it further.

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and footpath. Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits:—bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend!—five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obiiecut; Hobbaddance, prince of dunceness; Mahr, of stealing;
Mado, of murder; Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing,—who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens’ plagues [wretched Have humbled to all strokes: that I am Makes thee the happier;—heavens, deal so still! Let the superfluous and lust-dicted man, That slaves your ordinance, that will not see Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly; So distribution should undo excess, [Dover? And each man have enough.—Dost thou know

Edg. Ay, master. [head

Glo. There is a cliff whose high and bending
Looks fearfully in the confined deep:
Bring me but to the very brim of it,
And I’ll repair the misery thou dost bear
With something rich about me: from that place
I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm:
For Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of Albany’s Palace.

Enter Goneril and Edmund; Oswald meeting them.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel our mild husband
Not met us on the way.—Now, where’s your
Osw. Madam, within; but never man so chang’d.
I told him of the army that was landed;
He smil’d at it: I told him you were coming;
His answer was, The worse: of Gloster’s treachery,
And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform’d him, then he call’d me not,
And told me I had turn’d the wrong side out:—
What most he should dislike seems pleasant to
him:
What like offensive.

Gon. Then shall you go no further. [To EDMUND.

It is the cowish terror of his spirit,
That dares not undertake: he’ll not feel wrongs, Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way [brother:
May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my Husten his musters and conduct his powers:
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff
Into my husband’s hands. This trusty servant
Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear,
If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress’s command. Wear this; spare speech; [Giving a favour.

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air:—
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloster.

[Exeunt EDMUND.

O, the difference of man and man!
To thee a woman’s services are due:
My fool usurps my body.

Osw. Madam, here comes my lord. [Exeunt.

Enter Albany.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. O Goneril! You are not worth the dust which the rude wind Blows in your face. I fear your disposition: That nature which contems its origin Cannot be border’d certain in itself; She that herself will sliver and disbranch From her material sap, perforce must wither And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more: the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile: [done?
Filths savour but themselves. What have you Tiges, not daughters, what have you perform’d? A father, and a gracious aged man, Whose reverence the head-lugg’d bear would lick, [madd’d.
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you Could my good brother suffer you to do it? A man, a prince, by him so benefitted! If that the heavens do not their visible spirits Send quickly down to tame these vile offences, It will come, humanity must performe prey on itself, Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver’d man! That bear’st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know’st Fools do those villains pity who are punish’d Ere they have done their mischief. Where’s thy drum?

Alb. France spreads his banners in our noiseless land; With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats; Whiles thou, a moral fool, sitst still, and criest, Alack, why does he so?

Alb. See thyself, devil! Proper deformity seems not in the fiend So horrid as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!

Alb. Thou changed and self-cover’d thing, for shame,
Be-monster not thy feature. Were 't my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood.
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones:—how 'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee,

Gon. Marry, your manhood now!

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news? [wall's dead;]
Mess. O, my good lord, the Duke of Corn-
Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloster.

Alb. Gloster's eyes!
Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,
Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master; who, threat'ning enraged, Plew on him, and amongst them felt him
dead;
But not without that harmful stroke which Ithath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge!—But, O poor Gloster!
Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.—
This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
Tis from your sister.

Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well;
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life: another way
The news is not so tart.—I'll read, and answer. [Exit.

Alb. Where was his son when they did take his eyes?
Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.
Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back
again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?
Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him; [punishment
And quit the house on purpose that their
Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloster, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the king, [friend:
And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither,
Tell me what more thou knowest. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The French Camp near Dover.

Enter Kent and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state, which since his coming forth is thought of; which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger that his personal return was most required and necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The Mareschal of France, Monsieur la Far.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief? [my presence:

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in
And now and then an ample tear trill'd down.
Her delicate cheek: it seem'd she was a queen
Over her passion; who, most rebel-like,
Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it mov'd her.

Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove
Who should express her goodliest. You have Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears
Were like a better day: those happy smiles
That play'd on her ripe lip seem'd not to know What guests were in her eyes; which parted thence
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd.—In brief,
Would be a rarity most belov'd if all
Could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?

Gent. Faith, once or twice she heav'd the name of father
Fantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;
Cried, 'Sisters! sisters!—Shame ofladYs!
sisters! [if the night?
Kent! father! sisters! What, is the storm?
Let pity not be believ'd!—There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
And clamour moisten'd: th'en away she started
To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions;
Else one self mate and mate could not beget
Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Gent. No, since.

Kent. Well, sir, the poor distressed Lear's
i' the town;
Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers
What we are come about, and by no means
Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent. Why, good sir?

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his own unkindness, [her
That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd
To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
To his dog-hearted daughters,—these things stung
Enter Lear, fantastically dressed up with flowers.

The sauer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining; I am the king himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.—

There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper; draw me a clownier's yard.—Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace;—this piece of toasted cheese don't it;
—There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a prunt.—Bring up the brown bills.—O, well Down, bird!—i' the clout, i' the clout: hewgh!
—Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Goneril, with a white beard!—

They flattered me like a dog; and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say ay and no to everything I said!—Ay and no, too, was no good divinity.

When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men of their words: they told me I was everything; 'tis a lie,—I am notague-proof.

Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember:

Is't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:

When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.

I pardon that man's life.—What was thy cause?—

Adultery?

Thou shalt not die: die for adultery! No:

The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly

Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive; for Gloster's bastard son
Was kinder to his father than my daughters

Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers,—

Behold yond simpering dame,

Whose face between her forks presages snow;

That minces virtue, and does shake the head

To hear of pleasure's name;—

The fitchew nor the soiled horse goes 't

With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are centaurs,

Though women all above:

But to the girdle do the gods inherit,

Beneath is all the fiends! there's bail, there's crack'd,

There is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;—fie, fie, fie! pah, pah!

Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there's money for

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand! [tality.

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mor-

Glo. O rain'd piece of nature! This great

world

Shall so wear out to naught.—Dost thou know

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough.

Dost thou squint at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning of it. [one.

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see

Edg. I would not take this from report;—

it is,

And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What, with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head nor no money in your purse?

Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light; yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-shady, which is the justice, which is the thief?—Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur?

There thou mightst behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office.—

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!

Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;

Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind

For which thou whippst her. The usurer hangs the cozenor.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;

Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks;

Arm it in rags, a pigmy's doth pierce it.

None does offend, none,—I say, none; I'll able 'em:

Take that of me, my friend, who have the power to seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes;

And, like a scarry politician, seem [now, now;

To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now,

Pull off my boots:—harder, harder:—so.

Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'd!

Reason in madness! [my eyes.

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take KING LEAR.

Enter Oswald.

Osw. A proclaim’d prize! Most happy! That eyeless head of thine was first fram’d flesh To raise my fortunes.—Thou old unhappy traitor, Briefly thyself remember:—the sword is out That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand Put strength enough to it. [Edgar interest. Osw. Wherefore, bold pestilence, Dar’st thou support a publish’d traitor? Hence; Let that the infection of his fortune take Like hold on thee. Let go his arm. [Escapen. Edg. Chill not let go, zir, without further Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest! Edg. Nay, come not near the old man; keep out, che vor ye, or ise try whether your costard or my bat be the harder: chill be plain with you. Osw. Out, dunghill! Edg. When we are born, we cry that we are come To this great stage of fools—This' a good It were a delicate stratagem to shoe A troop of horse with felt: I'll put 'm in proof; And when I have stol'n upon these sons-in-law, Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.

Gent. O, here he is; lay hand upon him.—Sir, Your most dear daughter,—[even Lear. No rescue? What, a prisoner? I am The natural soul of fortune.—Use me well; You shall have ransom. Let me have surgeons; I am cut to the brains.

Gent. You shall have anything. Lear. No seconds? all myself? Why, this would make a man a man of salt, To use his eyes for garden water-pots, Ay, and for laying Autumn's dust.

Gent. Good sir,—Lear. I will die bravely, like a snug bridegroom. What! I will be jovial: come, come; I am a king, My masters, know you that.

Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you. Lear. Then there's life in. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa. [Exit running; Attendants follow.

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch, [daughter, Past speaking of in a king!—Thou hast one Who redeems nature from the general curse Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you: what's your will?

Glo. You ever gentle gods, take my breath from me!

Let not my worse spirit tempt me again To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.

Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame by fortune's blows;

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows, Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand, I'll lead you to some bidding.

Glo. Hearty thanks: The bounty and the benison of heaven To boot, and boot:

Enter Oswald.

Their papers is more lawful.

[Reads.] Let our reciprocal vows be remembered.
You have many opportunities to cut him off:
If you will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered. There is nothing done if he return the conqueror; then am I the prisoner, and his bed my goal; from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your favour.

Your (wife, so I would say) affectionate serv-vant,
GONERIL.

O undistinguish'd space of woman's will!
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life;
And the exchange my brother.—Here, in the sands,
Thee I'll rake up, the post unsanctified
Of murderous lechers: and in the mature time
With this ungracious paner strike the sight
Of the death-practis'd duke: for him 'tis well
That of thy death and business I can tell.

[Exit EDGAR, dragging out the body.

Glo. The king is mad: how stiff is my vile sense,
That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge sorrow! Better I were distract:
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs,
And woes by wrong imaginations lose
The knowledge of themselves.

Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg.

Give me your hand:
[Drum afar off.

Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum:
Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp.

Lear on a bed asleep, soft music playing;
Physician, Gentleman, and others attending.

Enter CORDELIA and KENT.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live and work
To match thy goodness? My life will be
And every measure fail me, [paid.

KENT. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'er-
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more nor clipp'd, but so.

Cor. Be better suited:
These weeds are memories of those worser hours:
I pray thee, put them off.

KENT. Pardon, dear madam; Yet to be known shortens my made intent:
My boon I make it that you know me not Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't so, my good lord.—How does the king? [To the Physician.

Phys. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
The untun'd and jarring senses, O, wind up
Of this child-changed father!

Phys. So please your majesty
That we may wake the king: he hath slept long.

[Proceed

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and
I' the sway of your own will. Is he array'd?
Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of sleep
We put fresh garments on him. [him;

Phys. Be by, good madam, when we do awake
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.

Phys. Please you, draw near.—Louder the music there!

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration hang
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

KENT. Kind and dear princess! Cor.
Had you not been their father, these white flakes
Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be oppos'd against the warring winds?
To stand against the deep-dread bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning? to watch,—poor perdu!—
With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog, Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
[father,

Against my fire; and wast thou fain, poor
To hovel thee with swine and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!
'Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once [him.
I had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to Phys. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty? [the grave:

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o'
Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit, I know: when did you die?

Cor. Still, still far wide! [awhile.

Phys. He's scarce awake: let him alone

Lear. Where have I been? Where am I?—
Fair daylight?—[pity
I am mightily abus'd.—I should e'en die with
To see another thus.—I know not what to say.—
I will not swear these are my hands:—let's see;
I feel this pin prick. Would I were assur'd
Of my condition!

Cor. O, look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me.—
No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me:
I am a very foolish fond old man, [less:
Fourscore and upward, not an hour more nor
And, to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind. [man:
Methinks I should know you, and know this:
Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know
not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me;
For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am.

Lear. Be your tears wet? yes, faith. I pray, weep not:
If you have poison for me I will drink it.
I know you do not love me; for your sisters
Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:
You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Phys. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage,
You see, is kill'd in him; and yet it is danger
To make him even o'er the time he has lost.
I desire him to go in; trouble him no more
Till further settling.

Cor. Will not your highness walk?

Lear. You must bear with me:
I say you now, forget and forgive: I am old and foolish.
[Exeunt Lear, Cor., Phys., and Attendants.

Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloster.

Gent. They say Edgar, his banished son, is with the Earl of Kent in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to look about; the powers of the kingdom approach space.

Gent. The arbitration is like to be bloody.
Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

Kent. My point and period will be throughly wrought,
Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought.
[Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Camp of the British Forces near Dover.

Enter, with drum and colours, EDGAR, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Edg. Know of the duke if his last purpose hold,
Or whether since he is advis'd by aught
To change the course: he's full of altercation
And self-reproving:—bring his constant pleasure.
[To an Officer, who goes out.

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.

Edg. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord, you know the goodness I intend upon you;
Tell me,—but truly,—but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?

Edg. In honour'd love.

Reg. But have you never found my brother's way
To the forefended place?

Edg. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct
And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edg. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her: dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.

Edg. Fear me not:—
She and the duke her husband!

Enter, with drum and colours, ALBANY,
GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Con. [Aside.] I had rather lose the battle than that sister
Should choose him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well he-met.— Sir, this I heard,—the king is come to his daughter,
With others whom the rigour of our state
For'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest
I never yet was valiant: for this business,
It toucheth us, as France invades our land,
Not holds the king, with others whom, I fear,
Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edg. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd?

Con. Combine together 'gainst the enemy;
For these domestic and particular broils
Are not the question here.

Alb. Let's, then, determine
With the ancient of war on our proceeding.

Edg. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?
As they are going out, enter Edgar, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man so poor, I'll overtake you.—Speak.

[Axeunt Edmund, Regan, Goneril, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.]

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though I seem,
I can produce a champion that will prove
What is avouched there. If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Stay till I have read the letter.

When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,
And I'll appear again.

Why, fare thee well: I will o'erlook thy paper.

Re-enter Edmund.

Edm. The enemy's in view; draw up your powers.

Here is the guess of their true strength and forces
By diligent discovery:—but your haste
Is now urg'd on you.

We will greet the time.

To both these sisters have I sworn
Each jealous of the other, as the stung
Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?

Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd
If both remain alive: to take the widow
Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril;
And hardly shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now, then, we'll use
His countenance for the battle; which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia,—
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon: for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate.

Scene II.—A Field between the two Camps.

Alarum within. Enter, with drum and colours, Lear, Cordelia, and their Forces; and exeunt.

Enter Edgar and Gloster.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree [thrive:
For your good host; pray that the right may
If ever I return to you again
I'll bring you comfort.

Clo. Grace go with you, sir!

Alarum and Retreat within. Re-enter Edgar.

Edg. Away, old man,—give me thy hand,—

[Glo. King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter

Give me thy hand; come on.

Clo. No further, sir; a man may rot even here.

Edg. What, in ill thoughts again? Men must

Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all:—come on.

Clo. And that's true too.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours,
Edmund; Lear and Cordelia prisoners; Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard,

Until their greater pleasures first be known

That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first
Who, with best meaning, have incur'd the worst.

For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;
Myself could else out-frown false fortune's frown.

[sisters?] Shall we not see these daughters and these

Lear. No, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:

We two alone will sing like birds in the cage:

When thou dost ask me blessing I'll kneel down
And ask of thee forgiveness: so we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues
Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too,—

Who loses and who wins; who's in, who's out;
And take upon's the mystery of things
As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear out
In a wall'd prison packs and sects of great ones
That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee? [heaven,
He that parts us shall bring a brand from
And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes;
The good years shall devour them, flesh and fell,
Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see 'em starve first.

Come. [Execute Lear and Cor., guarded.

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.

Take thou this note [giving a paper]; go follow them to prison:
One step I have advanc'd thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes: know thou this,—that men
Are as the time is: to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword:—thy great employ-
Will not bear question; either say thou 'it don't,
Or thrive by other means.

Off. I'll do't, my lord.

Edm. About it; and write happy when thou hast done.

Mark,—I say, instantly; and carry it so
As I have set it down.

Off. I cannot draw a cart nor eat dried oats;
If it be man's work I will do't. [Exit.

Flourish. Enter Albany, Goneril, Regan,
Officers, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain,
And fortune led you well: you have the captives
Who were the opposites of this day's strife:
We do require them of you, so to use them
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention and appointed guard;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes Which do command them. With him I sent the queen;
My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear
Where you shall hold your session. At this time
[friends;
We sweat and bleed: the friend hath lost his
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd
By those that feel their sharpness:—
The question of Cordelia and her father
Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Methinks our pleasure might have been dem-

Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers;
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up:
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should hus-

Gon. Holla, holla!
That eye that told you so look'd but asquint.

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach.—General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony;
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine:
Witness the world that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good-will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.

[To Edmund.

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason.—Edmund, I arrest thee
On capital treason; and, in thy arrest,
This gilded serpent [pointing to Goneril].—
For your claim, fair sister,
I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your bans.
If you will marry, make your loves to me,—
My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloster:—let the trumpet sound:
If none appear to prove upon thy person
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge [throwing down a glove];
I'll make it on thy heart,
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less
Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sick, O, sick!

Gon. [Aside.] If not, I'll ne'er trust medicine.

Edm. There's my exchange [throwing down a glove]: what in the world he is
That names me traitor, villain-like he lies:
This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent
To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak,
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy name;
But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,
And that thy tongue some say of breeding breathes,
What safe and nicely I might well delay
by rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn:
Bick do I toss these reasons to thy head;
With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart;
Which,—for they yet glance by and scarcely bruise,—
This sword of mine shall give them instant way,
Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets,
speak!

[Alarums. They fight. EDMUND falls.

Alb. Save him, save him!

Gon. This is practice, Gloster:
By the law of arms thou wast not bound to answer
An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd,
But cozen'd and beguil'd,

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame, or with this paper shall I stop it—hold, sir?
Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil:
No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it.

[Gives the letter to EDMUND.

Gon. Say, if I do,—the laws are mine, not thine;
Who can arraign me for 't?

Alb. Most monstrous!

Know'st thou this paper?

Gon. Ask me not what I know.

[Exit.

Alb. Go after her: she's desperate; govern her.

[To an Officer, who goes out.

Edm. What you have charg'd me with, that have I done;

[Out:
And more, much more; the time will bring it
'Tis past, and so am I.—But what art thou
That hast this fortune on me? If thou'rt noble
I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity.
I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;
If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to plague us:
The dark and vicious place where thee he got Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right; 'tis true;
The wheel is come full circle; I am here.

Alb. Methought thy very gait did prophesy
A royal nobleness: I must embrace thee:
Let sorrow split my heart if ever I
Did hate thee or thy father!
Edg. Worthy prince, I know 't.
Alb. Where have you hid yourself?
How have you known the miseries of your father?
[tale;—
Edg. By nursing them, my lord.—List a brief
And when 'tis told, O, that my heart would burst!—
The bloody proclamation to escape, [ness!
That follow'd me so near,—O, our lives sweet;
That with the pain of death we'd hourly die
Rather than die at once!—taught me to shift
Into a madman's rage; to assume a semblance
That very dogs disdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,
Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair;
Never,—O fault!—reveal'd myself unto him
Until some half-hour past, when I was arm'd;
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: but his flaw'd heart,— Alack, too weak the conflict to support!—
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.
Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall perchance do good: but speak you on;
You look as you had something more to say.
Alb. If there be more, more woeful, hold it in;
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.
Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity. [man
Whilst I was big in clamour, came there a
Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhor'd society; but then, finding
Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; throwed him on my father;
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him
That ever ear receiv'd: which in recounting
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack: twice then the trumpet sounded,
And there I left him transe'd.
Alb. But who was this?
Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent, who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody knife.

Gent. Help, help, O, help!
Edg. What kind of help?
Alb. Speak, man.
Edg. What means that bloody knife?
Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;
It came even from the heart of—O, she's dead!
Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poison'd; she hath confess'd it.
Edm. I was contracted to them both: all three
Now marry in an instant.
Edg. Here comes Kent.
Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead:—
This judgment of the heavens, that makes us
Touches us not with pity. [Exit Gentleman.

Enter Kent.

O, is this he?
The time will not allow the compliment
Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye good-night:
Is he not here?
Alb. Great thing of us forgot!—
Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?
[The bodies of Gon. and Reg. are brought in.
See'st thou this object, Kent?
Kent. Alack, why thus?
Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd:
The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.
Alb. Even so.—Cover their faces. [do,
Edm. I pant for life:—some good I mean to Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—
Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ
Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia:—
Nay, send in time.
Alb. Run, run, O, run! [send
Edg. To who, my lord?—Who has the office?
Thy token of reprieve.
Edm. Well thought on: take my sword,
Give it the captain.
Alb. Haste thee, for thy life.

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she forsook herself.
Alb. The gods defend her!—Bear him hence awhile. [Edmund is borne off.

Re-enter Lear, with Cordelia dead in his arms; Edgar, Officer, and others following.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl!—O, you are men of stones:

Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so
That heaven's vault should crack.—She 's gone for ever!—
I know when one is dead and when one lives; She 's dead as earth. —Lend me a looking-glass; If that her breath will mist or stain the stone, Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?
Edg. Or image of that horror?

Lear. This feather stirs: she lives! if it be so,
It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.
Kent. O my good master! [Kneeling.
Edg. Pr'ythee, away.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all! [ever!—
I might have say'd her; now she 's gone for Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!
What is 't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low,—an excellent thing in
I kill'd the slave that was a-hanging thee.

Off. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.
Lear. Did I not, fellow?

I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion,
I would have made them skip: I am old now,

And these same crosses spoil me.—Who are you?
Mine eyes are not of the best:—I'll tell you straight.

Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and One of them we behold. [Kent?

Lear. This is a dull sight. Are you not Kent.
The same,

Your servant Kent.—Where is your servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that; He'll strike, and quickly too:—he's dead and rotten. [imn,— Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very Lear. I'll see that straight. [decay Kent. That from your first of difference and Have follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. You are welcome hither.
Kent. Nor no man else:—all's cheerless, dark, and deadly,— Your eldest daughters have foredone themselves, And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Alb. He knows not what he says; and vain is it
That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.

Enter an Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Alb. That's but a trifle here. —
You lords and noble friends, know our intent.
What comfort to this great decay may come Shall be applied: for us, we will resign During the life of this old majesty, To him our absolute power:—you to your rights; [To Edgar and Kent.

With boot, and such addition as your honours Have more than merited. —All friends shall taste The wages of their virtue, and all foes The cup of their deservations.—O, see, see!

Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no, life! Why should a dog, a horse, a rat have life, And thou no breath at all? Thou 'tis come ne more, Never, never, never, never, never!—
Pray you, undo this button:—thank you, sir.—
Do you see this? Look on her,—look,—he:—

Look there, look there!— [He dies.

Edg. He faints!—My lord, my lord!—
Kent. Break, heart; I pr'ythee, break!

Edg. Look up, my lord.

Kent. Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass! he hates him That would upon the rack of this rough world Stretch him out longer.

Edg. He is gone indeed.

Kent. The wonder is he hath endure'd so long: He but usurp'd his life. [business

Alb. Bear them from hence.—Our present Is general woe.—Friends of my soul, you twain [To Kent and Edgar.

Rule in this realm, and the gor'd state sustain.

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go; My master calls me,—I must not say no.

Alb. The weight of this sad time must obey; Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say. The oldest hath borne most: we that are young Shali never see so much nor live so long.

[Exeunt, with a lead march.]

PROLOGUE.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Do with their death bury their parents' strife.
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which but their children's end naught could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which, if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

Scene I.—A public Place.

Enter Samson and Gregory, armed with swords and bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals.
Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.
Sam. I mean, an we be in choler we'll draw.
Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out o' the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.
Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.
Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.
Gre. To move is to stir; and to be valiant is to stand: therefore, if thou art moved, thou art not away.
Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.
Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.
Sam. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall: therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall and thrust his maids to the wall.
Gre. The quarrel is between our masters and us their men.
Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant: when I have fought with the men I will be cruel with the maids, and cut off their heads.
Gre. The heads of the maids?
Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.
Gre. They must take it in sense that feel it.
Sam. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand: and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.
Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor-John.—Draw thy tool;
Here comes two of the house of the Montagues.
Sam. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I will back thee.
Gre. How I turn thy back and run?
Sam. Fear me not.
Gre. No, marry; I fear thee!
Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.
Gre. I will frown as I pass by; and let them take it as they list.
Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them if they bear it.

Enter Abraham and Balthasar
Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.
Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sam. Is the law of our side if I say ay?
Gre. No.
Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.
Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?
Abr. Quarrel, sir! no, sir.
Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you: I serve as good a man as you.
Abr. No better.
Sam. Well, sir.
Gre. Say better: here comes one of my master’s kinsmen.
Sam. Yes, better, sir.
Abr. You lie.
Sam. Draw, if you be men.—Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. [They fight.

Enter Benvolio.
Ben. Part, fools! put up your swords; you know not what you do.
[Beats down their swords.

Enter Tybalt.
Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?
Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.
Ben. I do but keep the peace: put up thy sword,
Or manage it to part these men with me.
Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace! I hate the word
As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:
Have at thee, coward! [They fight.

Enter several of both Houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens with clubs.
1 Cit. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike! beat them down! [tagsus! Down with the Capulets! Down with the Mon-

Enter Capulet in his gown, and Lady Capulet.
Cap. What noise is this?—Give me my long sword, ho!
Lady C. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you for a sword?
Cap. My sword, I say!—Old Montague is come,
And flourish his blade in spite of me.

Enter Montague and Lady Montague.
Mon. Thou villain Capulet!—Hold me not, let me go.
Lady M. Thou shalt not stir a foot to seek a foe.

Enter Prince, with Attendants.
Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,—
Will they not hear?—What, ho ye men, ye beasts,
That quench the fire of your pernicious rage
With purple fountains issuing from your veins,—
On pain of torture, from those bloody hands
Throw your misstenerd weapons to the ground,
And hear the sentence of your moved prince,—
Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,
By thee, old Capulet and Montague,
I have thrice disturb’d the quiet of our streets;
And made Verona’s ancient citizens
Cast by their grave beseeing ornaments,
To wield old partisans in hands as old,
Canker’d with peace, to part your canker’d hate:
If ever you disturb our streets again,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time, all the rest depart away:—
You, Capulet, shall go along with me;—
And, Montague, come you this afternoon,
To know our further pleasure: in this case,
To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.—
Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.
Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach?—
Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?
Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary
And yours close fighting ere I did approach:
I drew to part them: in the instant came
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar’d;
Which, as he breath’d defiance to my ears,
He swung about his head, and cut the winds,
Who, nothing hurt withal, hissed him in scorn:
While we were interchanging thrusts and blows,
Came more and more, and sought on part and part,
Till the prince came, who parted either part.

_Lady M._ O, where is Romeo?—saw you him to-day?—

Right glad I am he was not at this fray. [sun

_Ben._ Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd
Teer'd forth the golden window of the east,
A troubled mind drave me to walk abroad;
Where,—underneath the grove of sycamore
That westward rooteth from the city's side,—
So early walking did I see your son:
Towards him I made; but he was ware of me.
And stole into the covert of the wood:
I, measuring his affections by my own,—
That most are busied when they're most alone,— Purs'd my humour, not pursuing his,
And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

_Mon._ Many a morning hath he there been seen,
With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:
But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself;
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
And makes himself an artificial night:
Black and portentous must this humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

_Ben._ My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

_Mon._ I neither know it nor can learn of him.

_Ben._ Have you importun'd him by any means?

_Mon._ Both by myself and many other friends:
But he, his own affections' counsellor,
Is to himself,—I will not say how true,—
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,
We would as willingly give cure as know.

_Ben._ See where he comes: so please you, step aside;
I'll know his grievance or be much denied.

_Mon._ I would thou wert so happy by thy stay
To hear true shrift.—Come, madam, let's away.

[Exit MONTAGUE and Lady.

_Enter Romeo._

_Ben._ Good-morrow, cousin.

_Rom._ Is the day so young?

_Ben._ But new struck nine.

_Rom._ Ay me! sad hours seem long,
Was that my father that went hence so fast?

_Ben._ It was.—What sadness lengthens
Rom's hours? [them short.

_Rom._ Not having that which, having, makes

_Ben._ In love?

_Rom._ Out,—

_Ben._ Of love?

_Rom._ Out of her favour where I am in love.

_Ben._ Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

_Rom._ Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,
[will!—

_Should, without eyes, see pathways to his
Where shall we dine?—O me!—What fray was here?
Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.
Here's much to do with hate, but more with love:—
Why, then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O anything, of nothing first create!
O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!
Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!—
This love feel I, that feel no love in this.
Dost thou not laugh?

_Ben._ No, coz, I rather weep.

_Rom._ Good heart, at what?

_Ben._ At thy good heart's oppression.

_Rom._ Why, such is love's transgression.—
Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast;
Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest
With more of thine: this love that thou hast shown

_Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.
Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;
Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears;
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet.—
Farewell, my coz._

[Going.

_Ben._ Soft! I will go along:
An if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

_Rom._ Tut, I have lost myself; I am not here;
This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

_Ben._ Tell me in sadness who is that you love.

_Rom._ What, shall I groan and tell thee?

_Ben._ Groan! why, no;
But sadly tell me who._

[will,—

_Rom._ Did a sick man in sadness make his Ah, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill!—
In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

_Ben._ I aim'd so near when I suppos'd you lov'd.

_Rom._ A right good marksman!—And she's
Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit. [be hit
Rom. Well, in that hit you miss: she'll not
With Cupid's arrow,—she hath Dian's wit;
And in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives unharm'd.
She will not stay the siege of loving terms
Nor hide the encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold;
O, she is rich in beauty; only poor,
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.
Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste? [huge waste;
Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes
For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise; wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:
She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
Do I live dead that live to tell it now?
Ben. Be ruled by me, forget to think of her.
Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think.
Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties.
Rom. 'Tis the way
To call hers, exquisite, in question more:
These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows,
Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair;
He that is strucken blind cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:
Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve but as a note
Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair?
Farewell: thou canst not teach me to forget.
Ben. I'll pay that doctrine or else die in debt. [Exit.

Scene II.—A Street.

Enter Capulet, Paris, and Servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
And pity 'tis you liv'd at odds so long.
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before:
My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;
Let two more summers wither in their pride
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.

Cap. And too soon marri'd are those so early Earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,—

She is the hopeful lady of my earth:
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent is but a part;
An she agree, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice.
This night I hold an old accustom'd feast,
Whereeto I have invited many a guest,
Such as I love; and you, among the store,
One more, most welcome, makes my number more.
At my poor house look to behold this night
Earth-treading stars that make dark heaven light:
Such comfort as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparel'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh female buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house; hear all, all see,
And like her most whose merit most shall be:
Such, amongst view of many, mine being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, go with me.—Go, sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona; find those persons out Whose names are written there [gives a paper],
and to them say,
My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exeunt Capulet and Paris.

Serv. Find them out whose names are written here! It is written that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned:—in good time.

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Ben. Tut, man, one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;
Turn giddy, and be help by backward turning;
One desperate grief cures with another's languish:
Take thou some new infection to thy eye,
And the rank poison of the old will die.
Rom. Your plantain-leaf is excellent for that.
Ben. For what, I pray thee?
Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is;
Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
Whipp'd and tormented, and—Godden—good fellow.

[read?

Serv. God gi' god-den.—I pray, sir, can you

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.
Act III.

Enter Juliet.

What is your will? Lady C. This is the matter,—Nurse, give leave awhile; We must talk in secret:—nurse, come back I have remember'd me, thou'st hear our counsel. That know'st my daughter's of a pretty age. Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour. Lady C. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,— And yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four. — She is not fourteen. How long is it now To Lammas-tide? Lady C. A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd of all days in the year, Come Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen. Susan and she,—God save all Christian souls!— Were of an age: well, Susan is with God; She was too good for me:—but, as I said, On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen; That shall she, marry; I remember it well. His since the earthquake now eleven years; And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it,— Of all the days of the year, upon that day: For I had then laid wormwood to my dog, Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall; My lord and you were then at Mantua; Now, I do bear a brat:—but, as I said, When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple Of my dog, and felt it bitter, pretty fool, To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dog! Shake, quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need, I trow. To bid me trudge. And since that time it is eleven years; For then she could stand alone; nay, by the road She could have run and waddled all about; For even the day before, she broke her bow: And then my husband,—God be with his soul! A was a merry man,—took up the child: Yea, quoth he, dost thou fall upon thy face? Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit: wilt thou not, Jule? and, by my hollie, The pretty wretch left crying, and said Ay:
To see, now, how a jest shall come about!
I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,
I never should forget it: Will thou not, Julie?
quoth he:
And, pretty fool, it stinted, and said Ay.

Lady C. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam;—yet I cannot choose
To think it should leave crying, and say Ay.
And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow
A bump as big as a young cockatrel's stone;
A parous knock; and it cried bitterly.
You, quoth my husband, fall'st upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward when thou com'st to age;
Will thou not, Julie? it stinted, and said Ay.

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God maketh thee
Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nursed:
An I might live to see thee married once,
I have my wish.

Lady C. Marry, that marry is the very
I came to talk of.—Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse,
[they teat.
I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom from

Lady C. Well, think of marriage now:
younger than you,
Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers: by my count
I was thy mother much upon these years
That you are now a maid. Thus, then, in brief:
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man
As all the world—why, he's a man of wax.

Lady C. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

Lady C. What say you? can you love the
This night you shall behold him at our feast;
Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face;
And find delight writ there with beauty's pen;
Examine every married lineament,
And see how one another lends content;
And what obscure'd in this fair volume lies
Find written in the margin of his eyes.
This precious book of love, this unbound lover,
To beautify him, only lacks a cover:
The fish lives in the sea; and 'tis much pride
For fair without the fair within to hide:
That book in many's eyes doth share the glory
That in gold clasps locks in the golden story;

So shall you share all that he doth possess,
By having him, making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less! may, bigger; women grow by men.

[love?]

Lady C. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris'
Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move:
But no more deep will I endart mine eye
fly.
Than your consent gives strength to make it

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called, my young lady asked for, the nurse cursed in the pantry, and everything in extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight.

Lady C. We follow thee. [Exit Servant.]—
Juliet, the county stays.

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days.

[Exit.

Scene IV.—A Street.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with five or six Maskers, Torch-bearers, and others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?
Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity:
We'll have no Cupid hoodwink'd with a scat,
Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,
Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper;
Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke
After the prompter, for our entrance:
But, let them measure us by what they will,
We'll measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch,—I am not for this ambling;
Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing shoes,
With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead
So stakes me to the ground I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings,
And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enflamed with his shaft
To soar with his light feathers; and so bound,
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:
Under love's heavy burden do I sink. [love:

Mer. And to sink in it should you burden
Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough.
Too rude, too boisterous; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;
Scene IV.

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down.—
Give me a case to put my visage in:

[Putting on a mask.

A visard for a visard!—what care I
What curious eye doth quote deformities?
Here are the beetle-brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock and enter; and no sooner in
But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me; let wantons, light of heart,
Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels;
For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase,— I'll be a candle-holder, and look on,—
The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut, dun's the mouse, the constable's own word;
If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire
Of this—sir-reverence—love, wherein thou stick'st

Up to the ears.—Come, we burn daylight, ho.

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay
We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.
Take our good meaning, for our judgment sits
Five times in that ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well in going to this mask;
But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then, I see Queen Mab hath been
She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
On the fore-finger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomies
Athaneus men's noses as they lie asleep:
Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs;
The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;
The traces, of the smallest spider's web;
The collars, of the moonshine's watery beams;
Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash, of film;
Her waggoner, a small gray-coated gnat,
Not half so big as a round little worm
Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid:
Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,
Made by the joiner squirrel or old grub,
Time out of mind the fairies' coachmakers.
And in this state she gallops night by night
Through lovers' brains, and then they dream

O'er courtiers' knees, that dream on courtiers' straight;
O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees;
O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream,—
Which oft the angry Mab with kisses plagues.
Because their breaths with sweatmeats tainted are:

Sometime she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit;
And sometime comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,
Tickling a parson's nose as 's a lies asleep,
Then dreams he of another benefice:
Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambassador's, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon
Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes;
And, being thus frightened, swears a prayer or two,
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab
That plats the manes of horses in the night;
And takes the elflocks in foul sluttish hairs,
Which, once untangled, much misfortune lodes.
This is the hog, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them, and learns them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage:
This is she,—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace,
Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams,
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air,
And more inconstant than the wind, who woeas
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puff's away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind you talk of blows us from ourselves:
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early: for my mind misgives
Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels: and expire the term
Of a despised life, clos'd in my breast,
By some vile forfeit of untimely death:
But He that hath the stewardry of my course
Direct my sail!—On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum.

Scene V.—A Hall in Capulet's House.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!

Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too, 'tis a foul thing.

1 Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate:—good thou, save me a piece of marchpane; and, as thou lovest me let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell.—Antony! and Potpan!

2 Serv. Ay, boy, ready.

1 Serv. You are looked for and called for, asked for and sought for in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here and there too.—

Cheerly, boys; be brisk awhile, and the longer liver take all. [They retire behind.

Enter Capulet, &c., with the Guests and the Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! ladies that have their toes [you. —
Unplagu'd with corns will have a bout with Ah ha, my mistresses! which of you all Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty, she,

I'll swear hath corns; am I come near you now? Welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day That I have worn a visard; and could tell A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear, Such as would please; —'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone: [cians, play. —
You are welcome, gentlemen! —Come, musi-A hall,—a hall! give room, and foot it, girls. — [Musick plays, and they dance.

More light, you knaves; and turn the tables up, And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot. —

Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well. Nay, sit, say, sit, sir, good cousin Capulet; For you and I are past our dancing days; I know long is't now since last yourself and I Were in a mask?

2 Cap. By'r Lady, thirty years.

Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much:
'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come Pentecost as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd. [sir; 2 Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more; his son is elder,
His son is thirty.

Cap. Will you tell me that? His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. What lady is that which doth enrich the hand Of yonder knight?

Serv. I know not, sir. [bright!

Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear;

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear:
So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows As yonder lady over her fellows shows.
The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand, And, touching hers, make blessed my rude hand.
Did my heart love 'til now? forswear it, sight! For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.—[slave Fetch me my rapier, boy:—what, dares the Come hither, cover'd with an antelope To fleer and scorn at our solemnity?
Now, by the stock and honour of my kin, To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why, how now, kinsman! wherefore I'll storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe; A villain, that is hither come in spite, To scorn at our solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeo, is it?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain, Romeo.

Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone, He bears him like a portly gentleman: And, to say truth, Verona brags of him To be a virtuous and well-governed youth: I would not for the wealth of all the town Here in my house do him disparagement: Therefore be patient, take no note of him,— It is my will: the which if thou respect, Show a fair presence and put off these frowns, An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest: I'll not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endure'd:

What, goodman, boy! — I say he shall; — go to: Am I the master here or you? go to. [son, You'll not endure him! — God shall mend my You'll make a mutiny among my guests! You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man! Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go to, go to;

You are a saucy boy. Is't so, indeed? — This trick may chance to scathe you,—I know what: You must contrive me I marry, 'tis time. —

Well said, my hearts! You are a prince; go: Be quiet, or — More light, more light! — For shame! [hears.

I'll make you quiet. — What, — cheerly, my Tyb. Patience performe with wilful choler meeting Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeing.

I will withdraw: but this intrusion shall, Now seeming sweet, convert to bitter gall. [Exit.
Scene V.

Romeo and Juliet.

Rom. If I profane with my unworthiest hand
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.
Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly devotion shows in this;
For saints have hands that pilgrims’ hands do touch,
And palm to palm is holy palmers’ kiss.
Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy pilgrims too?
Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in
Rom. O, then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;
They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to
Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers’ sake.
Rom. Then move not while my prayer’s effect
Thus from my lips, by yours, my sin is purg’d.

Juliet kisses her

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.
Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly
Give me my sin again.
Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.
Rom. What is her mother?
Nurse. Marry, bachelor,
Her mother is the lady of the house,
And a good lady, and a wise and virtuous;
I nurs’d her daughter that you call’d withal;
I tell you, he that can lay hold of her
Shall have the chinks.
Rom. Is she a Capulet?
O dear account! my life is my foe’s debt.
Ben. Away, be gone; the sport is at the best.
Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.
Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;
We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.—
Is it e’en so? why, then I thank you all:
I thank you, honest gentlemen; good-night.—
More torches here!—Come on, then let’s to bed.
[late:
Ah, sirrah [to 2 Cap.], by my fay, it waxes
I’ll to my rest.

[Exeunt all but Juliet and Nurse.
Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is yon gentleman?
Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.
Jul. What’s he that now is going out of door?
Nurse. Marry, that I think be young Pe-
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.—
It is my lady; O, it is my love!
O, that she knew she were!—
She speaks, yet she says nothing: what of that?
Her eye discourses, I will answer it.—
I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks:
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do entreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head?
The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,
As daylight doth a lamp; her eyes in heaven
Would through the airy region stream so bright
That birds would sing, and think it were not night.—
See how she leans her cheek upon her hand!
O, that I were a glove upon that hand,
That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ah me!
Rom. She speaks:—
O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven
Unto the white-upturned wondering eyes
Of mortals that fall back to gaze on him
When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?
Deny thy father and refuse thy name;
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. [Aside.] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy;—
Thou art thyself though, not a Montague.
What's Montague? It is nor hand, nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!
What's in a name? that which we call a rose,
By any other name would smell as sweet;
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes
Without that title:—Romeo, or thou name;
And for that name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night,
So stumbliest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee;
Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred words
Of that tongue's utterance, yet I know the Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.

Jul. Howcam'st thou hither, tell me, and
wherefore?
The orchard walls are high and hard to climb;
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls;
For stony limits cannot hold love out:
And what love can do, that dares love attempt;
Therefore thy kinsmen are no let to me.

Jul. If they do see thee they will murder thee.

Rom. Alack, there lies more peril in thine Than twenty of their swords: look thou but sweet,
And I am proof against their enmity. [here.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their sight;
And, but thou love me, let them find me here:
My life were better ended by their hate
Than death prorogued wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place? [inquire:

Rom. By love, who first did prompt me to Held me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far
As that vast shore wash'd with the furthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face,
Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek
For that which thou hast heard me speak tonight.

Fain would I dwell on form, fair, fair deny
What I have spoke: but farewell compliment!
Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say Ay:
And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swear'st,
Thou mayst prove false; at lovers' perjuries
They say love laughs. O gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or, if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world.
In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond;
And therefore thou mayst think my humour
light:
But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true Than those that have more cunning to be strange.

I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou over-heard'st, ere I was 'ware,
My true love's passion: therefore pardon me;
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,
That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lost that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love,—

Jul. Well, do not swear: although I joy in
thee,
I have no joy of this contract to-night:
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be Ere one can say, It lightens. Sweet, good-
night!
This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet. [rect

Good-night, good-night! as sweet repose and Come to thy heart as that within my breast!

Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have tonight?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine. [quest it:

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst re-
And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have:
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee
The more I have, for both are infinite.

[Nurse calls within.
I hear some noise within; dear love, adieu!—Anon, good nurse!—Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit.

Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afeard,
Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter Juliet above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and goodnight indeed.
If that thy bent of love be honourable, [row,
 Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-mor-
Romeo
At parting Madam. So—Exit. I should looks.
Benedicite. By and by, I come anon.—But if thou mean'st not I do beseech thee,— Nurse. [Within.] Madam! [Well,]—
Jul. I come anon.—But if thou mean'st not I do beseech thee,— Nurse. [Within.] Madam!—
Jul. So thrive my soul,—
Jul. A thousand times good-night! [Exit.]
Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.—
Jul. By and by, I come:—To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief: To-morrow will I send.
Rom. Love goes toward love as school-boys from their books; [looks.]
Jul. But love from love, toward school with heavy [Retiring slowly.]

Re-enter Juliet above.
Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist!—O for a falconer's voice,
To lure this tassel-gentle back again! Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud; Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies, And make her airy tongue more hoarse than nine
With repetition of my Romeo's name.
Rom. It is my soul that calls upon my name;
How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night, Like softest music to attending ears!
Rom. At the hour of nine.
Jul. I will not fail: 'tis twenty years till then. I have forgot why I did call thee back. [it.
Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember
Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Remembering how I love thy company.
Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other home but this.
Jul. 'Tis almost morning; I would have thee gone:
And yet no further than a wanton's bird; Who lets it hop a little from her hand, Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves, And with a silk thread plucks it back again, So loving-jealous of his liberty.
Rom. I would I were thy bird.
Jul. Sweet, so would I: Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.

Good-night, good-night! parting is such sweet sorrow
That I shall say good-night till it be morrow.
Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!—
Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell,
His help to crave and my dear hap to tell. [Exit.]

Scene III.—Friar Lawrence's Cell.
Enter Friar Lawrence with a basket.
Fri. I. The gray-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night, [light; Chequering the eastern clouds with streaks of
And flecked darkness like a drunkard reels From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels: Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye, The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry, I must up-fill this osier cage of ours With baleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers. The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb; What is her burying grave, that is her womb: And from her womb children of divers kind We sucking on her natural bosom find; Many for many virtues excellent, None but for some, and yet all different. O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities: For naught so vile that on the earth doth live But to the earth some special good doth give; Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair use, Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse: Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied; And vice sometimes by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this small flower Poison hath residence, and medicine power: For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each part; Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart. Two such opposed kings encamp them still In man as well as herbs,—grace and rude will; And where the worse is predominant, Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter Romeo.
Rom. Good-morrow, father! Fri. I. Benedicite! What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?— Young son, it argues a distemper'd head So soon to bid good-morrow to thy bed: Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye, And where care lodges sleep will never lie: But where unbruised youth with unstuffed brain Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign:
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure
Thou art uproust'd by some distemper
Or if not so, then here I hit it right,—
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.
Rom. That last is true; the sweeter rest was mine.
Fri. L. God pardon sin! wast thou with
Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.
Fri. L. That's my good son; but where last thou been, then?
Rom. I'll tell thee ere thou ask it me again.
I have been feasting with mine enemy;
Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me
That's by me wounded; both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo,
My intercession likewise steals my foe. [drift;
Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.
Rom. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combin'd, save what thou must combine
By holy marriage: when, and where, and how
We met, we wooo'd, and made exchange of vow,
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us to-day. [here!
Fri. L. Holy St. Francis! what a change is
Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love, then, lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jest Maria, what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline!
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clear,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo, here upon thy check the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet;
If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline:
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence, then,—[men.
Women may fall, when there's no strength in
Rom. Thouchid dost be off for loving Rosaline.
Fri. L. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.
Rom. And bad'st me bury love.
Fri. L. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have. [now
Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she whom I love
Doth grace for grace and love for love allow;
Th’ other did not so.
Fri. L. O, she knew well
Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.
But come, young wavering, come, go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be;
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love.
Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.
Fri. L. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?—
Came he not home to-night?
Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.
Mer. Ah, that same pale hard-hearted wench,
that Rosaline,
Torments him so that he will sure run mad.
Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.
Mer. A challenge, on my life.
Ben. Romeo will answer it.
Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter.
Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.
Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead!
stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot thorough the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft: and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?
Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?
Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell you.
O, he is the courageous captain of compliments.
He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests his minin
rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom:
the very butcher of a silk button; a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house,— of the first and second cause: ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay!—
Ben. The what?
Mer. The pox of such antic, lispings, affecting fantasticoes; these new tuners of accents!—
By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very well
—a very good whores!—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these parody-neo's, who stand so much on the new form that they can not sit at ease on the old bench? O, their boses, their boses!
Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.
Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring.
—O, flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified!—Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in:
Laura, to his lady, was but a kitchen-wench,— bear, she had a better love to be rhyme her;
Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Helen and Hero, hindings and harlots; Thisbe, a gray eye or so, but not to the purpose,—

Enter Romeo.

Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good-morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning, to court'sy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flowered.

Mer. Well said: follow me this jest now till thou hast worn out thy pump; that when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, sole singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest, solely singular for the singleness!

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wits faint.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs;
or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase, I have done; for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits than, I am sure,
I have in my whole five: was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for anything when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is not it well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O, there's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Rom. I stretch it out for that word, broad; which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; not art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desierst me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O, thou art deceived; I would have made it short: for I was come to the whole depth of my tale; and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and Peter.

Mer. A sail, a sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt and a smock.

Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon?

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mer. Good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer face.

Nurse. God ye good-morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good-den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good-den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you?

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said:—for himself to mar, quoth 'a?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you: but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea, is the worst well? very well took,
I' faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

[Sings.

An old hare hoar,
And an old hare hoar,
Is very good meat in Lent:
But a hare that is hoar
Is too much for a score,
When it hoars ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither.
SCENE IV.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell,—

[singing] lady, lady, lady.

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.

Nurse. Marry, farewell!—I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk; and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An she speak anything against me, I'll take him down, an' he were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skainsmates.—And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Petr. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—Pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,—

Nurse. Good heart, and, I' faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, Lord, she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir,—that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise some means to come to this afternoon; And there she shall at Friar Lawrence' cell Be shriv'd and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say you shall. [there.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be.

Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey-wall:

Within this hour my man shall be with thee, And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair; Which to the high top-gallant of my joy Must be my convoy in the secret night.

Farewell; be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains:
Farewell; commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee!—Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say

Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee, my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady,—Lord, Lord! when 'twas a little prating thing,—O, there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the proper man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world. Dost not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

[an R.

Rom. Ay, nurse; what of that? both with

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name.

R is for the dog: no; I know it begins with some other letter:—and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Command me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. [Exit ROMEO.

—Peter!

Petr. Anon?

Nurse. Peter, take my fan and go before.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—CAPULET'S GARDEN.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;
In half an hour she promis'd to return. [so.—
Perchance she cannot meet him:—that's not O, she is lame! love's heralds should be thoughts,

[beams,
Which ten times faster glide than the sun's Driving back shadows over lowering hills;
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love, And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.
Now is the sun upon the highmost hill Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve Is three long hours,—yet she is not come. Had she affections and warm youthful blood, She'd be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy her to my sweet love, And his to me:
But old folks, many feign as they were dead; Unweildy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.—

O God, she comes!
Enter Nurse and Peter.

O, honey nurse, what news? Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate.

[Exit Peter.

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse, - O Lord, why look'st thou sad? Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily; I go'd, thou sham'st the music of sweet news By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am a weary, give me leave awhile; - [had!

Fie, how my bones ache! what a jaunt have I

Jul. I would thou had'st my bones and I thy news: [nurse, speak.

Nay, come, I grant thee, speak; - good, good

Nurse. Jesu, what haste? can you not stay awhile?

Do you not see that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath
To say to me that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good or bad? answer to that:
Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance:
Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man:
Romeo! no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body,—though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare: he is not the flower of courtesy,—but I'll warrant him as gentle as a lamb. —Go thy ways, wench; serve God.—What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: but all this did I know before.
What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! what a head have I!
It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.
My back o' th' other side, - O, my back, my back!-

Flesh your heart for sending me about
To catch my death with jaunting up and down!

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well.

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love?

Nurse. Your love says, like an honest gentle-
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome,
And, I warrant, a virtuous, - Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother! — why, she is within;

Where should she be? How oddly thou repliest!

Your love says, like an honest gentleman,—
Where is your mother?

Nurse. O God's lady dear!

Are you so hot? marry, come up, I trow;
Is this the poultice for my aching bones?
Henceforward, do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil! — come, what says Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-
Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to Friar Lawrence.

There stays a husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,
They'll be in scarlet straight at any news.
Hie you to church; I must another way,
To fetch a ladder, by the which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark:
I am the drudge, and toil in your delight;
But you shall bear the burden soon at night.
Go; I'll to dinner; lie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune! — honest nurse, farewell.

[Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Friar Lawrence's Cell.

Enter Friar Lawrence and Romeo.

Fri. I. So smile the heavens upon this holy act
That after-hours with sorrow chide us not!
Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can,
It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then love-devouring death do what he dare,—
It is enough I may but call her mine. [ends,

Fri. I. These violent delights have violent
And in their triumph die: like fire and powder,
Which, as they kiss, consume: the sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his own deliciousness,
And in the taste confounds the appetite:
Therefore love moderately; long love doth so;
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.
Here comes the lady: — O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:
A lover may bestride the gossamer
That idles in the wanton summer air
And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. Good— even to my ghostly confessor.

Fri. I. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both. [much.

Jul. As much to him, else is his thanks too
Act III.

Scene I.—A Public Place.

Enter Mercutio, Benvolio, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire:
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And, if we meet, we shall not scape a brawl;
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood Stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows that,
When he enters the confines of a tavern, claps
Me his sword upon the table, and says, God
Send me no need of thee: and by the operation
Of the second cup draw it on the drawer, when,
Indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in Thy mood as any in Italy: and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to?

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we Should have none shortly, for one would kill
The other. Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with
A man that hath a hair more or a hair less
In his beard than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel
With a man for cracking nuts, having no
Other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes;
—What eye but such an eye would spy out such A quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as An egg is full of meat; and yet thy head hath
Been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling.
Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing
In the street, because he hath wakened thy dog
That hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou Not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another for lying his new shoes with old rind; and yet thou
Wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art,
Any man should buy the fee-simple of my life
For an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The fee-simple! O simple!

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Enter Tybalt and others.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to Them.—Gentlemen, good-den: a word with
One of you.

Mer. And hath one word with one of us?
Couple it with something; make it a word and
A blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that,
Ir, an you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion with-Out giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou art consort with Romeo,—
Mer. Come, at what, doth thou make us
Minstrels? An thou make minstrels of us,
Look to hear nothing but discord: here's my Fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance.

Tyb. Well, peace with you, sir.—Here comes
My man.

Enter Romeo.

Mer. But I'll be hanged, sir, if he wear
Your livery:

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower;
Your worship in that sense may call him man.

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee can afford
No better term than this.—Thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love
Thee

Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeting. Villain am I none;
Therefore, farewell; I see thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries
That thou hast done me; therefore turn and draw.

Rom. I do protest I never injur'd thee;
But love thee better than thou canst devise
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love:
And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender
As dearly as my own,—be satisfied.
.O. Calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
A la stocata carries it away.  [Draws.
Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?
Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?
.Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your toilet out of his pitcher by the ears? make lust mine be about your ears ere it be out.
Tyb. I am for you.  [Drawing.
Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.
.Mer. Come, sir, your passado.  [They fight.
Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their weapons. —
Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage!—
Tybalt,—Mercutio,—the prince expressly hath forbidden bandying in Verona streets. —
Hold, Tybalt!—good Mercutio. — [Exit Tybalt and his Partizans.
 .Mer. I am hurt; —
A plague o' both your houses!—I am sped. —
Is he gone, and hast nothing?
Ben. What, art thou hurt?
.Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry,
'tis enough.—
Where is my page?—go, villain, fetch a surgeon.
 [Exit Page.
Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.
.Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church-door; but 'tis enough, 'twill save: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world.—A plague o' both your houses!—Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue,
a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic!
—Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.
Rom. I thought all for the best.
.Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio,
Or I shall faint.—A plague o' both your houses!
They have made worm's meat of me:
I have it, and soundly too.—Your houses!
 [Exit Mercutio and Benvolio.
Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally,
My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt
In my behalf; my reputation stain'd
With Tybalt's slander,—Tybalt, that an hour
Hath been my kinsman.—O sweet Juliet,
Thy beauty hath made me effeminate,
And in my temper soften'd valour's steel.
 [Re-enter Benvolio.
Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's
death!
That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds,
Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.
Rom. This day's black fate on more days
doeth depend;
This but begins the woe others must end.
Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back
again.
Rom. Alive, in triumph! and Mercutio slain!
Away to heaven, respective lenity,
And fire-ey'd fury be my conduct now!—
 [Re-enter Tybalt.
Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again
That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul
Is but a little way above our heads,
Staying for thine to keep him company:
Either thou or I, or both, must go with him.
Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him here,
Shalt with him hence.
Rom. This shall determine that.
 [They fight; Tybalt falls.
Ben. Romeo, away, be gone!
The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain.—
Stand not amaz'd. The prince will doom thee
death
If thou art taken. Hence, be gone, away!
Rom. O, I am fortune's fool!
Ben. Why dost thou stay?
 [Exit Romeo.
 [Enter Citizens, &c.
1 Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio?
Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?
Ben. There lies that Tybalt.
1 Cit. Up, sir, go with me;
I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.
 [Enter Prince, attended; Montague, Capulet, their Wives, and others.
Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?
Ben. O noble prince, I can discover all
The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl:
There lies the man, slain by young Romeo,
That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.
Lady C. Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother's child!—
O prince!—O husband!—O, the blood is spil'd
Of my dear kinsman!—Prince, as thou art true,
For blood of ours shed blood of Montague.—
O cousin, cousin!
Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?
Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay;
Romeo that spoke him fair, bade him bethink
How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal
Your high displeasure.—All this,—uttered
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,—
Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt, deaf to peace, but that he tilts
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast;
Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud, Hold, friends! friends, part! and, swifter than his tongue,
His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm
An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled:
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to't they go like lightning; for ere I
Could draw to part them was stout Tybalt slain;
And as he fell did Romeo turn and fly.
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

Lady C. He is a kinsman to the Montague,
Affection makes him false, he speaks not true:
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give;
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio:
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?

Mon. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's
friend;
His fault concludes but what the law should
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence,
Immediately we do exile him hence:
I have an interest in your hate's proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a-bleeding;
But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine
That you shall all repent the loss of mine:
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses;
Nor tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses,
Therefore use none: let Romeo hence in haste,
Else when he's found, that hour is his last.
Bear hence this body, and attend our will:
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phoebus' lodging; such a waggoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.—

Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night!
That rude day's eyes may wink, and Romeo
Leap to these arms, untalk'd of and unseen.—
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites
By their own beauties: or if love be blind,
It best agrees with night.—Come, civil night,
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match,
Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenhoods:
Hood my unmann'd blood, bathing in my cheeks,
With thy black mantle; till strange love, grown bold,
Think true love acted simple modesty.
Come, night;—come, Romeo,—come, thou day
in night;
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.—
Come, gentle night,—come, loving black-brow'd
right,
Give me my Romeo; and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun.—
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess d it; and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd: so tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child that hath new robes,
And may not wear them. O, here comes my Nurse,

And she brings news; and every tongue that
But Romeo's name speaks heavenly eloquence.—

Enter Nurse with cords.

Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there? the cords
That Romeo bade thee fetch?

Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords. [Throws them down.

Jul. Ah me! what news? why dost thou wring thy hands? [he's dead!

Nurse. Ah, well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead,
We are undone, lady, we are undone!—
Alack the day!—he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!

Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse. Romeo can,
Though heaven cannot.—O Romeo, Romeo!—
Who ever would have thought it?—Romeo!

Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment
me thus?
This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I,
And that bare vowel I shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:
I am not I if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut that make thee answer I.
If he be slain, say I; or if not, no:
Brief sounds determine of my weal or woe.
Nurse.  I saw the wound, I saw it with mine
eyes,—
God save the mark!—here on his manly breast:
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,
All in gore-blood;—I swooned at the sight.
Jul.  O, break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!
To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;
And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier!
Nurse.  O Tybalt, Tybalt! the best friend I had!
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!
Jul.  What storm is this that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead?
My dear-lov'd cousin and my dearer lord?—
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!
For who is living if those two are gone?
Nurse.  Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished.
Jul.  O God!—did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's
blood?
Nurse.  It did, it did; alas the day, it did!
Jul.  O serpent heart, hid with a flowering face!
I'd ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
Dove-feather'd raven! wolfish-ravening lamb!
Despised substance of divinest show!
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned saint, an honourable villain!—
O nature, what hast thou to do in hell
When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?—
Was ever book containing such vile matter
So fairly bound?  O, that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace!
Nurse.  There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all are perjur'd,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.—
Ah, where's my man? give me some aqua viva.—
[old.
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me
Shame come to Romeo!
Jul.  Blister'd be thy tongue
For such a wish! he was not born to shame:
Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
Sole monarch of the universal earth.
O, what a beast was I to chide at him!
Nurse.  Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?
Jul.  Shall I speak ill of him that is my Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth
ythy name,
[it?]—
When I, thy three-hours' wife, have mangled
But wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?
[husband:
That villain cousin would have kill'd my Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.
My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
[husband:
And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my
All this is comfort; wherefore weep I, then?
Some word there was, worser than Tybalt's
death,
That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;
But, O, it presses to my memory
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:
Tybalt is dead, and Romeo banished.
That banished, that one word banished, 11ath slain ten thousand Tybals. Tybalt's
death
Was woe enough, if it had ended there:
Or, if sour woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,—
Why follow'd not, when she said Tybalt's dead,
Thy father or thy mother, nay, or both,
Which modern lamentation might have mov'd?
But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,
Romeo is banished,—to speak that word
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead: Romeo is banished,—
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that word's death; no words can that woe
sound.—
Where is my father and my mother, nurse?
Nurse.  Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corso:
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.
Jul.  Wash they his wounds with tears: mine shall be spent,
When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are beguil'd,
Both you and I; for Romeo is exil'd;
He made you for a highway to my bed;
But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.
Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding-
bed;
And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!
Nurse.  Hie to your chamber, I'll find Romeo
To comfort you; I wot well where he is.
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night:
I'll to him; he is hid at Lawrence' cell. [Knight,
Jul.  O, find him! give this ring to my true
And bid him come to take his last farewell.
[Exeunt.
Scene III.—Friar Lawrence’s Cell.

Enter Friar Lawrence.

Fri. 1. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man:
Affliction is enamour’d of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince’s doom?
What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. 1. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company:
I bring thee tidings of the prince’s doom.

Rom. What less than doomsday is the prince’s doom?

Fri. 1. A gentler judgment vanish’d from his
Not body’s death, but body’s banishment.

Rom. If, banishment! be merciful, say death:
For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death; do not say banishment.

Fri. 1. Hence from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world with out Verona walls,
But purgatory, torture, hell itself;
Hence-banished is banish’d from the world,
And world’s exile is death,—then banish’d
Is death mis-tound,—calling death banishment,
Thou cutt’st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil’st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. 1. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,
Taking thy part, hath brush’d aside the law,
And turn’d that black word death to banishment:
This is dear mercy, and thou see’st it not. [here

Rom. ’Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is Where Juliet lives: and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven, and may look on her;
But Romeo may not.—More validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet’s hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
But Romeo may not: he is banish’d,—
This may flies do, when I from this must fly.
And say’st thou yet that exile is not death!
Hast thou no poison mix’d, no sharp-ground
knife, [mean,
No sudden mean of death, though ne’er so
But—banish’d—to kill me; banish’d?
O friar, the damned use that word in hell;

Howlings attend it: how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess’d,
To mangle me with that word banishment?

Fri. 1. Thou fond mad man, hear me speak a little,—

Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. 1. I’ll give thee armour to keep off that word;
Adversity’s sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished?—Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince’s doom,
It helps not, it prevails not,—talk no more.

Fri. 1. O, then I see that madmen have no ears.

Rom. How should they, when that wise men

Fri. 1. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of what thou dost not feel:
Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then mightest thou speak, then mightst then

Fri. 1. Stand upon the stroke that murders me.

Rom. Welcome, then.

Fri. 1. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself. [Knocking within.

Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick

Fri. 1. Run to my study.—By and by. —God’s will!

Rom. What simplicity is this!—I come, I come.

Fri. 1. Who knocks so hard? whence come you?
what’s your will?

Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in and you shall know my errand;
I come from Lady Juliet.

Fri. 1. Welcome, then.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady’s lord, where’s Romeo?

Fri. 1. There on the ground, with his own ears made drunk.

Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress’ case,—

Fri. 1. O woeful sympathy!

Friar’s predicament!
Nurse. Even so fies she,
By hammering and weeping, weeping and blubbering.
Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man.

For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O?
Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah, sir! ah, sir!—Well, death's the end of all.

Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with Dost she not think me an old murderer,
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood remov'd but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says
My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps
And weeps; and now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.
Rom. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand
Murder'd her kinsman. —O, tell me, friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this anatomy
Dost my name lodge? tell me that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Drawing his sword.

Fri. L. Hold thy desperate hand;
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art:
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:
Unseemly woman in a seeming man!
Or ill-beseeming beast in seeming both!
Thou hast amaz'd me: by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady, too, that lives in thee,
By doing damned hate upon thyself?
Why rais'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?
Since birth, and heaven and earth, all three do
In thee at once; which thou at once wouldst lose.

Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy
Which, like a usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed. [wit:
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy
Thy dear love sworn, but hollow perjury,
Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish:
Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,
The powder in a skillless soldier's flask,
Is set a fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.
What, rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy too:

The law, that threaten'd death, becomes thy
And turns it to exile; there art thou happy;
A pack of blessings lights upon thy back;
Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,
Thou pourest upon thy fortune and thy love—
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her:
But, look, thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;
Where thou shalt live till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty thousand times more joy
Than thou wast'st forth in lamentation.—
Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:
Romeo is coming. [the night

Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here al
To hear good counsel: O, what learning is!—
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.
Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you,
I tie you, make haste, for it grows very late.

Rom. How well my comfort is revive'd by this!
Fri. L. Go hence; good-night; and here stands
all your state:
Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence:
Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you that chances here:
Give me thy hand; 'tis late: farewell; good-night.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief so brief to part with thee:
Farewell. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capule and Paris.
Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily
That we have had no time to move our daughter:
Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I; well, we were born to die.
'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.
ROMEO AND JULIET.

Scene V. — An open Gallery to Juliet’s Chamber, overlooking the Garden.

Enter Romeo and Juliet.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierc’d the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree:
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale; look, love, what envious streaks
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east:
Night’s candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops.
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. You light is not daylight, I know it, I:
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:
Therefore stay yet, thou need’st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta’en, let me be put to death;
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
I’ll say you gray is not the morning’s eye,
’Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia’s brow;
Nor that is not the lark whose notes do beat
The caviary heaven so high above our heads:
I have more care to stay than will to go.—
Come, death, and welcome! Juliet will it so. —
How is’t, my soul? let’s talk,—it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is,—he hence, be gone, away!
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.
Some say the lark makes sweet division;
This doth not so; for she divideth us:
Some say the lark and loathed toad change eyes;
O, now I would they had chang’d voices too!
Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence with hunt’s-up to the day.
O, now be gone; more light and light it grows.

Rom. More light and light,—more dark and dark our woes!

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam!

Jul. Nurse! [chamber]

Nurse. Your lady mother is coming to your
The day is broke; be wary, look about.

[Exit.

Jul. Then, window, let day in and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I’ll descend.

[Descends.

Jul. Art thou gone so? my lord, my love, my friend!
I must hear from thee every day if the hour,
For in a minute there are many days:
O, by this count I shall be much in years.
Ere I again behold my Romeo!

Rom. Farewell!
I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O, think’st thou we shall ever meet again?

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes
For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Jul. O God! I have an ill-divining soul!
Methinks I see thee, now thou art below,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb:
Either my eyesight fails or thou look’st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you:
Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu, adieu!

Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle:
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune;
For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back. [up?
 Lady C. [Within.] Ho, daughter! are you Jul. Who is't that calls? is it my lady mother?
Is she not down so late, or up so early?
What unaccustomed'd cause procures her hither?

Enter Lady Capulet.

Lady C. Why, how now, Juliet!
Jul. Madam, I am not well.
Lady C. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death? [tears?
What, wilt thou wash him from his grave with An if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live; [love;
Therefore have done: some grief shows much of
But much of grief shows still some want of wit.
Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.
Lady C. & shall you feel the loss, but not the friend
Which you weep for.
Jul. Feeling so the loss,
I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.
Lady C. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death
As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.
Jul. What villain, madam?
Lady C. That same villain, Romeo.
Jul. Villain and he be many miles asunder.
God pardon him! I do, with all my heart;
And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart.
Lady C. That is because the traitor murderer lives. [hands.
Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my Would none but I might venge my cousin's
death!
Lady C. We will have vengeance for it, fear
thou not:
Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,—
Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,—
Shall give him such an unaccustomed'd dram
That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:
And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.
Jul. Indeed I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo till I behold him—dead—
Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd?
Madam, if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it,
That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
Soon sleep in quiet. O, how my heart abhors
To hear him nam'd,—and cannot come to
him,—
To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!

Lady C. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.
But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.
Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy time:
What are they, I beseech your ladyship?
Lady C. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;
One who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy
That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.
Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that?
Lady C. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn
The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
The County Paris, at St. Peter's Church,
Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride.
Jul. Now, by St. Peter's Church, and Peter
too,
He shall not make me there a joyful bride.
I wonder at this haste; that I must wed
Ere he that should be husband comes to woo.
I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam,
I will not marry yet; and when I do, I swear
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris:—these are news indeed!
Lady C. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew;
But for the sunset of my brother's son
It rains downright,—
How now! a conduit, girl? what, still in tears?
Evermore showering? In one little body
Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind:
For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body
Is,
Sailing in this salt flood; the winds thy sighs;
Who,—raging with thy tears, and they with
them,—
Without a sudden calm, will overset
Thy tempest-tossed body.—How now, wife!
Have you deliver'd to her our decree?
Lady C. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.
I would the fool were married to her grave!
Cap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife. [thanks?
How! will she none? doth she not give us
Is she not proud? doth she not count her bless'd,
Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?
Jul. Not proud you have; but thankful that you have:
Friar Lawrence.

"By you Till holy church inc.
("Romeo and Juliet").

"You shall not stay alone in one."

Act II, Sc. VI, P. 1081.
Proud can I never be of what I hate;
But thankful ever for hate that is meant love.

Cap. How now, how now, chop-logic! What is this?

Proud,—and, I thank you,—and, I thank you
And yet not proud,—mistress minion, you,
Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds,
But settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,
To go with Paris to St. Peter's Church,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither. [Stage!
Out, you green-sickness carriion! out, you bag.
You tallow-face!
Lady C. Fie, fie! what, are you mad?
Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!
I tell thee what.—get thee to church o' Thurs-
Or never after look me in the face:
Speak not, reply not, do not answer me;
My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us blessed
That God had lent us but this only child;
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her:
Out on her, hilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!—
You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.
Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue,

Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.
Cap. O, God ye good-den!
Nurse. May not one speak?
Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool!
Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
For here we need it not.

Lady C. You are too hot.
Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad:
Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play,
Alone, in company, still my care hath been
To have her match'd, and having now provided
A gentleman of noble parentage,
Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,
Stuff'd, as they say, with honourable parts,
Proportion'd as one's heart could wish a man,—
And then to have a wretched piling fool,
A whining manmet, in her fortune's tender,
To answer, I'll not wed,—I cannot love;
I am too young,—I pray you pardon me;—
But, an you will not well, I'll pardon you:
Graze where you will, you shall not house with me:
Look to 't, think on 't, I do not use to jest.
Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:
An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;

An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die i' the streets,
For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:
Trust to it, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn.

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
That sees into the bottom of my grief?
O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!
Delay this marriage for a month, a week;
Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed
In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

Lady C. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word;
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

Jul. O God!—O nurse! how shall this be prevented?
My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;
How shall that faith return again to earth,
Unless that husband send it me from heaven
By leaving earth?—comfort me, counsel me,— Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems
Upon so soft a subject as myself!—

What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. Faith, here 'tis: Romeo
Is banished; and all the world to nothing
That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;
Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
I think it best you married with the county.
O, he's a lovely gentleman!
Romeo's a dishclout to him; an eagle, madam,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye
As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
I think you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first; or if it did not,
Your first is dead; or 'twere as good be were
As living here, and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nurse. From my soul too,
Or else beshrew them both.

Nurse. What?

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvelous much.

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my father, to Lawrence' cell
To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked friend!
Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn,
Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue?
Which she hath prais’d him with above compare
So many thousand times?—Go, counsellor; Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twin.—
I’ll to the friar, to know his remedy; If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Friar Lawrence’s Cell.

Enter Friar Lawrence and Paris.

Fri. L. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.
Par. My father Capulet will have it so; And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.
Fri. L. You say you do not know the lady’s mind:
Uneven is the course, I like it not. [death, Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt’s And therefore have I little talk’d of love; For Venus smiles not in a house of tears. Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous That she doth give her sorrow so much sway; And, in his wisdom, hastes our marriage, To stop the inundation of her tears; Which, too much minded by herself alone, May be put from her by society:
Now do you know the reason of this haste.
Fri. L. [Aside.] I would I knew not why it should be slow’d.—
Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter Juliet.

Par. Happily met, my lady and my wife! Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.
Par. That may be must be, love, on Thursday next.
Jul. What must be shall be.
Par. Come you to make confession to this father?
Jul. To answer that, I should confess to you.
Par. Do not deny to him that you love me.
Jul. I will confess to you that I love him.
Par. So will ye, I am sure, that you love me.
Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price
Being spoke behind your back than to your face.
Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus’d with tears.
Jul. The tears have got small victory by that; For it was bad enough before their spite.
Par. Thou wrong’st it more than tears with that report.
Jul. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth; And what I spake I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander’d it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.—
Are you at leisure, holy father, now? Or shall I come to you at evening mass?
Fri. L. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.—
My lord, we must entreat the time alone.
Par. God shield I should disturb devotion!—Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you: Till then, adieu; and keep this holy kiss. [Exit. Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so, [help! Come weep with me; past hope, past cure, past
Fri. L. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief; It strains me past the compass of my wit: I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it, On Thursday next be married to this county.
Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hearst of this,
Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it: If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help, Do thou but call my resolution wise, And with this knife I’ll help it presently. God join’d my heart and Romeo’s, thou our hands; And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal’d, Shall be the label to another deed, Or my true heart with treacherous revolt Turn to another, this shall slay them both: Therefore, out of thy long-experience’d time, Give me some present counsel; or, behold, ’Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife Shall play the umpire; arbitrating that Which the commission of thy years and art Could to no issue of true honour bring, Be not so long to speak; I long to die! If what thou speak’st speak not of remedy.

Fri. L. Hold, daughter: I do spy a kind of hope,
Which craves as desperate an execution As that is desperate which we would prevent. If, rather than to marry County Paris, Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself, Then is it likely thou wilt undertake A thing like death to chide away this shame, That cop’st with death himself to scape from it: And, if thou dar’st, I’ll give thee remedy.

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris, From off the battlements of yonder tower; Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears; Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house, O’er-cover’d quite with dead men’s rattling bones,
With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;
Or bid me go into a new-made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
Things that, to hear them told, have made me

tremble;
And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstart'd wife to my sweet love.

Fri. L. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent
To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow;
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie withee in thy chamber:
Take thou this vial, being then in bed,
And this distilled liquor drink thou off: [run
When, presently, through all thy veins shall
A cold and drowsy humour; for no pulse
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou livest;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To paly ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,
Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
Shall, stiff and stark, and cold, appear like death:
And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
Thou shalt continue two-and-forty hours,
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
Now, when the bridegroom in the morning comes
To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
Then,—as the manner of our country is,—
In thy best robes, uncover'd, on the bier,
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
In the meantime, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift;
And hither shall he come: and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present shame,
If no inconstant toy nor womanish fear
Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, give me! O, tell not me of fear!

Fri. L. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous
In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love give me strength! and strength shall help afford.
Farewell, dear father!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Hall in Capulet's House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, Nurse, and Servants.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.—
[Exit first Servant.
Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2 Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

2 Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.

Cap. Go, be gone.— [Exit second Servant.
We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.—
What, is my daughter gone to Friar Lawrence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.
[On her:
Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good
A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Nurse. See where she comes from shift with merry look.

Enter Juliet.

Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding? [sin

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the
Of disobedient opposition
To you and your behests; and am enjoin'd
By holy Lawrence to fall prostrate here,
And beg your pardon:—pardon, I beseech you!
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you. [this:

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.
Jul. I met the youthful lord at Lawrence's cell;
And gave him what became love I might,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on't; this is well,—
stand up,—
This is as't should be.—Let me see the county;
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.—
Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,
All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,
To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

Lady C. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her.—We'll to church to-morrow.

[Exeunt Juliet and Nurse.

Lady C. We shall be short in our provision:
'Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush, I will stir about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee,
wife:
Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her;
I'll not to bed to-night:—let me alone; [ho!—
I'll play the housewife for this once.—What,
They are all forth: well, I will walk myself
To County Paris, to prepare him up Against to-morrow: my heart is wondrous light
Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd.

[Exeunt.
Scene III.—Juliet's Chamber.

Enter Juliet and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best:—but, gentle nurse,
I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;
For I have need of many orisons
To move the heavens to smile upon my state,
Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter Lady Capulet.

Lady C. What, are you busy, ho? need you my help?
Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such neces-
As are behovely for our state to-morrow:
So please you, let me now be left alone,
And let the nurse this night sit up with you;
For I am sure you have your hands full all
In this so sudden business.

Lady C. Good-night:
Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.
[Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.

Jul. Farewell!—God knows when we shall meet again.
I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,
That almost freezes up the heat of life:
I'll call them back again to comfort me;—
Nurse!—What should she do here?
My dismal scene I needs must act alone.—
Come, vial.—
What if this mixture do not work at all?
Shall I be married, then, to-morrow morning?—
No, no;—this shall forbid it:—lie thou there.—
[Laying down her dagger.

What if it be a poison, which the friar
Subly hath minister'd to have me dead,
Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,
Because he married me before to Romeo?
I fear it is: and yet methinks it should not,
For he hath still been tried a holy man:—
I will not entertain so bad a thought.—
How if, when I am laid into the tomb,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point!
Shall I not then be stifled in the vault, fin,
To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes
And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes?
Or, if I live, is it not very like
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,—
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,
Where, for these many hundred years, the bones
Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,
Lies festering in his shroud; where, as they say,
At some hours in the night spirits resort;—

Scene IV.—Hall in Capulet's House.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

Lady C. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, Nurse.
Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,
The curfew bell hath ring'd, 'tis three o'clock:—
Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica:
Spare not for cost.
Nurse. Go, you cot-quean, go,
Get you to bed; faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.
[ere now

Cap. No, not a whit: what! I have watch'd
All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.
Lady C. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;
But I will watch you from such watching now.
[Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—Now, fellow,

Enter Servants, with spits, logs, and baskets.

What's there? [not what.

1 Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know
Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1 Serv.
No, sirrah, fetch drier logs:
Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.
2 Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,
And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.

Cap. Mass, and well said; a merry whoreson, ha!
[day:

Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith, 'tis

Alack, alack, is it not like that I,
So early waking,—what with loathsome smells,
And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,
That living mortals, hearing them, run mad;—
O, if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears?
And madly play with my forefathers' joints?
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?
And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone, [brains?—
As with a club, dash out my desperate
O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point:—stay, Tybalt, stay!—
Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.
[Throws herself on the bed.
The county will be here with music straight,
For so he said he would:—I hear him near.— [Music within.

Nurse!—wife!—what, ho!—what, nurse, I say!

Re-enter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up;
I’ll go and chat with Paris:—he, make haste,
Make haste; the bridegroom he is come already:
Make haste, I say.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—JULIET’S Chamber; JULIET on the bed.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet!
—fast, I warrant her, she:—
Why, lamb?—why, lady!—he, you slug-a-bed!—
Why, love, I say!—madam! sweetheart!—why, bride!—
What, not a word?—you take your pennyworths
Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant,
The County Paris hath set up his rest
That you shall rest but little.—God forgive me,
Marry, and amen, how sound is she asleep!
I must needs wake her.—Madam, madam,
madam!—
Ay, let the county take you in your bed;
He’ll fright you up, i’ faith.—Will it not be?
What, dress’d! and in your clothes! and down again!
I must needs wake you:—lady! lady! lady!—
Alas, alas!—Help, help! my lady’s dead!—
O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—
Some aqua-vite, ho!—my lord! my lady!

Enter Lady Capulet.

Lady C. What noise is here?
Nurse. O lamentable day!
Lady C. What is the matter?
Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!
Lady C. O me, O me!—my child, my only life,
Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!—
Help, help!—call help.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. For shame bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.
Nurse. She’s dead, deceas’d, she’s dead; alack the day!
Lady C. Alack the day, she’s dead, she’s dead!—cold;
Cap. Ha! let me see her:—out, alas! she’s
Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated:
Death lies on her like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Accursed time! unfortunate old man!
Nurse. O lamentable day!
Lady C. O woeful time!
Cap. Death, that hath ta’en her hence to make me wail,
Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar Lawrence and Paris, with Musicians.

Fri. L. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return:—
O son, the night before thy wedding-day
Hath death lain with thy bride:—there she lies,
Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded: I will die,
And leave him all; life, living, all is death’s.
Par. Have I thought long to see this morning’s face,
And doth it give me such a sight as this? [day!
Lady C. Accurs’d, unhappy, wretched, hateful
Most miserable hour that e’er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch’d it from my sight!
Nurse. O woe! O woeful, woeful, woeful day!
Most lamentable day, most woeful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woeful day, O woeful day!
[slain!
Par. Beguil’d, divorced, wronged, spited,
Most detestable death, by thee beguil’d,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!—
O love! O life!—not life, but love in death!
Cap. Despis’d, distressed, hated, martyr’d, kill’d!—
Uncomfortable time, why can’t thou now
To murder, murder our solemnity?—[child!—
O child! O child!—my soul, and not my Dead art thou, dead!—alack, my child is dead;
And with my child my joys are buried!
Fri. L. Peace, ho, for shame! confusion’s cure lives not
In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid;
Your part in her you could not keep from death;
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was her promotion;
For ’twas your heaven she should be advanc’d:
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc’d
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?
O, in this love, you love your child so ill
That you run mad, seeing that she is well;
She's not well married that lives married long;
But she's best married that dies married young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse; and as the custom is,
In all her best array bear her to church:
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's errament.

Cap. All things that we ordained festival
Turn from their office to black funeral:
Our instruments to melancholy bells;
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast;
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. L. Sir, go you in,—and, madam, go
with him;—
And go, Sir Paris;—every one prepare
To follow this fair corse unto her grave:
The heavens do lower upon you for some ill;
Move them no more by crossing their high will.

[Exit Cap., Lady Cap., Paris, and Friar.]

1 Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes and be gone.
Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up,
For, well you know, this is a pitiful case. [Exit.

1 Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter Peter.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, Heart's ease, Heart's ease: O, an you will have me live, play Heart's ease.

1 Mus. Why Heart's ease?

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays My heart is full of woe: O, play me some merry dam to comfort me. [now.

1 Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play

Pet. You will not, then?

1 Mus. No.

Pet. I will, then, give it you soundly.

1 Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith; but the gleek,
-I will give you the minstrel. [creature.

1 Mus. Then will I give you the serving-

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotches:
I'll re you, I'll fa you; do you note me?

1 Mus. An you re us and fa us, you note us.

2 Mus. Tray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger.—Answer me like men:

When grieving grief the heart doth wound,
An I doleful damps the mind oppress,
Then music with her silver sound—

why silver sound? why music with her silver sound?—What say you, Simon Catling?

1 Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty!—What say you, Hugh Rebeck?

2 Mus. I say silver sound because musicians sound for silver. [Sound-post.

Pet. Pretty too!—What say you, James

3 Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy; you are the singer:
I will say for you. It is music with her silver sound because musicians have no gold for sounding:—

Then music with her silver sound
With speedy help doth lend redress.

[Exit.

1 Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same!

2 Mus. Hang him, Jack!—Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner.

[Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—MANTUA. A STREET.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering eye of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne;
And all this day an unaccustomed spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful
thoughts.

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead,— Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think!—

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.

Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Enter Balthasar.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar! Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar? How doth my lady? Is my father well? How fares my Juliet? that I ask again; For nothing can be ill if she be well. [foul.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be
Her body sleeps in Capels' monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you:
O, pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!—Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and paper,

And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.
Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience: Your looks are pale and wild, and do import Some misadventure.
Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv’d: Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do. Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?
Bal. No, my good lord.
Rom. No matter: get thee gone, And hire those horses; I’ll be with thee straight. [Exit BALTHASAR.
Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let’s see for means:—O mischief, thou art swift
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men! I do remember an apothecary,—
And hereabouts he dwells,—which late I noted In tatter’d weeds, with overwhelming brows, Culling of simples; meagre were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff’d, and other skins Of ill-shap’d fishes; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds, Remnants of pickthread, and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scatter’d, to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said,
An if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.
O, this same thought did but forerun my need;
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar’s shop is shut.—
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?
Rom. Come hither, man.—I see that thou art poor;
Hold, there is forty ducats: let me have
A dram of poison; such soon-speeding gear
As will disperse itself through all the veins,
That the life-weary taker may fall dead;
And that the trunk may be discharg’d of breath
As violently as hasty powder fir’d
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon’s womb.
Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua’s law
Is death to any he that utters them.
Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretchedness,
And fear’st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Contempt and beggary hangs upon thy back,
The world is not thy friend, nor the world’s law;
The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.
Ap. My poverty, but not my will consents.
Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will.
Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would despatch you straight.
Rom. There is thy gold; worse poison to men’s souls,
Doing more murders in this loathsome world
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell:
I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell: buy food, and get thyself in flesh.—
Come, cordial, and not poison, go with me To Juliet’s grave; for there must I use thee.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—FRIAR LAWRENCE’S CELL.

Enter Friar John.
Fri. J. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!
Enter Friar Lawrence.
Fri. L. This same should be the voice of Friar John.
Welcome from Mantua: what says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.
Fri. J. Going to find a barefoot brother out,
One of our order, to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town,
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,
Seal’d up the doors, and would not let us forth;
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay’d.
Fri. L. Who bare my letter, then, to Romeo?
Fri. J. I could not send it,—here it is again,—
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection. [hood,
Fri. L. Unhappy fortune! by my brother-
The letter was not nice, but full of charge
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger. Friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight
Unto my cell.
Fri. J. Brother, I’ll go and bring it thee.
[Exit.
Fri. L. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake:
She will beshrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents;
But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come;—
Poor living corse, clos’d in a dead man’s tomb! [Exit.
Scene III.—A Churchyard; in it a Monument belonging to the Capulets.

Enter Paris, and his Page bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: hence, and stand aloof:—

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yond yew trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground:
So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread,—
Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves,—
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. [Aside.] I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure.
[Retires.]

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew:
O woe, thy canopy is dust and stones!
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew;
Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans:
The obsequies that I for thee will keep,
Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep.
[The Page whistles.

The boy gives warning something doth approach.
What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
To cross my obsequies and true love's rite?
What, with a torch!—muffle me, night, awhile.
[Retires.

Enter Romeo and Balthasar, with a torch, mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock and the wrenching iron.
I hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light: upon thy life I charge thee,
What'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death
Is partly to behold my lady's face,
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger
A precious ring,—a ring that I must use
In dear employment: therefore, hence be gone:—
But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,
And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs:
The time and my intents are savage-wild;
More fierce and more inexorable far
Than empty tigers or the roaring sea.

Balt. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.—
Take thou that:—

Page. O lord, they fight! I will go call the watch.

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,
[Breaking open the door of the monument.

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food.

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague
That murder'd my love's cousin,—with which grief,
It is supposed, the fair creature died,—
And here is come to do some villainous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.— [Advance.

Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague!
Can vengeance be pursu'd further than death?
Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:
Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must indeed; and therefore came I hither.—
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man:
Fly hence, and leave me:—think upon these gone;
Let them affright thee. —I beseech thee, youth,
Put not another sin upon my head
By urging me to fury: O, be gone!
By heaven, I love thee better than myself;
For I come hither arm'd against myself:
Stay not, be gone;—live, and hereafter say,
A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations,
And apprehend thee for a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy! [They fight.

Page. O lord, they fight! I will go call the watch.

Rom. In faith, I will. —Let me peruse this face:—

Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris!—
What said my man, when my betossed soul
Did not attend him as we rode? I think
He told me Paris should have married Juliet:
Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
To think it was so—O, give me thy hand,
One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!
I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave;—
A grave?  O no, a lantern, slaughter'd youth,
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
This vault a feasting presence full of light.

Death, lie thou there, by a dead man inter'd.

[Laying Paris in the monument.]

How oft when men are at the point of death
Have they been merry! which their keepers call
A lightning before death: O, how may I
Call this a lightning?—O my love! my wife!

Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
Hath no power yet upon thy beauty: Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—

Tybalt, beat thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O, what more favour can I do to thee [twain
Than with that hand that cut thy youth into
To render his that was thine enemy?

Forgive me, cousin!—Ah, dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe
That unsubstantial death is amorous;
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
Thee here in dark to be his paramour?

For fear of that I still will stay with thee,
And never from this palace of dim night
Depart again: here, here will I remain [here
With worms that are thy chambermaids; O, Will I set up my everlasting rest;
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your last!

Arms, take your last embrace! and, lips, O you
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing death!—
Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
There's to my love! [Drinks.]—O true apothecary!

Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die.

[Dies.]

Enter, at the other end of the Churchyard, Friar Lawrence, with a lantern, crow, and spade.

Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves!—Who's
What is it that consorts so late, the dead?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well. [my friend,

Fri. L. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good
What torch is yond that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,
It burneth in the Capel's monument. [master,

Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my
One that you love.

Fri. L. Who is it?

---

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. L. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. L. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir:

My master knows not but I am gone hence;
And fearfully did menace me with death
If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. L. Stay, then; I'll go alone:—fear comes upon me:

O, much I fear some ill unlucky thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.

Fri. L. Romeo! [Advances.

Mack, alack, what blood is this which stains
The stony entrance of this sepulchre?

What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

[Enter the monument.

Romeo! O, pale!—Who else? what, Paris too?
And steep'd in blood?—Ah, what an unkind hour
Is guilty of this lamentable chance!—
The lady stirs. [Juliet wakes and stirs.

Jul. O comfortable friar! where is my lord?—
I do remember well where I should be,
And there I am:—where is my Romeo?

[Noise within.

Fri. L. I hear some noise.—Lady, come from that nest
Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep:
A greater power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents:—come, come away:
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;
And Paris too:—come, I'll dispose of thee
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns:
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;
Come, go, good Juliet [noise again],—I dare no longer stay. [away.—

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not [Exit Friar Lawrence.

What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's hand?

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end:—
O churl! drink all, and leave no friendly drop
To help me after?—I will kiss thy lips;

I'll ply some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative.

[Kisses him.

Thy lips are warm!

1 Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy:—which way?

Jul. Yea, noise?—then I'll be brief.—Oh happy dagger! [Snatching Romeo's dagger.

This is thy sheath [stabs herself]; there rest, and let me die.

[Falls on Romeo's body, and dies.
Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn. [The churchyard:
1 Watch. The ground is bloody; search about;
Go, some of you, who'er you find attack.
[Exeunt some of the Watch.

Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain;—
And Juliet bleeding; warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried. —
Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets,— Raise up the Montagues,—some others search:— [Exeunt others of the Watch.

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie;
But the true ground of all these piteous woes
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Re-enter some of the Watch with Balthasar.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the churchyard.
1 Watch. Hold him in safety till the prince come hither.

Re-enter others of the Watch with Friar Lawrence.

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps:
We took this mattock and this spade from him
As he was coming from this churchyard side.
1 Watch. A great suspicion: stay the friar too.

Enter the Prince and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?
Lady C. The people in the street cry Romeo,
Some Juliet, and some Paris; and all run,
With open outcry, toward our monument.
Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears?
1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the County Paris
slain;
And Romeo dead: and Juliet, dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.
Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.
[Roméo's man,

1 Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd
With instruments upon them fit to open
These dead men's tombs.
[Daughter bleeds!
Cap. O heaven!—O wife, look how our
This dagger hath mista'en,—for, lo, his house is empty on the back of Montague,—
And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom!

Lady C. O me! this sight of death is as a bell
That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter Montague and others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early
up,
To see thy son and heir more early down.
Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night;
Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath:
What further woe conspires against my age?
Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.
[This, Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is in
To press before thy father to a grave?
[While,
Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for
Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent;
And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death: meantime forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience. —
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murder;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself excus'd.
Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.
[Breath

Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short date of
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.
Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet:
And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife:
I married them; and their stol'n marriage-day
Was Tybalt's doomsday, whose untimely death Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city;
For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.
You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,
To County Paris:—then comes she to me,
And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means
To rid her from this second marriage,
Or in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,
A sleeping potion; which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo
That he should hither come as this dire night,
To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,
Being the time the poison's force should cease.
But he which bore my letter, Friar John,
Was stay'd by accident; and yearenight
Return'd my letter back. Then all alone
At the prefixed hour of her waking
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault;
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:
But when I came,—some minute ere the time
Of her awaking,—here untimely lay
The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
She wakes; and I entreated her come forth,
And bear this work of heaven with patience:
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb;
And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
But, as it seems, did violence on herself.
All this I know; and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy: and if ought in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrifice’d, some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law. [man.]

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy Where’s Romeo’s man? what can he say in this?
Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet’s
And then in post he came from Mantua
To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father;
And threaten’d me with death, going in the vault,
If I departed not, and left him there.
Prince. Give me the letter,—I will look on
it. [death;]
Where is the county’s page that rais’d the Sirrah, what made your master in this place?
Page. He came with flowers to strewn his lady’s grave;
And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:
Anon comes one with light to ope the tomb;
And by and by my master drew on him;
And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar’s words,
Their course of love, the tidings of her death:
And here he writes that he did buy a poison
Of a poor ‘pothecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to dic, and lie with Juliet.—
Where be these enemies?—Capulet,—Monttague,—

See what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
That heaven finds means to kill your joys with
love!
And I, for winking at your discords too,
Have lost a brace of kinsmen:—all are punish’d.

Cap. O brother Montague, give me thy hand;
This is my daughter’s jointure, for no more
Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more:
For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
That while Verona by that name is known.
There shall no figure at such rate be set
As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity! [it brings;

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with
The sun for sorrow will not show his head:
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;
Some shall be pardon’d and some punished:
For never was a story of more woe
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.]

ACT I.

Scene I.—An open Place. Thunder and Lightning.

Enter three Witches.

1 Witch. When shall we three meet again
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.
3 Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.
1 Witch. Where the place?
2 Witch. Upon the heath.
3 Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.
1 Witch. I come, Graymalkin!
All. Paddock calls:—anon.—Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
Hover through the fog and filthy air.
[Witches vanish.

Scene II.—A Camp near Forres.

Alarm within. Enter King Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Lennox, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Soldier.

Dunc. What bloody man is that? He can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.
Mal. This is the sergeant,
Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought
'Gainst my captivity.—Hail, brave friend!
Say to the king the knowledge of the broil,
As thou didst leave it.
Sold. Doubtfully it stood:
As two spent swimmers that do cling together
And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald,— Worthy to be a rebel—for to that
The multiplying villanies of nature
Do swarm upon him,—from the Western isles
Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied:
And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore. But all's too weak:
[name,—For brave Macbeth,—well he deserves that Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
Which smok'd with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion,
Car'd out his passage till he fai'd the slave:
And ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
To turn and live a villainesse, like me, [chaps.
Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the
And fix'd his head upon our battlements.
Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection
Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break:
So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to come,
Discomfort swells. Mark, King of Scotland, mark:
No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd,
Compell’d these skipping kerns to trust their heels,
But the Norwegan lord, surveying vantage,
With furdish’d arms and new supplies of men,
Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay’d not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?
Sold. Yes;
As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg’d with double cracks;
So they
Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell:
But I am faint; my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds;
They smack of honour both.—Go, get him surgeons. [Exit Soldier, attended.

Who comes here?
Mal. The worthy Thane of Ross.
Len. What a haste looks through his eyes!
So should he look
That seems to speak things strange.

Enter Ross.
Ross. God save the king!
Dun. Whence cam’st thou, worthy thane?
Ross. From Fife, great king;
Where the Norwegan banners flout the sky
And fan our people cold.
Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor
The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict:
Till that Bellona’s bridegroom, lapp’d in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point rebellious, arm ’gainst arm,
Curbing his lavish spirit: and, to conclude,
The victory fell on us.

Dun. Great happiness!
Ross. That now
Sweno, the Norways’ king, craves composition;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men
Till he disbursed, at Saint Colmes-inch,
Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive
Our bosom interest:—go pronounce his present death,
And with his former title greet Macbeth.
Ross. I’ll see it done.
Dun. What he hath lost, noble Macbeth hath won. [Exit.

Scene III.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?
3 Witch. Sister, where thou?
1 Witch. A sailor’s wife had chestnuts in her lap,
And mouch’d, and mouch’d, and mouch’d:
—Give me, quoth I:

Aroint thee, witch! the rump-fed ronyon cries.
Her husband’s to Aleppo gone, master of the Tiger:
But in a sieve I’ll thither sail,
And, like a rat without a tail,
I’ll do, I’ll do, and I’ll do.

2 Witch. I’ll give thee a wind.
1 Witch. Thou art kind.
3 Witch. And I another.
1 Witch. I myself have all the other;
And the very ports they blow,
All the quarters that they know
I the shipman’s card.
I will drain him dry as hay:
Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his pent-house lid;
He shall live a man forbid:
Weary seven-nights nine times nine
Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine:
Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-tost.—
Look what I have.

2 Witch. Show me, show me.
1 Witch. Here I have a pilot’s thumb,
Wreck’d as homeward he did come.

[Drum within.

3 Witch. A drum, a drum!
Macbeth doth come.
All. The weird sisters, lend in hand,
Posters of the sea and land,
Thus do go about, about:
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice again, to make up nine:—
Peace!—the charm’s wound up.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.
Ban. How far is’t call’d to Forres?—What are these,
So wither’d, and so wild in their attire,
That look not like the inhabitants o’ the earth,
And yet are on’t?—Live you? or are you aught
That man may question? You seem to understand me,
By each at once her chappy finger laying
Upon her skinny lips:—you should be women,
And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can;—what are you?

1 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
Thane of Glamis!

2 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
Thane of Cawdor!

3 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter! [to fear

Ban. Good sir, why do you start: and seem Things that do sound so fair?—I' the name of truth,
Are ye fantastical, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner
You greet with present grace and great predition
Of noble having and of royal hope, [not:
That he seems rapt within—to me you speak
If you can look into the seeds of time, [not,
And say which grain will grow, and which will Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear
Your favours nor your hate.

1 Witch. Hail!
2 Witch. Hail!
3 Witch. Hail!
1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.
2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.
3 Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none:
So, all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!

1 Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me
more:
By Sinel's death I know I am Thane of Glamis;
But how of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor lives,
A prosperous gentleman; and to be king
Stands not within the prospect of belief.
No more than to be Cawdor. Say from whence
You owe this strange intelligence? or why
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way
With such prophetic greeting?—Speak, I charge
you. [Witches vanish.

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has, [ish'd?
And these are of them:—whither are they van-

Macb. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal melted
As breath into the wind.—Would they had stay'd! [about?

Ban. Were such things here as we do speak
Or have we eaten on the insane root
That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be king.

Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too; went it not so? [Who's here?

Ban. To the self-same tune and words.

Enter Ross and Angus.

Ross. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,
The news of thy success: and when he reads
Thy personal venture in the rebels' flight,
His wonders and his praises do contend
Which should be thine or his: silence'd with that,
In viewing o'er the rest of the self-same day,
He finds thee in the stout Norwegian ranks,
Nothing afraid of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as hail
Came post with post; and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent
To give thee, from our royal master, thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.

Ross. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor:
In which addition, hail, most worthy thine!
For it is thine.

Ban. What, can the devil speak true?

Macb. The Thane of Cawdor lives: why do you dress me
In borrow'd robes?

Ang. Who was the thane lives yet;
But under heavy judgment bears that life Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combin'd
With those of Norway, or did line the rebel
With hidden help and vantage, or that with both
He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not;
But treasons capital, confess'd, and prov'd,
Have overthrown him.

Macb. Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind [aside].—Thanks for your pains.—

Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to
me
Promis'd no less to them?

Ban. That, trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
And oftentimes to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths;
Win us with honest trifles, to betray's
In deepest consequence.—

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme [aside].—I thank you,
gentlemen.—

This supernatural soliciting [aside.
Cannot be ill; cannot be good:—if ill, Why hath it given me earnest of success, Commencing in truth? I am Thane of Cawdor: If good, why do I yield to that suggestion Whose horrid image doth unsay my hair, And make my seated heart knock at my ribs, Against the use of nature? Present fears Are less than horrible imaginings: [cal, My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastic Shakes so my single state of man, that function Is smother'd in surmise; and nothing is But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.
Macb. [Aside.] If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me, Without my stir.
Ban. New honours come upon him, Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould But with the aid of use.
Macb. [Aside.] Come what come may, Time and the hour runs through the roughest day. [leisure. Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon you Macb. Give me your favour:—my dull brain was wrought [pains With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your Are register'd where every day I turn The leaf to read them.—Let us toward the king.— [time, Think upon what hath chanc'd; and, at more The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak Our free hearts each to other.
Ban. Very gladly.
Macb. Till then, enough.—Come, friends. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—FORRES. A Room in the Palace. Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not Those in commission yet return'd?
Mal. My liege, They are not yet come back. But I have spoke With one that saw him die: who did report, That very frankly he confess'd his treasons; Implor'd your highness' pardon; and set forth A deep repentance: nothing in his life Became him like the leaving it; he died As one that had been studi'd in his death, To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd, As 'twere a careless trifle.
Dun. There's no art To find the mind's construction in the face:

He was a gentleman on whom I built An absolute trust.—

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS, and ANCUS.

O worthiest cousin!
The sin of my ingratitude even now Was heavy on me: thou art so far before, That swiftest wing of recompense is slow To overtake thee. Would thou hast less deserv'd;
That the proportion both of thanks and had May have been mine! only I have left to say, More is thy due than more than all can pay. Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe, In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part Is to receive our duties: and our duties Are to your throne and state children and servants; [everything Which do but what they should, by doing Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour To make thee full of growing.—Noble Banquo, That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known No less to have done so, let me infold thee, And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow, The harvest is your own.
Dun. My plenteous joys, Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves In drops of sorrow.—Sons, kinsmen, thanes, And you whose places are the nearest, know, We will establish our estate upon Our eldest, Malcolm; whom we name hereafter.
The Prince of Cumberland: which honour must Not unaccompanied invest him only, But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine On all deservers.—From hence to Inverness, And bind us further to you. [for you: Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful The hearing of my wife with your approach; So, humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!
Macb. [Aside.] The Prince of Cumberland!—That is a step, On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap, For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires! Let not light see my black and deep desires: The eye wink at the hand! yet let that be, Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

Dun. True, worthy Banquo,—he is full so valiant;
And in his commendations I am fed,—
It is a banquet to me. Let us after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome: It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exit.

Scene V.—Inverness. A Room in Macbeth’s Castle.

Enter Lady Macbeth, reading a letter.

Lady M. They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. While I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hailed me, Thane of Cawdor: by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with Hail, king that shall be! This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness; that thou mightst not lose the dews of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be What thou art promis’d: yet do I fear thy nature; It is too full o’ the milk of human kindness To catch the nearest way: thou wouldst be great;

Art not without ambition; but without The illness should attend it. What thou wouldst highly, [false, That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play, And yet wouldst wrongly win: thou’dst have, great Glamis, [have it: That which cries, Thus thou must do, if thou And that which rather thou dost fear to do Than wishest should be undone. Hie thee hither,

That I may pour my spirits in thine ear; And chaste the with my tongue All that impedes thee from the golden round, Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem To have thee crown’d withal.

Enter an Attendant.

What is your tidings?

Att. The king comes here to-night.
Lady M. Thou’rt mad to say it: Is not thy master with him? who, were’t so, Would have inform’d for preparation.
Att. So please you, it is true:—our thane is coming:

One of my fellows had the speed of him; Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more Than would make up his message.
Lady M. Give him tending,
He brings great news. [Exit Attendant.

Enter Macbeth.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor! Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter! Thy letters have transported me beyond This ignorant present, and I feel now The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love, Duncan comes here to-night.
Lady M. And when goes hence?
Macb. To-morrow,—as he purposes.
Lady M. Shall sun that morrow see! Your face, my thane, is as a book where men May read strange matters:—to beguile the time, Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye, Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower, But be the serpent under’t. He that’s coming Must be provided for: and you shall put This night’s great business into my despatch; Which shall to all our days and nights come Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

Macb. We will speak further.
Lady M. Only look up clear; To alter favour ever is to fear:
Leave all the rest to me. [Exeunt.

Scene VI.—The same. Before the Castle.

Hautboys. Servants of Macbeth attending.

Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Banquo, Lennox, Macduff, Ross, Angus, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat: the air Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself Unto our gentle senses.
Ban. This guest of summer, The temple-haunting martlet, does approve, By hislov'd mansionry, that the heaven's breath Smells wooingly here: no juty, frieze, buttress, Nor coigne of vantage, but this bird hath made HIS pendant bed and proceect cradle: Where they most breed and haunt, I have observ'd The air is delicate.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Dun. See, see, our honour'd hostess!— The love that follows us sometime is our trouble, Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you How you shall bid God ill us for your pains, And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service In every point twice done, and then done double, Were poor and single business to contend Against those honours deep and broad where-with Your majesty loads our house: for those of old, And the late dignities heap'd up to them, We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the Thane of Cawdor? We cours'd him at the heels, and had a purpose To be his purveyor: but he rides well; [him And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath hopd To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess, We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt, To make their audit at your highness' pleasure, Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand; Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly, And shall continue our graces towards him. By your leave, hostess. [Exeunt.

Scene VII.—The same. A Lobby in the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over, a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service. Then enter Macbeth.

Macb. If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well It were done quickly. If the assassination Could trammel up the consequence, and catch, With his sucesse, success: that but this blow Might be the be-all and the end-all here, But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,— We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases We still have judgment here; that we but teach Bloody instructions, which being taught, return To plague the inventor: this even-handed justice Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice To our own lips. He's here in double trust: First, as I am his kinsman and his subject, Strong both against the deed: then, as his host, Who should against his murderer shut the door, Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been So clear in his great office, that his virtues Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against The deep damnation of his taking-off: And pitty, like a naked new-born babe, Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, hors'd Upon the sightless couriers of the air, Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye, That tears shall drown the wind. —I have nospur To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself, And falls on the other.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

How now! what news?

Lady M. He has almost suppl'd: why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not he has?

Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:
He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought Golden opinions from all sorts of people, Which would be worn now in their newest gloss, Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk Wherein you dress'd your-self? hath it slept since?

And wakes it now, to look so green and pale At what it did so freely? From this time Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid To be the same in thine own act and valour As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life, And live a coward in thine own esteem; Letting I dare not wait upon I would, Like the poor cat i' the adage?

Macb. Prythee, peace: I dare do all that may become a man; Who dares do more is none.

Lady M. What beast was't, then, That made you break this enterprise to me? When you durst do it, then you were a man; And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time nor place Did then adhere, and yet you would make both: They have made themselves, and that their fitness now Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me:
Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch.

MACB. A friend. [a-bed:

BAN. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king’s
He hath been in unusual pleasure, and Sent forth great largess to your officers:
This diamond he greets your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up
In measureless content.

MACB. Being unprepare’d,
Our will became the servant to defect;
Which else should free have wrought.

BAN. All’s well.
I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters:
To you they have show’d some truth.

MACB. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
We would spend it in some words upon that business,
If you would grant the time.

BAN. At your kind’st leisure.

MACB. If you shall cleave to my consent,— when ’tis,
It shall make honour for you.

BAN. So I lose none
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis’d, and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsel’d.

MACB. Good repose the while!

BAN. Thanks, sir; the like to you!

[Exit BANQUO and FLEANCE.

MACB. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready,
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.

[Exit Servant.

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:—
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As this which now I draw.
Thou marshall’st me the way that I was going;
And such an instrument I was to use.
 Mine eyes are made the fools o’ the other senses,
Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;
And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood,
Which was not so before.—There’s no such thing:
It is the bloody business which informs Thus to mine eyes.—Now o’er the one-half
world
Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
The curtain’d sleep; now witchcraft celebrates Scene 1.

MACBETH.

Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder,
Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf,
Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his Moves like a ghost.—Thou sure and firm-set earth, Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for Thy very stones pale of my whereabout,
And take the present horror from the time,
Which now suits with it.—Whiles I threat, he lives;
Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan, for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven or to hell. [Exit.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold;
What hath quench'd them hath given me fire.—
Hark!—Peace!
It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman,
Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it:
The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snores: I have drug'd their possets,
That death and nature do contend about them,
Whether they live or die.

Macb. [Within.] Who's there?—what, ho!
Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd,
And 'tis not done:—the attempt, and not the deed,
Contounds us.—Hark!—I laid their daggers
He could not miss 'em.—Had he not resembled
My father as he slept, I had done't.—My husband!

Re-enter Macbeth.

Macb. I have done the deed.—Didst thou not hear a noise?
[crickets cry.
Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the
Did not you speak?
Macb. When?
Lady M. Now.
Macb. As I descended.
Lady M. Ay.
Macb. Hark!—
Who lies i' the second chamber?
Lady M. Donalbain.
Macb. This is a sorry sight.
[Looking on his hands.
Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry sight.
Macb. There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried Murder!

That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them:
But they did say their prayers, and address'd
Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lord'd together.
Macb. One cried, God bless us! and, Amen,
the other:
[hands.
As they had seen me with these hangman's
Listening their fear, I could not say, Amen,
When they did say, God bless us.

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.
Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce,
Amen?

I had most need of blessing, and Amen
Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought
After these ways: so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry, Sleep
no more!

Macbeth does murder sleep,—the innocent sleep;
Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleave of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labor's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast.

Lady M. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cried, Sleep no more! to all the house:
[Ceased.

Glamis hath murder'd sleep: and therefore Shall sleep no more.—Macbeth shall sleep no more! [worthythane.

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why,
You do unbend your noble strength to think
So brainsickly of things.—Go get some water,
And wash this filthy witness from your hand.—
Why did you bring these daggers from the place?
They must lie there: go carry them; and smear
The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more:
I am afraid to think what I have done;
Look on't again I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!
Give me the daggers: the sleeping and the dead
Are but as pictures; 'tis the eye of childhood
That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal,
For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within.

Macb. Whence is that knocking?
How is 't with me, when every noise appals me?
What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out mine eyes!
Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand?—No; this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one red.
Re-enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I shame.
To wear a heart so white. [Knocking within.] I hear a knocking.
At the south entry:—retire we to our chamber.
A little water clears us of this deed:
How easy is it then! Your constancy
Hath left you unattended.—[Knocking within.]
Hark! more knocking:
Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call us,
And show us to be watchers:—be not lost
So poorly in your thoughts.
Macb. To know my deed, 'twere best not know myself. [Knocking within.]
Wake Duncan with thy knocking! 'I would thou couldst! [Exeunt.

Enter a Porter. Knocking within.

Porter. Here's a knocking indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turning the key. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock. Who's there, 'tis the name of Beelzebub? Here's a farmer that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty: come in time; have napkins enow about you; here you'll sweat for't.—[Knocking.] Knock, knock! Who's there, 'tis the other devil's name? Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O, come in, equivocator. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there? Faith, here's an English tailor come hither, for stealing out of a French hose: come in, tailor, here you may roast your goose.—[Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock: never at quiet! What are you?—But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking.] Anon, anon! I pray you, remember the porter.

[Opens the gate.

Enter Macduff and Lennox.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed, that you do lie so late?
Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock: and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.
Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?
Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes and it unpro vokes; it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance: therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and dishheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to: in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, sir, 'tis the very throat o' me: but I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?—
Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Enter Macbeth.

Len. Good-morrow, noble sir!
Macb. Good-morrow, both! Good-morrow, worthy thane?
Macb. Not yet.
Macd. He did command me to call timely
on him:
I have almost slipp'd the hour.
Macb. I'll bring you to him.
Macd. I know this is a joyful trouble to you;
But yet 'tis one.
Macb. The labour we delight in physics pain.
This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call.

For 'tis my limited service. [Exit Macduff.

Len. Does the king hence to-day?
Macb. He does: he did appoint so.
Len. The night has been unruly: where we lay,
Our chimneys were blown down: and, as they Lamentings heard i' the air; strange screams of death;
And prophesying, with accents terrible,
Of dire combustion and confus'd events,
New hatch'd to the woeful time: the obscure bird [earth
Clamour'd the live-long night: some say the
Was feverous, and did shake.
Macb. 'Twas a rough night.
Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macd. O horror, horror, horror! Tongue nor heart
Cannot conceive nor name thee!
Macb., Len. What's the matter?
Macd. Confusion now hath made his master-piece!
Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o' the building.

Macb. What is 't you say? the life?
Len. Mean you his majesty? [your sight
Macb. Approach the chamber, and destroy
With a new Gorgon—do not bid me speak;
See, and then speak yourselves.

[Exeunt Macbeth and Lennox.

Awake! awake!—
Ring the alarum-bell:—murder and treason!
Banquo and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake!
Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,
And look on death itself! up, up, and see
The great doom's image! Malcolm! Banquo!
As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites,
To countenance this horror!

[Alarum-bell rings.

Re-enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. What's the business,
That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!
Macb. O gentle lady,
'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak:
The repetition, in a woman's ear,
Would murder as it fell.

Re-enter Banquo.

O Banquo, Banquo!
Our royal master's murder'd!
Lady M. Woe, alas!
What, in our house?
Ban. Too cruel any where.—
Dear Duff, I pr'ythee, contradict thyself,
And say it is not so.

Re-enter Macbeth and Lennox.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,
I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this in—
There's nothing serious in mortality:
All is but toys: renown and grace is dead;
The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter Malcolm and Donalbain.

Don. What is amiss?
Macb. You are, and do not know 't:
The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood
Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.
Macb. Your royal father's murder'd.
Mal. O, by whom?
Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done't.

[Blood:
Their hands and faces were all bang'd with
So were their daggers, which, unwip'd, we found
Upon their pillows:
They stare'd, and were distracted; no man's life
Was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.

Macb. Wherefore did you so?
Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate,
and furious,
Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:
The expedition of my violent love
Out-ran the pauser reason. Here lay Duncan,
His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;
And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature [derets,
For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the mur-
Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers [frain,
Unmannerly breech'd with gore: who could re-
That had a heart to love, and in that heart
Courage to make's love known?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!
Macb. Look to the lady.
Mal. Why do we hold our tongues,
That most may claim this argument for ours?
Don. What should be spoken here, where our fate,
Hid in an auger-hole, may rush, and seize us?
Let's away;
Our tears are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Nor our strong sorrow
Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady:—

[Lady Macbeth is carried out.

And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet,
And question this most bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:
In the great hand of God I stand; and thence,
Against the undivulged pretence I fight
Of treasonous malice.

Macb. And so do I.
All. So all.
Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,
And meet i' the hall together.

[Exeunt all but Mal. and Don.

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort
with them:
To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland I; our separated fortune
Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,
There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood,
The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that's shot
Hath not yet lighted; and our safest way
Is to avoid the aim. Therefore to horse;
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But shift away; there's warrant in that theft
Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. —The same. Without the Castle.

Enter Ross and an old Man.

Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember well:
Within the volume of which time I have seen
Hours dreadful and things strange; but this Sore night
Hath trifled former knowings.

Ross. Ah, good father,
Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act,
[day,
Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock, 'tis
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp;
Is't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth entomb,
When living light should kiss it?

Old M. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday last,
A falcon, towering in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.

Ross. And Duncan's horses,—a thing most strange and certain,— Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out,
[make Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would
War with mankind.

Old M. 'Tis said they eat each other.

Ross. They did so; to the amazement of mine eyes, [Macduff.
That look'd upon't. Here comes the good

Enter Macduff.

How goes the world, sir, now?
Macd. Why, see you not?
Ross. Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Ross. Alas, the day!

What good could they pretend?
Macd. They were suborn'd:
Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fled; which puts upon them
Suspicion of the deed.

Ross. 'Gainst nature still:

Thriftless ambition, that will ravin up
Thine own life's means!—Then 'tis most like,
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd; and gone to Scone
To be invested.

Ross. Where is Duncan's body?

Macd. Carried to Colme-kill,
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors,
And guardian of their bones.

Ross. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Ross. Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well, may you see things well done there,—adieu!—
Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!

Ross. Farewell, father. [those Old M. God's benison go with you; and with

That would make good of bad, and friends of foes!
[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Forkes. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Banquo.

Ban. Thou hast it now,—king, Cawdor,
Glamis, all
As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear,
Thou play'st most foully for't: yet it was said
It should not stand in thy posterity;
But that myself should be the root and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from them,—
As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine,—
Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But, hush; no more.

Sonnet sounded. Enter Macbeth as King.

Lady Macbeth as Queen; Lennox, Ross, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.

Lady M. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all thing unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence.

Ban. Let your highness
Command upon me; to the which my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Ban. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. We should have else desired your good advice,— [fous, —
Which still hath been both grave and prosper.
In this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow.
Is't far you ride?

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this and supper: go not my horse the better,
I must become a borrower of the night,
For a dark hour or twain.

_Mac._ Fail not our feast.

_Ban._ My lord, I will not. _[stow'd

_Mac._ We hear our bloody cousins are be-
In England and in Ireland; not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention: but of that to-morrow;
When therewithal we shall have cause of state
Craving us jointly. _Hie you to horse: adieu, Till you return at night._ Goes _Fleance with you?_ _[upon's._

_Ban._ Ay, my good lord: our time does call
Our _Till seven at night: to make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself
Till supper-time alone: while then, God be
With you!_ _[Exit Lady Macbeth, Lords,
Ladies, &c._

Sirrah, a word with you: attend those men
Our pleasure? _[gate.

_Attendant._ They are, my lord, without the palace
_Mac._ Bring them before us._ _[Exit Attendant._

To be thus is nothing;
But to be safely thus:—our fears in _Banquo_
Stick deep: and in his royalty of nature
Reigns that which would be fear'd: 'tis much he dares;
And, to that dauntless temper of his mind,
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being _I do fear: and, under him,
My genius is rebuk'd_; as, it is said, _[sisters
Mark Antony's was by _Cesar._ He chid the
When first they put the name of kingly upon me,
And bade them speak to him; then, prophet-like,
They half'd him father to a line of kings:
Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my grasp,
Than to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
No son of mine succeeding. _'tis so,
For _Banquo's issue have I fill'd my mind;
For them the gracious _Duncan have I murder'd;
Put rancours in the vessel of my peace,
Only for them; and nine eternal jewel
Given to the common enemy of man,
Make them kings, the seed of _Banquo kings!_
Rather than so, come, fate, into the list,
And champion me to the utterance!—Who's there?—

_Re-enter_ Attendant, _with two Murderers._

Now go to the door, and stay there till we call. _[Exit Attendant._

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

1 _Mur._ It was, so please your highness.

_Mac._ Well then, now

Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know
That it was he, in the times past, which held
So under fortune; which you thought had been
Our innocent self: this I made good to you
In our last conference, pass'd in probation with
you,
Instruments,

_How you were borne in hand, how cross'd, the
Who wrought with them, and all things else that might
To half a soul and to a notion craz'd Say, _Thus did _Banquo._

1 _Mur._ You made it known to us.

_Mac._ I did so; and went further, which is now

Our point of second meeting. _Do you find_
Your patience so predominant in your nature,
That you can let this go? Are you so grossly
To pray for this good man and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave,
And beggar'd yours for ever?

1 _Mur._ We are men, my liege.

_Mac._ Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men;
As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs,
Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves are cleft
All by the name of dogs; the _val'd file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The house-keeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him closed: whereby he does receive Particular addition, from the bill
That writes them all alike: and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file,
And not i' the worst rank of mankind, say it;
And I will put that business in your bosom,
Whose execution takes your enemy off;
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

2 _Mur._ I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incens'd that I am reckless what
I do to spine the world.

1 _Mur._ And I another,
So weary with disasters, tug'd with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it, or be rid on't.

_Mac._ Both of you
Know _Banquo was your enemy._
Both Mur. True, my lord.
Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance,
That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life: and though I could
With bare-face’d power sweep him from my sight,
And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not,
For certain friends that are both his and mine,
Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall
Who I myself struck down: and thence it is That I to your assistance do make love;
Masking the business from the common eye
For sundry weighty reasons.

1 Mur. We shall, my lord,
Perform what you command us.

Macb. Your spirits shine through you.
Within this hour at most,
I will advise you where to plant yourselves;
Acquaint you with the perfect spy o’ the time,
The moment on’t; for’t must be done to-night,
And something from the palace; always thought
That I require a clearness: and with him, —
To leave no rubs nor botches in the work, —
Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than is his father’s, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart:
I’ll come to you anon.

Both Mur. We are resolv’d, my lord.
Macb. I’m call upon you straight: abide within. [Exeunt Murderers.

It is concluded: — Banquo, thy soul’s flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night.

[Exit.

Scene II.—The same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Lady Macbeth and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?
Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure
For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.

Lady M. Naught’s had, all’s spent,
Where our desire is got without content:
’Tis safer to be that which we destroy,
Than, by destruction, dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone,
Of sorriest fancies your companions making;
Using those thoughts which should indeed have died

With them they think on? Things without all remedy
Should be without regards: what’s done is done.

Macb. We have scotch’d the snake, not kill’d it;
[malice
She’ll close, and be herself; whilst our poor
Remains in danger of her former tooth.
But let the frame of things disjoint,
Both the worlds suffer,
Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams
That shake us nightly: better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our place, have sent to peace,
Than on the torture of the mind to lie
In restless ecstacy. Duncan is in his grave;
After life’s fitful fever he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst: ner steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
Can touch him further.

Lady M. Come on;
Gently my lord, sleek o’er your rugged looks;
Be bright and jovial ’mong your guests to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you:
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;
Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue:
Unsafe the while, that we [streams;
Must have our honours in these flattering
And make our faces vizards to our hearts,
Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.

Macb. O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife! [lives.
Thou knowst that Banquo, and his Fleance,
Lady M. But in them nature’s copy’s not eterne.

[able;

Macb. There’s comfort yet; they are assail’d.
Then be thou jocund: ere the bat hath flown
His cloister’d flight; ere, to black Hecate’s summons,
The shard-borne beetle, with his drowsy Hecate’s hums,
Hath rung night’s yawning peal, shall be done

A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What’s to be done?

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,
[night,
Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeing
Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day;
And with thy bloody and invisible hand
Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond
Which keeps me pale!—Light thickens; and the crow
Makes wing to the rocky wood:
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse;
SCENE III.—The same. A Park or Lawn, with a gate leading to the Palace.

Enter three Murderers.
1 Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?
2 Mur. Macbeth. He needs not our mistrust; since he delivers Our offices, and what we have to do, To the direction just.

1 Mur. Then stand with us. The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day: Now spur the lated traveller apace, To gain the timely inn; and near approaches The subject of our watch.

3 Mur. Hark! I hear horses. Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho! 2 Mur. Then 'tis he; the rest That are within the note of expectation Already are 't the court.

1 Mur. His horses go about. 3 Mur. Almost a mile; but he does usually, So all men do, from hence to the palace gate Make it their walk.

2 Mur. A light, a light! 3 Mur. 'Tis he. 1 Mur. Stand to 't.

Enter Banquo, and Fleance with a torch.

Ban. It will be rain to-night.

1 Mur. Let it come down. [Assaults BANQUO.

Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly!

Thou mayst revenge,—O slave!

[Dies. FLEANCE escapes.

3 Mur. Who did strike out the light?
1 Mur. Was't not the way?
3 Mur. There's but one down: the son is fled.
2 Mur. We have lost best half of our affair.

1 Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The same. A Room of State in the Palace. A Banquet prepared.

Enter MACBETH, LADY MACBETH, ROSS, LENNOX, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees, sit down: at first And last the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your majesty.

Macb. Ourselves will mingle with society,
And play the humble host.

Our hostess keeps her state; but, in best time,
We will require her welcome. [friends;

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our For my heart speaks they are welcome.

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.—
Both sides are even: here I'll sit in the midst:

Enter first Murderer to the door.

Be large in mirth; anon we'll drink a measure The table round.—There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then. [within.

Macb. 'Tis better thee without than he Is he despatch'd?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did for him.

Macb. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats: yet he's good That did the like for Fleance: if thou didst it, Thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal sir,

Fleance is 'scap'd. [been perfect;

Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else Whole as the marble, founded as the rock;
As broad and general as the casing air: [in But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe?

Mur. Ay, my good lord: safe in a ditch he bides,
With twentyrenched gashes on his head; The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that:

There the grown serpent lies; the worm that's fled
Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for the present.—Get thee gone; to-morrow
We'll hear, ourselves, again. [Exit Murderer.

Lady M. My royal lord,

You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making,
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness
Than pity for miscnance!

  Ross. His absence, sir,
Lays blame upon your promise. Please 't your highness
To grace us with your royal company.

  Macb. The tables's full.
  Len. Here's a place reserv'd, sir.

  Macb. Which of you have done this?

  Lords. What, my good lord?

  Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake
Thy gory locks at me. [well.

  Ross. Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not Lady M. Sit, worthy friends:—my lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth: pray you, keep seat ;
The fit is momentary; upon a thought
He will again be well: if much you note him
You shall offend him, and extend his passion:
 Feed, and regard him not.—Are you a man?

  Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that
Which might appal the devil.

  Lady M. O proper stuff! This is the very painting of your fear:
This is the air drawn dagger which, you said,
Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws, and starts,— Impostors to true fear,—would well become
A woman's story at a winter's fire,
Author'd by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done,
You look but on a stool.

  Macb. P'r'lysee, see there! behold! look! lo! how say you?
Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.

If charnel-houses and our graves must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites. [Ghost disappears.

  Lady M. What, quite unmann'd in folly?

  Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

  Lady M.acie, for shame!

  Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, i the olden time,
Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal;
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd
Too terrible for the ear: the times have been,
That, when the brains were out, the man would die,
And there an end: but now they rise again,
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our stools: this is more strange
Than such a murder is.

  Lady M. My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.

  Macb. I do forget:—
Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all; [full.—
Then I'll sit down.—Give me some wine, fill
I drink to the general joy of the whole table,
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss;
Would he be here! to all, and him, we thirst,
And all to all.

  Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Ghost rises again.

  Macb. Ay, aunt! and quit my sight! let the earth hide thee!
Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with!

  Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other;
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

  Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble: or be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword;
If trembling I inhabit then, protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence! [Ghost disappears.

Why, so;—being gone,
I am a man again.—Pray you, sit still.

  Lady M. You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admir'd disorder.

  Macb. Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder? You make me strange
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine are blanch'd with fear.

  Ross. What sights, my lord?

  Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;
Question enrages him: at once, good-night:—

  Len. Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

  Good-night; and better health
Attend his majesty!

  Lady M. A kind good-night to all! [Exeunt Lords and Attendants.
Macb. It will have blood; they say, blood will have blood: [speak; Stones have been known to move, and trees to Augurs, and understood relations, have [forth Illy magot-pies, and choughs, and rooks, brought The secret'st man of blood.—What is the night? Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which. [his person, Macb. How say'st thou, that Macduff denies At our great bidding? Lady M. Did you send to him, sir? Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send: There's not a one of them but in his house I keep a servant fee'd. I will to-morrow (And betimes I will) to the weird sisters: More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know, [good, By the worst means, the worst. For mine own All causes shall give way: I am in blood Stept in so far that, should I wade no more, Returning were as tedious as go o'er: [hand; Strange things I have in head, that will to Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd. Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep. [self-abuse Macb. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and Is the initiate fear, that wants hard use:— We are yet but young in deed. [Exeunt. SCENE V.—The Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting HECATE.

1 Witch. Why, how now, Hecate! you look angrily.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are, Saucy and overbold? How did you dare To trade and traffic with Macbeth In riddles and affairs of death; And I, the mistress of your charms, The close contriver of all harms, Was never call'd to bear my part, Or show the glory of our art? And, which is worse, all you have done Hath been but for a wayward son, Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do, Loves for his own ends, not for you. But make amends now; get you gone, And at the pit of Acheron Meet me i' the morning: thither he Will come to know his destiny. Your vessels and your spells provide, Your charms, and every thing beside. I am for the air; this night I'll spend Unto a dismal and a fatal end. Great business must be wrought ere noon: Upon the corner of the moon There hangs a vaporous drop profound; I'll catch it ere it come to ground: And that, distill'd by magic sleights, Shall raise such artificial sprites, As, by the strength of their illusion, Shall draw him on to his confusion: He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear: And you all know, security Is mortal's chiefest enemy.

[Music and song within: Come away, come away &c.

Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit, see, Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit.

1 Witch. Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt. SCENE VI.—FORRES. A Room in the Palace.

Enter LENNOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts, Which can interpret further: only, I say, Things have been strangely born. The gracious Duncan Was pitted of Macbeth:—marry, he was dead:— And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd too late; Whom, you may say, if 't please you, Fleance kill'd, For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late. Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous it was for Malcolm and for Donalbain To kill their gracious father? damned fact! How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight, In pious rage, the two delinquents tear, That were the slaves of drink and thralls of sleep? Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too; For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive, To hear the men deny't. So that, I say, He has borne all things well: and I do think, That had he Duncan's sons under his key,— As, an't please heaven, he shall not,—they should find What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance. But, peace!—for from broad words, and 'cause he fail'd His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear, Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan, From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth, Lives in the English court; and is receiv'd Of the most pious Edward with such grace That the malevolence of fortune nothing Takes from his high respect: thither Macduff Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid.

ACT IV.

Scene I. —A dark Cave. In the middle, a Caldron Boiling.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.

2 Witch. Thrice; and once the hedge-pig whin'd.

3 Witch. Harpier cries:—'tis time, 'tis time.

1 Witch. Round about the caldron go;

In the poison'd entrails throw,—

Toad, that under the cold stone,

Days and nights hast thirty one

Swelter'd venom sleeping go,

Boil thou first i' the charmed pot!

All. Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire, burn; and, caldron, bubble.

2 Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,

In the caldron boil and bake;

Eye of newt, and toe of frog,

Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,

Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,

Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing,—

For a charm of powerful trouble,

Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire, burn; and, caldron, bubble.

3 Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,

Witches' mummy, maw and gulf

Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark,

Root of hemlock digg'd i' the dark,

Liver of blaspheming Jew,

Gall of goat, and slips of yew

Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse,

Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips,

Finger of birth-strang'd babe,

Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,—

Make the gruel thick and shab:

Add thereto a tiger's chaudron,

For the ingredients of our caldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire, burn; and, caldron, bubble.

2 Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood,

Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter Hecate.

Hec. O, well done! I commend your pains;

And every one shall share i' the gains.

And now about the caldron sing,

Like elves and fairies in a ring,

Enchanting all that you put in.

Song.

Black spirits and white, red spirits and gray;

Mingle, mingle, mingle, you that mingle may.

[Exit Hecate

2 Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,

Something wicked this way comes:—

Open, locks, whoever knocks!

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags!

What is't you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess,—

Howe'er you come to know it,—answer me:

Though you unite the winds, and let them fight

Against the churches; though the yesty waves

Confound and swallow navigation up; [down:

Though bladed corn be lodging, and trees blown

Though castles topple on their warders' heads;

Though palaces and pyramids do slope

Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure

Of nature's germs tumble altogether,

Even till destruction sicken,—answer me

To what I ask you.

1 Witch. Speak.

2 Witch. Demand.

3 Witch. We'll answer.

1 Witch. Say, if thou'dst rather hear it from our mouths,

Or from our musters?

Macb. Call 'em, let me see 'em.

1 Witch. Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten

Her nine farrow; grease that's sweaten
From the murderer's gibbet throw
Into the flame.

All. Come, high or low;
Thyself and office drestly show!

Thunder. An Apparition of an armed Head rises.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—
1 Witch. He knows thy thought:
Hear his speech, but say thou naught.

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! beware Macduff; [enough.
Beware the Thane of Fife.—Dismiss me:—
[Descends.

Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution, thanks;
[word more,—
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright:—but one
1 Witch. He will not be commanded: here's another,
More potent than the first.

Thunder. An Apparition of a bloody Child rises.

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!—
Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute; laugh to scorn
The power of man, for none of woman born
Shall harm Macbeth. [Descends.

Macb. Then live, Macduff: what need I fear of thee?

But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live;
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.—What is this,

Thunder. An Apparition of a Child crowned, with a tree in his hand, rises.

That rises like the issue of a king,
And wears upon his baby brow the round
And top of sovereignty?

All. Listen, but speak not to't.
App. Be lion-mettled, proud; and take no care
Who chases, who frets, or where conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be, until
Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him. [Descends.

Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest; bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? Sweat bodements! good!
Rebellion's head, rise never, till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the nature of ease, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom.—Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing; tell me,—if your art
Can tell so much,—shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know;—
[thi? Why sinks that caldron? and what noise is [Hautboys.

1 Witch. Show!
2 Witch. Show!
3 Witch. Show!

All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart!

Eight Kings appear, and pass over in order,
the last with a glass in his hand; Banquo following.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Ban-quo; down! [hair,

Thy crown does rear mine eye-balls:—and thy Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first:—
A third is like the former,—Filthy bags!
Why do you show me this?—A fourth?—Start,
eyes!

What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?

Another yet?—A seventh?—I'll see no more:—
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass
Which shows me many more; and some I see
That twofold balls and treble sceptres carry:
Horrible sight!—Now, I see, 'tis true;
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his,—What! is this so?

1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so:—but why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?—
Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites,
And show the best of our delights;
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antic round;
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.

[Music. The Witches dance, and then vanish.

Macb. Where are they? Gone?—Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye accursed in the calendar!—
Come in, without there.

[Enter Lennox.

Len. What's your grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord.

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride;
And damn'd all those that trust them!—I did the galloping of horse: who was't came by!
Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England!
Len. Ay, my good lord.
Macb. Time, thou anticip'st my dread exploits:
The flighty purpose never is o'ertook
Unless the deed go with it: from this moment
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now,
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:
The castle of Macduff I will surprise;
Seize upon Fife; give to the edge o' the sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do before this purpose cool:
But no more sights!—Where are these gentlemen?
Come, bring me where they are. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—Fife. A Room in Macduff's Castle.

Enter Lady Macduff, her Son, and Ross.

Lady Mac. What had he done, to make him fly the land?
Ross. You must have patience, madam.
L. Mac. He had none:
His flight was madness: when our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.
Ross. You know not
Whether it was his wisdom or his fear.
L. Mac. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,
His mansion, and his titles, in a place
From whence himself does fly? He loves us not:
He wants the natural touch; for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight,
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
All is the fear, and nothing is the love;
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.
Ross. My dearest coz,
I pray you, school yourself: but, for your husband,
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much further:
But cruel are the times, when we are traitors,
And do not know ourselves; when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
But float upon a wild and violent sea
Each way and move.—I take my leave of you:
Shall not be long but I'll be here again:

Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward
To what they were before.—My pretty cousin,
Blessing upon you! [less.
L. Mac. Father'd he is, and yet he's father-
Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,
It would be my disgrace and your discomfort:
I take my leave at once. [Exit.
L. Mac. Sirrah, your father's dead;
And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. As birds do, mother.
L. Mac. What, with worms and flies?
Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.
[net nor time,
L. Mac. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the
The pit-fall nor the gin.
Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds
they are not set for.
My father is not dead, for all your saying.
L. Mac. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou do for a father?
Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?
L. Mac. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.
Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.
L. Mac. Thou speak'st with all thy wit;
and yet, I'faith,
With wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?
L. Mac. Ay, that he was.
Son. What is a traitor?
L. Mac. Why, one that swears and lies.
Son. And be all traitors that do so?
L. Mac. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.
[and lie?
Son. And must they all be hanged that swear
L. Mac. Every one.
Son. Who must hang them?
L. Mac. Why, the honest men.
Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools:
for there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men, and hang up them.
L. Mac. Now, God help thee, poor monkey! But how wilt thou do for a father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him:
if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.
L. Mac. Poor prattler! how thou talk'st.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,
Though in your state of honour I am perfect.
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly:
If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.
To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage;
To do worse to you were fell cruelty, [you!
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve
I dare abide no longer.
[Exit.
L. Macd.  Whither should I fly?
I have done no harm. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world; where to do harm is often laudable; to do good, sometime
Accounted dangerous folly: why then, alas,
Do I put up that womanly defence, [faces?
To say I have done no harm.—What are these Enter Murderers.

1 Mur. Where is your husband?
L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified
Where such as thou mayst find him.

1 Mur. He's a traitor.
Son. Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain.

Young fry of treachery!

Son. He has kill'd me, mother:
Run away, I pray you!
[Dies.
[Exit Lady Macduff, crying Murder, and pursued by the Murderers.

Scene III.—England. Before the King's Palace.

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there
WEEP our sad bosoms empty.

Macd. Let us rather
Hold fast the mortal sword, and, like good men, Bestrade our down-fall'n birthdom: each new morn
[sorrows
New widows howl; new orphans cry; new Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yeld'd out
Like syllable of doleour.

Mal. What I believe, I'll wail;
What know, believe; and what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend, I will.
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.
This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,
[well;
Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young;
but something [dom
You may deserve of him through me: and wish
To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb
To appease an angry god.

Macd. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil
In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon;

That which you are, my thoughts cannot trans-pose;
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell:
Though all things foul would wear the brows
of grace,
Yet grace must still look so.

Macd. I have lost my hopes.
Mal. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child,—
Those precious motives, those strong knots of
love,—
Without leave-taking?—I pray you,
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
But mine own safeties:—you may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dare not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs,
Thy title is affiected. —Fare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou thinkest for the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
it weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash is added to her wounds: I think, withal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here, from gracious England, have I offer of goodly thousands: but, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before:
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
by him that shall succeed.

Macd. What should he be?

Mal. It is myself I mean: in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state
Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confinless harms.

Macd. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd
In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, snacking of every sin
That has a name: but there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill
The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'erbear,
MACBETH.

That did oppose my will: better Macbeth
Than such a one to reign.

Macd. Boundless intermence
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours; you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoo-din-

We have willing dames enough; there cannot
That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin’d.

Macd. With this there grows,
In my most ill-compos’d affection, such
A stanchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Desire his jewels, and this other’s house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more; that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. This avarice
Sticks deeper; grows with more pertinacious root Than summer-seeming lust; and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear;
Scotland hath foysons to fill up your will,
Of your mere own: all these are portable,
With other graces weigh’d. [graces

Macd. But I have none: the king-becoming
As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perséverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them; but abound
In the division of each several crime, [should Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I
Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland! Scotland!

Macd. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Macd. Fit to govern!
No, not to live!—O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter’d,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accur’d,
And does blaspheme his breed?—Thy royal
father

Was a most sainted king; the queen that bore
Oftener upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she lived. Fare-thee-well!
These evils thou repeat’st upon thyself
Have banish’d me from Scotland.—O my breast,
Thy hope ends here I

Macd. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip’d the black scruples, reconcile’d my thoughts
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth by many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power: and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-credulous haste: but God above
Deal between thee and me! for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction; here alone
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman; never was forsworn;
Sarcely have coveted what was mine own;
At no time broke my faith; would not betray
The devil to his fellow; and delight
No less in truth than life: my first false speak-
Was this upon myself:—what I am truly,
Is thine, and my poor country’s, to command:
Whither, indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
Already at a point, was setting forth:
Now we’ll together; and the chance of goodness
Be like our warranted quarrel! Why are you silent?

Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things
Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Macd. Well; more anon.—Comes the king forth, I pray you? [soul

Doctor. Ay, sir: there are a crew of wretched
That stay his cure: their malady convinces
The great essay of art; but, at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.

Macd. I thank you, doctor. [Exit Doctor.

Macd. What’s the disease he means?

Doctor. ’Tis called the evil:
A most miraculous work in this good king;
Which often, since my here-remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven, Himself best knows: but strangely-visited
people,
All swollen and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures;
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers: and ‘tis spoken,
To the succeeding royal he leaves
The healing beneficence. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy;
And sundry blessings hang about his throne,
That speak him full of grace.

Macd. See, who comes here?

Macd. My countryman; but yet I know him not.
Enter Ross.

Macd. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.
Mal. I know him now. Good God, betimes remove
The means that makes us strangers!
Ross. Sir, amen.
Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?
Ross. Alas, poor country,—Almost afraid to know itself! It cannot Be call'd our mother, but our grave: where nothing,
But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;
Where sighs, and groans, and shrieks, that rent the air,
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow
A modern ecstasy; the dead man's knell
Is there scarce ask'd for who; and good men's lives
Expire before the flowers in their caps,
Dying or ere they sicken.
Macd. O, relation
Too nice, and yet too true!
Mal. What's the newest grief?
Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker;
Each minute teems a new one.
Macd. How does my wife?
Ross. Why, well.
Macd. And all my children?
Ross. Well too.
Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?
Ross. No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.
Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes it? [seems Ross. When I came hither to transport the
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather,
For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot:
Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.
Mal. Be't their comfort of us
We are coming thither: gracious England hath Lent us good Siward and ten thousand men;
And older and a better soldier none
That Christendom gives out.
Ross. Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words
That would be howl'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch them.
Macd. What concern they?
The general cause? or is it a fee-grief
Due to some single breast?
Ross. No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe; though the main part Pertains to you alone.
Mal. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me; quickly let me have it.
Ross. Let not your ears despise my tongue
For ever, [sound
Which shall possess them with the heaviest
That ever yet they heard.
Macd. Hum! I guess at it.
Ross. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife and babes
Savagely slaughter'd: to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.
Mal. Merciful heaven!—
What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows;
Speak
Give sorrow words: the grief that does not Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break.
Macd. My children too?
Ross. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.
Mal. And I must be from thence!
Ross. My wife kill'd too?
Mal. I have said.
Ross. Be comforted:
Let's make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief. [ones?
Macd. He has no children.—All my pretty
Did you say all?—O hell-kite!—All?
What, all my pretty chickens and their dam
At one fell swoop?
Mal. Dispute it like a man.
Ross. I shall do so;
But I must also feel it as a man:
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.—Did heaven
look on,
And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff,
They were all struck for thee! naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls: heaven rest them now!
[let grief
Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword:
Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it.
Macd. O, I could play the woman with mine eye,
Heavens,
And braggart with my tongue!—But, gentle
Cut short all intermission; front to front
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself;
Within my sword's length set him; if he 'scape,
Heaven forgive him too!
Mal. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king; our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave: Macbeth

Macbeth.
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may;
The night is long that never finds the day.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—DUNSIANNE. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report.
When was it she last walked?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field,
I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature,—to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching!—In this slumbery agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech. Lo you, here she comes!

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a taper.

This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands: I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. If she speaks: I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!—
One; two; why, then 'tis time to do't:—Hell is murky!—Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afraid? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?—

Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The Thane of Fife had a wife;
where is she now?—What, will these hands ne'er be clean?—No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that: you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not; I am sure of that: heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still:
all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh, oh, oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well,—

Gent. Pray God it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: yet
I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your nightgown; look not so pale:—I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on's grave.

Doct. Even so?

Lady M. To bed, to bed; there's knocking at the gate: come, come, come, give me your hand: what's done cannot be undone: to bed, to bed, to bed.

[Exit.

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

[deeds

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad: unnatural
Do breed unnatural troubles: infected minds
To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets.
More needs she the divine than the physician.—
God, God forgive us all!—Look after her;
Remove from her the means of all annoyance,
And still keep eyes upon her:—so, good-night:
My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight:
I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good-night, good doctor.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with drum and colours, Menteith,
Caitness, Angus, Lennox, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,
His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff.
Reveinces burn in them; for their dear causes
Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm
Excite the mortified man.
Near Birnam wood
Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Caih. Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file
Of all the gentry: there is Siward’s son,
And many unrough youths, that even now
Protest their first of manhood.

Munt. What does the tyrant?

Caih. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies:
Some say he’s mad; others, that lesser hate
him,
Do call it valiant fury: but, for certain,
He cannot buckle his distemper’d course
Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel
His secret murders sticking on his hands;
Now minutely revolts upbraids his faith-breach;
Those he commands move only in command,
Nothing in love: now does he feel his title
Hang loose about him, like a giant’s robe
Upon a dwarfish thief.

Munt. Who, then, shall blame
His pester’d senses to recoil and start,
When all that is within him does condemn
Itself for being there?

Caih. Well, march we on,
To give obedience where ’tis truly ow’d:
Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal;
And with him pour we, in our country’s purge,
Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs,
To dew the sovereign flower, and drown the weeds.
Make we our march towards Birnam.

[Exeunt, marching.

SCENE III.—DUNSIHANE. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all:
Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane
I cannot taint with fear. What’s the boy Malcolm?
Was he not born of woman? The spirits that
know
All mortal consequences have pronounced me thus,—

[woman

Fear not, Macbeth: no man that’s born of Shall e’er have power upon thee. Then fly, false thanes,
And mingle with the English epicures:
The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear.
Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac’d loon!
Where gott’s thou that goose look?

Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macb. Geese, villain?

Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,

Thou lily-liver’d boy. What soldiers, patch?
Death of thy soul! Those linen checks of thine Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-face?

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence. [Exit Servant.

Seyton!—I am sick at heart,
When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will chair me ever, or disseat me now.
I have liv’d long enough: my way of life
Is fall’n into the sear, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but, in their stead,
Curses not loud but deep, mouth-honour, breath, [dare not.
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and Seyton!—

Enter Seyton.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more?

Sey. All is confirm’d, my lord, which was reported. [be hack’d.

Macb. I’ll fight till from my bones my flesh
Give me my armour.

Sey. ’Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I’ll put it on.

Send out more horses, skirr the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear.—Give me mine armour.—

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that:
Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas’d;
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow;
Raze out the written troubles of the brain;
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff’d bosom of that perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct. Therein the patient
Must minister to himself. [of it. —

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs,—I’ll none Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff:—
Scene V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, Macbeth, Seyton, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls;
The cry is still, They come: our castle’s strength Will laugh a siege to scorn: here let them lie Till famine and the ague eat them up:
Were they not forc’d with those that should be ours,
We might have met them dastardly, beard to And beat them backward home.

[Scene V.]

A cry of women within.
What is that noise?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.

[Exit.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears:
The time has been, my senses would have cool’d To hear a night-shriek; and my fell of hair Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir As life were in’t: I have supp’d full with horrors;
Direness, familiar to my slaught’rous thoughts, Cannot once start me.

Re-enter Seyton.

Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead.

Macb. She should have died hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a word.— To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, Creeps in this petty pace from day to day, To the last syllable of recorded time; And all our yesterdays have lighted fools The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle! Life’s but a walking shadow; a poor player, That struts and frets his hour upon the stage, And then is heard no more: it is a tale Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com’st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord, I should report that which I say I saw, But know not how to do it.

Macb. Well, say, sir.

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the hill, I look’d toward Birnam, and anon, methought, The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar, and slave! [Striking him.

Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if’t be not so.
Within this three mile may you see it coming; I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak’st false,
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
Till famine cling thee: if thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much.—
I pull in resolution; and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth: Fear not, till Birnam wood
Do come to Dunsinane;—and now a wood
Comes toward Dunsinane.—Arm, arm, and out!—
If this which he avouches does appear,
There is nor flying hence nor tarrying here.
I 'gin to be a-wearied of the sun, [done.—
And wish the estate of the world were now un-
King the alarum-bell!—Blow, wind! come, wrack!
At least we'll die with harness on our back.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The same. A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, Malcolm, old Siward, Macduff, &c., and their Army, with boughs.

Mal. Now near enough; your leafy screens throw down,
And show like those you are.—You, worthy uncle,
Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son,
Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff and we Shall take upon's what else remains to do,
According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.—
Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macb. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The same. Another part of the Plain.

Alarums. Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly,
But, bear-like, I must fight the course.—
What's he
That was not born of woman? Such a one
Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young Siward.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Yo. Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title
More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my sword
I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

[They fight, and young Siward is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman.—
But swords I smile at, weapons to scorn,
Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born.
[Exit.

Alarums. Enter Macduff.

Macb. That way the noise is.—Tyrant, show thy face!
If thou be'st slain, and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their staves; either thou, Macbeth,
Or else my sword, with an un batter’d edge,
I sheathe again undeeded. There thou shouldst be;
By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruited. Let me find him, fortune!
And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarums.

Enter Malcolm and old Siward.

Siw. This way, my lord;—the castle's gently render'd:
The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, sir, the castle.

[Exeunt. Alarums.

SCENE VIII.—The same. Another part of the Plain.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. Why, should I play the Roman fool, and die [gashes
On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the
Do better upon them.

Enter Macduff.

Macb. Turn, hell-hound, turn!

Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
MACBETH.

But get thee back; my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words,—
My voice is in my sword: thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.

Macb. Thou lowest labour:
As easy mayst thou the intrenched air
With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed;
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou still hast serv'd
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accursed be that tongue that tells me
For it hath cow'd my better part of man!
And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,
That palter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope!—I'll not fight with thee.

Macd. Then yield thee, coward,
And live to be the show and gaze o' the time:
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
Here may you see the tyrant.

Macb. I will not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,
And to be baited with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body
I throw my warlike shield: lay on, Macduff;
And damn'd be him that first cries, Hold, enough! [Exeunt, fighting.

Retreat. Flourish. Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD, ROSS, LENNOX, ANGUS, CAITHNESS, MENTEITH, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arriv'd.

Siw. Some must go off; and yet, by these I
So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.

Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt;
He only liv'd but till he was a man;

The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Siw. Then he is dead?

Ross. Ay, and brought off the field: your cause of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before?

Ross. Ay, on the front.

Siw. Why, then, God's soldier be he Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And, so his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Siw. He's worth no more:
They say he parted well, and paid his score:
And so, God be with him!—Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH's head.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: behold, where stands
The usurper's cursed head: the time is free:
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,—
Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland!

Flourish.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time
Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,
Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time,—
As calling home our exil'd friends abroad,
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen,—
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life;—this, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place:
So, thanks to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT I.

Scene I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.

Francisco at his post. Enter to him Bernardo.

Ber. Who's there?
Fran. Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!
Fran. Bernardo?
Ber. He.
Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.
Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.
Fran. For this relief much thanks: 'tis bitter cold, And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?
Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good-night.
Fran. If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.
Fran. I think I hear them.—Stand, ho! Who is there?

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Hor. Friends to this ground.
Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.
Fran. Give you good-night.
Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself,
The bell then beating one,—[comes again!
Mar. Peace, break thee off; look where it

Enter Ghost, armed.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.  [Horatio.

Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it,
Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it,
Horatio.  [and wonder.

Hor. Most like,—it harrows me with fear
Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it, Horatio.
Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of night,
Together with that fair and warlike form
In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak!
Mar. It is offended.
Ber. See, it stalks away!
Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak!
[Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer. [pale:
Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble and look
Is this something more than fantasy?
What think you on't?
Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?
Hor. As thou art to thyself:
Such was the very armour he had on
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once when, in an angry parle,
He smote the sledged Polacks on the ice.
'Tis strange.  [hour,
Mar. Thus twice before, and just at this dead
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.
Hor. In what particular thought to work I know not;
But, in the gross and scope of my opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,
Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land;
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war; [task
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore
Does not divide the Sunday from the week;
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day:
Who is 't that can inform me?

Hor. That can I;
At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
Thereto prickt on by a most emulate pride,
Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet,—[him,—
For so this side of our known world esteem'd
Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands,
Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror:
Against the which, a moiety competent
Was gaged by our king; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras, [cov'nant,
Had he been vanquisher; as by the same
And carriage of the article design'd, [bras,
His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortin-
Of unimproved mettle hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,
Shark'd up a list of landless resolutes,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in't: which is no other,—
As it doth well appear unto our state,—
But to recover of us by strong hand,
And terms compulsive, those foresaid lands
So by his father lost: and this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations,
The source of this our watch, and the chief head
Of this post-haste and romage in the land.

Ber. I think it be no other, but e'en so:
Well may it sort, that this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch; so like the king
That was and is the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye
In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell, [dead
The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets:
As, stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
Disasters in the sun; and the moist star,
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands:
Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse:
And even the like precursure of fierce events,—
As harbingers preceding still the fates,
And prologue to the omen coming on,—
Have heaven and earth together demonstrated
Unto our climature and countrymen.—
But, soft, behold! lo, where it comes again!

Re-enter Ghost.

I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion!
If thou hast any sound or use of voice,
Speak to me:
If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do ease, and grace to me,
Speak to me:
If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which, happily, foreknowing may avoid,
O, speak!
Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life
Exorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk
in death, [Cock crows.
Speak of it:—stay, and speak!—Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan?
Hor. Do, if it will not stand.
Ber. 'Tis here!
Hor. 'Tis here!

Mar. 'Tis gone! [Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery. [crew.

Ber. It was about to speak when the cock
Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing

Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine: and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
The bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then, they say, no spirit can walk abroad;
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm;
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time. [it.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill:
Break we our watch up: and, by my advice,
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him:
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning know
Where we shall find him most conveniently.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—ELISINORE. A Room of State in the Castle.

Enter the King, Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, Voltimand, Cornelius, Lords,
and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death

The memory be green; and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom
To be contracted in one brow of woe;
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.
Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this warlike state,
Have we, as 'twere with a defeated joy,—
With one auspicious and one dropping eye,
With mirth and funeral, and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and dole,—
Taken to wife; nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair along:—for all, our thanks.
Now follows that you know, young Fortinbras,
Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
Or thinking by our late dear brother's death
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,
Colleagued with the dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bonds of law,
To our most valiant brother. So much for him.—

Now for ourself, and for this time of meeting:
Thus much the business is:—we have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress
His further gait herein; in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject:—and we here despatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway;
Giving to you no further personal power
To business with the king more than the scope
Of these dilated articles allow. [duty.
Farewell; and let your haste commend your
Cor. and Vol. In that and all things will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing: heartily farewell.
[Exeunt Vol. and Cor.

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; what is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice: what wouldst thou beg,

Laer. Dread my lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France;

2 N 2
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,
To show my duty in your coronation;
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France,
And how them to your gracious leave and
King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?
Pol. I he hath, my lord, wrung from me my
By laboursome petition; and at last
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.
King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,
And thy best graces spend it as thy will!—
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,— Ham. [Aside.] A little more than kin, and less than kind. [you?]
King. How is it that the clouds still hang on
Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much i' the sun.
[off,
Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.
Do not for ever with thy sided lids
Seek for thy noble father in the dust: [die,
Thou know'st 'tis common,—all that live must Passing through nature to eternity.
Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.
Queen. If it be,
Why seems it so particular with thee? [seems.
Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not
'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspension of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected 'haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, moods, shows of grief,
That can denote me truly: these, indeed, seem;
For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.
King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,
To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his; and the survivor bound,
In filial obligation, for some term
To do obsequious sorrow: but to persevere
In obstatute condolence is a course
Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief:
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven;
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient;
An understanding simple and unschool'd;
For what we know must be, and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we, in our peevish opposition,
Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse till he that died to-day,
This must be so. We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe; and think of us
As of a father: for let the world take note
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And with no less nobility of love
Than that which dearest father bears his son
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire:
And we beseech you bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.
Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet:
I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.
Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.
King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply:
Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come;
This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell;
And the king's rouse the heavens shall bruit
again,
Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.
[Exeunt all butHam•
Ham. O, that this too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew!
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Fie on't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead!—nay, not so much, not two:
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not beteem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on: and yet, within a month,— Let me not think on't,—Frailty, thy name is woman!—
A little month; or ere those shoes were old
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears;—why she, even she,—
O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn’d longer,—married with mine uncle,
[father
My father’s brother; but no more like my
Than I to Hercules: within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married:—O, most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!
It is not, nor it cannot come to good; [tongue!
But break, my heart,—for I must hold my

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well:
Horatio,—or I do forget myself. [vast ever.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor ser-

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I’ll change that name with you: [tio?—

And what make you from Wittenberg, Hor?

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you.—Good even, sir.—

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so;
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself: I know you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore?
We’ll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father’s funeral. [student;

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-
I think it was to see my mother’s wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow’d hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral-bak’d meats.

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Ere I had ever seen that day, Horatio!—

My father,—methinks I see my father.

Hor. Where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind’s eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once; he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw who?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father!

Hor. Season your admiration for awhile
With an attent ear, till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.
Hamlet, Prince of Denmark.

Ham. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.

Mar. and Ber. Longer, longer.

Hor. Not when I saw 't.

Ham. His beard was grizzled,—no?

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,

A sable silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night;

Perchance 'twill walk again.

Hor. I warrant it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue:
I will require your loves. So, fare ye well:
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you: farewell.

[Execut Hor., Mar., and Ber.

My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
I doubt some foul play: would the night were come!
Till then sit still, my soul: foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.

[Exit.

Scene III.—A Room in Polonius's House.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Laer. My necessaries are embark'd: farewell:
And, sister, as the winds give benefit,
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour,
Hold it a fashion and a toy in blood;
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The perfume and suppliance of a minute;
No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Laer. Think it no more:
For nature, crescent, does not grow alone
In thaws and bulk; but as this temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you now;
And now no soil nor cautel doth besmirch
The virtue of his will: but you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own;
For he himself is subject to his birth:
He may not, as unvalu'd persons do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends

The safety and the health of the whole state;
And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
Unto the voice and yielding of that body Whereof he is the head. Then if he says he loves you,
It fits your wisdom so far to believe it
As he in his particular act and place
May give his saying deed; which is no further Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain
If with too credent ear you list his songs,
Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open
To his unmaster'd importunity.

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
And keep within the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest maid is prodigal enough
If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
Virtue itself scapes not calumniouss strokes:
The canker galls the infants of the spring
Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd;
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear:
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep [brother,
As watchman to my heart. But, good
Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
Whilst like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own read.

Laer. O, fear me not.

I stay too long:—but here my father comes.

Enter Polonius.

A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave. [shame!
Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard,
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stay'd for. There,—my blessing with you!

[Laying his hand on Laertes's head.

loves you,
Take each man’s censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express’d in fancy; rich, not gaudy:
For the apparel oft proclaims the man;
And they in France of the best rank and station
Are most select and generous chief in that.
Neither a borrower nor a lender be:
For loan oft loses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all,—to thine ownself be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell: my blessing season this in thee!

Lear. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants

Lear. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock’d,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Lear. Farewell. [Exit.

Pol. What is ’t, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

Oph. So please you, something touching the Lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought:
'Tis told me he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous:
If it be so,—as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution,—I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly
As it behoves my daughter and your honour.
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders
Of his affection to me. [girl,

Pol. Affection! pooh! you speak like a green
Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I’ll teach you: think yourself a
That you have ta’en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;
Or,—not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
Wronging it thus,—you’ll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath imprompt’nd me with love
In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a-making,—
You must not take for fire. From this time
Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence;
Set your entertainments at a higher rate
Than a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet, Believe so much in him, that he is young;
And with a larger tether may he walk
Than may be given you: in few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows; for they are brokers,—
Not of that dye which their investments show,
But mere implorators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds,
The better to beguile. This is for all,—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so slander any moment leisure
As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet.
Look to’t, I charge you; come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcellus.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed? I heard it not: then it draws near the season
Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off within.

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rouse, [reels;

Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spring
And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is’t:

But to my mind,—though I am native here,
And to the manner born,—it is a custom
More honour’d in the breach than the observance.

This heavy-headed revel east and west
Makes us traduc’d and tax’d of other nations:
They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase
Soil our addition; and, indeed, it takes From our achievements, though perform’d at height,
The pith and marrow of our attribute.

So oft it chances in particular men
That, for some vicious mole of nature in them,
As in their birth,—wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose his origin,—
By the o'ergrowth of some complexion,
Oft breaking down the pale and forts of reason;
Or by some habit, that too much o'er-leaves:
The form of plausive manners;—that these
Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect,
Being nature's livery or fortune's star,—
Their virtues else,—be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo,—
Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: the dram of eale
Doth all the noble substance of a doubt
To his own scandal.
  Look, my lord, it comes!

  Enter Ghost.

  Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!—
  Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd,
  Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell,
  Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
  Thou com'st in such a questionable shape
  That I will speak to thee: I'll call thee Hamlet,
  King, father, royal Dane: O, answer me!
  Let me not burst in ignorance; but tell
  Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearded in death,
  Have burst their cerements; why the sepulchre,
  Wherein we saw thee quietly in-urn'd,
  Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws
  To cast thee up again! What may this mean,
  That thou, dead corse, again in complete steel,
  Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,
  Making night hideous, and we fools of nature
  So horribly to shake our disposition
  With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
  Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?
  [Ghost beckons Hamlet.

  Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
  As if it some impartment did desire
  To you alone.

  Mar. Look, with what courteous action
  It waves you to a more removed ground:
  But do not go with it.

  Hor. No, by no means.

  Ham. It will not speak; then will I follow it.

  Hor. Do not, my lord.

  Ham. Why, what should be the fear?
  I do not set my life at a pin's fee;
  And for my soul, what can it do to that,
  Being a thing immortal as itself?
  It waves me forth again;—I'll follow it.

  Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood,
  my lord,

  Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff
  That beetles o'er his base into the sea,
  And there assume some other horrible form,
  Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason,
  And draw you into madness? think of it:
  The very place puts toys of desperation,
  Without more motive, into every brain
  That looks so many fathoms to the sea
  And hears it roar beneath.

  Ham. It waves me still.—

  Go on; I'll follow thee.

  Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

  Ham. Hold off your hands.

  Hor. Be rul'd; you shall not go.

  Ham. My fate cries out,

  And makes each petty artery in this body
  As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.—

  [Ghost beckons.

Still am I call'd;—unhand me, gentlemen;—

  [Breaking from them.

By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me.

I say, away!—Go on; I'll follow thee.

  [Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.

  Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

  Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey him.

  Hor. Have after.—To what issue will this

  Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

  Hor. Heaven will direct it.

  [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A more remote part of the Platform.

  Enter Ghost and Hamlet.

  Ham. Where wilt thou lead me? speak
  I'll go no farther.

  Ghost. Mark me.

  Ham. I will.

  Ghost. My hour is almost come,

  When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames
  Must render up myself.

  Ham. Alas, poor ghost!

  Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing

  To what I shall unfold.

  Ham. Speak; I am bound to hear.

  Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

  Ham. What?

  Ghost. I am thy father's spirit:

  Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night,
  And, for the day, confin'd to waste in fires
  Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid
To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul; freeze thy young blood;

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to stand on end,
Like quills upon the fretful porcupine:

But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood.—List, list, O, list!—

If thou didst ever thy dear father love,

Ham. O God! [murder.

Ghost. Revenge his soul and most unnatural
Ham. Murder!

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

Ham. I haste me to know't, that I, with wings as swift
As meditation or the thoughts of love,
May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt;
And dullest shouldst thou be than the fat weed
That roots itself in ease on Lethe wharft, [hear:
Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet,
'Tis given out that, sleeping in mine orchard,
A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Dan-

Is by a forged process of my death
Rankly abus'd: but know, thou noble youth,
The serpent that did sting thy father's life
Now wears his crown.

Ham. O my prophetic soul! mine uncle!

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,

With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous
O wicked wit and gifts that have the power
So to seduce!—won to his shamefull lust
The will of my most seeming virtuous queen:
O Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
From me, whose love was of that dignity
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage; and to decline
Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven;
So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
Will sate itself in a celestial bed
And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air;
Brief let me be.—Sleeping within mine orchard,
My custom always in the afternoon,
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With juice of cursed hebenon in a vial,
And in the porches of mine ears did pour
The leprous distilment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man
That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body;
And with a sudden vigour it doth possess
And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine;
And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despatch'd:
Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhousel'd, unanointed, unanel'd;
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head:
O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.
But, howsoever thou pursu'est this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother aught: leave her to heaven,
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!
The glowworm shows the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire:

Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me. [Exit.

Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! what else?

And shall I couple hell?—O, fie!—Hold, my
And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
But bear me stiffly up.—Remember thee!

Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. Remember thee!
Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,
That youth and observation copied there;
And thy commandment all alone shall live
Within the book and volume of my brain,
Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven.—
O most pernicious woman!
O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
My tables,—meet it is I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark:

[Writing.

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;
It is, Adieu, adieu! I remember me:
I have sworn't.

Hor. [Within.] My lord, my lord,—
Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet,—
Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!
Mar. [Within.] So be it!
Hor. [Within.] Ilo, ho, ho, my lord!
Ham. Ilo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.
Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. How is’t, my noble lord?
Hor. What news, my lord?
Ham. O, wonderful!
Hor. Good my lord, tell it.
Ham. No; you’ll reveal it.
Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.
Mar. Nor I, my lord.
Ham. How say you, then; would heart of man once think it?—
But you’ll be secret?
Hor. And Mar. Ay, by heaven, my lord.
Ham. There’s ne’er a villain dwelling in all Denmark
But he’s an arrant knave.
Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave
To tell us this.
Ham. Why, right; you are i’ the right;
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands and part:
You, as your business and desire shall point you,—
For every man has business and desire,
Such as it is;—and for mine own poor part,
Look you, I’ll go pr’y.
Hor. These are but wild and whirling words,
Ham. I’m sorry they offend you, heartily;
Yes, faith, heartily.
Hor. There’s no offence, my lord.
Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is,
Horatio, [here,—
And much offence too. Touching this vision
It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you:
For your desire to know what is between us,
O’ermaster’t as you may. And now, good friends,
As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
Give me one poor request.
Hor. What is’t, my lord? we will.
Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.
Hor. and Mar. My lord, we will not.
Ham. Nay, but swear’t.
Hor. In faith,

My lord, not I.
Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.
Ham. Upon my sword.
Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.
Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Ha, ha, boy! say’st thou so? art thou there, true penny?—
Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellar.
Consent to swear.
Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.

Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,
Swear by my sword.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear. [ground.—
Ham. Hic et ubique? then we’ll shift our Come hither, gentlemen,
And lay your hands again upon my sword;
Never to speak of this that you have heard,
Swear by my sword.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear. [earth so fast?
Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i’ the
A worthy pioneer!—Once more remove, good friends.
[Strange!]
Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome.
[Horatio,
There are more things in heaven and earth,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.
But come;—
Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,
How strange or odd soe’er I bear myself,—
As I, perchance, hereafter shall think meet
To put an antic disposition on,—
That you, at such times seeing me, never shall,
With arms encumber’d thus, or this head-shake,
Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
As, Well, well, we know;—or, We could, an if we would;— [they might;—
Or, If we list to speak;—or, There be, an if
Or such ambiguous giving out, to note
That you know aught of me:—this not to do,
So grace and mercy at your most need help you,
Swear.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit!—So,
gentlemen,
With all my love I do commend me to you:
And what so poor a man as Hamlet is
May do, to express his love and friendlying to you, God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together;
And still your fingers on your lips, I pray.
The time is out of joint:—O cursed spite,
That ever I was born to set it right!—
Nay, come, let’s go together. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Room in Polonius’s House.

Enter Polonius and Reynaldo.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes,
Reynaldo.
Rey. I will, my lord. [Reynaldo,
Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good
Before you visit him, to make inquiry
Of his behaviour.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

SCENE I.

Rey. My lord, I did intend it.
Pol. Marry, well said; very well said. Look you, sir,
Inquire me first what Danskers are in Paris;
And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,
What company, at what expense; and finding,
By this encompassment and drift of question,
That they do know my son, come you more nearer
Than your particular demands will touch it:
Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him;
As thus, I know his father and his friends,
And in part him;—do you mark this, Reynaldo?
Rey. Ay, very well, my lord. [not well:
Pol. And in part him;—but, you may say,
But if 'tis he I mean, he's very wild:
Addicted so and so; and there put on him
What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank
As may dishonour him; take heed of that;
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.
Rey. As gaming, my lord.
Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling, Drabbing:—you may go so far.
Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.
Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.
You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency;
That's not my meaning: but breathe his faults
so quaintly
That they may seem the taints of liberty;
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind;
A savageness in unreclaimed blood,
Of general assault.
Rey. But, my good lord,—
Pol. Wherefore should you do this?
Rey. Ay, my lord,
I would know that.
Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;
And I believe it is a fetch of warrant:
You laying these slight stiillies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soild i' the working,
Mark you,
Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes
The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd
He closes with you in this consequence;
Good sir, or so; or friend, or gentleman,
According to the phrase or the addition
Of man and country.
Rey. Very good, my lord.
Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—he does,—
What was I about to say?—By the mass, I was About to say something:—where did I leave?
Rey. At closes in the consequence,
At friend or so, and gentleman. [marry;
Pol. At—closes in the consequence,—ay,
He closes with you thus:—I know the gentleman;
I saw him yesterday, or 't other day, [you say,
Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as
There was he gaming; there o'ertook in's rouse;
There falling out at tennis: or perchance,
I saw him enter such a house of sale,—
Videlicet, a brothel,—or so forth.—
See you now:
Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth:
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlaces, and with assays of bias,
By indirections find directions out:
So, by my former lecture and advice, [not?
Shall you my son. You have me, have you Rey. My lord, I have,
Pol. God b' wi' you; fare you well.
Rey. Good my lord!
Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.
Rey. I shall, my lord.
Pol. And let him ply his music.
Rey. Well, my lord.
Pol. Farewell! [Exit REYNALDO.

Enter OPHELIA.

How now, Ophelia! what's the matter?
Oph. Alas, my lord, I have been so affrighted!
Pol. With what? i' the name of God?
Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my chamber,
Lord Hamlet,—with his doublet all unbrac'd;
No hat upon his head; his stockings fould,' Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle:
Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;
And with a look so piteous in purport
As if he had been loosed out of hell
To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.
Pol. Mad for thy love?
Oph. My lord, I do not know;
But truly I do fear it.
Pol. What said he?
Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard;
Then goes he to the length of all his arm;
And with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face
As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;
At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,
And thrice his head thus waving up and down,—
He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound
That it did seem to shatter all his bulk
And end his being: that done, he lets me go:
And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

For out o’ doors he went without their help,
And to the last bended their light on me.
Pol. Come, go with me: I will go seek the king.

This is the very ecstasy of love;
Whose violent property fordoes itself,
And leads the will to desperate undertakings,
As oft as any passion under heaven
That does afflict our natures. I am sorry,— What, have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did
I did repel his letters, and denied
His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.

I am sorry that with better heed and judgment
I had not quoted him: I fear’d he did but trifle,
And meant to wreck thee; but, beshrew my jealousy!

It seems it is as proper to our age
To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king:
This must be known; which, being kept close,
might move
More grief to hide than hate to utter love.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern!

Moreover that we much did long to see you,
The need we have to use you did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet’s transformation; so I call it,
Since nor the exterior nor the inward man
Resembles that it was. What it should be,
More than his father’s death, that thus hath put him
So much from the understanding of himself,
I cannot dream of: I entreat you both,
That being of so young days brought up with him,
[humour,
And since so neighbour’d to his youth and
That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court
Some little time: so by your companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather,
So much as from occasion you may glean,
Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus,
That, open’d, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk’d of you:
And sure I am two men there are not living
To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
To show us so much gentry and good-will
As to expend your time with us awhile,
For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As suits a king’s remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties

Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,
Put your dread pleasures more into command
Than to entreaty.

Guil. We both obey,
And here give up ourselves, in the full bent,
To lay our service freely at your feet,
To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle Guildenstern.

[Rosencrantz:

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern and gentle

And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too-much-changed son.—Go, some of you,
And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practices

Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Ay, amen!

[Exeunt Ros., Guil., and some Attendants.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,

Are joyfully return’d?

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good
liege,
I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God and to my gracious king:
And I do think,—or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath us’d to do,—that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet’s lunacy.

King. O, speak of that; that do I long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;

My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit Polonius.

He tells me, my sweet queen, that he hath found
The head and source of all your son’s distemper.

Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main,—

His father’s death and our o’erhasty marriage.

King. Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter Polonius, with Voltimand and Cornelius.

Welcome, my good friends!

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings and desires.
Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew’s levies; which to him appear’d
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;
But, better look’d into, he truly found
It was against your highness: whereat griev’d,—
That so his sickness, age, and impotency
Was falsely borne in hand,—send out arrests
On Fortinbras; which he, in brief, obeys;
Receives rebuke from Norway; and, in fine,
Makes vow before his uncle never more
To give the assay of arms against your majesty.
Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee:
And his commission to employ those soldiers,
So levied as before, against the Polack:
With an entreaty, herein further shown,

That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise,
On such regards of safety and allowance
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well;
And at our more consider’d time we’ll read,
Answer, and think upon this business.
Meantime we thank you for your well-took
labour:
Go to your rest; at night we’ll feast together:
Most welcome home!

[Execunt Volt. and Cor.

Pol. This business is well ended.—
My liege, and madam,—to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.
Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,
I will be brief:—your noble son is mad:
Mad call I it; for to define true madness,
What is’t but to be nothing else but mad?
But let that go.

Queen. More matter with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all.
That he is mad, ’tis true:—’tis true ’tis pity;
And pity ’tis ’tis true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art.
Mad let us grant him, then: and now remains
That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause:
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.
Perpend.

I have a daughter,—have whilst she is mine,—
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this: now gather, and surmise.

[Reads.

To the celestial, and my soul’s idol, the most beautified Ophelia,—

That’s an ill phrase, a vile phrase,—beautified is a vile phrase: but you shall hear. Thus:

[Reads.

In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?

Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.

Doubt thou the stars are fire;
Doubt that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt I love.

O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers;
I have not art to reckon my groans: but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu.

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him,

Hamlet.

This, in obedience, hath my daughter show’d
me:

And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Receiv’d his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,
When I had seen this hot love on the wing,—
As I perceiv’d it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me,—what might you,
Or my dear majesty your queen here, think,
If I had play’d the desk or table-book;
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb;
Or look’d upon this love with idle sight;—
What might you think? No, I went round to work,
And my young mistress thus I did bespeak:

Lord Hamlet is a prince out of thy sphere;
This must not be: and then I precepts gave her,
That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repuls’d,—a short tale to make,—
Fall into a madness; then into a fast;
Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness;
Thence to a lightness, and, by this declension.
Into the madness wherein now he raves
And all we wail for.

King. Do you think ’tis this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time,—I’d fain know that,—
That I have positively said, ’Tis so,
When it prov’d otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise:

[Pointing to his head and shoulder.
If circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?
Pol. You know, sometimes he walks for hours together
Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does, indeed.
Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter
to him:
Be you and I behind an arras then;
Mark the encounter: if he love her not,
And be not from his reason fall'n thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm and carters.

King. We will try it.
Queen. But look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away:
I'll board him presently: — O, give me leave.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Attendants.

Enter Hamlet, reading.

How does my good Lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.
Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent, excellent well; you're a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord. [man.]
Ham. Than I would you were so honest a
Pol. Honest, my lord!

Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god-kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing; but not as your daughter may conceive:—friend, look to't.

Pol. How say you by that?—[Aside.] Still harping on my daughter:—yet he knew me not at first; he said I was a fishmonger: he is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love; very near this, I'll speak to him again.—What do you read, my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between who? [lord.

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my

Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical slave says here that old men have gray beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for you yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

Pol. [Aside.] Though this be madness, yet there is method in 't.—Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air.—[Aside.]

How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.—My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me anything that I will more willingly part withal,— extcept my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter RosenCrank and Gueldenstern.

Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. [To Polonius.] God save you, sir!

[Exit Polonius.

Guel. Mine honoured lord!

Ros. My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Gueldenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guel. Happy in that we are not overhappy;
On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guel. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of fortune? O, most true; she is a strumpet. What's the news?

Guel. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons, Denmark being one o' the worst.
Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then, ’tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why, then, your ambition makes it one; ’tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow’s shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars’ bodies, and our monarchs and outstretched heroes the beggars’ shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros. and Guil. We’ll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why, anything—but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no?

Ros. What say you? [To Guildenstern.

Ham. [Aside.] Nay, then, I have an eye of you. If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mout no feather. I have of late—but wherefore I know not,—lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o’erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilential congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, Man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome,—his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickled o’ the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for’t.—What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in,—the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: but there is, sir, an aery of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for: these are now the fashion; and so betrate the common stages,—so they call them,—that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose-quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? who maintains ’em? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players,—as it is most like, if their means are no better,—their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?
Ros. Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy: there was for awhile no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.
Ham. Is 't possible?
Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.
Ham. Do the boys carry it away?
Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too.
Ham. It is not strange; for mine uncle is king of Denmark, and those that would make months at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

[Flourish of trumpets within.

Guil. There are the players.
Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsimore. Your hands, come: the appurtenance of welcome is fashion; and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb; lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome: but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived.
Guil. In what, my dear lord?
Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw.

Enter Polonius.
Pdl. Well be with you, gentlemen!
Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern; and you too;—at each ear a hearer: that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swathing-clothes.
Ros. Happily he's the second time come to them; for they say an old man is twice a child.
Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players; mark it.—You say right, sir: o'
Monday morning; 'twas so indeed.
Pdl. My lord, I have news to tell you.
Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you.
When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—
Pdl. The actors are come hither, my lord.
Ham. Buzz, buzz!
Pdl. Upon mine honour,—
Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,— Pdl. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoralcomical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene-dividable, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy nor Plautus too light. For the law of wit and the liberty, these are the only
men.
Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!
Pdl. What a treasure had he, my lord?
Ham. Why—
One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well.
Pdl. [Aside.] Still on my daughter.
Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?
Pdl. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.
Ham. Nay, that follows not.
Pdl. What follows, then, my lord?
Ham. Why—
As by lot, God wot,
and then, you know,
It came to pass, as most like it was,— the first row of the pious chanson will show you more; for look where my abridgment comes.

Enter four or five Players.
You are welcome, masters; welcome, all:—I am glad to see thee well:—welcome, good friends.—O, my old friend! Thy face is valanced since I saw thee last; comest thou to beard me in Denmark?—What, my young lady and mistress! By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome.
We'll 'e'en to't like French falconers, fly at anything we see: we'll have a speech straight:
come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

1 Play. What speech, my lord?
Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, —but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general:
but it was,—as I received it, and others whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine,—an excellent play, well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said there were no sallets in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indite the author of affectation: but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas Aeneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: if it live in your memory, begin at this line;—let me see, let me see:—

The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast, —it is not so:—it begins with Pyrrhus:—
The rugged Pyrrhus,—he whose sable arms, Black as his purpose, did the night resemble When he lay couched in the ominous horse,— Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd
With heraldry more dismal; head to foot Now is he total gules; horridly trick'd With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons, Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets, That lend a tyrannous and damned light To their vile murders: roasted in wrath and fire,
And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore, With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old grandsire Priam seeks.—

So proceed you.
Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken, with good accent and good discretion.

I Play. Anon he finds him [sword, Striking too short at Greeks; his antique Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls, Repugnant to command: unequal match'd, Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage strikes wide; But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword The unnerved father falls. Then senseless Ilion, Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base: and with a hideous crash Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword,
Which was declining on the milky head Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick: So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood: And, like a neutral to his will and matter, Did nothing.
But as we often see, against some storm, A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still, The bold winds speechless, and the orb below As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder Doth rend the region; so, after Pyrrhus' pause, A roused vengeance sets him new a-work; And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall On Mars his armour, forg'd for proof etene, With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword
Now falls on Priam.— [gods,
Oft, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you

In general synod, take away her power; Break all the spokes and fellies from her wheel, [heaven,
And bowl the round knave down the hill of As low as to the fiends!

Pol. This is too long.
Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard.—Pr'ythee, say on. He's for a jig, or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps:—say on; come to Ihecbu.

1 Play. But who, O, who had seen the mobled queen,—

Ham. The mobled queen?
Pol. That's good; mobled queen is good.

1 Play. Run barefoot up and down, threatening the flames With bisson rheum; a clout upon that head Where late the diadem stood; and, for a robe, About her lank and all o'er-temed loins, A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up;— Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd, [pronounced:
'Gainst Fortune's state would treason have But if the gods themselves did see her then, When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs,
The instant burst of clamour that she made,— Unless things mortal move them not at all,— Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven, And passion in the gods.

Pol. Look, whether he has not turn'd his colour, and has tears in's eyes.—Pray you, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used: for they are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time; after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live. [their desert.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to

Ham. Odd's bodkin, man, better: use every man after his desert, and who should scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow. [Exit Polonius with all the Players but the First.]—Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the Murder of Gonzago?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll ha'nt to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines which I would set down and insert in't? could you not?

1. Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well.—Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exit First Player.]

—My good friends [to Ros. and Guil.], I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to L'isnore.

Ros. Good my lord!

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.]

Ham. Ay, so God b' wi' ye!—Now I am alone. O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I! I am a poor sad creature of philosophy, that runs not at first sight into the physician's head. Who has not fed me with some words to press my spirit to a murder? The tale of my birth is unknown. I am a贱民, a coward将近, a villain unworthy to be called a man. I am a villain in the first degree: to curse my mother was not in my nature. O, that my mother bore me not! For I am a monster of some sort, that I bear the shape of a man. Adidas I have said this, I am a villain. O, God! How oft doth a thing of naught confoundly ensue upon a thought! How many goodly and bright suns have been struck so to the soul that presently they have proclaim'd their malefacions; for murder, though it have no tongue, will speak. With most miraculous organ. I'll have these play something like the murder of my father Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks; I'll entreat him to the quick: if he but blench, I know my course. The spirit that I have seen may be the devil: and the devil hath power To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and perhaps Out of my weakness and my melancholy,—As he is very potent with such spirits,—Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds More relative than this:—the play's the thing Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. And can you, by no drift of circumstance, Get from him why he puts on this confusion, Grating so harshly all his days of quiet With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted;

But from what cause he will by no means

Gul. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded;

But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof When we would bring him on to some confession Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well?

Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Gul. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question; but, of our demands, Most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him To any pastime?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out that certain players [him; We o'er-ruled on the way: of these we told And there did seem in him a kind of joy To hear of it: they are about the court; And, as I think, they have already order This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true: And he beseech'd me to entertain your majesties To hear and see the matter. [content mid

King. With all my heart; and it doth much,
To hear him so inclin’d.—
Good gentlemen, give him a further edge, And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

[Exit Ros. and Guil.

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too; For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither That he, as ’twere by accident, may here Affront Ophelia: Iler father and myself,—lawful espials,— Will so bestow ourselves that, seeing, unseen, We may of their encounter frankly judge; And gather by him, as he is behav’d, If ’t be the affliction of his love or no That thus he suffers for.

Queen. I shall obey you:— And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish That your good beauties be the happy cause Of Hamlet’s wildness: so shall I hope your virtues Will bring him to his wonted way again, To both your honours.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit Queen.

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here. —Gracious, so please you, We will bestow ourselves.—[To Ophelia.] Read on this book; That show of such an exercise may colour Your loneliness.—We are oft to blame in this,— ’Tis too much prov’d,—that with devotion’s visage And pious action we do sugar o’er The devil himself.

King. [Aside.] O, ’tis too true! [science! How smart a lash that speech doth give my con- The harlot’s cheek, beautied with slavering art, Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it Than is my deed to my most painted word: O heavy burden! [lord.

Pol. I hear him coming: let’s withdraw, my [Exit King and Polonius.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be,—that is the question:— Whether ’tis nobler in the mind to suffer The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, Or to take arms against a sea of troubles, And by opposing end them?—To die,—to sleep,— No more; and by a sleep to say we end The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks That flesh is heir to,—’tis a consumption Devoutly to be wish’d. To die,—to sleep;— To sleep! perchance to dream:—ay, there’s the rub;

For in that sleep of death what dreams may come, When we have shuffled off this mortal coil, Must give us pause: there’s the respect That makes calamity of so long life; [time, For who would bear the whips and scorns of The oppressor’s wrong, the proud man’s contumely, The pangs of despis’d love, the law’s delay, The insolence of office, and the spurns That patient merit of the unworthy takes, When he himself might his quietus make With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear, To grunt and sweat under a weary life, But that the dread of something after death,— The undiscover’d country, from whose bourn No traveller returns,—puzzles the will, And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of? Thus conscience does make cowards of us all; And thus the native hue of resolution Is sicklied o’er with the pale cast of thought; And enterprises of great pith and moment, With this regard, their currents turn awry, And lose the name of action.—Soft you now! The fair Ophelia.—Nymph, in thy orisons Be all my sins remember’d.

Oph. Good my lord, How does your honour for this many a day? Ham. I humbly thank you; well, well, well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours, That I have longed long to re-deliver. I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I; I never gave you aught. [you did; Oph. My honour’d lord, you know right well And, with them, words of so sweet breath com- pos’d [lost, As made the things more rich: their perfume Take these again; for to the noble mind Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind. There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest? Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair? Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty? Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness: this was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.
Hamlet, Prince of Denmark.

Act III.

Scene I.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Hamlet and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, trippingly on the tongue: but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, the whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul, to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows and noise; I could have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant; it out-herods Herod: pray you, avoid it.

1 Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your

Re-enter King and Polonius.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend;
Little,
Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a

his soul
O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;
And I do doubt the hatch and the disclose

Thus set it down:—he shall with speed to Eng-
For the demand of our neglected tribute:
Haply, the seas and countries different,
With variable objects, shall expel
This something-settled matter in his heart;
Whereon his brains still beating puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on't?
Pol. It shall do well: but yet do I believe
The origin and commencement of his grief
Sprung from neglected love.—How now, Ophelia!
You need not tell us what Lord Hamlet said;
We heard it all.—My lord, do as you please;
But if you hold it fit, after the play,
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
To show his grief: let her be round with him;
And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,
To England send him; or confine him where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go.
[Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Ham. Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe
so.
Ham. You should not have believed me;
for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.
Oph. I was the more deceived.
Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not born me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between heaven and earth? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery.
Where's your father?
Oph. At home, my lord.
Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool nowhere but in's own house. Farewell.
Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!
Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry,—be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery, go: farewell. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.
Oph. O heavenly powers, restore him!
Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God has given you one face and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nickname God's cretures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to, I'll no more on't; it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more mar-rriages: those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are.
To a nunnery, go. [Exit.
Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown!
The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's eye, tongue,
sword:
The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion and the mould of form,
The observ'd of all observers,—quite, quite
down!
And I, of ladies most deject and wretched
That suck'd the honey of his music yow,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
That unmatch'd form and feature of blown youth
Blasted with ecstasy: O, woe is me,
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!
own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature: for anything so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now, this overdone or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one must, in your allowance, o'er-weigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players that I have seen play,—and heard others praise, and that highly,—not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

I Play. I hope we have reformed that indifferently with us, sir.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them: for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the meantime, some necessary question of the play be then to be considered: that's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready.

[Exeunt Players.

Enter Polonius, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

How now, my lord! will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste.

[Exit Polonius.

Will you two help to hasten them?

Ros. and Guil. We will, my lord.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.

Ham. What, ho, Horatio!

Enter Horatio.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.

Hor. O, my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter; For what advancement may I hope from thee, That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits, To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?

No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp; And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?

Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice, And could of men distinguish, her election Hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing; A man that Fortune's buffets and rewards Hast ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those Whose blood and judgment are so well commingled That they are not a pipe for Fortune's finger To sound what stop she please. Give me that man That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart, As I do thee.—Something too much of this.— There is a play to-night before the king; One scene of it comes near the circumstance Which I have told thee of my father's death: I pr'ythee, when thou see'st that act a-foot, Even with the very comment of thy soul Observe mine uncle: if his occulted guilt Do not itself unkennel in one speech, It is a damned ghost that we have seen; And my imaginations are as foul As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note: For I mine eyes will rivet to his face; And, after, we will both our judgments join In censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord: If he steal aught the whilst this play is playing, And scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle:

Get you a place.

Danish march. A flourish. Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the chameleon's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed: you cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now.—My lord, you played once i' the university, you say? [To Pol.

Pol. That did I, my lord, and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Cesar: I was killed i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there.—Be the players ready?
Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my good Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. O, ho! do you mark that? [To the King.

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

[lying down at Ophelia’s feet.

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O, your only jigger. What should a man do but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay, then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: but, by'r lady, he must build churches, then; or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is, For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot.

Trumpets sound. The dumb show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly: the Queen embracing him and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck; lays him down upon a bank of flowers: she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner woos the Queen with gifts: she seems loth and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is miching mallecho; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him: be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught: I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,

Here stooping to your clemency,

We beg your hearing patiently.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter a King and a Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phæbus' cart gone round

Neptune's salt water and Tellus' orbed ground,

And thirty dozen moons with borrow'd sheen

About the world have times twelve threes been,

Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands

Unite commutual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er ere love be done!

But, woe is me, you are so sick of late,

So far from cheer and from your former state,

That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust,

Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must:

For women's fear and love holds quantity;

In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know;

And as my love is six'd, my fear is so:

Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;

Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

[shortly too;

P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, and

My operant powers their functions leave to do:

And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,

Honour'd, belov'd; and haply one as kind

For husband shalt thou,—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest!

Such love must needs be treason in my breast;

In second husband let me be accurst!

None wed the second but who kill'd the first.

Ham. [Aside.] Wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances that second marriage move

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love;
A second time I kill my husband dead
When second husband kisses me in bed.

_P. King._ I do believe you think what now you speak;
But what we do determine oft we break,
Purpose is but the slave to memory;
Of violent birth, but poor validity: [tree;
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the
But fall unshaken when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis that we forget
To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:
What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of either grief or joy
Their own enactures with themselves destroy:
Where joy most revels grief doth most lament;
Grief joys, joy griefs, on slander accident.
This world is not for aye; nor 'tis not strange
That even our loves should with our fortunes change;
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove
Whether love lead fortune or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite flies;
The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies.
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend:
For who not needs shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.
But, orderly to end where I began,—
Our wills and fates do so contrary run
That our devices still are overthrown; [own:
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our
So think thou wilt no second husband wed;
But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead.

_P. Queen._ Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light!
Sport and repose lock from me day and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!
Each opposite, that blanks the face of joy,
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here and hence, pursue me lasting strife,
If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

_Ham._ If she should break it now!

_[To Ophelia._

_P. King._ 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here awhile;
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.
_P. Queen._ Sleep rock thy brain,
And never come mischance between us twain!

[Exit.

_Ham._ Madam, how like you this play?
_Queen._ The lady protests too much, methinks.
_Ham._ O, but she'll keep her word.

_King._ Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in 't?
_Ham._ No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence in the world.

_King._ What do you call the play?

_Ham._ The Mouse-trap. Marry, how?

_Tropically._ This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: but what o' that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

_Enter Lucianus._

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

_Oph._ You are a good chorus, my lord.

_Ham._ I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

_Oph._ You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

_Ham._ It would cost you a groaning to take off my edge.

_Oph._ Still better, and worse.

_Ham._ So you must take your husbands.—
Begin, murderer; pox, leave thy damnable faces and begin. Come:—The croaking raven doth hellow for revenge.

_Luc._ Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;
Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,
With Hecate's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy natural magic and dire property
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

_[Pours the poison into the sleeper's ears._

_Ham._ He poisons him i' the garden for's estate. His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and writ in choice Italian: you shall see anon how the murder: gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

_Oph._ The king rises.

_Ham._ What, frightened with false fire!

_Queen._ How fares my lord?

_Pol._ Give o'er the play.

_King._ Give me some light:—away!

_All._ Lights, lights, lights!

_[Exeunt all but Ham. and Hor._

_Ham._ Why, let the strucken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play;
For some must watch, while some must sleep:
So runs the world away.—
Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers,— if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me,— with two Provencial roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir?
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

[ACT III.]

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,
This realm dismantled was
Of Jove himself; and now reigns here
A very, very—pajock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. Good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha!—Come, some music! come, the recorders!—

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why, then, belike,—he likes it not, perdy.

Come, some music!

Re-enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellous dis-

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir:—pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: my mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says: your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration?

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. So I do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do, surely, bar the door upon your own liberty if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, but While the grass grows,—the proverb is something musty.

Re-enter the Players, with Recorders.

O, the recorders:—let me see one.—To withdraw with you:—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmanners.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these vantages with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me! You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass: and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think that I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me you cannot play upon me.

Enter Polonius.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel.
Pol. It is backed like a weasel.
Ham. Or like a whale?
Pol. Very like a whale.
Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by.—They fool me to the top of my bent.
—I will come by and by.
Pol. I will say so.
Ham. By and by is easily said. [Exit Polonius.]—Leave me, friends.
[Exeunt Ros., Guil., Hor., and Players.
'Or now the very witching time of night,
When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out
Contagion to this world: now could I drink hot
And do such bitter business as the day Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother.—
O heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever
The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:
Let me be cruel, not unnatural:
I will speak daggers to her, but use none;
My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites,—
How in my words soever she be shent,
To give them seals never, my soul, consent!
[Exit.

Scene III.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us [you;
To let his madness range. Therefore prepare
I your commission will forthwith despatch,
And he to England shall along with you:
The terms of our estate may not endure
Hazard so dangerous as doth hourly grow
Out of his lunacies.

Guil. We will ourselves provide:
Most holy and religious fear it is
To keep those many many bodies safe
That live and feed upon your majesty.
Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound,
With all the strength and armour of the mind,
To keep itself from 'noyance; but much more
That spirit upon whose weal depend and rest
The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone; but like a gulf doth draw
What's near it with it: it is a massy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things
Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage;
For we will setters put upon this fear,
Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. and Guil. [Exit Ros. and Guil.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet:

Behind the arras I'll convey myself [home:
To hear the process; I'll warrant she'll tax him
And, as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meet that some more audience than a mother,
Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear
The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my
liege:
I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit Polonius.

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,—
A brother's murder!—Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will:
My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;
And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand
Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,—
Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens
To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy
But to confront the visage of offence?
And what's in prayer but this twofold force,—
To be forestalled ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd being down? Then I'll look up;
My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!—
That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,—
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.
May one be pardon'd and retain the offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice;
And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law: but 'tis not so above;
There is no shuffling,—there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd,
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what repentance can: what can it not?
Yet what can it when one can not repent?
O wretched state! O bosom black as death!
O limed soul, that, struggling to be free,
Art more engag'd! Help, angels! make assay:
Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart, with strings of steel,
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe!
All may be well.  [Retires and kneels.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it, now he is praying;
And now I'll do't: and so he goes to heaven;
And so am I reveng'd:—that would be scann'd:
A villain kills my father; and for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.
O, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May;
And how his audit stands who knows save
But in our circumstance and course of thought
'Tis heavy with him: and am I, then, reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
No.
Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent:
When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage;
Or in the incestuous pleasure of his bed;
At gaming, swearing; or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't;—
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven;
And that his soul may be as damn'd and black
As hell, whereunto it goes. My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days.  [Exit.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:
Words without thoughts never to heaven go.  [Exit.

Scene IV.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight.  Look you lay home to him: [with,
Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear
And that your grace hath screen'd and stood
Much heat and him.  I'll silence me e'en here.
Pray you, be round with him.

Ham.  [Within.] Mother, mother, mother!
Queen.  I'll warrant you:
Fear me not:—withdraw, I hear him coming.
[Polonius goes behind the arras.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now, mother, what's the matter?
Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked
Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet?

Ham. What's the matter now?
Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so:
You are the queen, your husband's brother's
wife;
And, would it were not so! you are my Queen. Nay, then, I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge;
You go not till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the inmost part of you.
Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me?—

Help, help, ho!

Pol.  [Behind.] What, ho! help, help, help!

Ham.  How now! a rat?  [Draws.

Dead, for a duet, dead!

[Makes a pass through the arras.

Pol.  [Behind.] O, I am slain!

[Dies and falls.

Queen. O me, what hast thou done?

Ham.  Nay, I know not: Is it the king?

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!  [mother.

Ham. A bloody deed!—almost as bad, good
As kill a king and marry with his brother.
Queen. As kill a king!

Ham.  Ay, lady, 'twas my word.—
Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!

[To Polonius.

I took thee for thy better: take thy fortune;
Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.—
Leave wringing of your hands: peace; sit you
down,
And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff;
If damned custom have not braz'd it so
That it is proof and bulwark against sense.
Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue
In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act
That blinds the grace and blush of modesty;
Calls virtue hypocrite; takes off the rose
From the fair forehead of an innocent love,
And sets a blister there; makes marriage-vows
As false as dicer's oaths: O, such a deed
As from the body of contraction plucks
The very soul, and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: heaven's face doth glow;
Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With tristful visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.
Queen. Ah me, what act,
That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?
Ham. Lock here upon this picture and on this,—
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See what a grace was seated on this brow;
Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station like the herald Mercury
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man:
This was your husband.—Look you now, what follows:
Here is your husband, like a milldew'd ear Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you
eyes?
Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
You cannot call it love; for at your age
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment: and what judgment
Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you Else could you not have motion: but sure that sense
Is apoplex'd: for madness would not err;
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd
But it reserv'd some quantity of choice
To serve in such a difference. What devil was't
That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?
Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense
Could not so mope.
O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.
Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more:
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and grained spots
As will not leave their tinct.
Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed,
Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making love
Over the nasty sty,—
Queen. O, speak to me no more;
These words like daggers enter in mine ears;
No more, sweet Hamlet.
Ham. A murderer and a villain;
A slave that is not twentieth part the title
Of your precedent lord; a vice of kings;
A cutpurse of the empire and the rule,
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket!
Queen. No more.
Ham. A king of shreds and patches,—
Enter Ghost.
Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards!—What would your gracious figure?
Queen. Alas, he's mad! [chide,
Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to
That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by
The important acting of your dread command?
O, say!
Ghost. Do not forget: this visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But, look, amazement on thy mother sits:
O, step between her and her fighting soul,—
Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works,—
Speak to her, Hamlet.
Ham. How is it with you, lady?
Queen. Alas, how is't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
And with the incorporeal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,
Starts up and stands on end. O gentle son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Whercon do you look?
Ham. On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares!
[stones,
His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to Would make them capable.—Do not look upon
me;
Lest with this piteous action you convert
My stern effects: then what I have to do
Will want true colour; tears perchance for blood.
Queen. To whom do you speak this?
Ham. Do you see nothing there?
Queen. Nothing at all; yet all that is I see.
Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?
Queen. No, nothing but ourselves.
Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!
My father, in his habit as he liv'd!
Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal! [Exit Ghost.
Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:
This bodiless creation ecstasy
Is very cunning in.
Ham. Ecstasy!
My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthful music: it is not madness
That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word; which madness
Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,
Lay not that flattering unction to your soul,
That not your trespass, but my madness speaks:
It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,
Whilst rank corruption, mining all within,
Infests unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;
Repent what's past; avoid what is to come;
And do not spread the compost on the weeds,
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue;
For in the fineness of these pursy times
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,
Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet, thou hast clef't my heart in twain.

Ham. O, throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.

Queen. Good-night; but go not to mine uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
That monster custom, who all sense doth eat,
Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,—
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a flock or livery
That aptly is put on. Refrain to-night;
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence: the next more easy;
For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And either curb the devil, or throw him out
With wondrous potency. Once more, good-night:
And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
I'll blessing beg of you. —For this same lord

[Pointing to Polonius.

I do repent: but Heaven hath pleas'd it so,
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him. So, again, good-night:—
I must be cruel only to be kind:
Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.—
One word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do?

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do:
Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed;
Pinch wanton on your cheek: call you his mouse;
And let him, for a pair of rechy kisses,
Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness, [know;
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him
For who that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?

No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down. [breath

Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that?

Queen. Alack, I had forgot: 'tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two schoolfellows,—
Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd,—
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,
And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
For 'tis the sport to have the engineer
Hoist with his own petard: and I shall go hard
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet,
When in one line two crafts directly meet.
—This man shall set me packing:
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.—

Mother, good-night.—Indeed, this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.

Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you:—

Good-night, mother.

[Exeunt severally; Ham. dragging out Pol.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guil登stern.

King. There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves:
You must translate: 'tis fit we understand
Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.

[To Ros. and Guil., who go out.

Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend
Which is the mightier: in his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
He whips his rapier out, and cries, A rat, a rat!
And, in this brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!
It had been so with us had we been there:
His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.

Alas, how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
SCENE II. — Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Hamlet.

Enter Rosenkranz and Guildenstern.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body? [kin.

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis

Ros. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence,

And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge!—what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: he keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing,— Guil. A thing, my lord!

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Another Room in the Castle.

Enter King, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body. How dangerous is it that this man goes loose! Yet must not we put the strong law on him: He's lov'd of the distracted multitude, Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes; And where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd, [even, But never the offence. To bear all smooth and This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause: diseases desperate grown By desperate appliance are reliev'd, Or not at all.

Enter Rosenkranz.

How now! what hath befallen? [lord, Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord, We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper! where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms
For like the hectic in my blood he rages,
And thou must cure me: till I know 'tis done,
Hoe'er my haps, my joys will ne'er begin.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Plain in Denmark.

Enter Fortinbras, and Forces marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king:
Tell him that, by his license, Fortinbras
Craves the conveyance of a promis'd march
Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye,
And let him know so.

Cap. I will do't, my lord.
For. Go softly on.

[Exeunt For. and Forces.

Enter Hamlet, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, &c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?
Cap. They are of Norway, sir.
Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you?
Cap. Against some part of Poland.
Ham. Who commands them, sir?
Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.
Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland,
Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
We go to gain a little patch of ground
That hath in it no profit but the name.
To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it;
Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole
A ranker rate should it be sold in fee. [fend it.
Ham. Why, then the Polack never will de-
Cap. Yes, it is already garrison'd.
Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats
Will not debate the question of this straw:
This is the imposthume of much wealth and peace, [out
That inward breaks, and shows no cause with-
Why the man dies. —I humbly thank you, sir.
Cap. God b' wi' you, sir. [Exit.
Ros. Will't please you go, my lord?
Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before. [Exeunt all but Hamlet.

How all occasions do inform against me,
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good and market of his time
Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.
Sure he that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason are c'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots: your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service,—two dishes, but to one table: that's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and cat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there.

[To some Attendants.

Ham. He will stay till ye come.

[Exeunt Attendants.

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,—
Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve
For that which thou hast done,—must send thee hence
With fiery quickness: therefore prepare thyself;
The bark is ready, and the wind at help,
The associates tend, and everything is bent
For England.

Ham. For England!

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that sees them.—But, come; for England!—Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother.—Come, for England! [Exit.

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard;
Delay it not: I'll have him hence to-night:
Away! for everything is seal'd and done
That else leans on the affair: pray you, make haste. [Exeunt Ros. and Guil.

And, England, if my love thou hol'd'st at aught,—
As my great power thereof may give thee sense,
Since yet thy circket looks raw and red
After the Danish sword, and thy free awe
Pays homage to us,—thou mayst not coldly set
Our sovereign process; which imports at full,
By letters conjuring to that effect,
The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England;
To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss:
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter Horatio with Ophelia.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?
Queen. How now, Ophelia!

Oph. How should I your true love know [Sings.
From another one?
By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandal shoon.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song?

He is dead and gone, lady; [Sings.
He is dead and gone;
At his head a grass green turf,
At his heels a stone.

Queen. Nay, but, Ophelia,—

Oph. Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain [Sings.
Snow,

Enter King.

Oph. Larded with sweet flowers; [Sings.
Which bewept to the grave did go
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God did you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let's have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day [Sings.
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine.

Then up he rose, and donn'd his clothes,
And dupp'd the chamber-door;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la, without an oath, I'll make an end on't:

By Gis and by Saint Charity, [Sings.
Alack, and fie for shame!
Young men will do't, if they come to't;
By cock, they are to blame.

Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promis'd me to wed.
So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?
Enter Laertes, armed; Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all without.

Danes. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Danes. We will, we will.

[They retire without the door.

Laer. I thank you:—keep the door.—O thou vile king,

Give me my father!

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard;
Cries cuckold to my father; brands the harlot
Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow
Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,
That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?—
Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person:
There's such divinity doth hedge a king,
That treason can but peep to what it would,
Acts little of his will.—Tell me, Laertes,
Why thou art thus incens'd.—Let him go,
Gertrude:—

Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill. [with:

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled
To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!
Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit!
I dare damnation:—to this point I stand,—
That both the worlds I give to negligence,
Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd
Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world:
And for my means, I'll husband them so well,
They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,
If you desire to know the certainty
Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your revenge [and foé,
That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend
Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them, then?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll open my arms;
And, like the kind life-rendering pelican,
Repast them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak
Like a good child and a true gentleman.
That I am guiltless of your father's death,
And am most sensible in grief for it,
It shall as level to your judgment pierce
As day does to your eye.

_Danes._ [Within.] Let her come in.

_Laer._ How now! what noise is that?

Re-enter _Ophelia_, fantastically dressed with straws and flowers.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt,
Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!—
By heaven, thy madness shall be paid by weight,
Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!
Dear maid, kind sister, sweet _Ophelia_!—
Q heavens! isn't possible a young maid's wits
Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
Nature is fine in love; and where 'tis fine
It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves.

_Oph._ They bore him barefaced on the bier; [Sings.
Hey no nonny, nonny, hey nonny;
And on his grave rain'd many a tear,—

_Fare you well, my dove!_

_Laer._ Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,
It could not move this.

_Oph._ You must sing, _Down a-down, an you call him a-down-a_.
_O_ , how the wheel becomes it! It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter.

_Laer._ This nothing's more than matter.

_Oph._ There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray, love, remember: and there is pansies, that's for thoughts.

_Laer._ A document in madness,—thoughts and remembrance fitted.

_Oph._ There's fennel for you, and comfresses:—there's rue for you; and here's some for me:—we may call it herb-grace o' Sundays:
—O, you must wear your rue with a difference.
—There's a daisy:—I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died:—they say, he made a good end,—

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy,—

[Sings.

_Laer._ Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself,
She turns to favour and to prettiness.

_Oph._ And will he not come again?

And will he not come again?
No, no, he is dead,
Go to thy death-bed,
He never will come again.

His beard was as white as snow,
All flaxen was his down:
He is gone, he is gone,
And we cast away moan;
God be' ye mercy on his soul!

And of all Christian souls, I pray God.—_God b' wi ye._

_Laer._ Do you see this, O God? [grief,

_King._ Laertes, I must commune with your
Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,

And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and
If by direct or by collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,
To you in satisfaction; but if not,

Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall jointly labour with your soul

To give it due content.

_Laer._ Let this be so;

His means of death, his obscure burial,—
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,
No noble rite or formal ostentation,—

Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I must call in question.

_King._ So you shall;

And where the offence is, let the great axe fall.
I pray you, go with me.

[Exit.

Scene VI.—Another Room in the Castle.

_Enter_ Horatio and a Servant.

_Hor._ What are they that would speak with me?

_Serv._ Sailors, sir: they say they have letters for you.

_Hor._ Let them come in.—

[Exit Servant.

I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

_Enter_ Sailors.

I Sail. God bless you, sir.

_Hor._ Let him bless thee too.

I Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him.

There's a letter for you, sir; it comes from
The ambassador that was bound for England;
If your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

_Hor._ [Reads.] Horatio, when thou shalt have overlook'd this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him.

_Ere we were two days old at sea, a private of very warlike appointment gave us chase.

Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compell'd valour: and in the grapple I boarded them; on the instant they got clear of our ship; so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy: but they knew what they did; I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldst fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet
Enter a Messenger.

How now! what news?

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet: This to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! Who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not: [them]

They were given me by Claudio,—he receiv'd Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.— Leave us. [Exit Messenger.

[Reads.] High and mighty,—You shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes: when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my sudden and more strange return.

Hamlet.
What should this mean? Are all the rest come back?

Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character:—Naked,— And in a postscript here, he says, alone.

Can you advise me? [come;]

Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him
It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live, and tell him to his teeth,
Thus diddest thou.

King. If it be so, Laertes,— As how should it be so? how otherwise?— Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;

So you will not o'errule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,—

As checking at his voyage, and that he means No more to undertake it,—I will work him To an exploit, now ripe in my device, Under the which he shall not choose but fall: And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe;

But even his mother shall uncharge the practice, And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd;
The rather if you could devise it so That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.

You have been talk'd of since your travel much, And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality Wherein they say you shine: your sum of parts Did not together pluck such envy from him As did that one; and that, in my regard, Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears
Than settled age his sables and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness.—Two months
since,
Here was a gentleman of Normandy,—
I've seen myself, and serv'd against the French,
And they can well on horseback: but this gallant
Had witchcraft in 't; he grew unto his seat;
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorps'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast: so far he topp'd my thought,
That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was 't?
King. A Norman.
King. The very same.
Laer. I know him well: he is the brooch,
indeed,
And gem of all the nation.
King. He made confession of you;
And gave you such a masterly report
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especially,
That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed
If one could match you: the scrimers of their nation,
He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them. Sir, this report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy,
That he could nothing do but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with him.
Now, out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord?
King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?
King. Not that I think you did not love your
father;
But that I know love is begun by time;
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it;
And nothing is at a like goodness still;
For goodness, growing to a pleurisy,
Dies in his own too much: that we would do
We should do when we would; for this would changes,
And hath abatements and delays as many
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
And then this should is like a spendthrift sigh
That hurts by easing. But to the quick o' the ulcer:—

Hamlet comes back: what would you undertake
To show yourself your father's son in deed
More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i' the church.
King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctu-azarize;
[Laertes,
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber.

Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home:
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the fame [gether,
The Frenchman gave you; bring you, in fine, to-
And wager on your heads: he, being remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the foils; so that, with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated, and, in a pass of practice,
Require him for your father.

Laer. I will do't:
And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unctuous of a mountebank,
So mortal that but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death
That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point
With this contagion, that, if I Gall him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this;
Weigh what convenience both of time and means
May fit us to our shape: if this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'Twere better not assay'd: therefore this project
Should have a back or second, that might hold
If this should blast in proof. Soft! let me see:

We'll make a solemn wager on your cunnings,—
I ha't;
When in your motion you are hot and dry,—
As make your bouts more violent to that end,—
And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepar'd
him
A chalice for the nonce; wherein but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck
Our purpose may hold there.

Enter Queen.

Queen. One woe doth upon another's heel, [Laertes.
So fast they follow:—your sister's drown'd, Laer. Drown'd! O, where?
Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook,
That shows his hour leaves in the glassy stream;
There with fantastic garlands did she come
Of crowflowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,
That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them.
There, on the pendant boughs her coronet weeds
Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke;
When down her weedy trophies and herself
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide;
And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up:
Which time she chanted snatches of old tunes;
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indu'd
Unto that element: but long it could not be Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

LRR. Alas, then, she is drown'd?
Queen. Drown'd, drown'd. [Ophelia,
LRR. Too much of water hast thou, poor
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will: when these are gone,
The woman will be out.—Adieu, my lord:
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly douts it. [Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude;
How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I this will give it start again:
Therefore let's follow. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Churchyard.

Enter two Clowns with spades, &c.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial that willfully seeks her own salvation?
2 Clo. I tell thee she is; and therefore make her grave straight: the crown'er hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?
2 Clo. Why, 'tis found so.
1 Clo. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drowned herself wittingly.
2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, goodman deliver,— 1 Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water and drown himself, it is, will

He, nill he, he goes,—mark you that: but if the water come to him and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?
1 Clo. Ay, marry, is't; crown'er's quest law.
2 Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st: and the more pity that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves more than their even Christian.—Come, my goodman. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditches, and grave-makers: they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?
1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.
2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digged: could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself,—

2 Clo. Go to.

1 Clo. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith: the gallows does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again, come.

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.
2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.
1 Clo. To't.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

1 Clo. Condge thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are asked this question next, say a grave-maker; the houses that he makes last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Vaughan; fetch me a stoup of liquor.

[Exit Second Clown.

In youth, when I did love, did love, [Digs and sings. Methought it was very sweet,
To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behove,
O, methought there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?
Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. ’Tis e’en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

1 Clo. But age, with his stealing steps, [Sings.
Hath claw’d me in his clutch,
And withal slip’d me into the land,
As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the knave jowled it to the ground, as if it were Cain’s jawbone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o’erreaches; one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier, which could say,

Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord? This might be my lord such-a-one, that praised my lord such-a-one’s horse, when he meant to beg it,—might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e’en so: and now my Lady Worm’s; chapsless, and knocked about the mazard with a sexton’s spade: here’s fine revolution, an we had the trick to see’t.

These bones cost no more the breeding but to play at loggats with ’em? Nine ache to think on’t.

1 Clo. A pick-axe and a spade, a spade, [Sings.
For and a shrouding sheet:
O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up another

Ham. There’s another: why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddits now, his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Hum! This fellow might be in’s time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box; and must the inheritor himself have no more, ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow.—Whose grave’s this, sir?

1 Clo. Mine, sir.—

O, a pit of clay for to be made [Sings.
For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine indeed: for thou liest in’t.

1 Clo. You lie out on’t, sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in’t, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in’t, to be in’t, and say it is thine: ’tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

1 Clo. ’Tis a quick lie, sir; it will away again from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1 Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

1 Clo. For none, neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in it?

1 Clo. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she’s dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it: the age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his knee.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Clo. Of all the days in the year, I came to’t that day that our last King Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

1 Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: it was the very day that young Hamlet was born,—he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into 1 Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, it’s no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1 Clo. ’Twill not be seen in him there; there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

1 Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1 Clo. Faith, e’en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1 Clo. Why, here in Denmark: I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i’ the earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. Faith, if he be not rotten before he die,—as we have many pocky corpses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in,—he will last you some eight year or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Enter Priests, &c., in procession; the Corpse of OPHELIA, LAERTES and Mourners following;
KING, QUEEN, their Trains, &c.

The queen, the courtiers: who is that they follow?
And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken
The corse they follow did with desperate hand
Fordo its own life: 'twas of some estate.
Couch we awhile and mark.

[Retiring with HOR.

LAER. What ceremony else?
HAM.

That is Laertes,
A very noble youth: mark,

LAER. What ceremony else?

PIEST. Her obsequies have been as far enlarged, [ful;
As we have warrantise: her death was doubt-
And, but that great command o'ersways the order,
She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd
Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, Shards, flints, and pebbles, should be thrown
on her,
Yet here she is allowed her virgin rites,
Her maiden strewnments, and the bringing home
Of bell and burial.

LAER. Must there no more be done?

PIEST. No more be done;
We should profane the service of the dead
To sing a requiem, and such rest to her
As to peace-parted souls.

LAER. Lay her in the earth;
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh
May violets spring!—I tell thee, churlish priest,
A ministering angel shall my sister be
When thou liest howling.

HAM. What, the fair Ophelia!
QUEEN. Sweets to the sweet: farewell!

[Scattering flowers.

I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's
maid,
I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet
And not have strew'd thy grave.

LAER. O, treble woe
Fall ten times treble on that cursed head
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenuous sense
Depriv'd thee of!—I told off the earth awhile,
Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:
[Leaps into the grave.

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To o'er-top old Pelion or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.

HAM. [Advancing.] What is he whose grief
Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
[stand
Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them
Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I,
Hamlet the Dane. [Leaps into the grave.
Laer. The devil take thy soul!
[Grapple with him.
Ham. Thou pray'st not well.
I pr'ythee, take thy fingers from my throat.
For, though I am not splenetic and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous,
Which let thy wisdom fear: away thy hand.
King. Pluck them asunder.
Queen. Hamlet! Hamlet!
All. Gentlemen,—
Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.
[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.
Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme
Until my eyelids will no longer wag.
Queen. O my son, what theme?
Ham. I lov'd Ophelia; forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum.—What wilt thou do for her?
King. O, he is mad, Laertes.
Queen. For love of God, forbear him.
Ham. Swounds, I'll to find out them: had my desire;
Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew
To mine own room again: making so bold,
My fears forgetting manners, to unsheal
Their grand commission; where I found
Horatio,
O royal knavery! an exact command,—
Larded with many several sorts of reasons,
Importing Denmark's health and England's too.
With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,—
That, on the supervise, no leisure bated,
No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
My head should be struck off.
Hor. Is't possible?
Ham. Here's the commission: read it at more leisure.
But wilt thou hear me how I did proceed?
Hor. I beseech you. [villanics,— Ham. Being thus benedict round with Ere I could make a prologue to my brains,
They had begun the play,—I sat me down;
Devis'd a new commission; wrote it fair:
I once did hold it, as our statists do,
A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much
How to forget that learning; but, sir, now
It did me yeoman's service. Wilt thou know
The effect of what I wrote?
Hor. Ay, good my lord.
Ham. An earnest conjuration from the
king,—
As England was his faithful tributary;
As love between them like the palm might
flourish;
As peace should still her wheaten garland wear
And stand a comma 'tween their amities;
And many such like as's of great charge,—
That, on the view and know of these contents,
Without debate more or less, he should the bearers put to sudden death, Not shriving-time allow'd.

_Hor._ How was this seal'd?

_Ham._ Why, even in that was heaven ordina-
I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model of that Danish seal:
Folded the writ up in form of the other;
Subscrib'd it; gave't the impression; plac'd it safely,
The changeling never known. Now, the next
Was our sea-fight; and what to this was sequent
Thou know'st already.

_Hor._ So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go
_Ham._ Why, man, they did make love to this employment;
They are not near my conscience; their defeat
Does by their own insinuation grow:
'Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes
Between the pass and fell incensed points
Of mighty opposites.

_Hor._ Why, what a king is this!
_Ham._ Does it not, think'st thee, stand me now upon,—
He that hath kill'd my king and whor'd my Popp'd in between the election and my hopes;
Throwed out his angle for my proper life,
And with such cozenage,—is't not perfect conscience
To quit him with this arm? and is't not to be
To let this canker of our nature come
In further evil?

_England_ It must be shortly known to him from
What is the issue of the business there.

_Ham._ It will be short: the interim is mine;
And a man's life's no more than to say One.
But I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot myself;
For by the image of my cause I see
The portraiture of his: I'll court his favours:
But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a towering passion.

_Peace_; who comes here?

_Enter_ OSRICA.

_Osr._ Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

_Ham._ I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this water-fly?

_Hor._ No, my good lord.

_Ham._ Thy state is the more gracious; for
'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his eril shall stand at the king's mess: 'tis a chough; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

_Osr._ Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure,
I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

_Ham._ I will receive it with all diligence of spirit.

_Put your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

_Osr._ I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

_Ham._ No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly.

_Osr._ It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

_Ham._ Methinks it is very sultry and hot for my complexion.

_Osr._ Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry,—as't were,—I cannot tell how.—But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you that he has laid a great wager on your head. Sir, this is the matter,—

_Ham._ I beseech you, remember,—

[HAMLET moves him to put on his hat.

_Osr._ Nay, in good faith; for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing: indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.

_Ham._ Sir, his refinement suffers no perdition in you;—though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dizzy the arithmetic of memory, and it but yaw never, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

_Osr._ Your lordship speaks most infallibly of _Ham._ The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

_Osr._ Sir?

_Hor._ Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do 'tir, really.

_Ham._ What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

_Osr._ Of Laertes?

_Hor._ His purse is empty already; all's golden words are spent.

_Ham._ Of him, sir.

_Osr._ I know, you are not ignorant,—

_Ham._ I would you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me.—

_Well, sir.

_Osr._ You are not ignorant of what excel-ence Laertes is,—

_Ham._ I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but to know a man well were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has imposed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so: three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hils, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew you must be edified by the margin ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter if we could carry cannon by our sides: I would it might be hangers till then. But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal concealed carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish: why is this imposed, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between you and him he shall not exceed you three hits: he hath laid on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: if it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me: let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I re-deliver you e'en so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours. [Exit Osric.]—He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for 's turn. [on his head.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell

Ham. He did comply with his dog before he sucked it. Thus has he,—and many more of the same bevy, that I know the drossy age dotes on,—only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fanned and winnowed opinion; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him that you attend him in the hall: he sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now or whenever, provided I be so able as now. [down.

Lord. The king and queen and all are coming

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France I have been in continual practice: I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think how ill all's here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike anything, obey it: I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury: there's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all: since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is 't to leave betimes?

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osric, and Attendants with foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts Laertes's hand into Hamlet's.

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I have done you wrong:

But pardon't, as you are a gentleman.
This presence knows, and you must needs have heard,

How I am punish'd with sore distraction.
What I have done,
That might your nature, honour, and exception
Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.
Was 't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet:
If Hamlet from himself he ta’en away,
And when he’s not himself does wrong Laertes,
Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it.
Who does it, then? His madness; if’t be so,
Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong’d;
His madness is poor Hamlet’s enemy.
Sir, in this audience,
Let my disclaiming from a purpos’d evil
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts
That I have shot mine arrow o’er the house
And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,
Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most
To my revenge: but in my terms of honour
I stand aloof; and will no reconcilement
Till by some elder masters of known honour
I have a voice and precedent of peace
To keep my name ungord. But till that time
I do receive your offer’d love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;
And will this brother’s wager frankly play.—
Give us the foils; come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I’ll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star in the darkest night,
Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.
Cousin Hamlet,
You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;
Your grace hath laid the odds o’ the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it; I have seen you both;
But since he’s better’d, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length? [They prepare to play.

Osir. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table,—
If Hamlet give the first or second hit,
Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
Let all the battlemasts their ordnance fire;
The king shall drink to Hamlet’s better breath;
And in the cup an union shall be throw,
Richer than that which four successive kings
In Denmark’s crown have worn. Give me the cups;
And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoneer without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,

Now the king drinks to Hamlet.—Come, begin;—
And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord. [They play.

Laer. A hit, a very palpable hit.

King. Stay, give me drink.—Hamlet, this pearl is thine;
Here’s to thy health.— [Trumpets sound, and cannon shot off within.

Give him the cup. [awhile.—

Ham. I’ll play this bout first; set it by Come.—Another hit; what say you?

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He’s fat, and scant of breath.

Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows:
The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam!

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon me. [late.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I’ll hit him now.

King. I do not think’t.

Laer. [Aside.] And yet ’tis almost ‘gainst my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: you but dally;
I pray you, pass with your best violence:
I am afear’d you make a wanton of me.

Laer. Say you so? come on. [They play.

Osir. Nothing, neither way.

Laer. Have at you now! [Laer. wounds Ham.; then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and Ham. wounds Laer.

King. Part them; they are incens’d.

Ham. Nay, come, again. [The Queen falls.

Osir. Look to the queen there, ho!

Hor. They bleed on both sides.—How is it, my lord?

Osir. How is’t, Laertes?

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to my own springe, Osric;

I am justly kill’d with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.
Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet,—
The drink, the drink!—I am poison’d.  [Dies.
Ham. O villainy!—Ho! let the door be lock’d:
Treacher! seek it out.  [Laertes falls.
Lear. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain;
No medicine in the world can do thee good;
In thee there is not half an hour of life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated and envenom’d: the soul practice
Hath turn’d itself on me; lo, here I lie,
Never to rise again: thy mother’s poison’d:
I can no more:—the king, the king’s to blame.
Ham. The point envenom’d too!—
Then venom to thy work.  [Stabs the King.
Osr. and Lords.  Treason! treason!
King. O, yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.
Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion.—Is thy union here?
Follow my mother.  [King dies.
Lear. He is justly serv’d;
It is a poison temper’d by himself.—
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:
Mine and my father’s death come not upon thee,
Nor thine on me!  [Dies.
Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.—
I am dead, Horatio.—Wretched queen, adieu!—
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act,
Had I but time,—as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest,—O, I could tell you,—
But let it be.—Horatio, I am dead:
Thou liv’st; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.
Hor. Never believe it:
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane,— Here’s yet some liquor left.
Ham. As thou’rt a man,
Give me the cup; let go; by heaven, I’ll have’t.—
O, good Horatio, what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!
If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story.—
 [March afar off, and shot within.
Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,
To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.
Ham. O, I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o’er-crows my spirit:
I cannot live to hear the news from England;
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras: he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrences, more and less,
Which have solicited.—The rest is silence.
Hor. Now cracks a noble heart.—Goodnight, sweet prince,
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come hither?
 [March within.
Enter Fortinbras, the English Ambassadors,
and others.
Fort. Where is this sight?
Hor. What is it you would see?
If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search.
Fort. This quarry cries on havoc.—O proud death,
What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes at a shot
So bloodily hast struck?
Amb. The sight is dismal;
And our affairs from England come too late:
The ears are senseless that should give us
hearing,
To tell him his commandment is fulfil’d,
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead:
Where should we have our thanks?
Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it the ability of life to thank you:
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack wars, and you from England,
Are here arriv’d, give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view;
And let me speak to the yet unknowing world
How these things came about: so shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts;
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters;
Of deaths put on by cunning and for’rned cause;
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall’n on the inventors’ heads: all this can I Truly deliver.
Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune:
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me.
Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more:
But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild: lest more mischance
On plots and errors happen.

Port.
Let four captains
Bear Hamlet like a soldier to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,

To have prov'd most royally: and, for his passage,
The soldier's music and the rites of war
Speak loudly for him.—
Take up the bodies.—Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A dead march.

[Exeunt, bearing off the dead bodies; after which a peal of ordnance is shot off.

ACT I.

Scene I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Rodrigo and Iago.

Rod. Never tell me; I take it much unkindly
That thou, Iago, who hast had my purse
As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me:—
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me if I do not. Three great ones of the city,
In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Off-capp'd to him:—and, by the faith of man,
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place:—
But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,
Evades them, with a bombast circumstance
Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war:
And, in conclusion, nonsuits
My mediators; for, Censure, says he,
I have already chose my officer.
And what was he?
Forsworn, a great mathematician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster; unless the bookish theoric,
Wherein the toged consuls can propose
As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice,
Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul;
And such a one do I profess myself.
For, sir,
It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor I would not be Iago:
In following him I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at: I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune does the thick lips owe,
If he can carry 't thus!

Iago. Call up her father.
Rouse him:—make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the streets; incense her kins-
And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies: though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on 't
As it may lose some colour. [aloud.

Rod. Here is her father's house: I'll call Iago. Do; with like timorous accent and dire yell
As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities. [tio, ho!

Rod. What, ho, Brabantio! Signior Brabantio!
Iago. Awake! what, ho, Brabantio! thieves!

Look to your house, your daughter, and your Thieves! thieves!

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?

What is the matter there?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within?

Iago. Are your doors locked?

Bra. Why, wherefore ask you this?

Iago. Zounds, sir, you're robb'd; for shame, put on your gown; [soul;
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your
Even now, now, very now, an old black ram
Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise;
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you:

Bra. What, have you lost your wits?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Bra. Not I; what are you?

Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Bra. The worser welcome:
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors;
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say
My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,
Being full of supper and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious bravery dost thou come
To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir,—

Bra. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirit and my place have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice;

My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews neigh to you; you'll have coursers for cousins and gennets for germans.

Bra. What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know thee,
Roderigo. [seech you,

Rod. Sir, I will answer anything. But I be-If't be your pleasure and most wise consent,—
As partly I find it is,—that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night,
Transported with no worse nor better guard
But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,—
If this be known to you, and your allowance.
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs;
But if you know not this, my manners tell me
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe
That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence:
Your daughter,—if you have not given her
leave,—
I say again, hath made a gross revolt;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger [self:
Of here and everywhere. Straight satisfy your-
If she be in her chamber or your house
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho!
Scene I. Othello, The Moor of Venice.

Give me a taper!—call up all my people!—
This accident is not unlike my dream:
Belief of it oppresses me already.—

Light, I say! light!  [Exit from above.

Iago. Farewell; for I must leave you:
It seems not meet nor wholesome to my place
To be produc'd,—as if I stay I shall,—
Against the Moor: for I do know the state,—
However this may gall him with some check,—
Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd
With such loud noise to the Cyprus wars,—
Which even now stand in act,—that, for their souls,
Another of his fathom they have none
To lead their business: in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,
Lead to the Sagittary the raised search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell.

[Exit.

Enter below, Brabantio, and Servants with torches.

Br. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what's to come of my despised time
Is naught but bitterness.—Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her?—O unhappy girl!—
With the Moor, say'st thou?—Who would be a father!
[Seizes me
How didst thou know 'twas she?—O, she de-
Past thought.—What said she to you?—Get more tapers;
Raise all my kindred.—Are they married, think you?

Rod. Truly, I think they are.

Br. O heaven!—How got she out?—O treason of the blood!—

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds
By what you see them act.—Are there not charms
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abused? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir, I have indeed.

Br. Call up my brother.—O, would you had had her!—

Some one way some another.—Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I think I can discover him, if you please
To get good guard, and go along with me.

Br. Pray you, lead on. At every house
I'll call:
I may command at most.—Get weapons, ho!

And raise some special officers of night.—
On, good Roderigo:—I'll deserve your pains.

[Exeunt.

Scene II. Venice. Another Street.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants with torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contriv'd murder: I lack iniquity
Sometimes to do me service: nine or ten times
I had thought to have yerk'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated
And spoke such scurrily provoking terms
Against your honour,
That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray you, sir,
Are you fast married? Be assured of this,
That the magnifico is much beloved;
And hath, in his effect, a voice potential
As double as the duke's: he will divorce you;
Or put upon you what restraint and grievance
The law,—with all his might to enforce it on,—
Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite:
My services which I have done the signiory
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,—
Which, when I know that boasting is an honour,
I shall promulgate,—I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege; and my demerits
May speak unbonneted to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd: for know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine
For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yond?

Iago. Those are the raised father and his friends:
You were best go in.

Oth. Not I; I must be found:
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Enter Cassio and certain Officers with torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke and my lieutenant.—
The goodness of the night upon you, friends!
What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general;
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine:

It is a business of some heat: the galleys
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night at one another’s heels;
And many of the consuls, rais’d and met,
Are at the duke’s already: you have been hotly call’d for;

When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate hath sent about three several quests
To search you out.

Oth. ’Tis well I am found by you.
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you. [Exit.

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. Faith, he to-night hath board’d a land-carak:
If it prove lawful prize, he’s made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He’s married.

Cas. To who?

Re-enter Othello.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. I have with you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Iago. It is Brabantio. — General, be advis’d;
He comes to bad intent.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, and Officers with torches and weapons.

Oth. Holla! stand there!

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Bras. Down with him, thief! [They draw on both sides.

Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.—

[years Good signior, you shall more command with Than with your weapons.

Bras. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow’d my daughter?

Damn’d as thou art, thou hast enchanted her;
For I’ll refer me to all things of sense,
If she in chains of magic were not bound,
Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy,
So opposite to marriage that she shunn’d
The wealthy curl’d darlings of our nation,
Would ever have, to incur a general mock,
Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom
Of such a thing as thou,—to fear, not to delight.
Judge me the world, if ’tis not gross in sense

That thou hast practis’d on her with foul charms;

Abus’d her delicate youth with drugs or minerals

That weaken motion:—I’ll have’t disputed on;
’Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of arts inhibited and out of warrant.—
Lay hold upon him: if he do resist,
Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining and the rest:
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter.—Where will you that I go
To answer this your charge?

Bras. To prison; till fit time
Of law and course of direct session
Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey?
How may the duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present business of the state,
To bring me to him.

1 Off. ’Tis true, most worthy signior;
The duke’s in council, and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for.

Bras. How! the duke in council!
In this time of the night!—Bring him away:
Mine’s not an idle cause: the duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong as ‘twere their own;
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be.

[Exeunt.

The Duke and Senators sitting at a table;
Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news
That gives them credit.

1 Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion’d;
My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine a hundred and forty.

2 Sen. And mine two hundred:
But though they jump not on a just account,—
As in these cases, where the aim reports,
’Tis oft with difference,—yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment:
I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearless sense.

1 Off. A messenger from the galleys.
Enter a Sailor.

_Duke._ Now,—what's the business?
_Sail._ The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes;
So was I bid report here to the state
By Signior Angelo.
_Duke._ How say you by this change?
1 _Sen._ This cannot be,
By no assay of reason: 'tis a pageant
To keep us in false gage. When we consider
The importance of Cyprus to the Turk;
And let ourselves again but understand
That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks the abilities [of this,
That Rhodes is dress'd in: if we make thought
We must not think the Turk is so skilful
To leave that latest which concerns him first;
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain
To wake and wage a danger profitless.
_Duke._ Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.
1 _Off._ Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

_Mess._ The Ottomites, reverend and gracious,
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there injointed them with an after fleet.
1 _Sen._ Ay, so I thought.—How many, as you guess?
_Mess._ Of thirty sail: and now do they re-
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus.—Signior Mon-
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.
_Duke._ 'Tis certain, then, for Cyprus.—
Marcus Luccio, is not he in town?
1 _Sen._ He's now in Florence.
_Duke._ Write from us to him; post-post-haste despatch.
1 _Sen._ Here comes Brabantio and the valiant _Enter Brabantio, Othello, Iago,
Rodrigo, and Officers._

_Duke._ Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you Against the general enemy Ottoman.—
I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior;
[To Brabantio.
We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.
_Bra._ So did I yours. Good your grace, pardon me;
Blush'd at herself; and she,—in spite of nature,
Of years, of country, credit, everything,—
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on!
It is a judgment maim'd and most imperfect
That will confess perfection so could err
Against all rules of nature; and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again,
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood,
Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof;
Without more wider and more overt test
Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

I. Sen. But, Othello, speak:
Did you by indirect and forced courses
Sibyls and poison this young maid's affections?
Or came it by request, and such fair question
As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary,
And let her speak of me before her father
If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.—

[Exeunt IAGO and Attendants.

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave cars I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From year to year,—the battles, sieges, fortunes,
That I have pass'd.
I ran it through, even from my boyish days
To the very moment that he bade me tell it:
Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field;
Of hairbreadth escapes i' the imminent deadly breach;
Of being taken by the insolent foe,
And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence,
And portance in my travel's history:
Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads
Touch heaven,
It was my hint to speak,—such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads

Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to hear
Would Desdemona seriously incline:
But still the house affairs would draw her thence;
Which ever as she could with haste despatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse: which I observing,
Took once a pliant hour; and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentionally: I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
She swore,—in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange;
'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it; yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me;
And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I spake:
She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd;
And I lov'd her that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd—:
Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.—

Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best.
Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak:
If she confess that she was half the wooer,
Destruction on my head if my bad blame
Light on the man!—Come hither, gentle mistress:
Do you perceive in all this noble company
Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty:
To you I am bound for life and education;
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of duty,—
I am hitherto your daughter: but here's my husband;
And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor, my lord.

Bra. God be with you!—I have done.
Please it your grace, on to the state affairs: I had rather to adopt a child than get it.— Come hither, Moor: I here do give thee that with all my heart, Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart I would keep from thee.—For your sake, jewel, I am glad at soul I have no other child; For thy escape would teach me tyranny, To hang clogs on them.—I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself; and lay a sentence, Which, as a grise or step, may help these lovers Into your favour.

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended. To mourn a mischief that is past and gone Is the next way to draw new mischief on. What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes, Patience her injury a mockery makes. The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief; He robs himself that spends a bootless grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile; We lose it not so long as we can smile; He bears the sentence well that nothing bears But the free comfort which from thence he hears; But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow. These sentences, to sugar or to gall, Being strong on both sides, are equivocal: But words are words; I never yet did hear That the bruised heart was pierced through the ear.—

I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state.

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus.—Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must therefore be content to stubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and bolisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators, Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agnize A natural and prompt alacrity I find in hardiness; and do undertake These present wars against the Ottomites. Most humbly, therefore, bending to your state, I crave fit disposition for my wife; Due reference of place and exhibition; With such accommodation and sort As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please, Be't at her father's.

Oth. I'll not have it so.

Oth. Nor I; I would not there reside, To put my father in impatient thoughts, By being in his eye. Most gracious duke, To my unfolding lend a gracious ear; And let me find a charter in your voice To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him,

My downright violence and scorn of fortunes May trumpet to the world: my heart's subdued Even to the very quality of my lord:

I saw Othello's visage in his mind;

And to his honours and his valiant parts Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.

So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,

A moth of peace, and he go to the war,

The rites for which I love him are bereft me, And I a heavy interim shall support

By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Let her have your voices.

Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not To please the palate of my appetite; Nor to comply with heat,—the young affects In me defunct,—and proper satisfaction; But to be free and bounteous to her mind: And heaven defend your good souls, that you think

I will your serious and great business scant

For she is with me: no, when light-wing'd toys

Of feather'd Cupid see with wanton dullness

My speculative and offi'd instruments,

That my disports corrupt and taint my business,

Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,

And all indign and base adversities

Make head against my estimation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine, Either for her stay or going: the affair cries haste,

And speed must answer it.

1 Sen. You must away to-night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i' the morning here we'll meet again. —

Othello, leave some officer behind,

And he shall our commission bring to you;

With such things else of quality and respect

As doth import you.

Oth. So please your grace, my ancient,—

A man he is of honesty and trust,—

To his conveyance I assign my wife,

With what else needful your good grace shall think

To be sent after me.
Duke. Let it be so.—
Good-night to every one. —And, noble signior,
[To BRABANTIO.
If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.
1 Sen. Adieu, brave Moor; use Desdemona well.
[to see:
Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast ease
She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.
[Execunt Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.
Oth. My life upon her faith! —Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:
I pray thee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.—
Come, Desdemona, I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.
[Execunt Othello and Desdemona.
Rod. Iago,—
Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?
Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?
Iago. Why, go to bed and sleep.
Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.
Iago. If thou dost, I shall never love thee after. Why, thou silly gentleman!
Rod. It is silliness to live when to live is torment; and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician.
Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years; and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.
Rod. What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in my virtue to amend it.
Iago. Virtue! a fig! 'tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners; so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness or manured with industry; why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I take this, that you call love, to be a sect or scion.
Rod. It cannot be.
Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: drown thyself! drown cats and blind puppies. I have professed me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow thou the wars; defeat thy favour with an usurped beard; I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse, —nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration; —put but money in thy purse.—These Moors are changeable in their wills; —fill thy purse with money: the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body she will find the error of her choice: she must have change, she must: therefore put money in thy purse.—If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst: if sanctimony and a frail vow betwixt an erring barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy than to be drowned and go without her.
Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes if I depend on the issue?
Iago. Thou art sure of me:—go, make money:—I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor: my cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered. Traverse; go; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.
Rod. Where shall we meet i' the morning?
Iago. At my lodging.
Rod. I'll be with thee betimes. [Roderigo?
Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear,
Rod. What say you?
Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?
Rod. I am changed: I'll go sell all my land.
[Execut.
Iago. Thus do I ever make my fool my purse; For I mine own gain'd knowledgeshould profane If I would time expend with such a snipe But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor; And it is thought abroad that 'twixt my sheets He has done my office: I know not if 't be true; But I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do as if for surety. He holds me well; the better shall my purpose work on him. Cassio’s a proper man: let me see now; to get his place, and to plume up my will in double knavery.—How, how?—Let’s see:—
After some time to abuse Othello’s ear
That he is too familiar with his wife:—
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,
To be suspected; fram’d to make women false.
The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest that but seem to be so;
And will as tenderly be led by the nose
As asses are.
I have’t;—it is engender’d:—hell and night
Must bring this monstrous birth to the world’s light.

[Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Seaport Town in Cyprus. A Platform.

Enter Montano and two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?

1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought
I cannot, ’twixt the heaven and the main,
Descry a sail.

Mon. Methinks the wind hath spoke aloud at
A fuller blast ne’er shook our battlemasts:
If it hath ruffian’d so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortise? What shall we hear of 2 Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet:

For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds;
The wind-shak’d surge, with high and monstrous main,
Seems to cast water on the burning Bear,
And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole:
I never did like molestation view
On the encahed flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not ensheath’d and emas’yd, they are drown’d;
It is impossible to bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lads! our wars are done.
The desperate tempest hath so hang’d the Turks
That their designment halts: a noble ship of Venice
Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in,

A Veronessa; Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself’s at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on’t; ’tis a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio,—though he speak of comfort
Touching the Turkish loss,—yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted
With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heavens he be;
For I have serv’d him, and the man commands
Like a full soldier. Let’s to the sea-side, ho!
As well to see the vessel that’s come in
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
Even till we make the main and the aerial blue
An indistinct regard.

3 Gent. Come, let’s do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance.

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks you, the valiant of this warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor! O, let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea!

Mon. Is he well shipp’d?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber’d, and his
Of very expert and approv’d allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter a fourth Gentleman.

Cas. What noise?

4 Gent. The town is empty; on the brow of Stand ranks of people, and they cry, A sail!

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

[Gun within.]

2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy:
Our friends at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who ’tis that is arriv’d.

2 Gent. I shall.

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv’d?

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev’d a
That paragons description and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential vesture of creation
Does tire the ingener.—

Re-enter second Gentleman.

How now! who has put in?

2 Gent. ’Tis one lago, ancient to the general.
Cas. Has had most favourable and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling
The gutter’d rocks, and congregated sands,—
Traitors enstep’d to clog the guiltless keel,—
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely by The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain’s captain,
I left in the conduct of the bold Iago;
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts
A se’nnight’s speed.—Great Jove, Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love’s quick pants in Desdemona’s arms,
Give renew’d fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all comfort!—O, behold,

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, Iago, Roderigo, and Attendants.

The riches of the ship is come on shore!
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.—
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.
What tidings can you tell me of my lord?
Cas. He is not yet arriv’d: nor know I aught
But that he’s well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear—How lost you company?
Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies
Parted our fellowship:—but, hark! a sail.

[Within.] A sail, a sail! [Guns within.
2 Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:
This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news.—
[Exit Gentlemen.

Good ancient, you are welcome:—welcome,
mistress:—
[To Emilia.
Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners; ’tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips
As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You’d have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much;
I find it still when I have list to sleep:
Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors,
[ [kitchens,
Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your Saints in your injuries, devils being offended, Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. O, lie upon thee, slanderer!

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:
You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to’t;
For I am nothing if not critical. [harbour?

Des. Come on, assay—There’s one gone to the Iago. Ay, madam,

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.—
Come, how wouldst thou praise me? [tion

Iago. I am about it; but, indeed, my inven-Comes from my heart as birdlime does from frize,— [labours,
It plucks out brains and all: but my muse
And thus she is deliver’d.
If she be fair and wise,—fairness and wit,
The one’s for use, the other useth it. [witty?

Des. Well prais’d! How if she be black and Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,

She’ll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;

For even her folly help’d her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh ’t the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that’s foul and foolish?

Iago. There’s none so foul, and foolish there-unto,

But does foul’ pranks which fair and wise ones

Des. O heavy ignorance!—thou praisest the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed,—one that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;

I had tongue at will, and yet was never loud;
Never lack’d gold, and yet went never gay;
Fled from her wish, and yet said, Now I may;
She that, being anger’d, her revenge being nigh,
Bade her wrong stay and her displeasure fly;
She that in wisdom never was so frail
To change the cod’s head for the salmon’s tail;

She that could think, and ne’er disclose her
mind;
See suitors following, and not look behind; She was a wight, if ever such wight were,—

Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools and chronicle small

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!—

Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband.—How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam: you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar.

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will giv thee in thine own courtship. You say true; 'tis so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenant, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good; well kissed! an excellent courtesy! 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would they were clyster-pipes for your sake! [Trumpet within.]—The Moor! I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter Othello and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello!

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content

To see you here before me. O my soul's joy! If after every tempest come such calms, May the winds blow till they have waken'd death!

And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas Olympus-high, and duck again as low As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die, 'Twere now to be most happy; for, I fear, My soul hath her content so absolute That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid
But that our loves and comforts should increase
Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!—
I cannot speak enough of this content;
It stops me here; it is too much of joy:
And this, and this, the greatest discords be

[Kissing her.

That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. [Aside.] O, you are well tun'd now!

But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,
As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle.—

News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How does my old acquaintance of this isle?

Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus;

I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,

I prattle out of fashion, and I dote

In mine own comforts.—I pray thee, good Iago,

Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers:

Bring thou the master to the citadel;

He is a good one, and his worthiness [mona,

Do challenges much respect.—Come, Desde-

Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt Oth., Des., and Attend.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come hither. If thou best valiant,—as, they say, base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard: first, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies: and will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,—again to inflame it, and to satisfy a fresh appetite,—loveliness in favour; sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in: now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted,—as it is a most pregnant and unfurled position,—who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? a knave very valuble; no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none: a slippery and subtle knave; a finder of occasions; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: a devilish knave! besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after: a pestilent complete knave; and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most blessed condition.
Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor: blessed paddling! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips that their breaths embraced together.
Villanous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion: pish!—But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice.
Watch you to-night: for the command, I'll lay't upon you: Cassio knows you not:—I'll not be far from you: do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline, or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in choler, and haply with his truncheon may strike at you: provoke him that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displanting of Cassio.
So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessaries ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu. [Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it;
That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit:
The Moor,—howbeit that I endure him not,—
Is of a constant, loving, noble nature;
And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too;
Not out of absolute lust,—though, peradventure,
I stand accountable for as great a sin,—
But partly led to diet my revenge,
For that I do suspect the lusty Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat: the thought whereof Doth, like a poisonous mineral, gnaw my inwards;
And nothing can or shall content my soul
Till I am even'd with him, wise for wise;
Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong
That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to

If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip;
Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb,—
For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too;
Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me
For making him egregiously an ass,
And practising upon his peace and quiet
Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd:
Knavery's plain face is never seen till us'd.
[Exit.

Scene II.—A Street.

Enter a Herald with a proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him: for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptial:— so much was his pleasure should be proclaimed.
All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting from this present hour of five till the bell have told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus and our noble general Othello!
[Exit.

Scene III.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night:
Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop,
Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do;
But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye
Will I look to.'

Oth. Iago is most honest.
Michael, good-night: to-morrow with your earliest
Let me have speech with you.—Come, my dear
love,—
[To Desdemona.
The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;
That profit's yet to come 'tween me and you.—
Good-night.

[Exit Oth., Des., and Attend.
Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome, Iago; we must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock. Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona; who let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her; and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley to provocation. [modest.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right.

Iago. And when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoup of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago: I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking; I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O, they are our friends; but one cup: I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels: the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they? [them in.

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call

Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me. [Exit.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him, With that which he hath drunk to-night already,

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool Roderigo, [out,

Whom love hath turn'd almost the wrong side To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch:

Three lads of Cyprus,—noble swelling spirits,

That hold their honours in a wary distance,

The very elements of this warlike isle,— Have I to-night flutter'd with flowing cups, And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,

Am I to put our Cassio in some action That may offend the isle:—but here they come:

If consequence do but approve my dream,

My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter Cassio, with him MONTANO and Gentlemen, followed by Servant with wine.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rouse already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink; [Sings.

And let me the canakin clink:

A soldier's a man;

O, man's life's but a span;

Why, then, let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where, indeed, they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander, —Drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he swears not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next bottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general!

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was and a worthy peer, [Sings.

His breeches cost him but a crown;

He held them sixpence all too dear,

With that he call'd the tailor's lown.

He was a wight of high renown,

And thou art but of low degree:

'Tis pride that pulls the country down;

Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear it again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things.—Well, heaven's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It's true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general, nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs.

—Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my ancient;—this is my right hand, and this is my left hand:—I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then: you must not think, then, that I am drunk. [Exit.]

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let’s set the watch. [before;—

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone
He is a soldier fit to stand by Caesar
And give direction: and do but see his vice;
’Tis to his virtue a just equinoxx,
The one as long as the other: ’tis pity of him.
I fear the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odd time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. ’Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He’ll watch the horologe a double set
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils: is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

Iago. How, now, Roderigo! [Aside to him.
I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

[Exit Rod.

Mon. And ’tis great pity that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place as his own second
With one of an ingraft infirmity;
It were an honest action to say
So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island;
I do love Cassio well; and would do much
To cure him of this evil.—But, hark! what noise? [Cry within,—“Help! help!”

Re-enter Cassio, driving in Roderigo.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!
Mon. What’s the matter, lieutenant?
Cas. A knave teach me my duty!
I’ll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle.

Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue? [Striking Roderigo.

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant; [Staying him.

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir,
Or I’ll knock you o’er the mazard.

Mon. Come, come, you’re drunk.

Cas. Drunk! [They fight.

Iago. Away, I say! go out, and cry a mutiny! [Aside to Rod., who goes out.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen;—
Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir:—
Help, masters!—Here’s a goody watch indeed!

[Bell rings.

Who’s that which rings the bell?—Diablo, ho! The town will rise: God’s will, lieutenant, hold;
You will be sham’d for ever.

Re-enter Othello and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. Zounds, I bleed still; I am hurt to the death.

Oth. Hold, for your lives! —gentlemen,—
Iago. Hold, ho! lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,
Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold! the general speaks to you; hold, for shame!

[This? Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth
Are we turn’d Turks, and to ourselves do that Which Heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?

For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—
Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the isle
From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?—

Honest Iago, that look’st dead with grieving,
Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee.

[Even now, I do not know:—friends all but now,
In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
Divesting them for bed; and then, but now,—
As if some planet had unwittéd men,—
Swords out, and tilting one at other’s breast
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds;
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be civil;
The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure: what’s the matter,
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion for the name
Of a night-brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger:
Your officer, Iago, can inform you,— While I spare speech, which something now offends me,—
Of all that I do know: nor know I aught
By me that’s said or done amiss this night:
From the painting by A. Böckler.

Othello. Desdemona, and Othello. "She lov'd me for
And I lov'd her the
I."Othello").

Briantio, "Othello".

Strangers I had pass'd;

Pity them.

Act. i, Sc. iii., p. 1176.
Unless self-charity be sometimes a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safety guides to rule;
And passion, having my best judgment collied,
Assays to lead the way. If I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul rout began, who set it on;
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall lose me.—What! in a town of war
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety!
'Tis monstrous.—Iago, who began't?

Mon. If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office,
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near:
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general.
Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help:
And Cassio following him with determin'd word,
To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause:
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lest by his clamour,—as it so fell out,—
The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot, Outran my purpose; and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath; which till-to-night
I ne'er might say before. When I came back,
For this was brief,—I found them close together
At blow and thrust; even as again they were
When you yourself did part them.
More of this matter cannot I report;—
But men are men; the best sometimes forget:—
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,—
As men in rage strike those that wish them best,— Yet surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd
From him that fied some strange indignity
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine.—

Re-enter Desdemona, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up!—
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What is the matter?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting; come away to bed.
Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon:
Lead him off. [To Montano, who is led off.
Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.

Come, Desdemona: 'tis the soldier's life
To have their balmy slumbers walk'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.

Iago. What are you hurt, lieutenant?
Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial.—My reputation, Iago, my reputation!

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more sense in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving; you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repulse yourself such a loser. What man! there are ways to recover the general again: you are but now cast in his mood, to punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affright an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he is yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk? and speak parrot? and squabble? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?—O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O God, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, pleasance, revel, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: how come you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraler: as the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again,—he shall tell me I am a drunkard! I had as many months as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange!—Every inordinate cup is unbliss’d, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature if it be well used: exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir.—I drunk!

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at a time, man. I’ll tell you what you shall do. Our general’s wife is now the general;—I may so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces:—confess yourself freely to her; importune her help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested: this broken joint between you and her husband rent her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me: I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good-night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good-night, honest Iago. [Exit. Iago. And what’s he, then, that says I play the villain?

When this advice is free I give and honest, Probable thinking, and, indeed, the course To win the Moor again? For ’tis most easy The inclining Desdemona to subdue In any honest suit: she’s fram’d as fruitful As the free elements. And then for her To win the Moor,—were’t to renounce his baptism, All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,— His soul is so enfever’d to her love That she may make, unmake, do what she list, Even as her appetite shall play the god With his weak function. How am I, then, a villain To counsel Cassio to this parallel course, Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!

When devils will their blackest sins put on, They do suggest at first with heavenly shows, As I do now: for whiles this honest fool Flies Desdemona to repair his fortunes, And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor, I’ll pour this pestilence into his ear,— That she repeals him for her body’s lust; And by how much she strives to do him good She shall undo her credit with the Moor. So will I turn her virtue into pitch; And out of her own goodness make the net That shall enmesh them all.

Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo! Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a bound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgel’d; and I think the issue will be—I shall have so much experience for my pains: and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice. [patience! Iago. How poor are they that have not What wound did ever heal but by degrees? Thou know’st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft; And wit depends on dilatory time. Does it not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee, And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier’d Cassio; Though other things grow fair against the sun, Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe: Content thyself awhile.—By the mass, ’tis morning; Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.— Retire thee; go where thou art billeted: Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter: Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Roder.]—Two things are to be done,— My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress; I’ll set her on; Myself the while to draw the Moor apart, And bring him jump when he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife. Ay, that’s the way; Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Cyprus. Before the Castle.

Enter Cassio and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here,—I will content your pains, Something that’s brief; and bid good-morrow, general. [Music.
Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they speak i' the nose thus?

1 Mus. How, sir, how!
Clo. Are these, I pray you, wind instruments?
1 Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.
Clo. O, thereby hangs a tale.
1 Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?
Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know: But, masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your music that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.
1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not.
Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again: but, as they say, to hear music the general does not greatly care.
1 Mus. We have none such, sir.
Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: go; vanish into air; away.

[Exit Musicians.

Cas. Dost thou hear, mine honest friend?
Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.

Cas. Prythee, keep up thy quilles. There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither I shall seem to notify unto her.

Cas. Do, good my friend. [Exit Clown.

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?
Cas. Why, no; the day had broke
Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago,
To send in to your wife: my suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently;
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor
Out of the way, that your converse and business
May be more free.

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. [Exit Iago.

I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good-morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry
For your displeasure; but all will soon be well.
The general and his wife are talking of it;
And she speaks for stoutly: the Moor replies

That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus,
And great affinity, and that, in wholesome wisdom,
He loves you,
He might not but refuse you; but he protests
And needs no other suitors but his likings.
To take the saf't occasion by the front
To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,—
If you think fit, or that it may be done,—
Give me advantage of some brief discourse
With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in:
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you.

[Exit.

Scene I.—Cyprus.  A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot:
And by him do my duties to the senate:
That done, I will be walking on the works;
Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do it.

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen,—shall we see 't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship.

[Exit.

Scene III.—Cyprus.  The Garden of the Castle.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do
All my abilities in thy behalf: [my husband
Emil. Good madam, do: I warrant it grieves
As if the case were his. [doubt, Cassio,
Des. O, that's an honest fellow.—Do not
But I will have my lord and you again
As friendly as you were,

Cas. Bounteous madam,
Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He's never anything but your true servant.

Des. I know 't,—I thank you. You do love my lord:

assur'd
You have known him long; and be you well
He shall in strangeness stand no further off
Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady,
That policy may either last so long,
Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
Or breed itself so out of circumstance,
That, I being absent, and my place supplied,
My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here
I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee,
If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article: my lord shall never rest;
I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience;
His bed shall seem a school, his board a shift;
I'll intermingle everything he does
With Cassio's suit: therefore be merry, Cassio;
For thy solicitor shall rather die
Than give thy cause away.

Des. Madam, here comes
My lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay,
And hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease,
Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, do your discretion.

[Exit Cassio.

Enter Othello and Iago.

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife? [think it.

Iago. Cassio, my lord! No, sure, I cannot
That he would steal away so guilty-like,
Seeing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 'twas he.

Des. How now, my lord!
I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't you mean? [lord,

Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good my
If I have any grace or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take;
For if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning,
I have no judgment in an honest face:
I pr'ythee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled
That he hath left part of his grief with me,
To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Des. But shall't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner, then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home;
I meet the captains at the citadel.

Des. Why, then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn;—[morn:—
On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday
I pr'ythee, name the time; but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;

And yet his trespass, in our common reason,— Save that, they say, the wars must make examples
Out of the best,—is not almost a fault
To incur a private check. When shall he come?
Tell me, Othello: I wonder in my soul
What you would ask me that I should deny,
Or stand so mannering on. What! Michael Cassio,
[t ime.
That came a-wooing with you; and so many a
When I have spoke of you disparagingly,
Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do
To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much,—
[ he will;

Oth. Pr'ythee, no more; let him come when
I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a boon;
'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,
Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit
To your own person: nay, when I have a suit
Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
It shall be full of poise and difficult weight,
And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing:
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself.

Des. Shall I deny you? no: farewell, my lord.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come.—Be as your fancies teach Whate'er you be, I am obedient.

[Exit with Emilia.

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul,
But I do love thee! and when I love thee not Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady,
Know of your love? [thou ask?

Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;
No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her.

Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.

Iago. Indeed!

Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed:—discern'st thou ought in that?

Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord!

Oth. Honest! ay, honest.

Iago. My lord, for aught I know.
Iago. Good name in man and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse steals trash: 'tis something nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to
But he that filches from me my good name
Rob[s] me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts.
Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Ha!
Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-ey'd monster which doth mock
The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er
Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly loves!

Oth. O misery!
Iago. Poor and content is rich, and rich
But riches senseless is as poor as winter
To him that ever fears he shall be poor:—
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why, why is this?
Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt
Is once to be resolv'd: exchange me for a goat
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflicate and blown surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me jealous,
To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me. No, Iago;
I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,—
Away at once with love or jealousy!

As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses, and of my jealousy
Shape faults that are not,—that your wisdom
From one that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance:—
It were not for your quiet nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.
Iago. I am glad of it; for now I shall have reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me:—I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;
Weird your eye thus, not jealous nor secure:
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abus'd; look to't:
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience
Is not to leave undone, but keep unknown.
Oth. Dost thou say so? [You;
Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying
And when she seem'd to shake and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.
Oth. And so she did.
Iago. Why, go to, then;
She that, so young, could give out such a seeming,
To seal her father's eyes up close as oak.—
He thought 'twas witchcraft,—But I am much to blame;
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon
For too much loving you.
Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.
Iago. I see this hath a little dash'd your spirits.
Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.
Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.
I hope you will consider what is spoke
Comes from my love; but I do see you're mov'd:—
I am to pray you not to strain my speech
To grosser issues nor to larger reach
Than to suspicion.
Oth. I will not.
Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success
Which my thoughts aim'd not. Cassio's my worthy friend:—
My lord, I see you're mov'd.
Oth. No, not much mov'd:
I do not think but Desdemona's honest.
Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!
Oth. And yet, how nature erring from it:
Iago. Ay, there's the point:—as, to be bold with you,—
Not to affect many proposed matches
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree,
Wherefore we see in all things nature tends,— Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural:—
But pardon me: I do not in position
Distinctly speak of her; though I may fear
Her will, recoiling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And happily repent.
Oth. Farewell, farewell:
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
Set on thy wife to observe: leave me, Iago.
Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going.
Oth. Why did I marry?—This honest creature
Doubtless unfolds
Sees and knows more, much more, than he Iago. [Returning.] My lord, I would I might entreat your honour
To scan this thing no further; leave it to time:
Although 'tis fit that Cassio have his place,—
For, sure, he fills it up with great ability,—
Yet, if you please to hold him off awhile,
You shall by that perceive him and his means:
Note if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement importunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the meantime
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,—
As worthy cause I have to fear I am,—
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.
Oth. Fear not my government.
Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.
Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,
Of human dealings. If I do prove her haggard,
Though that her jesses were my dear heart-strings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind
To prey at fortune. Happily, for I am black,
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have; or, for I am declin'd into the vale of years,—yet that's not much,— She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' uses. Yet 'tis the plague of great ones;
Prerogativ'd are they less than the base;
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death:
Even then this forked plague is fated to us
When we do quicken. Desdemona comes:
If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself!—
I'll not believe 't.

Re-enter Desdemona and Emilia.

Des. How now, my dear Othello?
Your dinner, and the generous islanders
By you invited, do attend your presence.
Oth. I am to blame.
Des. Why do you speak so faintly?
Are you not well?
Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.
Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away again:
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.
Oth. Your napkin is too little;
[He puts the handkerchief from him,
and she drops it.]
Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.
Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.
[Exeunt Oth. and Des.
Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin:
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it; but she so loves the token,—
For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it,—
That she reserves it evermore about her
To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out,
And give't Iago:
What he'll do with it heaven knows, not I;
I nothing but to please his fantasy.

Re-enter Iago.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?
Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for
you.
Iago. A thing for me!—it is a common thing.
Emil. Ha!
Iago. To have a foolish wife. [now
Emil. O, is that all? What will you give me
For that same handkerchief?
Iago. What handkerchief?
Emil. What handkerchief!
Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.
Iago. Hast stol'n it from her?
Emil. No, faith: she let it drop by negligence,
And, to the advantage, I, being here, took't up.
Look, here it is.
Iago. A good wench; give it me.
Emil. What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest
To have me filch it?
Iago. Why, what's that to you?
[Snatching it.
Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,
Give't me again: poor lady, she'll run mad
When she shall lack it.
Iago. Be not acquainted on't; I have use for Go, leave me. [Exit Emilia.
I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it. Trifles light as air

Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ: this may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison:
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste,
But, with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say so:—
[dragons.
Look, where he comes! Not poppy, nor man
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Re-enter Othello.

Oth. Ha! 'a! false to me?
Iago. Why, now, general! no more of that.
[the rack:—
Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on
I swear 'tis better to be much abus'd
Than but to know't a little.
Iago. How now, my lord!
Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust?
I saw it not, thought it not, it harm'd not me:
I slept the next night well, was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n,
Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.
Iago. I am sorry to hear this.
Oth. I had been happy if the general camp,
Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known. O, now, for ever
Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
Farewell the plumed troop and the big wars
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed and the shrill trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And, O you mortal engines, whose rude thrares
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!
Iago. Is't possible, my lord?—
Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore,— [Taking him by the throat.
Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof;
Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
Thou hast been better have been born a dog
Than answer my wak'd wrath!
Iago. Is't come to this?
Oth. Make me to see't; or, at the least, so prove it
That the probation bear no hinge nor loop
To hang a doubt on; or woe upon thy life!
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. If thou dost slander her and torture me,
Never pray more; abandon all remorse;
On horror's head horrors accumulate;
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth
amaz'd;
For nothing canst thou to damnation add
Greater than that.

Iago. O grace! O heaven forgive me!
Are you a man? have you a soul or sense?—
God b' wi' you; take mine office. — O wretched
fool,
That liv' st to make thine honesty a vice!—
O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O
world,
To be direct and honest is not safe.—
I thank you for this profit: and from hence
I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay, stay: — thou shouldst be honest.

Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world,
I think my wife be honest, and think she is not;
I think that thou art just, and think thou art not: [fresh
I'll have some proof: her name, that was as
As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black
As mine own face. — If there be cords or knives,
Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure t. — Would I were satisfied!
Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion:
I do repent me that I put it to you.
You would be satisfied?

Oth. Would! nay, I will.

Iago. And may; but how? how satisfied,
my lord?
Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on,— Behold her tupp'd?

Oth. Death and damnation! O!

Iago. It was a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring them to that prospect: damn them, then,
If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster
More than their own! What then? how then?
What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?
It is impossible you should see this,
Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say,
If imputation and strong circumstances,—
Which lead directly to the door of truth,—
Will give you satisfaction, you may have' t.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office:
But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,—
I'll go on. — I lay with Cassio lately;
And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.
There are a kind of men so loose of soul
That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs:
One of this kind is Cassio:
In sleep I heard him say, Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves;
And then, sir, would be gripe and wring my
hand,
Cry, O sweet creature! and then kiss me hard.
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,
That grew upon my lips: then laid his leg
Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then Cried, cursed fate that gave thee to the Moor! —
Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion
'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream:

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs
That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing
done;

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this,—
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief
Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift. —

Iago. I know not that: but such a handkerchief
I am sure it was your wife's,—did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that,—

Iago. If it be that, or any that was hers,
It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives,—
One is too poor, too weak for my revenge!
Now do I see 'tis true. — Look here, Iago;
All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven:
'Tis gone.—
Arise, black vengeance, from the hollow hell!
Yield up, O love, thy crown and hearted throne
To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught,
For 'tis of aspics' tongues!

Iago. Yet be content.

Oth. O, blood, Iago, blood!

Iago. Patience, I say; your mind perhaps may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontic and the Hellespont;
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace.
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
Till that a capable and wide revenge [heaven
Swallow them up. — Now, by yond marble
In the due reverence of a sacred vow [Kneels.
I here engage my words.
Iago. Do not rise yet.—[Kneels. Witness, you ever-burning lights above, You elements that clip us round about,— Witness that here Iago doth give up The execution of his wit, hands, heart, To wrong’d Othello’s service! Let him command, And to obey shall be in me remorse, What bloody business ever.

Oth. I greet thy love, Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous, And will upon the instant put thee to’t: Within these three days let me hear thee say That Cassio’s not alive. [request:
Iago. My friend is dead; ’tis done at your But let her live.
Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her! Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw To furnish me with some swift means of death For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.
Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — CYPRUS. Before the Castle.

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?
Clown. I dare not say he lies anywhere.
Des. Why, man?
Clown. He’s a soldier; and for one to say a soldier lies is stabbing.
Des. Go to: where lodges he?
Clown. To tell you where he lodges is to tell you where I lie.
Des. Can anything be made of this?
Clown. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here or he lies there were to lie in mine own throat.
Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?
Clown. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.
Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him I have moved my lord on his behalf, and hope all will be well.
Clown. To do this is within the compass of man’s wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?
Emilia. I know not, madam. [purse
Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my Full of crusadoes: and, but my noble Moor Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness As jealous creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?
Des. Who, he? I think the sun where he was born Drew all such humours from him.
Emil. Look, where he comes.
Des. I will not leave him now till Cassio Be call’d to him.

Enter Othello.

How is’t with you, my lord?
Oth. Well, my good lady.—[Aside.] O, hardiness to dissemble!—

How do you, Desdemona?
Des. Well, my good lord.
Oth. Give me your hand: this hand is moist, my lady. [sorrow.
Des. It yet hath felt no age nor known no
Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal heart:— [quires
Hot, hot, and moist: this hand of yours re-
A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer,
Much castigation, exercise devout;
For here’s a young and sweating devil here
That commonly rebels. ’Tis a good hand,
A frank one.
Des. You may indeed say so;
For ’twas that hand that gave away my heart.
Oth. A liberal hand: the hearts of old gave hands;
But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts.
Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.
Oth. What promise, chuck?
Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you. [me;
Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum offends Lend me thy handkerchief.
Des. Here, my lord.
Oth. That which I gave you.
Des. I have it not about me.
Oth. Not?
Des. No, indeed, my lord.
Oth. That is a fault. That handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give;
She was a charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it,[father
'Twould make her amiable, and subdue my Entirely to her love; but if she lost it, Or made a gift of it, my father’s eye Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies: she, dying, gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wive, To give it her. I did so: and take heed on’t;
Make it a darling like your precious eye;
To lose 't or give 't away were such perdition
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is 't possible?

Oth. 'Tis true: there's magic in the web of it:
A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to course two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work; [silk;
The worms were hallow'd that did breed the
And it was dy'd in mummy which the skillful Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is 't true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to 't well.

Des. Then would to God that I had never seen 't!

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash? [the way?

Oth. Is 't lost? is 't gone? speak, is it out of Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; but what if it were?

Oth. How!

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch 't, let me see 't.

Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now.

This is a trick to put me from my suit:

Pray you, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief: my mind misgives.

Des. Come, come;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. A man that all his time
Hath founded his good fortunes on your love,
Shar'd dangers with you,—

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. In sooth, you are to blame.

Oth. Away! [Exit.

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure there's some wonder in this handkerchief:
I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man:
They are all but stomachs, and we all but food:
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full,
They belch us.—Look you,—Cassio and my husband.

Enter Cassio and Iago.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do 't:

And, lo, the happiness! go and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio! what's the news with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech

That by your virtuous means I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love,
Whom I, with all the office of my heart,
Entirely honour: I would not be delay'd.
If my offence be of such mortal kind
That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again,
But to know so must be my benefit;
So shall I clothe me in a fore'd content,
And shut myself up in some other course,
To fortune's arms.

Des. Alas, thrice-gentle Cassio!
My advocation is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in favour as in humour alter'd.
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best,
And stood within the blank of his displeasure
For my free speech! You must awhile be patient:
What I can do I will; and more I will
Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now,
And certainly in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,
When it hath blown his ranks into the air,
And, like the devil, from his very arm
Puff'd his own brother;—and can he be angry?
Something of moment, then: I will go meet
him:

There's matter in't indeed if he be angry.

Des. I pr'ythee, do so. [Exit Iago.] Something, sure, of state,—

Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice
Made démonstrable here in Cyprus to him,—
Hath puddled his clear spirit, and in such cases
Men's natures wrangle with inferior things, Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even
so;

For let our finger ache, and it endures
Our other healthful members even to that sense
Of pain: nay, we must think men are not gods,
Nor of them look for such observancy
As fits the bridal.—Beshrew me much, Emilia,
I was,—unhandsome warrior as I am,—
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;
But now I find I had suborn'd the witness,
And he's indicted falsely.

[you think,

Emil. Pray heaven it be state matters, as
And no conception nor no jealous toy
Concerning you.

Des. Alas the day, I never gave him cause!

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd
so;
They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster
Begot upon itself, born on itself. [mind!]

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's

Emil. Lady, amen. [about:

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio, walk here.

If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home?

How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?

I' faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house

Bian. And I was going to your lodging,

Cassio.

What, keep a week away? seven days and Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent

hours,

More tedious than the dial eight score times?

O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca:

I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd;

But I shall in a more continue time

Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, [Giving her Desdemona's handkerchief.

Take me this work out.

Bian. O Cassio, whence came this?

This is some token from a newer friend:

To the felt absence now I feel a cause:

Is't come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Go to, woman!

Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,

From whence you have them. You are jealous

now

That this is from some mistress, some remembrance:

No, in good troth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it?

Cas. I know not neither: I found it in my chamber.

I like the work well: ere it be demanded,—

As like enough it will,—I'd have it copied:

Take it, and do't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general;

And think it no addition, nor my wish,

To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me

I pray you, bring me on the way a little;

And say if I shall see you soon at night.
Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say lie on her when they belie her.—Lie with her! that’s fulsome.—Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief!—To confess, and be hanged for his labour;—first, to be hanged, and then to confess.—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction. It is not words that shake me thus:—pish!—noses, ears, and lips. —Is’t possible?—Confess,—handkerchief!—O devil!—

Iago. Work on, [caught; My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are And many worthy and chaste dames even thus, All guiltless, meet reproach.—What, ho! my lord! My lord, I say! Othello!

Enter Cassio.

How now, Cassio!

Cas. What’s the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy: This is his second fit: he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear; The lethargy must have his quiet course: If not, he foams at mouth, and by and by Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs: Do you withdraw yourself a little while, He will recover straight: when he is gone, I would on great occasion speak with you.

[Exit Cassio.]

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven. Would you would bear your fortune like a man!

Oth. A horrid man’s a monster and a beast.

Iago. There’s many a beast, then, in a populous city, And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man; Think every bearded fellow that’s but yok’d May draw with you: there’s millions now alive That nightly lie in those unproper beds Which they dare swear peculiar: your case is better.

O, ’tis the spite of hell, the fiend’s arch-mock, To lip a wanton in a secure couch, And to suppose her chaste! No, let me know; And knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O, thou art wise; ’tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart; Confine yourself but in a patient list. [grief— Whilst you were here o’erwhelmed with your A passion most unsuiting such a man,— Cassio came hither: I shifted him away, And laid good ’scuse upon your ecstasy; Bade him anon return, and here speak with me; The which he promis’d. Do but encave your- self, [scorns, And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable That dwell in every region of his face; For I will make him tell the tale anew,— Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when He hath, and is again to cope your wife: I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience; Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen, And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago? I will be found most cunning in my patience; But,—dost thou hear?—most bloody.

Iago. That’s not amiss; But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw? [Othello withdraws.

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca, A housewife that, by selling her desires, Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature That dotes on Cassio,—as ’tis the strumpet’s plague To beguil’d many and be beguil’d by one:— He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain From the excess of laughter:—here he comes:— As he shall smile Othello shall go mad; And his unbookish jealousy must construe Poor Cassio’s smiles, gestures, and light be-haviour Quite in the wrong.

Re-enter Cassio.

How do you now, lieutenant?

Cas. The worse that you give me the addition Whose want even kills me. [on’t.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure Now, if this suit lay in Bianca’s power, [Speaking lower.

How quickly should you speed!

Cas. Alas, poor caitiff!

Oth. [Aside.] Look, how he laughs already!

Iago. I never knew woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, i’ faith, she loves me.

Oth. [Aside.] Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. [Aside.] Now he importunes him To tell it o’er:—go to; well said, well said.

Iago. She gives it out that you shall marry her:

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!
Enter Bianca.

What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work?—A likely piece of work that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work? There,—give it your hobby-horse: wheresoever you had it, I'll take out no work on't. [how now!]

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now!

Oth. [Aside.] By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may: an you will not, come when you are next prepared for. [Exit.

Iago. After her, after her. [else.

Cas. Faith, I must; she'll rail in the street

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you; for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Prythhee, come; will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more. [Exit Cassio.

Oth. [Coming forward.] How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his

Oth. O Iago!

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prises the foolish woman your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a-killing.

--A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live: no, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand.—O, the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is:—so delicate with her needle! an admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear!—Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!—

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand thousand times:—and then of so gentle a condition!

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain:—but yet the pity of it, Iago! O Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chop her into messes.—Cuckold me!

Iago. O, 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer!

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night. I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again:—this night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison; strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases: very good.

Iago. And for Cassio,—let me be his undertaker: you shall hear more by midnight.

Oth. Excellent good. [A trumpet within.] What trumpet is that same?

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico

Come from the duke; and, see, your wife is with him.
Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Lod. Save you, worthy general!
Oth. With all my heart, sir.
Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you. [Gives him a packet.
Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.
{Opens the packet and reads.
Des. And what's the news, good cousin LODOVICO?
Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior;
Welcome to Cyprus. [Cassio?
Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant
Iago. Lives, sir. [my lord
Des. Cousin, there's fall'n between him and
An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.
Oth. Are you sure of that?
Des. My lord? [will,
Oth. [Reads.] This fail you not to do as you
Lod. He did not call: he's busy in the paper.
Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?
Des. A most unhappy one: I would much
To atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio.
Oth. Fire and brimstone!
Des. My lord?
Oth. Are you wise?
Des. What, is he angry?
Lod. May be the letter moved him;
For, as I think, they do command him home,
Deputing Cassio in his government.
Des. Trust me, I am glad on't.
Oth. Indeed!
Des. My lord?
Oth. I am glad to see you mad.
Des. Why, sweet Othello, —
Oth. Devil! [Striking her.
Des. I have not deserved this.
Lod. My lord, this would not be believed in Venice,
Though I should swear I saw 't: 'tis very much:
Make her amends; she weeps.
Oth. O devil, devil!
If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,
Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile.—
Out of my sight!
Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Going.
Lod. Truly, an obedient lady: —
I do beseech your lordship, call her back.
Oth. Mistress!
Des. My lord?
Oth. What would you with her, sir?
Lod. Who, I, my lord? [her turn:
Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make
Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,
And turn again: and she can weep, sir, weep;
And she's obedient, as you say,—obedient,—
Very obedient.—Proceed you in your tears.—
Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion! I am commanded home.—Get you away;
I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,
And will return to Venice.—Hence, avaunt! [Exit DESDEMONA.
Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, to-night,
I do entreat that we may sup together:
You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and monkeys!
{Exit.
Oth. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate
Call all-in-all sufficient?—Is this the nature
Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue
The shot of accident nor dart of chance
Could neither graze nor pierce?
Iago. He is much chang'd.
Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?
Iago. He is that he is: I may not breathe my censure.
Des. What he might be,—if what he might he is
I would to heaven he were!
Lod. What, strike his wife!
Iago. Faith, that was not so well; yet would
I knew
That stroke would prove the worst!
Lod. Is it his use?
Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?
Iago. Alas, alas!
It is not honesty in me to speak
What I have seen and known. You shall observe him;
And his own courses will denote him so
That I may save my speech: do but go after,
And mark how he continues.
Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him. [Exit.

SCENE II.—CYPRUS. A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA

Oth. You have seen nothing, then?
Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect.
Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.
Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then I heard Each syllable that breath made up between
Oth. What, did they never whisper?
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?
Emil. Never. [nor nothing?
Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask,
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. That's strange. [honest,
Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,
Remove your thought,—it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wretch hath put this in your head,
Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!
For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
There's no man happy; the purest of their wives
Is foul as slander.
Oth. Bid her come hither. — Go.

[Exit Emilia.

She says enough;—yet she's a simple bawd
That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore,
A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets:
And yet she'll kneel and pray; I have seen her do't.

Re-enter Emilia with Desdemona.

Des. My lord, what is your will?
Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.
Des. What is your pleasure?
Oth. Let me see your eyes:
Look in my face.
Des. What horrible fancy's this?
Oth. Some of your function, mistress;
[To Emilia.

Leave procreants alone, and shut the door;
Cough, or cry him, if any body come;
Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, despatch.
[Exit Emilia.

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?
I understand a fury in your words,
But not the words.
Oth. Why, what art thou?
Des. You wife, my lord; your true
And loyal wife.
Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;
Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves
[Damn'd;—
Should fear to seize thee: therefore be double-
Swear thou art honest.
Des. Heaven doth truly know it.
Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false as hell.
[am I false?
Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? I How
Oth. Ah, Desdemona! away! away! away!
Des. Alas the heavy day!—Why do you weep?
Are I the motive of these tears, my lord?
It haply you my father do suspect
An instrument of this your calling back, [him,
Lay not your blame on me: if you have lost Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven
To try me with affliction: had they rain'd
All kinds of sores and shames on my bare head;
Steepl'd me in poverty to the very lips;
Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes;
I should have found in some place of my soul
A drop of patience: but, alas, to make me
The fixed figure of the time, for scorn
To point his slow and moving finger at!—
Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:
But there, where I have garner'd up my heart;
Where either I must live, or bear no life,—
The fountain from which my current runs,
Or else dries up; to be discarded thence!
Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads—[there,
To knot and gender in—turn thy complexion
Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubin,—
Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me honest.

Oth. O, ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,
That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed,
Who art so lovely fair, and smeli'st so sweet,
That the sense aches at thee,—would thou hadst never been born!

Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most gladly book,
Made to write whereupon? What committed!
Committed!—O thou public commoner!
I should make very forges of my cheeks,
That would to cinders burn up modesty,
Did I but speak thy deeds. —What committed!
Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon
winks;
The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets,
Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,
And will not hear it. —What committed!—
Impudent stumptet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a stumptet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian:
If to preserve this vessel for my lord
From any other foul unlawful touch
Be not to be a stumptet, I am none.
Oth. What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be sav'd.
Oth. Is't possible?

Des. O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy, then:
I took you for that cunning whore of Venice
That married with Othello.—You, mistress,
That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell!
Re-enter Emilia.

You, you, ay you! We have done our course; there's money for your pains: I pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel. [Exit.

Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive?— lady? How do you, madam? how do you, my good Des. Faith, half asleep. [my lord? Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with Des. With who? Emil. Why, with my lord, madam. Des. Who is thy lord? Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady. Des. I have none; do not talk to me, Emilia; I cannot weep; nor answer have I none, But what should go by water. Pr'ythee, to-night Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remember, And call thy husband hither. Emil. Here's a change indeed! [Exit. Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet. How have I been behav'd, that he might stick The small'st opinion on my least misuse?

Re-enter Emilia with Iago.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is't with you? [young babes Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach Do it with gentle means and easy tasks: He might have chid me so; tor, in good faith, I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady? Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so behov'd her, Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago? Iago. What name, fair lady? Des. Such as she says my lord did say I was. Emil. He call'd her whore: a beggar in his drink Could not have laid such terms upon his callat. Iago. Why did he so? [such. Des. I do not know; I am sure I am none Iago. Do not weep, do not weep:—alas, the day! [matches, Emil. Hath she forsook so many noble her father, and her country, and her friends, To be call'd whore? would it not make one weep? Des. It is my wretched fortune. Iago. Beshrew him for 't! How comes this trick upon him? Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd if some eternal villain, Some busy and insinuating rogue,

Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office, Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else. [possible.

Iago. Fie, there is no such man; it is im- Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him! [his bones! Emil. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw Why should he call her whore? who keeps her company? What place? what time? what form? what likelihood? The Moor's abus'd by some most villainous knave, Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow:— O heaven, that such companions thou'dst unfold, And put in every honest hand a whip To lash the rascals naked through the world Even from the east to the west! Iago. Speak within door. Emil. O, fie upon him! some such squire he was That turn'd your wit the seamy side without, And made you to suspect me with the Moor. Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. Alas, Iago, What shall I do to win my lord again? Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven, I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:— If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love, Either in discourse of thought or actual deed; Or that mine eyes, mine ears, any sense, Delighted them in any other form; Or that I do not yet, and ever did, And ever will, — though he do shake me off To beggarly divorcement, — love him dearly, Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much; And his unkindness may defeat my life. But never taint my love. I cannot say where, — It does abhor me now I speak the word; To do the act that might the addition earn, Not the world's mass of vanity could make me. Iago. I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour: The business of the state does him offence, And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other, Iago. It is but so, I warrant. [Trumpets within. Hark, how these instruments summon to supper! The messengers of Venice stay the meat: Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well. [Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.
Enter Rodrigo.

How now, Rodrigo!

Rod. I do not find that thou dost deal justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou dost me with some device, Rodrigo: and rather, as it seems to me now, keepest from me all convenience than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it; nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Rodrigo?

Rod. Faith, I have heard too much; for your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You change me most unjustly.

Rod. With no fault but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a vore: you have told me she hath received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well; nay, I think it is soury, and begin to find myself lobbed in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation: if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and said nothing but what I protest and intend of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Rodrigo: thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared: and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Rodrigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean purpose, courage, and valour,—this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident: wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place,—knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me to do?

Iago. Ay, if you dare do yourself a profit and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him:—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence,—which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,—you may take him at your pleasure: I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exit.

Scene III.—Cyprus. Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further. [Exit.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to Lod. Madam, good-night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?—

O, —Desdemona.—

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there: look 'tis done.

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exit Oth., Lod., and Attendants.]

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent: He hath commanded me to go to bed, And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding: therefore, good Emilia, Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu:

We must not now displease him.
Emil. I would you had never seen him!
Des. So would not I: my love doth so ap prove him, [frowns,—
That even his stubbornness, his checks, his Prythee, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them. [on the bed.
Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me Des. All's one.—Good faith, how foolish are our minds!—
If I do die before thee, prythee, shroud me in one of those same sheets.
Emil. Come, come, you talk.
Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbara:
She was in love; and he she lov'd prov'd mad,
And did forsake her: she had a song of willow;
An old thing it was, but it express'd her fortune,
And she did singing it: that song to-night
Will not go from my mind; I have much to do,
But to go hang my head all at one side,
And sing it like poor Barbara.—Prythee, despatch.
Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?
Des. No, unpin me here.—
This Lodovico is a proper man.
Emil. A very handsome man.
Des. He speaks well.
Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.
Des. The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,
[Sings.
Sing all a green willow;
Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,
Sing willow, willow, willow:
The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;
Sing willow, willow, willow;
Her salt tears fell from her and soften'd the stones;—
Lay by these:—
Sing willow, willow, willow;— [Sings.
Prythee, hie thee; he'll come anon:—
Sing all a green willow must be my garland.
[Sings.
Let nobody blame him; his seen I approve,— Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is't that knocks?
Emil. It's the wind.
Des. I call'd my love false love; but what said he then? [Sings.
Sing willow, willow, willow:
If I court no woman, you'll touch with no men.—
So, get thee gone; good-night. Mine eyes do itch;
Dost that bode weeping?
Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.
Des. I have heard it said so.—O, these men,
these men!—

Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me,
Emilia,—

That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.
Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?
Emil. Why, would not you?
Des. No, by this heavenly light!
Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light;
I might not as well i' the dark. [world?
Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the Emil. The world's a huge thing; it is a great price
For a small vice.

Des. In troth, I think thou wouldst not.
Emil. In troth, I think I should; and un-do't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, or any petty exhibition; but for the whole world,—why, who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for't.
Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.
Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and having the world for your labour,
'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.
Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many to the vantage as would store the world they play'd for.
But I do think it is their husbands' faults
If wives do fall: say that they slack their duties,
And pour our measures into foreign laps;
Or else break out in peevish jealousies, [us,
Throwing restraint upon us; or say they strike
Or scent our former having in despite;
Why, we have galls; and though we have some grace,
Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know Their wives have sense like them: they see and smell,
And have their palates both for sweet and sour,
As husbands have. What is it that they do
When they change us for others? Is it sport?
I think it is: and doth affection breed it?
I think it doth: 'tis frailty that thus errs?
It is so too. And have not we affections,
Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have?
Then let them use us well: else let them know
The ills we do their ills instruct us to.

Des. Good-night, good-night: heaven me such usage send,
Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend!
[Exit.]
ACT V.

SCENE I.—Cyprus. A Street.

Enter Iago and Roderigo.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:
Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home:
Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow:
It makes us or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Roderigo. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.
Iago. Here, at thy hand: be bold, and take thy stand. [Retires to a little distance.

Roderigo. I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he hath given me satisfying reasons:—
’Tis but a man gone.—Forth, my sword; he dies. [Goesto his stand.

Iago. I have rabb’d this young quaff almost to the sense,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain: live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold and jewels that I bob’d from him
As gifts to Desdemona;
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril:
No, he must die.—But, so, I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

Roderigo. I know his gait, ’tis he.—Villain, thou diest!

[Iago rushes out, and makes a pass at Cassio.
Cassio. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,
But that my coat is better than thou know’st:
I will make proof of thine.

[Iago draws, and wounds Roderigo.

Roderigo. O, I am slain!

[Cassio behind the leg, and exit.

Cassio. I am maim’d for ever.—Help, ho! murder! murder! [Falls.

Enter Othello at a distance.

Othello. The voice of Cassio:—Iago keeps his word.

Roderigo. O, villain that I am!

Othello. It is even so.

Cassio. O, help, ho! light! a surgeon!

Othello. ’Tis he:—O brave Iago, honest and just,
That hath such noble sense of thy friend’s wrong!
Thou teachest me,—minion, your dear lies dead,
And your unblest’d fate hies.—Strumpet, I come!

Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are Thy bed, lust-stain’d, shall with lust’s blood be spotted.

[Exit.

Enter Lodovico and Gratiano at a distance.

Gratiano. ’Tis some mischance; the voice is very Casio. O, help!

Lodovico. Hark!

Roderigo. O wretched villain! [night:

Lodovico. Two or three groan:—it is a heavy
These may be counterfeits: let’s think it unsafe
To come in to the cry without more help.

Roderigo. Nobody come? then shall I bleed to death.

Lodovico. Hark!

Gratiano. Here’s one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Re-enter Iago with a light.

Iago. Who’s there? whose noise is this that cries on murder?

Lodovico. We do not know.

Iago. Did not you hear a cry?

Casio. Here, here! for heaven’s sake, help me!

Iago. What’s the matter?

Gratiano. This is Othello’s ancient, as I take it.

Lodovico. The same indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously?

Casio. Iago? O, I am spoil’d, undone by Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have Casio. I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains!—

What are you there? come in, and give some help. [To Lodovico and Gratiano.

Lodovico. O, help me here!

Casio. That’s one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!

[Lodovico and Gratiano.

Roderigo. O damn’d Iago! O inhuman dog!

Iago. Kill men? the dark!—Where be these bloody thieves?

How silent is this town!—Idol! murder! murder!—

What may you be? are you of good or evil?

Lodovico. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Lodovico. He, sir.
Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.

Gra. Cassio!

Iago. How is't, brother?
Cas. My leg is cut in two.
Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!—Light, gentlemen:—I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is't that cried?
Iago. Who is't that cried?
Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!
O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!
Iago. O notable trumpet!—Cassio, may you suspect [you?

Who they should be that have thus mangled
Cas. No.
Gra. I am sorry to find you thus: I have been to seek you.
Iago. Lend me a garter:—so. —O, for a chair,
To bear him easily hence! [Cassio!
Bian. Alas, he faints!—O Cassio, Cassio,
Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To be a party in this injury. —
Patience awhile, good Cassio. —Come, come;
Lend me a light.—Know we this face or no?
Alas, my friend and my dear countryman
Roderigo? no:—yes, sure; O heaven! Roderigo.
Gra. What, of Venice?
Iago. Even he, sir: did you know him?
Gra. Know him! ay
Iago. Signor Gratiano? I cry you gentle
pardon:
These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,
That so neglected you.
Gra. I am glad to see you.
Iago. How do you, Cassio?—O, a chair, a chair!
Gra. Roderigo!
Iago. He, he, he's he. —O, that's well said;
—the chair: —[A chair brought in.
Some good man bear him carefully from hence;
I'll fetch the general's surgeon.—For you,
mistress, [To Bianca.
Save you your labour. —He that lies slain here,
Cassio, [you?
Was my dear friend: what malice was between
Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.
Iago. [To Bian.] What, look you pale?—
O, bear him out of the air.—
[Cas. and Rod. are borne off.
Stay you, good gentlemen.—Look you pale,
mistress?—
Do you perceive the gashness of her eye?—
Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.—

Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her:
Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak
Though tongues were out of use.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. 'Las, what's the matter? what's the matter, husband?
Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark
By Roderigo, and fellows that are 'scap'd:
He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.
Emil. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio! [thee, Emilia, Iago. This is the fruit of whoring.—Pr'y—
Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night.—
What, do you shake at that?
Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake not.
Iago. O, did he so? I charge you, go with me.
Emil. Fie, fie upon thee, strumpet!
Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest
As you that thus abuse me.
Emil. As I! foh! fie upon thee!
Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor
Cassio dress'd.—
Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale.—
Emilia, run you to the citadel,
And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd.—
Will you go on afore?—[Aside.] This is the night
That either makes me or fordoes me quite.
[Exeunt.

Scene II.—Cyprus. A Bedchamber in the Castle: Desdemona in bed asleep; a light burning.

Enter Othello.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars! —
It is the cause.—Yet I'll not shed her blood;
Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster.

[Takes off his sword.]
Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.
Put out the light, and then put out the light:
If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore, [light.
Should I repent me:—but once out put thy
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd thy rose,
I cannot give it vital growth again,
It needs must wither:—I'll smell it on the tree.—
[Kissing her.
O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword!—One more, one more.—
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill
And love thee after.—One more, and that's the last:
So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep,
But they are cruel tears: this sorrow's heavenly;
It strikes where it doth love.—She wakes.
Des. Who's there? Othello?
Oth. Ay, Desdemona.
Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?
Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?
Des. Ay, my lord.
Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight. [that?]
Des. Alack, my lord, what may you mean by Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by:
I would not kill thy unprepared spirit; [soul.
No,—heaven forbid!—I would not kill thy
Des. Talk you of killing?
Oth. Ay, I do.
Des. Then heaven
Have mercy on me!
Oth. Amen, with all my heart!
Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill
Oth. Hum! [then
Des. And yet I fear you; for you are fatal
When your eyes roll so: why I should fear I know not, [fear.
Since guiltiness I know not; but yet I feel I
Oth. Think on thy sins.
Des. They are loves I bear to you.
Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest. [loving.—
Des. That death's unnatural that kills for Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip?
Some bloody passion shakes your very frame:
These are portents; but yet I hope, I hope, They do not point on me.
Oth. Peace, and be still!
Des. I will so. What's the matter?
Oth. That handkerchief which I so lov'd and gave thee
Thou gav'st to Cassio.
Des. No, by my life and soul!
Send for the man and ask him.
Oth. Sweet soul, take heed,
Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death-bed.
Des. Ay, but not yet to die.
Oth. Yes, presently:
Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath
Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception
That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.
Des. Then, Lord have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.
Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did
Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio
But with such general warranty of heaven
As I might love: I never gave him token.
Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in's hand.
O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And mak'st me call what I intend to do
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:
I saw the handkerchief.
Des. He found it, then;
I never gave it him:—send for him hither;
Let him confess a truth.
Oth. He hath confess'd.
Des. What, my lord?
Oth. That he hath us'd thee.
Des. How? unlawfully?
Oth. Ay.
Des. He will not say so.
Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd;
I honest Iago hath ta'en order for't. [dead?
Des. O, my fear interprets!—What, is he Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
Had stomach for them all.
Des. Alas, he is betray'd, and I undone!
Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?
Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not!
Oth. Down, strumpet!
Des. Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-night!
Oth. Nay, if you strive,—
Des. But half an hour!
Oth. Being done, there is no pause.
Des. But while I say one prayer!
Oth. It is too late. [Smothers her.
Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what, ho! my lord, my lord!
Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead? not yet quite dead?
I that am cruel am yet merciful;
I would not have thee linger in thy pain:—
So, so.
[lord !
Emil. [Within.] What, ho! my lord, my
Oth. Who's there?
Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord, I would speak a word with you! [dead.—
Oth. Yes:—'tis Emilia:—by and by,—She's
'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death;
The noise was high.—Ha! no more moving?
Still as the grave.—Shall she come in?—Were't good?—
[do?
I think she stirs again: no.—What's best to
If she come in she'll sure speak to my wife:
My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife.
O, insupportable! O heavy hour!
methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon, and that the affrighted globe
Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you
That I may speak with you, O, good my lord!
Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in, Emilia:—
Soft, —by and by: — let me the curtains draw, —
Where art thou?

Enter Emilia.

What's the matter with thee now?
Emil. O, my good lord, yonder's foul murders done!
Oth. What, now?
Emil. But now, my lord.
Oth. It is the very error of the moon;
She comes more nearer earth than she was wont,
And makes men mad. [Venetian]
Emil. Cassio, my lord, hath kill'd a young Call'd Roderigo.
Oth. Roderigo kill'd!
And Cassio kill'd!
Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.
Oth. Not Cassio kill'd! then murder's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh.
Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!
Emil. Alas, what cry is that?
Oth. That! what? [voice.—
Emil. Out and alas! that was my lady's Help! help, ho! help! — O lady, speak again!
Sweet Desdemona! O, sweet mistress, speak!
Des. A guiltless death I die.
Emil. O, who hath done this deed?
Des. Nobody; I myself. Farewell:
Commend me to my kind lord: O, farewell!

[Dies.
Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?
Emil. Alas, who knows?
Oth. You heard her say herself it was not I.
Emil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.
Oth. She's, like a liar, gone to burning hell:
'Twas I that kill'd her.
Emil. O, the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil!
Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.
Emil. Thou didst belie her, and thou art a devil.
Oth. She was false as water.
Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say
That she was false: O, she was heavenly true!
Oth. Cassio did tup her; ask thy husband else.
Oth. I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell,
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.
Emil. My husband!

Oth. Thy husband.
Emil. That she was false to wedlock?
Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been true,
If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.
Emil. My husband!
Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first:
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.
Emil. My husband!
Oth. What needs this iterance, woman? I say thy husband. [with love! —
Emil. O mistress, villain hath made mocks
My husband say that she was false!
Oth. He, woman;
I say thy husband: dost understand the word?
My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.
Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart:
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.
Oth. Ha!
Emil. Do thy worst:
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven
Than thou wast worthy her.
Oth. Peace, you were best.
Emil. Thou hast not half that power to do me harm
As I have to be hurt. O gull! O doll!
As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—
I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives. — Help! help, ho!
Help! — [murder! The Moor hath kill'd my mistress! murder!

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter? — How now, general!
[well,
Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have done
That man must lay their murders on your neck.
Gra. What is the matter? [man:
Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'est a
He says thou told'st him that his wife was false:
I know thou didst not, thou'rt not such a villain:
Speak, for my heart is full. [no more
Iago. I told him what I thought; and told
Than what he found himself was apt and true.
Emil. But did you ever tell him she was false?
Iago. I did.
Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;
Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie:—
She false with Cassio! — Did you say with Cassio?
Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.
Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak:
My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed,—
All. O heavens forfend!
Emil. And your reports have set the murder on.
[Indeed.
Oth. Nay, stare not, masters: it is true.
Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.
Mon. O monstrous act!
Emil. Villany, villany, villany!—
I think upon 't,—I think,—I smell 't;—O villany!—
['Grief:'—
I thought so then;—I'll kill myself for O villany, villany!
Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, get you home. [Speak:
Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to
'Tis proper I obey him, but not now.—
Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.
Oth. O! O! O! [Hanging over his wife.
Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar;
For though hast kill'd the sweetest innocent
That e'er did lift up eye.
Oth. O, she was foul!—
[Rising.
I scarce did know you, uncle: there lies your niece, Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd:
I know this act shows horrible and grim.
Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead:
Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yet, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobance.
Oth. 'Tis pitiful; but yet Iago knows
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it:
And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognition and pledge of love
Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand:
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.
Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!
Iago. Come, hold your peace.
Emil. 'Twill out; 'twill out:—I peace!—
No, I will speak as liberal as the north:
Let heaven and men and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.
Iago. Be wise, and get you home.
Emil. I will not. [Iago offers to stab his wife.
Gra. Fie!—
Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of
I found by fortune, and did give my husband;
For often, with a solemn earnestness,—
More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle,—
He begg'd of me to steal it.
Iago. Villainous whore!
Emil. She give it Cassio! no, alas, I found it,
And I did give it my husband.
Iago. Filth, thou liest!
Emil. By heaven, I do not, I do not, gentlemen.—
O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool
Do with so good a wife?
[Iago stabs Emilie, and then runs out.
Oth. Are there no stones in heaven
But what serve for the thunder?—I'rcle's villain!
[Exit.
Gra. The woman falls; sure he hath kill'd his Emil. Ay, ay:—O, by me, by my mistress' side.
Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill d.
Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,
Which I have here recover'd from the Moor:
Come, guard the door without; let him not pass,
But kill him rather. I'll after that same villain,
For 'tis a damned slave.
[Exeunt Mon. and Gra.
Oth. I am not valiant neither,
But every puny whipster gets my sword:—
But why should honour outlive honesty?
Let it go all.
Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?
Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan.
And die in music:—Willow, willow, willow.— [Sings.
Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel
Moor;
So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true;
So speaking as I think, I die,—I die. [Dies.
Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber;
It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper:—
O, here it is.—Uncle, I must come forth.
Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear:
Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.
Oth. Look in upon me, then, and speak with me,
Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter Gratiano.
Gra. What is the matter?
Oth. Behold, I have a weapon;
A better never did itself sustain
Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day
That, with this little arm and this good sword,
I have made my way through more impediments
Than twenty times your stop:—but, O vain boast!
Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now.——
Be not afraid though you do see me weapon'd;
Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.
Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear;
Man but a rush against Othello's breast,
And he retires:—where should Othello go?——
Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-star'd wench! [comp.
Pale as thy snook! when we shall meet at
This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,
And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl!
Even like thy chastity.——
O cursed, cursed slave!—Whip me, ye devils,
From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!
Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!—
O Desdemona! dead, Desdemona! dead! O!

Enter Lodovico, Montano, Cassio, carried in a chair, and Officers, with Iago prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That's he that was Othello;—here I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet,—but that's a fable.—

It that thou best a devil, I cannot kill thee.

[Wounds Iago.]

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither: I'd have thee live;

For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello, that wert once so good,
Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave,
What shall be said to thee?——

Oth. Why, anything:
An honourable murderer, if you will;
For naught I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villainy:

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.

Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil
Why he hath thus ensnarl'd my soul and body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know,
you know:

From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What, not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best. [fall'n,

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath be

Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter

Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo;
And here another: the one of them imports
The death of Cassio to be undertook

By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish and most gross!

Lod. Now here's another discontented paper,

Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain;

But that, belike, Iago in the interim

Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O the pernicious caitiff!—

How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief

That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber:

And he himself confess'd but even now

That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose

Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is besides in Roderigo's letter,—

How he upbraids Iago that he made him

Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came

That I was cast: and even but now he spake,
After long seeming dead,—Iago hurt him, Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go with us:

Your power and your command is taken off,

And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,—

If there be any cunning cruelty

That can torment him much and hold him long,

It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest

Till that the nature of your fault be known

To the Venetian state.—Come, bring away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go.

I have done the state some service, and they know't;—

No more of that.—I pray you, in your letters,

When you shall these unhappy deeds relate,

Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,

Nor set down aught in malice: then must you speak

Of one that lov'd not wisely, but too well;

Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought,

Perplex'd in the extreme; of one whose hand,

Like the base Judean, threw a pearl away

Richer than all his tribe; of one whose subtler eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,

Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum. Set you down this;
And say, besides,—that in Allepo once,
Where a malignant and a turban’d Turk
Beat a Venetian and traduc’d the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him—thus.                      [Stabs himself.

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that’s spoke is marr’d.

Oth. I kiss’d thee ere I kill’d thee:—no way but this, [Falling upon DESDEMONA.
Killing myself, to die upon a kiss.      [Dies.

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon:
For he was great of heart.

I.ot. [To Iago.] O Spartan dog,
More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea!
Look on the tragic loading of this bed;
This is thy work:—the object poisons sight;
Let it be hid. — Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you.—To you, lord
governor,
Remains the censure of this hellish villain;
The time, the place, the torture,—O, enforce
it!
Myself will straight aboard; and to the state
This heavy act with heavy heart relate.

[Exeunt.}
VENUS AND ADONIS.

'Vilia miretur vulgus, mihi flavus Apollo
Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.'—Ovid.

TO THE
RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHEWSLY,
EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TITCHFIELD.

RIGHT HONOURABLE,
I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after earn so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish, and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your Honour's in all duty,
William Shakespeare.

Even as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-cheek'd Adonis bade him to the chase;
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to scorn;
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-fac'd suitor 'gins to woo him.

'Thrice fairer than myself,' thus she began,
'The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are;
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

'Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed
A thousand honey-secrets shalt thou know:
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses,
And being set I'll smother thee with kisses;

'And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd satiety,
But rather famish them amid their plenty,
Making them red and pale with fresh variety,
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.'

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And, trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good:
Being so enraged, desire doth lend her force,
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blush'd and pouted in a full disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimbly she fastens; (O how quick is love!)
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove:
Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust.
And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along, as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips:
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown,
And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips;
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
'If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.'
He burns with bashful shame; she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;
Then with her windy sighs, and golden hairs,
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks;
He saith she is immodest, blames her 'miss;
What follows more she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff'd, or prey be gone:
Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.
For 'tis to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and breatheth in her face;
She feedeth on the steam, as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling showers.
Look how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fastened in her arms Adonis lies;
Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes;
Rain added to a river that is rank,
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he low'rs and frets,
'Twixt crimson shame, and anger ashy pale;
Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks
All wet;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin,
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
Who, being look'd on, ducks as quickly in;
So offers he to give what she did crave;
But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his lips another way.

Never did passenger in summer's heat
More thirst for drink, than she for this good
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn:
'O, pity,' gan she cry, 'flint-hearted boy!
'Tis but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?

'I have been woo'd, as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes, in every jar:
Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have.

'Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His bated shield, his uncontroll'd crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, daily, smile, and jest;
Scorning his churlish drum and ensign red,
Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.
'Thus he that overruled I oversway'd,
Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain:
Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength obey'd,
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O, be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
For mastering her that fond the god of light!
'Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,
(Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red.)
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine:
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy head;
Look in mine eyeballs, there thy beauty lies:
Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?

'Art thou asham'd to kiss? then wink again,
And I will wink, so shall the day seem night:
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein'd voilets wherein we lean
Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

'The tender spring upon thy tempting lip
Shows thee unripe; yet mayst thou well be tasted;
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime Rot and consume themselves in little time.

'Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-old,
Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
O'er-worn, despised, rheumatic, and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice,
Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee;
But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are grey, and bright, and quick in turning;
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green,
Or, like a nymph, with long dishevell'd hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie!
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
From morn to night, even where I list to sport me:
Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.
Narcissus so himself himself forsook,
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use,
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear;
Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse:
Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth beauty,
Thou wast begot,—to get it is thy duty.

Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed,
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed?
By law of Nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live, when thou thyself art dead;
And so in spite of death thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive.'

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For, where they lay, the shadow had forsook them,
And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him, and by Venus' side.

And now Adonis, with a lazy sprite,
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
Sometimes her arms infold him like a band;
She would, he will not in her arms be bound;
And when from thence hestruggles to be gone,
She locks her lily fingers one in one.

‘Fondling,’ she saith, ‘since I have hemm’d thie here,
Within the circuit of this ivory pale,
I’ll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
Grave on my lips; and if those hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

‘Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass, and high delightful plain,
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough,
To shelter thee from tempest and from rain;
Then be my deer, since I am such a park;
No dog shall rouse thee, tho’ a thousand bark.’

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each check appears a pretty dimple:
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well if there he came to lie,
Why there Love liv’d and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,
Open’d their mouths to swallow Venus’ liking:
Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?
Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a check that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
Her words are done, her woes the more increasing,
The time is spent, her object will away,
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing:
‘Pity!—she cries,—some favour—some remorse—’
Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse.

But lo, from forth a cope that neighbours by,
A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud,
Adonis’ trampling courser doth espy,
And forth she rushes, snorts, and neighs aloud:
The strong-neck’d steed, being tied unto a tree,
Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his woven girths he breaks asunder;

The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds,
Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven’s thunder;
The iron bit he crushes ’tween his teeth,
Controlling what he was controlled with.

His ears up-prick’d; his braided hanging mane
Upon his compass’d crest now stand on end:
His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
As from a furnace, vapours doth he send:
His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,
Shows his hot courage and his high desire.

Sometimes he trots, as if he told the steps,
With gentle majesty, and modest pride;
Anon he rears upright, curvets, and leaps,
As who should say, lo! thus my strength is tried;
And this I do to captivate the eye
Of the fair breeder that is standing by.

What recketh he his rider’s angry stir,
His flattering ‘holla,’ or his ‘Stand, I say’?
What cares he now for curb, or pricking spur?
For rich caparisons, or trapping gay?
He seeth his love, and nothing else he seeth,
Nor nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
In limning out a well-proportion’d steed,
His art with nature’s workmanship at strife,
As if the dead the living should exceed;
So did this horse excel a common one,
In shape, in courage, colour, pace, and bone.

Round-hoof’d, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,
Wide, broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril,
High crest, short ears, straight legs, and passing strong,
Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:
Look what a horse should have, he did not lack,
Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

Sometime he scuds far off, and there he staires;
Anon he starts at stirring of a feather;
To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
And whe’r he run, or fly, they knew not whether:
For thro’ his mane and tail the high wind sings,
Fanning the hairs, who wave like feather’d wings.

He looks upon his love and neighs unto her;
She answering him as if she knew his mind:
Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her,
She puts on outward strangeness, seems unkind;
Spurns at his love, and scorches the heat he feels,
Beating his kind embracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malecontent,
He vails his tail, that, like a falling plume,
Cool shadow to his melting buttlock lent;
He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his face:
His love, perceiving how he is enraged,
Grew kinder, and his fury was assuaged.

His testy master goeth about to take him;
When lo, the unback'd breeder, full of fear,
Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,
With her the horse, and left Adonis there:
As they were made unto the wood they hie them,
Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly them.

All swoln with chasing, down Adonis sits,
Banning his boisterous and unruly beast;
And now the happy season once more fits,
That love-sick love by pleading may be blest;
For lovers say the heart hath treble wrong,
When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stop'd, or river stay'd,
Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage:
So of concealed sorrow may be said;
Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
But when the heart's attorney once is nigh,
The client breaks, as desperate in his s

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O what a sight it was, wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy!
To note the fighting conflict of her hue!
How white and red each other did destroy!
But now her cheek was pale, and by and by
It flashed forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat,
And like a lowly lover down she kneels;
With one fair hand she heareth up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek teels:
His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's print
As apt as new-fallen snow takes any dint.

O what a war of looks was then between them!
Her eyes, petitioners, to his eyes suing:

| His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them;  |
| Her eyes would still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing:  |
| And all this dumb play had his acts made plain  |
| With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain.  |

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A lily prison'd in a gale of snow,
Or ivory in an alabaster band;
So white a friend engirts so white a foe:
This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling,
Show'd like two silver doves that sit a-billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
'O fairest mover on this mortal round,
Would thou were as I am, and I a man,
My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound;
For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,
Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee.'

'Give me my hand,' saith he, 'why dost thou feel it?'
'Give me my heart,' saith she, 'and thou shalt have it;
O give it me lest thy hard heart do steel it,
And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it;
Then love's deep groans I never shall regard,
Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.'

'For shame,' he cries, 'let go, and let me go;
My day's delight is past, my horse is gone,
And 't is your fault I am bereft him so;
I pray you hence, and leave me here alone:
For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
Is how to get my palfrey from the mire.'

Thus she replies: 'Thy palfrey, as he should,
Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire,
Affection is a coal that must be cool'd;
Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire:
The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none,
Therefore no marvel though thy horse be gone.

'How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
Servilely master'd with a leathern rein!
But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee,
He hold such petty bondage in disdain;
Throwing the base thong from his bending crest,
Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

'Who sees his true love in her naked bed,
Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
His other agents aim at like delight?
Who is so faint that dare not be so bold
To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

'Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy;
And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
To take advantage on presented joy; [thee.
Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach
O learn to love; the lesson is but plain,
And, once made perfect, never lost again.'

'I know not love,' quoth he, 'nor will not know it,
Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it:
'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it;
My love to love is love but to disgrace it;
For I have heard it is a life in death,
That laughs, and weeps, and all but with a breath.

'Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinished?
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?
If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth:
The cock that's back'd and burthen'd being young Loseth his pride, and never waxeth strong.

'You hurt my hand with wringing; let us part,
And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat:
Remove your siege from my unyielding heart;
To love's alarm it will not ope the gate.
Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery;
For where a heart is hard, they make no battery.'

'What! canst thou talk?' quoth she, 'Hast thou a tongue?
O would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing!
Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong;
I had my load before, now press'd with hearing:
Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh sounding,
Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore

'I had no eyes, but ears, my eyes would love
That inward beauty and invisible:
Or, were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
Each part in me that were but sensible:
Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
Yet should I be in love, by touching thee.

'Say that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch,
And nothing but the very smell were left me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much;
For from the still-bore of thy face excelling Comes breath perfum'd, that breedeth love by smelling.

'But O, what banquet wert thou to the taste,
Being nurse and feeder of the other four!
Would they not wish the least might ever last,
And bid Suspicion double-lock the door?
Lest Jealousy, that sour unwholesome guest,
Should, by his stealing in, disturb the feast.'

Once more the ruby-colour'd portal open'd,
Which to his speech did honey passage yield;
Like a red rose, that ever yet betoken'd
Wreck to the seaman, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds,
Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh:
Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth,
Or as the wolf doth grin before it barketh,
Or as the berry breaks before it staineth,
Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words began.

And at his look she flately falleth down,
For looks kill love, and love by looks reviveth:
A smile recures the wounding of a frown,
But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth!
The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it

And all-amaz'd brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
Which cunning love did wittily prevent:
Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her!
For on the grass she lies as she were slain,
Till his breath breathed life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard;
He chafes her lips, a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd;
He kisses her; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise so he will kiss her still.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she upherveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn, and all the world relieveth:
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illum'd with her eye:

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine.
Venus

“O, where am I?” quoth she, “in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench’d, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn, or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I liv’d, and life was death’s annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

‘O thou didst kill me;—kill me once again:
Thy eyes’ shrewd tutor, that hard heart of thine,
Hath taught them scornful tricks, and such disdain
That they have murder’d this poor heart of
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.

‘Long may they kiss each other, for this cure!
Or never let their crimson liv’ries wear!
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year!
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say the plague is banished by thy breath.

‘Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lip imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still to be sealing?
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy, and pay, and use good dealing;
Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips,
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

‘A thousand kisses buys my heart from me;
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told, and quickly gone?
Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?’

‘Fair queen,’ quoth he, ‘if any love you owe me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe years;
Before I know myself seek not to know me;
No fisher but the ungrown fry forbeares:
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early pluck’d is sour to taste.

‘Look, the world’s comforter, with weary gait,
His day’s hot task hath ended in the west:

The owl, night’s herald, shrieks,—’tis very late;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest;
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven’s light
Do summon us to part, and bid good night.

‘Now let me say “good night,” and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.’
‘Good night,’ quoth she; and, ere he says
Adieu,
The honey bee of parting tender’d is:
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem; face grows to face.

Till, breathless, he disjoin’d, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth:
He with her plenty press’d, she faint with death,
(Their lips together glued,) fall to the earth.

Now quick Desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth;
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Payng what ransom the insolver willeth;
Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips’ rich treasure dry.

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,
Forgetting shame’s pure blush, and honour’s wrack.

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tam’d with too much handling,
Or as the fleet-foot roe that’s tir’d with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still’d with dandling,
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth;
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass’d oft with venturing,
Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission:
Affection faints not like a pale-fac’d coward,
But then wooes best when most his choice is froward.
When he did frown, O, had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck’d.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover:
What though the rose have prickles, yet ‘tis pluck’d:
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through, and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart:
She is resolv’d no longer to restrain him;
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart,
The which, by Cupid’s bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast.

‘Sweet boy,’ she says, ‘this night I’ll waste in sorrow,
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch,
Tell me, love’s master, shall we meet to-morrow? Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?’
He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends
To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.

‘The boar!’ quoth she, whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose,
Usurps her cheeks; she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws:
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly fails, she on her back.

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginary she doth prove,
He will not manage her, although he mount her;
That worse than Tantalus is her annoy,
To clip Elysium, and to lack her joy.

Even as poor birds, deceit’d with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye, and pine the maw,
Even so she languisht in her mishaps,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw:
The warm effects which she in him finds missing,
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.

But all in vain; good queen, it will not be:
She hath assayed as much as may be prov’d;
Her pleading hath desert’d a greater fee;
She’s love, she loves, and yet she is not lov’d.
‘Fie, fie,’ he says, ‘you crush me; let me go;
You have no reason to withhold me so.’

‘Thou hadst been gone,’ quoth she, ‘sweet boy, ere this,
But that thou told’st me thou wouldst hunt the O be advis’d! thou know’st not what it is
With javelin’s point a churlish swine to gore,
Whose tusks never sheath’d he whetteth still,
Like to a mortal butcher, bent to kill.

‘On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes;
His eyes like glowworms shine when he doth fret:
His snout digs s-pulchres where’er he goes;
Being mov’d, he strikes what’er is in his way,
And whom he strikes his cruel tushes slay.

‘His brawny sides, with hairy bristles arm’d,
Are better proof than thy spear’s point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily harm’d;
Being irrel on the lion he will venture:
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearful of him, part; through whom he rushes.

‘Alas, he nought esteems that face of thine,
To which Love’s eyes pay tributary gazes;
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eye,
Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage, (wondrous dread!)
Would root these beauties as he roots the mead.

‘O, let him keep his loathsome cabin still!
Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fiends:
Come not within his danger by thy will:
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends.
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear’d thy fortune, and my joints did trem-‘Didst thou not mark my face? Was it not white?

Saw’st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint? And fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My boding heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast.

‘For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection’s sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry, “kill, kill!”’
Distempering gentle Love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

‘This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up love’s tender spring,
This carry-tale, dissonant Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear,
That if I love thee I thy death should fear:

And, more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore;
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed
Doth make them droop with grief, and hang the head.

What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at the imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

But if thou needs will hunt, be rul'd by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox, which lives by subtily,
Or at the roe, which no encounter dare:
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.

And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles,
How he outruns the wind, and with what care
He cranks and crosses, with a thousand doubles:
The many musits through which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,
And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell;
And sometime sorteth with a herd of deer;
Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear:

For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt,
Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out;
Then do they spend their mouths: Echo replies,
As if another chase were in the skies.

By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,

To hearken if his foes pursue him still;
Anon their loud alarums he doth hear;
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick that hears the passing bell.

Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way;
Each envious briar his weary legs doth scratch,
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay:
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never relieved by any.

Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar;
Unlike myself thou hast'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

Where did I leave?—'No matter where,' quoth he;
'Leave me, and then the story aptly ends:
The night is spent.'—'Why, what of that?' quoth she.
'I am,' quoth he, 'expected of my friends;
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.'
'In night,' quoth she, 'desire sees best of all.

But if thou fall, O then imagine this,
The earth in love with thee thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true men thieves: so do thy
Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn,
Lest she should steal a kiss, and die forsworn.

Now of this dark night I perceive the reason:
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine,
Till forging nature be confound'd of treason,
For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine,
[despite,
Wherein she fram'd thee in high heaven's
To shame the sun by day, and her by night.

And therefore hath she brib'd the Destinie,
To cross the curious workmanship of nature,
To mingle beauty with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure defeature;
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and much misery;

As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence, and frenzies wood,
The marrow-eating sickness, whose attain'd
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood:
Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Sweat Nature's death for framing thee so fair.
'And not the least of all these maladies,
But in one minute's sight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities,
Whereat the impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, th'aw'd and done,
As mountain-snow melts with the midday sun.

'Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity
And barren death of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

'What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity [have,]
Which by the rights of time thou needs must
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

'So in thyself thyself art made away;
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do slay
Or butcher-sire, that reaves his son of life.
Foul canker rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.'

'Nay, then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme;
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream:
For by this black-fac'd night, desire's foul
nurse,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and

'If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there;

'Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

'What have you urg'd that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embraces unto every stranger.
You do it for increase; O strange excuse!
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse.

'Call it not love, for love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating lust on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot tyrant stains, and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

'Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But lust's effect is tempest after sun;
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done.
Love surfeits not; lust like a glutton dies:
Love is all truth; lust full of forged lies.

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen;
Mine ears that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.'

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace
Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast,
And homeward through the dark laud runs
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress'd.
Look how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend;
So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

Whereat amaz'd, as one that unaware
Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood,
Or 'stonish'd as night-wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood;
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour-caves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans;
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled: [woe!]
'Ah me!' she cries, and twenty times, 'woe;
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She, marking them, begins a wailing note,
And sings extempo'ral a woeful dipty:
'I date;
How love makes young men thrall, and old men
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so.'
Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short:
If pleasantthemselves, others, they think, delight
In such like circumstance, with such like sport:
Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,
End without audience, and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night withal,
But idle sounds resembling parasites,
Like shrill-tongued tapsters answering every call,
Soothing the humour of fantastic wits?
She says, 'tis so,' they answer all, 'tis so;
And would say after her, if she said 'no.'

Lo! here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty;
Who doth the world so gloriously behold,
The cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow:
'Oh thou clear god, and patron of all light,
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
The beauteous influence that makes him bright,
There lives a son, that suck'd an earthly mother,
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.'

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love;
She hearkens for his hounds, and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay;
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a milk doe, whose swelling udders doe ache,
Hasting to feed her fawn, hid in some brake.

By this she hears the hounds are at a bay,
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
Wreath'd up in fatal folds, just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder:
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses, and her spright confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or hon'ry proud,

Because the cry remaineth in one place.
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud:
Finding their enemy to be so curt,
They all strain court'sy who shall cope him

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart,
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part:
Like soldiers, when their captain once doth
They basely fly, and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy;
Till, cheering up her senses sore-dismay'd,
She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more:
Boar:
And with that word she spied the hunted

Whose frothy mouth, bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither;
This way she runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires, to rate the boar for murther.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways;
She treads the path that she untreads again;
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain,
Full of respect, yet nought at all respecting,
In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.

Here kennell'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caitiff for his master;
And, there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceas'd his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin volleys out his voice;
Another and another answer him,
Clapping their proud tails to the ground below,

Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding as they Look, how the world's poor people are amaz'd

At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gaz'd,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies:
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath,
And, sighing it again, exclaims on Death.
VENUS AND ADONIS.

'Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful divorce of love,' (thus chides she Death,)
'Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean
To stifle beauty, and to steal his breath,
Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

'If he be dead,—O no, it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it—
O yes, it may; thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at random dost thou hit.
Thy mark is feeble age; but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim, and cleaves an infant's heart.

'Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,
And hearing him thy power had lost his power.
The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke:
They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck'st a flower:
Love's golden arrow at him should have fled,
And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him dead.

'Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping?
What may a heavy groan advantage thee?
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour.'

Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopp'd
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp'd;
But through the floodgates breaks the silver rain,
And with his strong course opens them again.

O how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!
Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow,
Sorrow, that friendly sighs sought still to dry;
But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions thron' her constant woe,
As striving who should best become her grief;
All entertain'd, each passion labours so
That every present sorrow seemeth chief,
But none is best; then join they all together,
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this, far off she hears some huntsmen hollo:
A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so well:
The dire imagination she did follow
This sound of hope doth labour to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
Being prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass;
Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass,
To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,
Who is but drunken when she seemeth drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange it seems
Not to believe, and yet too credulous!
Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes,
Despair and hope make thee ridiculous:
The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,
In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unwaves the web that she hath wrought;
Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame;
It was not she that called him all-to naught:
Now she adds honours to his hateful name:
She clepes him king of graves, and grave for kings,
Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

'No, no,' quoth she, 'sweet Death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear,
When as I met the boar, that bloody beast,
Which knows no pity, but is still severe;
Then, gentle shadow (truth I must confess),
I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease.

'Tis not my fault: the boar provok'd my tongue;
Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander;
'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
I did but act, he's author of thy slander:
Grief hath but twang tongues, and never woman yet
Could rule them both, without ten women's wit.'

Thus, hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate;
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With Death she humbly doth insinuate; [stories Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs; and
His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

'O Jove,' quoth she, 'how much a fool was I,
To be of such a weak and silly mind.
To rail his death who lives, and must not die,
Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind!
For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

'Fie, fie, fond love, thou art so full of fear
As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves,
Trifles, unwitnessed with eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking grievest.'
Even at this word she hears a merry horn,
Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.
As falcon to the lure away she flies;
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;
And in her haste unfortunately spies
The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight;
Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view,
[drawn.]
Like stars asham'd of day, themselves with.
Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again;
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
Into the deep dark cabins of her head;
Where they resign their office and their light
To the disposing of her troubled brain;
Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
And never wound the heart with looks again;
Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan.
Whereat each tributary subject quakes:
As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,
Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes,[found,]
Which with cold terror doth men's minds confon
The mutiny each part doth so surprise,
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes;
And, being open'd, threw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd
In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd:
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed, [bleed.]
But stole his blood, and seem'd with him to
This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth;
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head;
Dumbly she passions, franticly she doteth;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead.
Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow;
Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;
And then she reprehends her mangling eye
That makes more gashes where no breach should be:
His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled;
[ttroubled.]
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being
'My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two Adons dead!
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone;
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead;
Heavy heart's lead melt at mine eyes' red fire!
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

'Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou lost!
What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?'
[boast,
Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou
Of things long since, or anything ensuing?
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim;
But true-sweet beauty liv'd and died with him.

'Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear!
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear;
The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss you:
But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air
Lurk'd like two thieves to rob him of his fair;

'And therefore would he put his bonnet on
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep;
The wind would blow it off, and, being gone
Play with his locks; then would Adonis weep:
And straight, in pity of his tender years,
They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

'To see his face the lion walk'd along,[him:
Behind some hedge, because he would not fear
To recreate himself, when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame and gently hear him:
If he had spoke the wolf would leave his prey,
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

'When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills;
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries, and ripe-red cherries;
[berries.]
He fed them with his sight, they him with

'But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted boar,
Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
Witness the entertainment that he gave;
If he did see his face, why then I know
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so.

'Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis slain;
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And nuzzling in his flank the loving swine
Sheath'd, unaware, the tusk in his soft groin.

'Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first;
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his; the more am I accurst,'
With this she falleth in the place she stood,
And stains her face with his congealed blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woeful words she told:
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where, lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies:

Two glasses where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect:

'Wonder of time,' quoth she, 'this is my spite,
That you being dead the day should yet be light.

'Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy,
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend;
It shall be wait'd on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning but unsavoury end:
Ne'er settled equally, but high or low; [woe.
That all love's pleasure shall not match his

'It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud;
Bud and be blasted in a breathing while;
The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd
With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dumb, and teach the fool to speak.

'It shall be sparing, and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
The staving ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures:
It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child

'It shall suspect where is no cause of fear;
It shall not fear where it should most mistrust;
It shall be merciful, and too severe,
And most deceiving when it seems most just;
Perverse it shall be where it shows most toward,
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

'It shall be cause of war and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire;
Subject and servile to all discontents,
As dry combustious matter is to fire;
Sith in his prime death doth my love destroy,
They that love best their love shall not enjoy.'

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white,
Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head, the new-sprung flower to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath;
And says, within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is reft from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy father's guise, (Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire,) For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood.

'Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right:
Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night:
There shall not be one minute in an hour
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower.'

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
Their mistress, mounted, through the empty skies
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd,
Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen
Means to immure herself, and not be seen.
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY,

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TITCHFIELD.

The love I dedicate to your Lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours, what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater my duty would show greater: meantime, as it is, it is bound to your Lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with all happiness.

Your Lordship's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT.

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS (for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus), after he had caused his own father-in-law, Servius Tullius, to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea. During which siege, the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper, every one commended the virtues of his own wife; among whom, Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome; and intending by their secret and sudden arrival to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife (though it were late in the night) spinning amongst her maids: the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius, being inflamed with Lucrece's beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was (according to his estate) royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealthed into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily despatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and, finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and, bearing the dead body to Rome. Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king; wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

From the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lastbreathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatium bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire,
And girdle with embracing flames the waist
Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of chaste unhappily set
This bateless edge on his keen appetite;
When Collatine unwisely did not let
To praise the clear unmatched red and white
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight,
Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
Argued by beauty's red, and virtue's white:
Of either's colour was the other queen,
Proving from world's minority their right:
Yet their ambition makes them still to fight;
That sovereignity of either being so great,
That oft they interchange each other's seat.

This si'ent war of lilies and of roses
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field,
In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses:
Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd,
The coward captive vanquished doth yield
To those two armies that would let him go,
Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinksh he that her husband's shallow tongue
(The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so)
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong,
Which far exceeds his barren skill to show:
Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe,
Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise,
In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspecteth the false worshipper:
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil;
Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear:
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer.
And reverend welcome to her princely guest,
Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd:

For that he colour'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in plaits of majesty:
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy:
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store
That claw'd with much he pineth still for more.

But she, that never cop'd with stranger eyes,
Could pick no meaning from their parling looks,
Nor read the subtle-shining secrecies
Writ in the glassy margents of such books:
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no hooks:
Nor could she moralize his wanton sight.
More than his eyes were open'd to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;
And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry,
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory;
Her joy with heav'd-up hands she doth express,
And, wordless, sgreets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither
He makes excuses for his being there.
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear;
Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear,
Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
And in her vaulty prison stows the day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
Intending weariness with heavy spright;
For, after supper, long he questioned
With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night:
Now leaden slumber with life's strength doth fight;
And every one to rest themselves betake,
Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds, that wake.

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining;
Yet ever to obtain his will resolving, [staining
Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abo-Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining;
And when great treasure is the meed propos'd,
Though death be adjunct, there's no death suppos'd.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond
That what they have not, that which they possess
They scatter and unloose it from their bond,
And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor-rich gain.

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age;
And in this aim there is such thwarting strife,
That one for all, or all for one we gage;
As life for honour in fell battles' rage; [cost
Honour for wealth; and oft that wealth doth
The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in vent'ring ill we leave to be
The things we are, for that which we expect;
And this ambitious foul infirmity,
In having much, torments us with defect
Of that we have: so then we do neglect
The thing we have, and, all for want of wit,
Make something nothing, by augmenting it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
Pawning his honour to obtain his lust;
And for himself himself he must forsake;
Then where is truth if there be no self-trust?
When shall he think to find a stranger just,
When he himself himself confounds, betrays
To slanderous tongues, and wretched hateful days?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal eyes;
No comfortable star did lend his light, [cries;
No noise but owls' and wolves' death-boding
Now serves the season that they may surprise
The silly lambs; pure thoughts are dead and still,
While lust and murder wake to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his bed,
Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm;
Is madly toss'd between desire and dread;
Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm;
But honest Fear, bewitch'd with lust's soul charm,
Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brain-sick rude Desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly,
Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye;
And to the flame thus speaks advisedly:
'As from this cold flint I enforce'd this fire,
So Lucrece must I force to my desire.'

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate
What following sorrow may on this arise;
Then looking scornfully, he doth despise
His naked armour of still-slaughter'd lust,
And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust:

'Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
To darken her whose light excelleth thine!
And die, unhallow'd thoughts, before you blot
With your uncleanness that which is divine!
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:
Let fair humanity abhor the deed [weed,
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white

'O shame to knighthood and to shining arms!
O foul dishonour to my household's grave!
O impious act, including all foul harms!
A martial man to be soft fancy's slave;
True valour still a true respect should have;
Then my digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.
'Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eyesore in my golden coat;
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,
To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity, sham'd with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
To wish that I their father had not been.

'What win I if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of liciting joy:
Who buys a minute's mirth to wail a week?
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the sceptre straight be strucken down?

'If Collatinus dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent?
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame?

'O what excuse can my invention make
When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints shake?
Mine eyes forego their light, my false heart bleed?
The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed;
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But, coward-like, with trembling terror die.

'Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife;
As in revenge or quittal of such strife:
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend.
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

'Shameful it is;—ay, if the fact be known:
Hateful it is;—there is no hate in loving;
I'll beg her love;—but she is not her own;
The worst is but denial, and reproving:
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing.
Who fears a sentence or an old man's saw
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.'

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation
'Tween frozen conscience and hot-burning will,
And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
Urging the worse sense for vantage still;
Which in a moment doth confound and kill
All pure effects, and doth so far proceed,
That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he, 'She took me kindly by the hand,
And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes,
Fearing some hard news from the warlike band
Where her beloved Collatinus lies.
O how her fear did make her colour rise!
First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then white as lawn, the roses took away.

'And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd,
Fore'd it to tremble with her loyal fear;
Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd,
Until her husband's welfare she did hear;
Whereat she smiled with so sweet a cheer,
That had Narcissus seen her as she stood,
Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

'Why hunt I then for colour or excuses?
All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth;
Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
Love thrives not in the heart that shadows dreadeth:
Affection is my captain, and he leadeth;
And when his gaudy banner is display'd,
The coward fights, and will not be dismay'd.

'Then, childish fear, avaunt! debating, die!
Respect and reason wait on wrinkled age!
My heart shall never countermand mine eye;
Sad pause and deep regard beseech the sage;
My part is youth, and beats these from the stage:
Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize;
Then who fears sinking where such treasure lies?'

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with opening, listening ear,
Full of foul hope, and full of fond mistrust;
Both which, as servitors to the unjust,
So cross him with their opposite persuasion,
That now he vows a league, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
And in the same seat sits Collatinus;
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits;
That eye which him beholds, as more divine,
Unto a view so false will not incline;
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which once corrupted takes the worser part;

And therein heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatter'd by their leader's jocund show,
Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours;
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.
By reprobate desire thus madly led,
The Roman lord marches to Lucrece' bed.
The locks between her chamber and his will,
Each one by him enforc'd retires his ward;
But as they open they all rate his ill,
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard,
The threshold grates the door to have him heard;
Night-wandring weasels shriek to see him there;
They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
Through little vents and crannies of the place
The wind wars with his torch, to make him stay,
And blows the smoke of it into his face.
Extinguishing his conduct in this case;
But his hot heart, which fond desire doth scorch,
Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch:

And being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks;
He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
And gripping it, the need his finger pricks:
As who should say, this glove to wanton tricks
Is not inured; return again in haste;
Thou seest our mistress' ornaments are chaste.

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him:
He in the worst sense construes their denial:
The doors, the wind, the glove that did delay him,
He takes for accidental things of trial;
Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial,
Who with a lingering stay his course doth let,
Till every minute pays the hour his debt.

'So, so,' quoth he, 'these lets attend the time,
Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring,
To add a more rejoicing to the prime,
And give the snaped birds more cause to sing.
Pain pays the income of each precious thing;
Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates,
Shelves and sands,
The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.'

Now is he come unto the chamber door
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with no more,
Hath barred him from the blessed thing he sought.
So from himself impiety hath wrought,
That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the heaven should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
Having solicited the eternal power,

That his foul thoughts might compass his fair,
That they would stand auspicious to the hour,
Even there he starts: quoth he, 'I must de-flower;
The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact,
How can they then assist me in the act?

'Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide!
My will is back'd with resolution: tried,
Thoughts are but dreams till their effects be
The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution;
Against love's fire fear's frost hath dissolution.
The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight.'

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide:
The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch:
Thus treason works ere traitors be expi'd.
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside;
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet unstained bed.
The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head;
By their high treason is his heart misled;
Which gives the watchword to his hand full soon,
To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

Look, as the fair and fiery-pointed sun,
Rushing from on a cloud, bereaves our sight;
Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
To wink, being blinded with a greater light:
Whether it is that she reflects so bright,
That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed;
[closed.]

But blind they are, and keep themselves en-

O, had they in that darksome prison died,
Then had they seen the period of their ill!
Then Collatine again by Lucrece' side
In his clear bed might have repos'd still:
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill;
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss;
Who therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss;
Between whose hills her head entombed is:
Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies,
To be admir'd of lewd unhallow'd eyes.
Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
Show’d like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath’d their
light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play’d with her breath;
O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Showing life’s triumph in the map of death,
And death’s dim look in life’s mortality:
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no strife.
But that life liv’d in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered,
Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoured.
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred:
Who like a foul usurper went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see but mightily he noted?
What did he note but strongly he desir’d?
What he beheld on that he firmly doted,
And in his will his willful eye he tir’d.
With more than admiration he admir’d
Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o’er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o’er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified;
Slack’d, not suppress’d; for standing by her side,
His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins:

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage fighting,
Obdurate vassals, fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting,
Nor children’s tears, nor mother’s groans respecting,
Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting:
Anon his beating heart, alarum striking,
Gives the hot charge, and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
His eye commendeth the leading to his hand;

His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
[stand
Smoking with pride, march’d on to make his
On her bare breast, the heart of all her hand;
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale,
Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governess and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries:
She, much amaz’d, breaks ope her lock’d-up eyes,
Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dimm’d and control’d.

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite,
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a shaking;
What terror ’tis! but she, in worser taking,
From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrapp’d and confounded in a thousand fears,
Like to a new-kill’d bird she trembling lies;
She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears
Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes:
Such shadows are the weak brain’s forgeries:
Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,
(Kuke ram, to batter such an ivory wall!)
May feel her heart, poor citizen, distress’d,
Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,
Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal.
This moves in him more rage, and less pity,
To make the breach, and enter this sweet city.

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin
To sound a parley to his heartless foe,
Who o’er the white sheet peers her whiter chin,
The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show;
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: ‘The colour in thy face
(That even for anger makes the lily pale,
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace)
Shall plead for me, and tell my loving tale:
Under that colour am I come to scale
Thy never-conquer’d fort: the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.
Thus I foretell thee, if thou mean to chide:
Thy beauty hath ensnared thee to this night,
Where thou with patience must my will abide,
My will that marks thee for my earth's delight,
Which I to conquer sought with all my might;
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty it was newly bred.

I see what crosses my attempt will bring;
I know what thorns the growing rose defend;
I think the honey guarded with a sting:
All this, beforehand, counsel comprehends:
But will is deaf, and hears no heedful friends;
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty,
And doth on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed;
But nothing can Affection's course control,
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity;
Yet strive I to embrace mine inanity.

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which, like a falcon towering in the skies,
Concheth the fowl below with his wing's shade,
Whose crooked beak threethes if he mount he dies:
So under his insulting falchion lies Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells
With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells.

Lucretia, quoth he, 'this night I must enjoy thee:
If thou deny, then force must work my way,
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee;
That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll stay,
To kill thine honour with thy life's decay;
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place him,
Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him.

So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye;
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy:
And thou, the author of their obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rhymes,
And sung by children in succeeding times.

But if thou yield I rest thy secret friend:
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted;
A little harm, done to a great good end,
For lawful policy remains enacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted
In a pure compound; being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified.

Then, for thy husband and thy children's sake,
Tender my suit: bequeath not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot;
Worse than a slavish wipe, or birth-hour's blot:
For marks descried in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.

Here with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye
He rouseth up himself, and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the grype's sharp claws,
Pleads in a wilderness, where are no laws,
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite:

But when a black-fac'd cloud the world doth threat,
In his dim mist the aspiring mountains hiding,
From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get,
Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biding,
Hindering their present fall by this dividing;
So his unhallow'd haste her words delays,
And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally,
While in his holdfast foot the weak mouse panteth;
Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth:
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart granteth
No penetrable entrance to her plaining:
Tears harden lust, though marble wear with raining.

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fix'd
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mix'd,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.
She puts the period often from his place,
And 'midst the sentence so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.
She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,
By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire,
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, 'Reward not hospitality sttended:
With such black payment as thou hast pre-
Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim, before thy shoot be ended:
He is no woodman that doth bend his bow
To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

'My husband is thy friend, for his sake spare me;
Thyself art mighty, for thine own sake leave me:
Myself a weakling, do not then ensnare me;
Thou look'st not like deceit; do not deceive me;
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave thee.
If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans:

All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wreck-threatening heart:
To soften it with their continual motion;
For stones dissolv'd to water do convert.
O, if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears, and be compassionate!
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee;
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me:
Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely name.
Then art not what thou seem'st; and if the same,
Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a king:
For kings like gods should govern everything.

How will thy shame be seeded in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring!
If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,
What dar'st thou not when once thou art a king?
O be remember'd, no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wip'd away;
Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

This deed will make thee only lov'd for fear,
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love:
With foul offenders thou perforse must bear,
When they in thee the like offences prove:
If but for fear of this thy will remove;
For princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do

'And wilt thou be the school where Lust shall learn?
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame:
Wilt thou be glass, wherein it shall discern
Authority for sin, warrant for blame,
To privilege dishonour in thy name?
Thou back'st reproach against long-lived Laud,
And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

'Hast thou command? by him that gave it thee,
From a pure heart command thy rebel will:
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity;
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfill,
When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul Sin may say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the

'Think but how vile a spectacle it were
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear:
Their own transgressions partially they smother:
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother,
O how are they wrapp'd in with infamies,
That from their own misdeeds askance their eyes!

'To thee, to thee, my heav'd-up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash relier;
I sue for exil'd majesty's repeal;
Let him return and flattering thoughts retire:
His true respect will 'prison false desire,
And wipe the dim mist from thy doting eye,
That thou shalt see thy state, and pity mine.'

'Have done,' quoth he; 'my uncontrolled tide
Turns not, but swells the higher by this let.
Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury fret;
The petty streams that pay a daily debt
To their salt sovereign, with their fresh falls' hate,
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.'

'Thou art,' quoth she, 'a sea, a sovereign king;
And lo, there falls into thy boundless flood
Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgoverning,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
If all these petty ills shall change thy good,
Thy sea within a puddle's womb is drained,
And not the puddle in thy sea dispand.'

'So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave;
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified;
Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler grave;
Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy pride:
The lesser thing should not the greater hide;
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub’s foot,
But low shrubs wither at the cedar’s root.

"So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state"—
"No more," quoth he; "by heaven, I will not hear thee:
Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate,
Instead of love’s coy touch, shall rudely tear thee;
That done, despeitfully I mean to bear thee
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom."

This said, he sets the foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies;
Shame folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.
The wolf hath seiz’d his prey, the poor lamb cries
Till with her own white fleece her voice controll’d
Entombs her outcry in her lips’ sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears
He pens her piteous clamours in her head;
Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
O, that prone lust should stain so pure a bed!
The spots whereof could weeping purify,
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again.
This forced league doth force a further strife;
This momentary joy breeds months of pain,
This hot desire converts to cold disdain:
Pure Chastity is rifled of her store,
And Lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look, as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell or speedy flight,
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey wherein by nature they delight;
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night:
His taste delicious, in digestion souring,
Devours his will that liv’d by foul devouring.

O deeper sin than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination!
Drunken desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While lust is in his pride no exclamation
Can curb his heat, or rein his rash desire,
Till, like a jade, self-will himself doth tire.

And then with lank and lean discoulour’d cheek,
With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless pace,
Feeble desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case:
The flesh being proud, desire doth fight with grace,
For there it revels; and when that decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this faultful lord of Rome,
Who this accomplishment so hotly chas’d;
For now against himself he sounds this doom,
That through the length of times he stands disgrac’d;
Besides, his soul’s fair temple is defac’d;
To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares.
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter’d down her consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
Her immortality, and make her thrill
To living death, and pain perpetual;
Which in her prescience she controlled still,
But her foresight could not forestall their will.

Even in this thought through the dark night he stealeth,
A captive victor that hath lost in gain;
Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
The scar that will, despite of cure, remain,
Leaving his spoil perplex’d in greater pain.
She bears the load of lust he left behind,
And he the burthen of a guilty mind.

He like a thievish dog creeps sadly thence;
She like a wearied lamb lies panting there;
He scowls, and hates himself for his offence;
She, desperate, with her nails her flesh doth tear;
He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear;
She stays, exclaiming on the direful night;
He runs, and chides his vanish’d, loath’d delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite;
She there remains a hopeless castaway;
He in his speed looks for the morning light;
She prays she never may behold the day;
‘For day,’ quoth she, ‘night’s scapes doth open lay;
And my true eyes have never practis’d how
To cloak offences with a cunning brow.

‘They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves behold;
And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold;
For their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water, that doth eat in steel,
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel.'

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence, where it may find
Some purer chest, to close so pure a mind.
Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night:

'O comfort-killing night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
Blind muffled bawd! dark harbour for defame!
Grim muffled bawd! dark harbour for defame!
With close-tongued treason and the ravisher!

'O hateful, vaporous, and foggy night,
Since thou art guilty of my curseless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time!
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head.

'With rotten dams ravish the morning air;
Let their exhal'd unwholesome breaths make sick
The life of purity, the supreme fair,
Ere he arrive his weary noontide prick;
And let thy misty vapours march so thick,
That in their smoky ranks his smoother'd light,
May set at noon, and make perpetual night.

'Were Tarquin night (as he is but night's child),
The silver-shining queen he would distain;
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd,
Through night's black bosom should not peep again;
So should I have copartners in my pain:
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,
As palmer's chat makes short their pilgrimage.

'Where now I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms, and hang their heads with mine,
To mask their brows, and hide their infamy;
But I alone alone must sit and pine,
Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine,
Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.

'O night, thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous day behold that face
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak
Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace!
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are made,
May likewise be sepulchred in thy shade!

'Make me not object to the tell-tale day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:
Yea, the iliterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote my losethome trespass in my looks.

'The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name;
The orator, to deck his oratory,
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame:
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

'Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love be kept unsported:
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserv'd reproach to him allotted,
That is as clear from this attain't of mine,
As I, ere this, was pure to Collatine.

'O unseen shame! invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore! crest-wounding, private scar!
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatine's face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.
Alas, how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves but he that gives them knows!

'If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But rob'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee

'Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wrack,—
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonour to disdain him:
Besides of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue — O, unlook'd for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil.
Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud?
Or hateful cuckoos hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or teads infect fair founts with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

The aged man that cofers up his gold
Is plagued with cramps, and gouts, and painful
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits;
Having no other pleasure of his gain
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

So then he hath it, when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it:
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long,
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sours,
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring;
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers;
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing;
What virtue breeds iniquity devours:
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill-annexed Opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality.

O Opportunity! thy guilt is great:
'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason;
Thou sett'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou 'point'st the season;
'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason;
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,
Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander by him.

Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath;
Thou blow'st the fire when temperance is thaw'd;
Thou smother'st honesty, thou murther'st truth;
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal, and displaceth land:
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast;
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name;
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste:
Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

When wilt thou be the humble suppli'ant's friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?
When wilt thou sort an hour great strife to end?
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chain'd?
Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd?
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee;
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
Advice is sporting while infection breeds;
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds:
Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder's rages,
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages.

When truth and virtue have to do with thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid;
They buy thy help: but Sin ne'er gives a fee,
He gratis comes; and thou art well appay'd
As well to hear as grant what he hath said.
My Collatine would else have come to me
When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd by thee.

Guilty thou art of murder and of theft;
Guilty of perjury and subornation;
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift;
Guilty of incest, that abomination:
An accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom.

Mis-shapen Time, copesmate of ugly night,
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care,
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
Base watch of woes, sin's packhorse, virtue's snare;
Thou nursest all, and murdrest all that are.
O hear me then, injurious, shifting Time!
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose?
Cancell'd my fortunes and enchained me
To endless date of never-ending woes?
Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
To cat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the doyry of a lawful bed.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood, and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn, and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right;
To minute proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers:

'To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To seed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books, and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap, and cherish springs;
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel;

'To show the beldame daughters of her daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild,
To mock the subtle, in themselves beguil'd;
To cheer the ploughman with increaseal crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-drop.

'Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
One poor retiring minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends:
O, this dread night, wouldst thou one hour come back,
I could prevent this storm, and shun thy wrack!

'Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
Deviest extremes beyond extremity,
To make him curse this cursed crimeful night:
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright,
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

'Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances,
To make him moan, but pity not his moans:
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;
And let mild women to him lose their mildness,
Wilder to him than tigers in their wildness.

'Let him have time to bear his curled hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave,
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave;
And time to see one that by alms doth live
Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

'Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport:
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to wall the abusing of his time.

'O Time, thou tutor both to good and had,
Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill!
At his own shadow let the thief run mad!
Himself himself seek every hour to kill!
Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill:
For who so base would such an office have
As slanderous death's-man to so base a slave?

'The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate.
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honour'd, or begets him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

'The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperceiv'd fly with the filth away,
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day.
Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
But eagles gaz'd upon with every eye.

'Out, idle words, servants to shallow fools!
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools,
Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters:
To trembling clients be you mediators:
For me, I force not argument a straw,
Since that my case is past the help of law.

'In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful night;
In vain I cavil with my infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despite:
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good,
Is to let forth my foul, defiled blood.

'Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame;
For if I die my honour lives in thee,
But if I live thou liv'st in my defiance:
Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame,
And was afeard to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.'
This said, from her betumpled couch she starteth,
To find some desperate instrument of death:
But this no-slaughter-house no tool imparteth,
To make more vent for passage of her breath,
Which thronging through her lips so vanisheth
As smoke from Jelia, that in air consumes,
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

"In vain," quoth she, "I live, and seek in vain
Some happy mean to end a hapless life.
I fear'd by Tarquin's felonie to be slain,
Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife:
But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife;
So am I now:—O no, that cannot be;
Of that true type hath Tarquin rifled me.

"O! that is gone for which I sought to live,
And therefore now I need not fear to die.
To clear this spot by death, at least I give
A badge of fame to slander's livery;
A dying life to living infamy;
Poor helpless help, the treasure stolen away,
To burn the guiltless casket where it lay!

"Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know
The stained taste of violated truth;
I will not wrong thy true affection so
To flatter thee with an infringed oath;
This bastard griff shall never come to growth:
He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute
That thou art doting father of his fruit.

"Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
Nor laugh with his companions at thy state;
But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought
Basely with gold, but stolen from forth thy gate.
For me, I am the mistress of my fate,
And with my trespass never will dispense,
Till life to death acquit my forced offence.

"I will not poison thee with my attain't,
Nor fold my fault in cleanly-coin'd excuses;
My sable ground of sin I will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses;
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes like sluices,
As from a mountain-spring that feeds a dale,
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale."

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow-sad gait descended
To ugly hell; when lo, the blushing morn
Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow:
But cloudy Lucrece shames herselt to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits weeping,
To whom she sobbing speaks: "O eye of eyes,
Why pryst thou through my window? leave thy peeping;
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping:
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light,
For day hath nought to do what's done by night."

Thus cavils she with everything she sees:
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees.
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild;
Continuance tames the one; the other wild,
Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep-drenched in a sea of care,
Holds disputations with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare;
No object but her passion's strength renews;
And as one shifts, another straight ensues:
Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no words;
Sometime 'tis mad, and too much talk ails.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody,
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;
Sad souls are slain in merry company:
Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society:
True sorrow then is feelingly suf'red:
When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
Ten times pines that pines beholding food;
To see the salve doth make the wound ache more;
Great griefgrieves most at that would do it good;
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks overflows:
Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows.

"You mocking birds," quoth she, "your tunes entomb
Within your hollow-swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be ye mute and dumb!
(My restless discord loves no stops nor rests;
A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests;)
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress like dumps when time is kept with tears.
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair.
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapason bear:
For burthen-wise I'll hum on Tarquins still,
While thou on Tereus descant'st better skill.

And whilst against a thorn thou bear'st thy part,
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife, to affright mine eye;
Who, if it wink, shall thereto fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heartstrings to true languishment.

And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
That knows nor parching heat nor freezing cold,
We will find out; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their minds.
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle

As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily;
So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is sham'd, and Death reproach's debtor.

To kill myself, quoth she, 'alack! what were it,
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half with greater patience bear it
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion.
That mother tries a merciful conclusion
Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
Will slay the other, and be nurse to none.

My body or my soul, which was the dearer?
When the one pure, the other made divine.
Whose love of either to myself was dearer?
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine.
Ah, me! the bark peal'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither, and his sap decay;
So must my soul, her bark being peal'd away.

Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly engirt with daring infamy:
Then let it not be call'd impiety

If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole,
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

Yet die I will not till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death;
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him taint'd shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonour'd.
'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead:
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;
For in my death I hurl upon shameful scorn:
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, Love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou reveng'd mayst be.
How Tarquin must be used, read it in me:
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe;
And, for my sake, serve thou false Tarquin so.

This brief abridgment of my will I make;
My soul and body to the skies and ground;
My resolution, husband, do thou take;
Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound;
My shame be his that did my fame confound;
And all my fame that lives disbursed be
To those that live, and think no shame of me.

Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will;
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
My life's foul deed my life's fair end shall free.
Pain not, faint heart, but stoutly say, 'so be it.'
Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer thee;
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,
And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright eyes,
With untim'd tongue she hoarsely call'd her maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies;
For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies.
Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so
As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-morrow,
With soft-slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
(For why? her face wore sorrow's livery,)
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye;
Even so the maid with swelling drops gan wet
Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy
Of those fair suns, set in her mistress' sky,
Who in a salt-way'd ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filing:
One justly weeps; the other takes in hand
No cause, but company, of her drops spilling:
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing;
Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,
And then they drown their eyes, or break their hearts.

For men have marble, women waxen minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble will;
The weak oppress'd, the impression of strange kinds
Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
Then call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax shall be accounted evil,
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep;
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep;
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep:
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,
Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the wither'd flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd!
Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour
Is worthy blame. O, let it not be hild
Poor women's faults that they are so fulfill'd
With men's abuses! those proud lords, to blame,
Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Assail'd by night with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong:
Such danger to resistance did belong,
That dying fear through all her body spread;
And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild Patience bid fair Lucrece speak
To the poor counterfeit of her complaining:
'My girl,' quoth she, 'on what occasion break
Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are raining?
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining,
Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood:
If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

'But tell me, girl, when went'—(and there she stay'd Till after a deep groan) 'Tarquin from hence?'
'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid.
'The more to blame my sluggard negligence:
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense;
Myself was stirring ere the break of day,
And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness.'
'O peace!' quoth Lucrece; 'if it should be told,
The repetition cannot make it less;
For more it is than I can well express:
And that deep torture may be call'd a hell,
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen—
Yet save that labour, for I have them here.
What should I say?—One of my husband's men
Bid thou be ready, by and by, to bear
A letter to my lord, my love, my dear;
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it:
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.'

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill:
Conceit and grief an eager combat fight;
What wit sets down is blotted straight with will;
This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill:
Much like a press of people at a door,
Throng her inventions, which shall be before.

At last she thus begins:—'Thou worthy lord,
Of that unworthy wife that gateth thee,
Health to thy person! next vouchsafe to afford
(If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see)
Some present speed to come and visit me:
So I commend me from our house in grief;
My woes are tedious, though my words are brief.

Here folds she up the tenor of her woe,
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly.
By this short schedule Collatine may know
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality;
She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,
Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse.

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her;
When sighs, and groans, and tears may grace
the fashion
Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her
From that suspicion which the world might bear her.
To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter
With words, till action might become them.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told;
For then the eye interprets to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold,
When every part a part of woe doth bear.
'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear:
Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,
And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ,
'At Ardea to my lord with more than haste,'
The post attends, and she delivers it,
Charging the sour-fac'd groom to hie as fast
As lagging fowls before the northern blast.
Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems:
Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain court'sies to her low;
And blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
Receives the scroll, without or yea or no,
And forth with bashful innocence doth hie.
But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie
Imagine every eye beholds their blame;
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her shame;

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while others saucily
Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:

Even so, this pattern of the worn-out age
Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
That two red fires in both their faces blaz'd;
She thought he blush'd as knowing Tarquin's lust,
And, blushing with him, wistly on him gaz'd;
Her earnest eye did make him more amaz'd:
The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish, [blemish.
The more she thought he spied in her some

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone.
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan:
So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,
That she her plaints a little while doth stay,
Pausing for means to mourn some newer way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy;
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
For Helen's rape the city to destroy,
Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy;
Which the conceited painter drew so proud,
As heaven (it seem'd) to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
In scorn of Nature, Art gave lifeless life:
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife:
The red blood reek'd to show the painter's strife;
And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights,
Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring pioneer
Begrim'd with sweat, and smeared all with dust;
And from the towers of Troy there would appear
The very eyes of men through loopholes thrust,
Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:
Such sweet observance in this work was had,
That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty
You might behold, triumphing in their faces;
In youth, quick bearing and dexterity;
And here and there the painter interlaces
Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces;
Which heartless peasants did so well resemble,
That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O what art
Of physiognomy might one behold!
The face of either 'cipher'd either's heart;
Their face their manners most expressly told:
In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd;
But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent
Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor
stand,
As 't were encouraging the Greeks to fight;
Making such sober action with his hand
That it beguil'd attention, charm'd the sight:
In speech, it seem'd, his beard all silver white
Wag'd up and down, and from his lips did fly
Thin winding breath, which purl'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces,
Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice;
All jointly listening, but with several graces,
As if some mermaid did their ears entice;
Some high, some low, the painter was so nice:
The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
To jump up higher seem'd to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head,
His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's ear;
Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll'n and red;
Another smother'd seems to pelt and swear;
And in their rage such signs of rage they bear,
As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words,
It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there;
Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
That for Achilles' image stood his spear,
Grip'd in an armed hand; himself, behind,
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind:
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy
When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field,
Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield;
And to their hope they such odd action yield,
That through their fight joy seemed to appear (Like bright things stain'd) a kind of heavy fear.

And, from the strand of Dardan where they fought,
To Simois' reedy banks, the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling ridges; and their ranks began
To break upon the galled shore, and than Retire again, till meeting greater ranks
They join, and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
To find a face where all distress is stell'd,
Many she sees where cares have carved some,
But none where all distress and doleour dwell'd,
Till she despairing Hecuba beheld,
Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,
Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd
Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care's reign;
Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd;
Of what she was no semblance did remain:
Her blue blood, chang'd to black in every vein,
Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed,
Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the beldame's woes,
Who nothing wants to answer her but cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes:
The painter was no god to lend her those;
And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong,
To give her so much grief, and not a tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she, 'without a sound,
I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue:
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,
And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long;
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.'

'Show me the strumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear;
Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here:
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter, die.

'Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many mo?'
Let sin, alone committed, light alone
Upon his head that hath transgressed so.
Let guilty souls be freed from guilty woe:
For one's offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general?

'Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies,
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus
swounds;
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds:
Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire, Troy had been bright with fame, and not with fire.

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes:
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes;
Then little strength rings out the doleful knell:
So Lucrece set a-work sad tales doth tell
To pencil'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow;
She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament:
At last she sees a wretched image bound,
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent;
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content:
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,
So mild that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still,
A brow unbent, that seem'd to welcome woe;
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming just,
And therein so ensconced his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust
False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew
For perjur'd Sinon, whose enchanting story
The credulous old Priam after slew:
[glory
Whose words, like wildfire, burnt the shining
Of rich-built Ilium, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces.

This picture she advisedly perus'd,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill;
Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abus'd,
So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill;
And still on him she gaz'd, and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.

'It cannot be,' quoth she, 'that so much guile'—
(She would have said) 'can lurk in such a look?'
But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,
And from her tongue 'can lurk' from 'cannot'
took;
'It cannot be,' she in that sense forsook,
And turn'd it thus: 'It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind:

'For even as subtle Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
(As if with grief or travail he had looked,)
To me came Tarquin armed; so beguil'd
With outward honesty, but yet deify'd
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

'Look, look, how listening Priam wets his eyes,
To see those borrow'd tears that Sinon sheds.
Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wise?
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds;
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds;
Those round clear pearls of his that move thy pity
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

'Such devils steal effects from lightless hell;
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hold
Only to flatter fools, and make them bold;
So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter,
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.'

Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assails,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest;
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er;
'Fool! fool!' quoth she, 'his wounds will not be sore.'

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complaining.
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining:
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining.
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought, That she with painted images hath spent;
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought By deep surmise of others' detriment;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent.
It easeth some, though none it ever cur'd, To think their doleful others have endur'd.

But now the mindful messenger, come back, Brings home his lord and other company;
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black; And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky.
These water-galls in her daim element Foretell new storms to those already spent.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw, Amazedly in her sad face he stares:
Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw,
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares, But stood like old acquaintance in a trance, Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand, And thus begins: 'What uncouth ill event Hath thee befallen, that thou dost trembling stand?
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?
Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness, And tell thy grief, that we may give redress.'

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire, Ere once she can discharge one word of woe:
At length address'd to answer his desire, She modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe; While Collatine and his consorted lords With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swan in her watery nest Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending:

'Few words,' quoth she, 'shall fit the trespass best,
Where no excuse can give the fault amending:
In me more woe than words are now depending;
And my laments would be drawn out too
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

'Then be this all the task it hath to say:—
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
A stranger came, and on that pillow lay
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head;
And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free.

'For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falchion in my chamber came
A creeping creature, with a flaming light,
And softly cried, Awake, thou Roman dame,
And entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict, If thou my love's desire do contradict.

'For some hard-favour'd groom of thine, quoth he,
Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter thee,
And swear I found you where you did fulfil
The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be My fame, and thy perpetual infamy.

'With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
I should not live to speak another word:
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome
The adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear:
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak;
No rightful plea might plead for justice there:
His scarlet lust came evidence to swear
That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eyes,
And when the judge is robb'd, the prisoner dies.

'O teach me how to make mine own excuse!
Or, at the least, this refuge let me find;
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this abuse,
Immaculate and spotless is my mind;
That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd
To accessory yieldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'
Lo here, the hopeless merchant of this loss,
With head declin'd, and voice dam'd up with woe,
With sad-set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away that stops his answer so:
But wretched as he is he strives in vain;
What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste;
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast;
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past:
Even so he sighs, his sorrows make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh:
'If dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power; no flood by raining slaketh.
My woe too sensible thy passion maketh
More feeling-painful: let it then suffice
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

'And for my sake, when I might charm thee so,
For she that was thy Lucrece—now attend me;
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,
And lend me Thine, mine, his own; suppose thou dost de-
From what is past: the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

'But ere I name him, you, fair lords,' quoth she,
(Speaking to those that came with Collatine)
'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me,
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine;
For 'tis a meritorious fair design
To chase injustice with vengeanceful arms:
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms.'

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd:
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops. 'O speak,' quoth she,
'How may this forced stain be wip'd from
What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance?

May my pure mind with the foul act dispence,
My low-declined honour to advance?
May any terms acquit me from this chance?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again;
And why not I from this compelled stain?'

With this, they all at once began to say,
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears;
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map which deep impression bears
Of hard misfortune, carv'd in it with tears.
'No, no,' quoth she, 'no dame, hereafter living,
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.'

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break,
She throws forth Tarquin's name: 'He, he,'
She says, [speak];
But more than 'he' her poor tongue could not
Till after many accents and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short assays,
She utters this: 'He, he, fair lords, 'tis he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to me.'

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheath'd:
That blow did bail it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breath'd:
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeath'd
Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly
Life's lasting date from cancell'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed,
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew;
Till Lucrece' father that beholds her bleed,
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body threw;
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chace;

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side,
Who like a late-sack'd island vastly stood
Bare and unpeopled, in this fearful flood.
Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false Tar-
quin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face
Of that black blood a watery rigol goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place:
And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes,
Corrupted blood some watery token shows;
And blood untainted still doth red abide,
Blushing at that which is so putrefied.

'Daughter, dear daughter,' old Lucretius cries,
'That life was mine which thou hast here depriv'd.
If in the child the father's image lies,
Where shall I live now Lucrece is unliv'd?
Thou wert not to this end from me deriv'd.
If children predecease progenitors,
We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

'Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my age new born;
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a barbon'd death by time outworn;
O, from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn!
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass.
That I no more can see what once I was.

'O time, cease thou thy course, and last no longer,
If they surcease to be that should survive.
Small rotten death make conquest of the stronger,
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive:
Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again, and see
Thy father die, and not thy father thee!

By this starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place;
And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath,
And live, to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Begins to talk; but through his lips do throng
Weak words, so thick come, in his poor heart's aid,
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime Tarquin was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide, to make it more;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er:
Then son and father weep with equal strife,
Who should weep most for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay,
The father says, 'She's mine,' 'O, mine she is,'
Replies her husband: 'do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.'

'O,' quoth Lucretius, 'I did give that life
Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.'
'Woe, woe,' quoth Collatine, 'she was my wife,
I ow'd her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd.'
'My daughter!' and 'My wife!' with clamours fill'd
The dispers'd air, who. holding Lucrece' life, Answer'd their cries, 'My daughter!' and
'My wife!'

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece' side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so
As silly jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words, and uttering foolish things.

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
Wherein deep policy did him disguise;
And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly,
To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
'Thou wronged lord of Rome,' quoth he, 'arise;
Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool,
Now set thy long-experienced wit to school.

'Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe?
Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?
Is it revenge to give thyself a blow,
For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds?
Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds:
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To slay herself, that should have slain her foe.

'Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations,
But kneel with me, and help to bear thy part;
To rouse our Roman gods with invocations,
That they will suffer these abominations,
(Since Rome herself in them doth stand disgrac'd.)
By our strong arms from toirth her fair streets chas'd.
Now by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stain'd,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's store,
By all our country rights in Rome maintain'd,
And by chaste Lucrece's soul that late complain'd
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife,
We will revenge the death of this true wife.'

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow:
And to his protestation urg'd the rest,

Who, wondering at him, did his words allow:
Then jointly to the ground their knees they bow;
And that deep vow which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom,
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence;
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence:
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.

OUR EVER-LIVING POET.

WISHETH.

THE WELL WISHING ADVENTURER IN SETTING FORTH.

T. T.

I.

FROM fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the riper should by time decrease,
His tender heir might bear his memory:
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament,
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud briefest thy content,
And tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.
Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

II.

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery so gazed on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed of small worth held:
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days;
To say, within thine own deep sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer—This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count, and make my old excuse—
Proving his beauty by succession thine!
This were to be new-made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

III.

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest,
Now is the time that face should form another;
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unbless some mother.
For where is she so fair whose unear'd womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime:
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV.

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend,
And, being frank, she lends to those are free.
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profits less usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
Then how, when nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?
The unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with thee,
Which, used, lives th' executor to be.
v.

Those hours that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same,
And that unfair which fairly doth excel;
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there:
Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'ersnow'd, and barreness everywhere:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was.
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
Leese but their show; their substance still lives.

vi.

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd:
Make sweet some phial; treasure thou some place
With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd.
That use is not forbidden usury,
Which happier those that pay the willing loan;
That's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one;
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If of thine ten times refigur'd thee:
Then what could Death do if thou shouldst depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity?
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
To be Death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

vii.

Lo, in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty;
And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage;
But when from high-most pitch, with weary car,
Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract, and look another way:
So thou, thyself outgoing in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

viii.

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy,
Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly?
Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear.
Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;
Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one,
Sings this to thee, 'thou single wilt prove none.'

ix.

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wail thee, like a makeless wife:
The world will be thy widow, and still weep
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep,
By children's eyes, her husband's shape in mind.
Look, what an unthrift in the world doth spend Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it:
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And kept unus'd, the user so destroys it:
No love toward others in that bosom sits,
That on himself such murderous shame comms.

For shame! deny that thou hast love to any,
Who for thyself art so unprovide.
Grant if thou wilt thou art below'd of many,
But that thou none lov'st is most evident;
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate,
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate,
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O change thy thought, that I may change my mind!
Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or to thyself, at least, kind-hearted prove;
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

xi.

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st
In one of thine, from that which thou departest;
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestow'st,
[n?rvertest.
Thou mayst call thine, when thou from youth
Herein lives wisdom, beauty, and increase:
Without this folly, age, and cold decay.
If all were minded so the times should cease,
And threescore years would make the world away.
Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,
Harsh, featureless, and rude, barrenly perish:
Look whom she best endow'd, she gave the more;
Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty
Shou'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby
Thou shouldst print more, nor let that copy die.

XII.
When I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave day sunk in hideous night;
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls, all silver'd o'er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
Which erst from heat did canop'y the herd,
And summer's green all girded up in sheaves,
Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard:
Then of thy beauty do I question make,
That thou among the wastes of time must go,
Since sweets and beauties do themselves for sake,
And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence
Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee.

XIII.
O that you were yourself: but, love, you are
No longer yours than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give.
So should that beauty which you hold in lease
Find no determination: then you were Yourself again, after yourself's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day,
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
O! none but unthrifts:—Dear my love, you know
You had a father; let your son say so.

XIV.
Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck;
And yet methinks I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good or evil luck,
Of plagues, of deatings, or season's quality:
Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind,
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:
But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And (constant stars) in them I read such art,
As truth and beauty shall together thrive,
If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert:
Or else of thee this I prognosticate,
Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

XV.
When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge state presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheer'd and check'd even by the self-same sky,
Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful time debateth with decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And, all in war with Time, for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engrat you new.

XVI.
But wherefore do not you a nightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours;
And many maiden gardens, yet unset,
With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers,
Much likeness than your painted counterfeit:
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this, Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself keeps yourself still:
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

XVII.
Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fyl'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, I Heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
Which hides your life, and shows not half your parts.
If I could write the beauty of your eyes,
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say, this poet lies,
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces.
So should my papers, yellow'd with their age,
Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than tongue:
And your true rights be termed a poet's rage,
And stretched metre of an antique song:
But were some child of yours alive that time,
You should live twice;—in it, and in my rhyme.

XVIII.

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate;
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date:
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance, or nature's changing course, untrimm'd;
But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st;
Nor shall Death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou growest;
So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

XIX.

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-liv'd phoenix in her blood;
Make glad and burn so seasons, as thou fleets,
And do what'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world, and all her fading sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime:
O carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow,
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen;
Him in thy course untainted do allow,
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.
Yet, do thy worst, old Time: despite thy wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

XX.

A woman's face, with nature's own hand painted,
I last thou, the master-mistress of my passion;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted With shifting change, as is false woman's fashion;
An eye more bright than theirs, less false in Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue, all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes, and women's souls amazeth.
And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.
But since she prick'd thee out for women's pleasure,
Mind be thy love, and thy love's use their

XXI.

So is it not with me as with that muse,
Stir'd by a painted beauty to his verse;
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use,
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse;
Making a couplement of proud compare,
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich
gems,

With April's first-born flowers, and all things
That heaven's air in this huge roundure hems.
O let me, true in love, but truly write,
And then believe me, my love is as fair
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:
Let them say more that like of hearsay well;
I will not praise, that purpose not to sell.

XXII.

My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
So long as youth and thou are of one date;
But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate.
For all that beauty that doth cover thee
Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me;
How can I then be elder than thou art?
O therefore, love, be of thyself so wary,
As I not for myself but for thee will;
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.
Presume not on thy heart when mine is slain;
Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII.

As an unperfect actor on the stage,
Who with his fear is put besides his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
Whose strength's abundance weakens his own
heart;
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'ercharg'd with burthen of mine own love's might.
O let my books be, then, the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast;
Who plead for love, and look for recompense
More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.
O learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

XXIV.

Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and hath stil'd
Thy beauty's form in table of my heart;
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art.
For through the painter must you see his skill,
To find where your true image pictur'd lies,
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glaz'd with thine eyes.
Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have done:
Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me
Are windows to my breast, where-through the Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art,
They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

XXV.

Let those who are in favour with their stars,
Of public honour and proud titles boast,
Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.
Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread
But as the marigold at the sun's eye;
And in themselves their pride lies buried,
For at a frown they in their glory die.
The painful warrior famous for fight,
After a thousand victories once foil'd,
Is from the book of honour raz'd quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd:
Then happy I, that love and am belov'd
Where I may not remove, nor be remov'd.

XXVI.

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit.
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it;
But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it:
Till whatsoever star that guides by moving,
Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
And puts apparel on my tatter'd loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect:
Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee,
Till then, not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

XXVII.

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tir'd;
But then begins a journey in my head,
To work my mind, when body's work's expir'd:
For then my thoughts (from far where I abide)
Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide.
Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
Save that my soul's imaginary sight
Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
Makes black night beauteous, and her old face new.
Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind
For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

XXVIII.

How can I then return in happy plight,
That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
But day by night and night by day oppress'd?
And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent shake hands to torture me,
The one by toil, the other to complain
How far I toil, still farther off from thee,
I tell the day, to please him, thou art bright,
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven:
So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night;
When sparkling stars twire not, thou gild'st the even.
But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
And night doth nightly make grief's strength seem stronger.

XXIX.

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,
I all alone beweep my outcast state,
cries,
And trouble deaf Heaven with my bootless
And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,
Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,
With what I most enjoy contented least;
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
Haply I think on thee,—and then my state
(like to the lark at break of day arising From sullen earth) sings hymns at heaven's gate;
For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings,
That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

XXX.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear times' waste:
Then can I drown an eye, unused to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
And weep afresh love's long-since cancel'd woe,
And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight.
Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
Which I new pay as if not paid before.
But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
All losses are restor'd, and sorrows end.

XXXI.
Thy bosom is endear'd with all hearts,
Which I by lacking have supposed dead;
And there reigns love and all love's loving parts,
And all those friends which I thought buried.
How many a holy and obsequious tear
Hath dear religious love stolen from mine eye,
As interest of the dead, which now appear
But things remov'd, that hidden in thee lie!
Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
Who all their parts of me to thee did give;
That due of many now is thine alone:
Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
And thou (all they) hast all the all of me.

XXXII.
If thou survive my well-contented day,
When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,
Compare them with the bettering of the time;
And though they be outstripp'd by every pen,
Reserve them for my love, not for their rhyme,
Exceeding by the height of happier men.
O then vouchsafe me but this loving thought!
'Had my friend's muse grown with this growing age,
A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better equipage:
But since he died, and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love.'

XXXIII.
Full many a glorious morning have I seen
Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye,
Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchymy;
Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
With ugly rack on his celestial face,
And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace:
Even so my sun one early morn did shine
With all triumphant splendour on my brow;
But out! alack! he was but one hour mine,
The region cloud hath mask'd him from me now.

Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth:
Suns of the world may stain, when heaven's

XXXIV.
Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day,
And make me travel forth without my cloak,
To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,
To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
For no man well of such a salve can speak,
That heals the wound, and cures not the disgrace:
Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief;
Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss:
The offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence's cross.
Ah! but those tears are pearled which thy love sheds,
And they are rich, and ransom all ill deeds.

XXXV.
No more be griev'd at that which thou hast done:
Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud;
Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
All men make faults, and even I in this,
Authorizing thy trespass with compare,
Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are:
For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense,
(Thy adverse party is thy advocate,) And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence:
Such civil war is in my love and hate,
That I an accessory needs must be
To that sweet thief which sourly robs from me.

XXXVI.
Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one:
So shall those blot that do with me remain,
Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite,
Which though it alter not love's sole effect,
Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame;
Nor thou with public kindness honour me,
Unless thou take that honour from thy name:
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.
XXXVII.

As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth;
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these all, or all, or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engraven to this store:
So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis'd,
Whilst this shadow dost such substance give,
That I in thy abundance am suffic'd,
And by a part of all thy glory live.

Look what is best, that best I wish in thee;
This wish I have; then ten times happy me!

XXXVIII.

How can my muse want subject to invent,
While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
O, give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth muse, ten times more in worth
Than those old nine which rhymers invoke;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to outlive long date.

If my slight muse do please these curious
The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

XXXIX.

O, how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me?
What can mine own praise to mine own self bring?
And what is't but mine own, when I praise thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one,
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee, which thou deserv'st alone.
O absence, what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
(Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceiver.)
And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
By praising him here, who doth hence remain!

XL.

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all;
What hast thou then more than thou hast'd before?

No love, my love, that thou mayst true love call;
All mine was thine, before thou hadst this more.
Then if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee for my love thou usest;
But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest
By wilful taste of what thyself refusest.
I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all my poverty;
And yet, love knows, it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong, than hate's known injury.

Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows,
Kill me with slights; yet we must not be foes.

XLII.

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits
When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
For still temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assail'd;
And when a woman woos, what woman's son
Will sourly leave her till she have prevail'd?
Ah me! but yet thou mightst my seat forbear,
And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there.
Where thou art forc'd to break a twofold truth;
Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

XLIII.

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly;
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:
Thou dost love her, because thou knew'st I love her;
And for my sake even so dost she abuse me,
Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her.
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And, losing her, my friend hath found that loss
Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross:
But here's the joy; my friend and I are one;
Sweet flattery! then she loves but me alone.

XLIV.

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected;
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And, darkly bright, are bright in dark directed;
Then thou whose shadow's doth make bright,
How would thy shadow's form form happy show
To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so!
SONNETS.

How would (I say) mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stay?
All days are nights to see, till I see thee,
And nights, bright days, when dreams do show thee me.

XLIV.

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
Injurious distance should not stop my way;
For then, despite of space, I would be brought
From limits far remote, where thou dost stay.
No matter then, although my foot did stand
Upon the farthest earth remot'd from thee,
For nimble thought can jump both sea and land,
As soon as think the place where he would be.
But ah! thought kills me, that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone,
But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moan;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe:

XLV.

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide:
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide.
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sink's down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;
Until life's composition be recur'd
By those swift messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assur'd
Of thy fair health, recounting it me:
This told, I joy: but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

XLVI.

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war,
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie,
(A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes,) But the defendant doth plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide this title is impannel'd
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
And by their verdict is determined [part:
The clear eye's moiety, and the dear heart's

As thus; mine eye's due is thine outward part,
And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

XLVII.

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other:
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smoker,
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast,
And to the painted banquet bids my heart;
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
And I am still with them, and they with thee;
Or if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLVIII.

How careful was I when I took my way,
Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
That, to my use, it might unused stay
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!
But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
Thou, best of dearest, and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
Within the gentle closure of my breast,
From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and part:
And even thence thou wilt be stolen I fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

XLIX.

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
Whenas thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects:
Against that time, when thou shalt strangely pass,
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity;
Against that time do I ensconce me here
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself uprear,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:
To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,
Since, why to love, I can allege no cause.

L.

How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek—my weary travel's end—
Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
'Thus far the miles are measure'd from thy friend!'
The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know
His rider lov'd not speed, being made from thee:
The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
Which heavily he answers with a groan,
More sharp to me than spurring to his side:
For that same groan doth put this in my mind,
My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

LI.
Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer, when from thee I speed:
From where thou art why should I haste me thence?
Till I return, of posting is no need.
O what excuse will my poor beast then find,
When swift extremity can seem but slow?
Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind;
In winged speed no motion shall I know:
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
Therefore desire, of perfect'st love being made,
Shall neigh (no dull flesh) in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade;
Since from thee going he went wilful slow,
Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to go.

LII.
So am I as the rich, whose blessed key
Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure,
The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.
Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare,
Since seldom coming, in the long year set,
Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the carcanet.
So is the time that keeps you, as my chest,
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
To make some special instant special-blest,
By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.
Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,
Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope.

LIII.
What is your substance, wherof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
Since every one hath, every one, one's shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you;

On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new:
Speak of the spring, and poison of the year;
The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear,
And you in every blessed shape we know.
In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

LIV.
O how much more doth beauty beauteous seem,
By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye
As the perfumed tincture of the roses,
Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
When summer's breath their masked buds discloses:
But, for their virtue on'y is their show,
They live unwood'd, and unrespected fade;
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made:
And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
When that shall fade, by verse distils your truth.

LV.
Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme;
But you shall shine more bright in these contents
Than unswept stone, besmeard'd with sluttish time.
When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,
Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall burn
The living record of your memory.
'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity
Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find room,
Even in the eyes of all posterity
That wear this world out to the ending doom.
So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

LVI.
Sweet love, renew thy force: be it not said,
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
To-morrow sharpen'd in his former might:
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill
Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with fulness,
To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dulness.
Let this sad interim like the ocean be
Which parts the shore, where two contracted new Come daily to the banks, that, when they see
Return of love, more blest may be the view;
Or call it winter, which, being full of care,
Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

LVII.
Being your slave, what should I do but tend Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require.
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour,
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour,
When you have bid your servant once adieu;
Nor dare I question with my jealous thought
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,
But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought,
Save, where you are how happy you make those:
So true a fool is love, that in your will (Though you do anything) he thinks no ill.

LVIII.
That God forbid, that made me first your slave,
I should in thought control your times of pleasure,
Or at your hand the account of hours to crave,
Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
O, let me suffer (being at your beck)
The imprison'd absence of your liberty,
And patience, tame to sufferance, hide each check
Without accusing you of injury.
Be where you list; your charter is so strong,
That you yourself may privilege your time:
Do what you will, to you it doth belong
Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime.
I am to wait, though waiting so be hell;
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LIX.
If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains beguil'd,
Which labouring for invention bear amiss
The second burthen of a former child?
O, that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done!
That I might see what the old world could say
To this composed wonder of your frame;
Whether we are mended, or whe'er better they,
Or whether revolution be the same.
O! sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

LXI.
Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
Crooked eclipses gain'st his glory fight,
And Time, that gave, doth now his gift confound.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow;
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow.
And yet, to times in hope, my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

LXII.
Is it thy will thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
While shadows, like to thee, do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
So far from home, into my deeds to pry;
To find out shames and idle hours in me,
The scope and tenor of thy jealousy?
O no! thy love, though much, is not so great;
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake,
Mine own true love that doth my rest deface,
To play the watchman ever for thy sake:
For thee watch I, whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all-too-near.

LXIII.
Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye,
And all my soul, and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account,
And for myself mine own worth to define,
As I all other in all worths surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
Beautied and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity,
Mine own self-love quite contrary I read,
Self so self-loving were iniquity.
'Tis thee (myself) that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

LXIV.
Against my love shall be, as I am now,
With Time's injurious hand crush'd and overworn;
When hours have drain'd his blood, and fill'd his brow
With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn
Hath travell'd on age's steepy night;
And all those beauties, whereof now he's king,
Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring;
For such a time do I now forfay
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life.
His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
And they shall live, and he in them, still green.

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defac'd
The rich-prond cost of outworn buried age;
When sometime lofty towers I see down-ras'd,
And brass eternal, slave to mortal rage;
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the wat'ry main,
Increasing store with loss, and loss with store;
When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay;
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate—
That Time will come and take my love away.
This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
But sad mortality o'ersways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O, how shall summer's honey breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but time decays?
O fearful meditation! where, alack!
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?
Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O none, unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry,
As, to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honour shamefully misplace'd,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,
And strength by limping sway disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly (doctor-like) controlling skill,
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:

Tir'd with all these, from these would I be gone,
Save that, to die, I leave my love alone.

Ah! wherefore with infection should he live,
And with his presence grace impiety,
That sin by him advantage should achieve,
And lace itself with his society?
Why should false painting imitate his cheek,
And steal dead seeing of his living hue?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?
Why should he live now Nature bankrupt is,
Beggar'd of blood to blush through lively veins?
For she hath no exchequer now but his,
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.
O, him she stores, to show what wealth she had
In days long since, before these last so bad.

Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn,
When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head,
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay:
In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself, and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;
And him as for a map doth Nature store,
To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend:
All tongues (the voice of souls) give thee that due,
Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thine outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;
But those same tongues that gave thee so thine own,
In other accents do this praise confound,
By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds;
Then (churls) their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,
To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds:
But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The solve is this,—that thou dost common grow.
SONNETS.

LXX.

That thou art blam’d shall not be thy defect,
For slander’s mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven’s sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve
Thy worth the greater, being woo’d of time;
For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
And thou present’st a pure unstained prime.
Thou hast pass’d by the ambush of young days,
Either not assail’d, or victor being charg’d;
Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
To tie up envy, evermore enlarg’d:
If some suspect of ill mask’d not thy show,
Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

LXXI.

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
Than you shall hear the suly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled
From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:
Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it; for I love you so,
That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
If thinking on me then should make you woe.
O, if (I say) you look upon this verse,
When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
Do not so much as my poor name rehearse;
But let your love even with my life decay:
Lest the wise world should look into your moan,
And mock you with me after I am gone.

LXXII.

O, lest the world should task you to recite
What merit liv’d in me, that you should love
After my death,—dear love, forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased I
Than niggard truth would willingly impart:
O, lest your true love may seem false in this,
That you for love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is,
And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
For I am sham’d by that which I bring forth,
And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

LXXIII.

That time of year thou mayst in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
Bare ruin’d choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
In me thou seeest the twilight of such day
As after sunset fadeth in the west,
Which by and by black night doth take away,
Death’s second self, that seals up all in rest.
In me thou seeest the glowing of such fire,
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
Consum’d with that which it was nourish’d by.
This thou perceiv’st which makes thy love more strong,
To love that well which thou must leave ere long:

LXXIV.

But be contented: when that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away,
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.
When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee,
The earth can have but earth, which is his due;
My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
The prey of worms, my body being dead;
The coward conquest of a wretch’s knife,
Too base of thee to be remembered.
The worth of that, is that which it contains,
And that is this, and this with thee remains.

LXXV.

So are you to my thoughts, as food to life,
Or as sweet-season’d showers are to the ground,
And for the peace of you I hold such strife
As ’twixt a miser and his wealth is found:
Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
Doubling the filching age will steal his treasure;
Now counting best to be with you alone,
Then better’d that the world may see my pleasure:
Sometime all full with feasting on your sight,
And by and by clean starved for a look;
Possessing or pursuing no delight,
Save what is had or must from you be took.
Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day.
Or glutting on all, or all away.

LXXVI.

Why is my verse so barren of new pride?
So far from variation or quick change?
Why, with the time, do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds strange?
Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name,
Showing their birth, and where they did proceed?
O know, sweet love, I always write of you,
And you and love are still my argument;
So all my best is dressing old words new,
Spending again what is already spent;
For as the sun is daily new and old,
So is my love still telling what is told.

LXXVII.
Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste;
The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
And of this book this learning mayst thou taste.
The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show,
Of mouthed graves will give thee memory;
Thou by thy dial's shady stealth mayst know
Time's thievish progress to eternity.

Look what thy memory cannot contain,
Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee, and much enrich thy book.

LXXVIII.
So oft have I invok'd thee for my muse,
And found such fair assistance in my verse,
As every alien pen hath got my use,
And under thee their poesy disperse.
Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high to sing,
And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
I have added feathers to the learned's wing,
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet be most prond of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine, and born of thee:
In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
And arts with thy sweet graces grace be;
But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

LXXIX.
Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
And my sick muse doth give another place.
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
Deserves the travail of a worthier pen;
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent,
He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
He lends thee virtue, and he stile that word
From thy behaviour; beauty doth he give,
And found it in thy cheek; he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

LXXX.
O, how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame!
But since your worth (wide as the ocean is)
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
On your broad main doth willfully appear.
Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
He of tall building, and of goodly pride.
Then if he thrive, and I be cast away,
The worst was this;—my love was my decay.

LXXXI.
Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten;
From hence your memory death cannot take,
Although in me each part will be forgotten.
Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
Though 't once gone, to all the world must die:
The earth can yield me but a common grave,
When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie.
Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read;
And tongues to be, your being shall rehearse,
When all the breathers of this world are dead;
You still shall live (such virtue hath my pen)
Where breath most breathes,—even in the mouths of men.

LXXXII.
I grant thou wert not married to my muse,
And therefore mayst without attain't o'erlook
The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise;
And therefore art enforc'd to seek anew
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.
And do so, love: yet when they have devis'd
What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
Thou truly fair wert truly sympathiz'd
In true plain words, by thy true-telling friend;
And their gross painting might be better us'd
Where cheeks need blood: in thee it is absus'd.

LXXXIII.
I never saw that you did painting need,
And therefore to your fair no painting set.
I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
The barren tender of a poet's debt:
And therefore have I slept in your report
That you yourself, being extant, well might show
How far a modern quill doth come too short,
Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow.
This silence for my sin you did impute,
Which shall be most my glory, being dumb;
For I impair not beauty being mute,
When others would give life, and bring a tomb,
There lives more life in one of your fair eyes
Than both your poets can in praise devise.

LXXXIV.

Who is it that says most? which can say more
Than this rich praise,—that you alone are you?
In whose confine immured is the store
Which should example where your equal grew?
I can penury within that pen doth dwell,
That to his subject lends not some small glory:
But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story,
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so clear,
And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired everywhere.

You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,
Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

LXXXV.

My tongue-tied muse in manners holds her still,
While comments of your praise, richly compil'd,
Reserve their character with golden quill,
And precious phrase by all the muses ill'd.
I think good thoughts, while others write good words,
And, like unlettered clerk, still cry 'Amen'
To every hymn that able spirit affords,
In polish'd form of refined pen.
Hearing you prais'd, I say, 'Tis so, 'tis true,'
And to the most of praise add something more;
But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before.

Then others for the breath of words respect,
Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

LXXXVI.

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all-too-precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhearce,
Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?

Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
No, neither he, nor his compellers by night
Giving him aid, my verse astonished.
He, nor that affable familiar ghost
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors, of my silence cannot boast;
I was not sick of any fear from thence.
But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebled mine.

LXXXVII.

Farewel! thou art too dear for my possessing,
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate:
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;
My bonds in thee are all determinate.
For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving?
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving.
Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking;
So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
Comes home again on better judgment calling.
Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,
In sleep a king, but, waking, no such matter.

LXXXVIII.

When thou shalt be disposed to set me light,
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn:

With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
Upon thy part I can set down a story
Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attained;
That thou, in losing me, shall win much glory:
And I by this will be a gainer too;
For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee vantage, double-vantage me.

Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

LXXXIX.

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence:
Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt;
Against thy reasons making no defence.
Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change,
As I'll myself disgrace knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strangle, and look strange;
Be absent from thy walks; and in my tongue
Thy sweet-beloved name no more shall dwell;
Lest I (too much profane) should do it wrong,
And haply of our old acquaintance tell.

For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,
For I must needs love him whom thou dost hate.

NC.

Then hate me when thou wilt: if ever, now;
Now while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after-loss:
Ah! do not, when my heart hath scap'd this sorrow,
Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd overthrew.
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their spite,
But in the onset come; so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might;
And other strains of woe, which now seem woe,
Compar'd with loss of thee will not seem so.

XCI.
Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their body's force;
Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill;
Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their
And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest;
But these particulars are not my measure,
All these I better in one general best.
Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
Of more delight than hawks and horses be;
And, having thee, of all men's pride I boast.
Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take
All this away, and me most wretched make.

XCII.
But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine;
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine.
Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end.
I see a better state to me belongs
Than that which on thy humour doth depend:
Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie.
O what a happy title do I find,
Happy to have thy love, happy to die!
But what's so blessed-fair that fears no blot?
Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not:

XCIII.
So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
Like a deceived husband; so love's face
May still seem love to me, though alter'd new;
Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place;
For there can live no hatred in thine eye,
Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.

In many's looks the false heart's history
Is writ, in moods and frowns and wrinkles strange;
But heaven in thy creation did decree
That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness
How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show?

XCVI.
They that have power to hurt and will do none,
That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow;
They rightly do inherit Heaven's graces,
And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.
The summer's flower is to the summer sweet
Though to itself it only live and die;
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity:
For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds;
Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

XCV.
How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame,
Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose!
That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
Making lascivious comments on thy sport,
Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise:
Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
O, what a mansion have those vices got
Which for their habitation chose out thee!
Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot,
And all things turn to fair, that eyes can see!
Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
The hardest knife ill-used doth lose his edge.

XCVII.
Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
Some say thy grace is youth and gentle sport;
Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and less:
Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
As on the finger of a throned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem'd;
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated, and for true things deemed.
How many lambs might the stern wolf betry,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
SONNETS.

C.

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long
To speak of that which gives thee all thy might?
Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
Darkening thy power, to lend base subjects light?
Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
In gentle numbers time so idly spent;
Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem,
And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,
If Time have any wrinkle graven there;
If any, be a satire to decay,
And make Time's spoils despised everywhere.
Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life;
So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked knife.

CII.

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends
For thy neglect of truth in beauty dy'd?
Both truth and beauty on my love depends;
So dost thou too, and therein dignified.
Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not haply say,
'Truth needs no colour with his colour fix'd,
Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;
But best is best, if never intermix'd?—
Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?
Excuse not silence so; for it lies in thee
To make him much outlive a gilded tomb,
And to be prais'd of ages yet to be.
Then do thy office, Muse; I teach thee how
To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

CIII.

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming;
I love not less, though less the show appear;
That love is merchandiz'd whose rich esteeming
The owner's tongue doth publish everywhere.
Our love was new, and then but in the spring,
When I was wont to greet it with my lays;
As Philomel in summer's front doth sing,
And stops her pipe in growth of riper days:
Not that the summer is less pleasant now
Than when her mournful hymns did hush the night,
But that wild music burthens every bough,
And sweets grown common lose their dear delight.
Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my tongue,
Because I would not dull you with my song.

CIII.

Alack! what poverty my Muse brings forth,
That having such a scope to show her pride,
The argument, all bare, is of more worth,
Than when it hath my added praise beside.
O blame me not if I no more can write!
Look in your glass, and there appears a face
That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
Dulling my lines, and doing me disgrace.
Were it not sinful, then, striving to mend,
To mar the subject that before was well?
For to no other pass my verses tend,
Than of your graces and your gifts to tell;
And more, much more, than in my verse can sit,
Your own glass shows you, when you look in it.

CVI.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
For as you were when first your eye I eyed,
Such seems your beauty still. Three winters' cold
Have from the forests shook three summers!
Three beauteous springs to yellowautumn turn'd
In process of the seasons have I seen;
Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green.
Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand,
Steal from his figure, and no pace perceiv'd;
So your sweet line, which methinks still doth stand,
Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd.
For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred,
Ere you were born, was beauty's summer dead.

CV.

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
Nor my beloved as an idol show,
Since all alike my songs and praises be,
To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
Therefore my verse, to constancy confin'd,
One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
Fair, kind, and true, is all my argument,
Fair, kind, and true, varying to other words;
And in this change is my invention spent,
Three themes in one, which wondrous scope afford.

Fair, kind, and true, have often liv'd alone,
Which three, till now, never kept seat in one.

CVI.

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rhyme,
In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
Then in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
I see their antique pen would have express'd
Even such a beauty as you master now.

So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And, for they look'd but with divining eyes,
They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
For we, which now behold these present days,
Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

CVII.

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
Of the wide world dreaming on things to come,
Can yet the lease of my true love control,
Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom.
The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
And the sad augers mock their own presage;
Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd,
And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
Now with the drops of this most balmy time
My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes,
Since spite of him I'll live in this poor rhyme,
While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes.
And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIII.

What's in the brain that ink may character,
Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit?
What's new to speak, what new to register,
That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers divine,
I must each day say o'er the very same;
Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.
So that eternal love in love's fresh case
Weighs not the dust and injury of age,
Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
But makes antiquity for aye his page;
Finding the first conceit of love there bred,
Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX.

O, never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify!
As easy might I from myself depart,
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie:
That is my home of love; if I have rang'd,
Like him that travels, I return again;
Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd,—
So that myself bring water for my stain.
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.
cx.
Alas, 'tis true, I have gone here and there,
And made myself a motley to the view.
Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,
Made old offences of affections new.
Most true it is, that I have look'd on truth
Askance and strangely ; but, by all above,
These blanches gave my heart another youth,
And worst essays prov'd thee my best of love.
Now all is done, have what shall have no end:
Mine appetite I never more will grind
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A God in love, to whom I am confin'd.
Then give me welcome, next my heaven the best,
Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

cxI.
O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide,
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide,
Than public means, which public manners breeds.
Thence comes it that my name receives a brand,
And almost thence my nature is subdued
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand:
Pity me then, and wish I were renew'd;
Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
Potions of eyesell, 'gainst my strong infection;
No bitterness that I will bitter think,
Nor double penance, to correct correction.
Pity me then, dear friend, and assure ye,
Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

cxII.
Your love and pity doth the impression fill
Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow:
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'er green my bad, my good allow?
You are my all-the-world, and I must strive
To know my shames and praises from your tongue;
None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That mysteef'd sense or changes, right or wrong.
In so profound abyss I throw all care
Of other's voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense ;—
You are so strongly in my purpose bred,
That all the world besides methinks are dead.

cxIII.
Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind;
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function, and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;
For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth catch;
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part.
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rudest or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour, or deformed creature,
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow, or dove, it shapes them to your feature,
Incaponle of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue.

cxIV.
Or whether doth my mind being crown'd with you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery,
Or whether shall I say mine eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy,
To make of monsters and things indigest
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O, 'tis the first ; 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks it up:
Mine eye well knows what with his gust is grieving,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup:
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it, and doth first begin.

cxV.
Those lines that I before have writ, do lie:
Even those that said I could not love you dearer;
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
But reckoning time, whose million'd accidents
Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decrees of kings,
Tan sacred beauty, blunts the sharpest intents,
Divert strong minds to the course of altering things;
Alas! why, fearing of Time's tyranny,
Might I not then say, 'Now I love you best,'
When I was certain o'er uncertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?
Love is a babe; then might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

cxVI.
Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove:
O no; it is an ever fixed mark,
That looks on tempests, and is never shaken;
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come:
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error, and upon me prov'd,
I never writ, nor no man ever lov'd.

CXXVII.
Accuse me thus; that I have scented all
Wherein I should your great deserts repay;
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereeto all bonds do tie me day by day;
That I have frequent been with unknown minds,
And given to time your own dear-purchas'd
right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds Which should transport me farthest from your sight.
Book both my wilfulness and errors down,
And on just proof surmise accumulate,
Bring me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate:
Since my appeal says, I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love.

CXXVIII.
Like as, to make our appetites more keen,
With eager compounds we our palate urge;
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We sicken to shun sickness, when we purge;
Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,
To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding,
And, sick of welfare, found a kind of meateness
To be discus'd; and that there was true needing:
Thus policy in love, to anticipate
The ills that were not, grew to faults assured,
And brought to medicine a healthful state,
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cured.
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

CXXIX.
What potions have I drunk of Siren tears,
Distill'd from limbes foul as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes, and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted,
In the distraction of this madding fever!

O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better;
And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuk'd to my content,
And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

CXX.
That you were once unkind, befriends me now.
And for that sorrow, which I then did feel,
Needs must I under my transgression bow,
Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
As I by yours, you have pass'd a hell of time,
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
O that our night of woe might have remember'd
My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits,
And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd
The humble salve which wounded bosoms fit!
But that your trespass now becomes a fee;
Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

CXXI.
'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
When not to be receives reproach of being,
And the just pleasure lost, which is so deem'd
Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing,
For why should others' false adulterate eye
Give salutation to my sportive blood?
Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
Which in their wills count bad what I thin' good?
No.—I am that I am; and they that level
At my abuses, reckon up their own: [bevel;
I may be straight, though they themselves be
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown;
Unless this general evil they maintain,—
All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

CXXII.
Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
Full character'd with lasting memory
Which shall above that idle rank remain,
Beyond all date, even to eternity:
Or at the least so long as brain and heart
Have faculty by nature to subsist;
Till each to raz'd oblivion yield his part
Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd.
That poor retention could not so much hold,
Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score;
Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
To trust those tables that receive thee more:
To keep an adjunct to remember thee,
Were to import forgetfulness in me.
CXXIII.

No! Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change:
Thy pyramids built up with newer might
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
They are but dressings of a former sight.
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
What thou dost foist upon us that is old;
And rather make them born to our desire,
Than think that we before have heard them told.
Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present nor the past;
For thy records and what we see do lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste:
This I do vow, and this shall ever be,
I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee:

CXXIV.

If my dear love were but the child of state,
It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd,
As subject to Time's love, or to Time's hate,
Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gather'd.

No, it was builded far from accident;
It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
Under the blow of thrall'd discontent,
Where'to the inviting time our fashion calls:
It fears not policy, that heretic,
Which works on leases of short-number'd hours,
But all alone stands hugely politic,
That it nor grows with heat, nor drowns with To this I witness call the fools of time,
Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime.

CXXV.

Were it aught to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring,
Or laid great bases for eternity,
Which prove more short than waste or ruining?
Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour
Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent,
For compound sweet foregoing simple savour,
Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent?
No;—let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art,
But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true soul,
When most impeach'd, stands least in thy control.

CXXVI.

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power
Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle, hour:
Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st:
Thy lovers withering, as thy sweet self grow'st?
If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,
As thou goest onwards, still will pluck thee back,
She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
May time disgrace, and wretched minutes kill.
Yet fear her; O thou minion of her pleasure;
She may detain, but not still keep her treasure:
Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
And her quietus is to render thee.

CXXVII.

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;
But now is black beauty's successive heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame:
For since each hand hath put on nature's power,
Fairing the soul with art's false borrow'd face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy hour,
But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore my mistress' eyes are raven black,
Her eyes so suited: and they mourners seem
At such, who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Slander'ing creation with a false esteem:
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
That every tongue says, beauty should look so.

CXXVIII.

How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st,
Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently play'st
The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks, that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand,
Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,
At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand!
To be so tickled, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
Making dead wood more bless'd than living lips.
Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

CXXIX.

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action; and till action, lust
Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame,
Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust;
Enjoy'd no sooner, but despisèd straight:
Past reason hunted; and no sooner had,
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait;
On purpose laid to make the taker mad:
Mad in pursuit, and in possession so;
Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme;
A bliss in proof,—and prov'd, a very woe;
Before, a joy propos'd; behind, a dream:
All this the world well knows; yet none knows
well
To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red:
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;
If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.
I love to hear her speak,—yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound;
I grant I never saw a goddess go,—
My mistress when she walks, treads on the ground;
And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;
For well thou know'st to my dear doting heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel,
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,
Thy face hath not the power to make love groan:
To say they err, I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone,
And, to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck, do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.
In nothing art thou black, save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
I have put on black, and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
And truly not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east,
Nor that full star that ushers in the even
Doth half that glory to the sober west.
As those two mourning eyes become thy face:
O, let it then as well beseech thy heart
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,
And suit thy pity like in every part.

Then will I swear beauty herself is black,
And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan
For that deep wound it gives my friend
Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be?
Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou hast engrossed;
Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken.
A torment thrice three-fold thus to be cross'd.
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail;
Who e'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
Thou canst not then use rigour in my goal:
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

So now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will;
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous, and he is kind;
He learn'd but, surety-like, to write for me,
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou insurer, that putt'st forth all to use,
And sue a friend, came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.
Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me;
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy will,
And will to boot, and will in overplus;
More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus.
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine?
Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
And in abundance addeth to his store;
So thou, being rich in will, add to thy will
One will of mine, to make thy large will more.
Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill,
Think all but one, and me in that one wish.

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy all,
SONNETS.

And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there:
Thus far for love, my love-suit, sweet, fulfill.
Will will fulfill the treasure of thy love,
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one,
In things of great receipt with ease we prove;
Among a number one is reckon'd none.
Then in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy stores' account I one must be;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee;
Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
And then thou lov'st me,—for my name is CXXXVII.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes,
That they behold, and see not what they see? They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is, take the worst to be.
If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forg'd hooks,
Wherefore the judgment of my heart is tied?
Why should my heart think that a several plot,
Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?
Or mine eyes, seeing this, say this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
In things right true my heart and eyes have err'd,
And to this false plague are they now trans

CXXXVIII.

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies;
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unlearned in the world's false subtleties.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although she knows my days are past the best,
Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue;
On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd,
But wherefore says she not she is unjust?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O, love's best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told:
Therefore I lie with her, and she with me,
And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

CXXXIX.

O, call not me to justify the wrong
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue;
Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere; but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside.

What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy might
Is more than my o'erpress'd defence can 'bide?
Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been mine enemies;
And therefore from my face she turns my toes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries:
Yet do not so: but since I am near slain,
Kill me outright with looks, and rid my pain.

CXL.

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;
Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
(As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
No news but health from their physicians know.)
For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of thee:
Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
Mud slanderers by mad ears believed be.
That I may not be so, nor thou belied,
Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

CXL.

In faith I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
Who in despite of view is pleased to dote.
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted;
Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone,
Nor taste nor smell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits, nor my five senses can
Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee.
Who leaves unwav'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be;
Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin, awards me pain.

CXLII.

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving:
O, but with mine compare thou thine own state.
And thou shalt find it merits not reproving:
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments,
And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as mine;
Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee:
Root pity in thy heart, that, when it grows,
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
By self-example mayst thou be denied!

CXLIII.

Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch
One of her feather'd creatures broke away,
Sets down her babe, and makes all swift despatch
In pursuit of the thing she would have stay;
 Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not prizeing her poor infant's discontent;
So runn'st thou after that which flies from thee,
Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind;
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind:
So will I pray that thou mayst have thy Will,
If thou turn back, and my loud crying still.

CXLIV.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still;
The better angel is a man right fair,
The worser spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her soul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend,
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell;
But, being both from me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell.
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

CXLV.

Those lips that Love's own hand did make Breath'd forth the sound that said, 'I hate,'
To me that languish'd for her sake:
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue, that ever sweet
Was used in giving gentle doom;
And taught it thus anew to greet:
'I hate,' she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who like a fiend
From heaven to hell is flown away.
'I hate,' from hate away she threw,
And say'd my life, saying—'not you.'

CXLVI.

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth,
Fool'd by these rebel powers that thee array,

Why dost thou pine within, and suffer death,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dress;
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men,

And, Death once dead, there's no more dying

CXLVII.

My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer nurseth the disease;
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
The uncertain sickly appetite to please.
My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve Desire is death, which physic did except.
Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
And frantic mad with evermore unrest;
My thoughts and my discourse as mad men's are,
At random from the truth vainly expres'd:
For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXLVIII.

O me! what eyes hath love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true sight!
Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
That censureth falsely what they see aright?
If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
What means the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote
Love's eye is not so true as all men's: no,
How can it? O how can Love's eye be true,
That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?
No marvel then though I mistake my view;
The sun itself sees not till heaven clears.
O cunning Love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,
Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXLIX.

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
When I, against myself, with thee partake?
Do I not think on thee, when I forgot
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
SONNETS.

Nay if thou low'rst on me, do | I not spend
Revenge upon myself with present moan? |
What merit do I in myself respect, |
That is so proud thy service to despise, |
When all my best doth worship thy defect, |
Commanded by the motion of thine eyes? |
But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind; |
Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

CL.

O, from what power hast thou this powerful might, |
With insufficiency my heart to sway? |
To make me give the lie to my true sight, |
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day? |
Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill, |
That in the very refuse of thy deeds |
There is such strength and warrantise of skill, |
That in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds? |
Who taught thee how to make me love thee more, |
The more I hear and see just cause of hate? |
O, though I love what others do abhor, |
With others thou shouldst not abhor my state; |
If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me, |
More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

CLI.

Love is too young to know what conscience is: |
Yet who knows not, conscience is born of love? |
Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss, |
Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove. |
For thou betraying me, I do betray |
My nobler part to my gross body's treason; |
My soul doth tell my body that he may |
Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther reason; |
But, rising at thy name, doth point cut thee |
As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride, |
He is contented thy poor drudge to be, |
To stand in thy affairs, fail by thy side, |
No want of conscience hold it that I call |
Her—love, for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLII.

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn, |
But thou art twice forsworn; to me love swearing;

In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn, |
In vowing new hate after new love bearing. |
But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee, |
When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most; |
For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee, |
And all my honest faith in thee is lost: |
For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kind ness, |
Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy; |
And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness, |
Or made them swear against the thing they see; |
For I have sworn thee fair: more perjur'd I, |
To swear, against the truth, so foul a lie!

CLIII.

Cupid lay by his brand, and fell asleep: |
A maid of Dian's this advantage found, |
And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep |
In a cold valley-fountain of that ground; |
Which borrow'd from this holy fire of love |
A dateless lively heat, still to endure, |
And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove |
Against strange maladies a sovereign cure. |
But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fir'd, |
The boy for trial needs would touch my breast; |
I, sick withal, the help of bath desir'd, |
And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest, |
But found no cure: the bath for my help lies |
Where Cupid got new fire,—my mistress' eyes.

CLIV.

The little love-god, lying once asleep |
Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand, |
Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste life to keep |
Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand |
The fairest votary took up that fire |
Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd; |
And so the general of hot desire |
Was sleeping by a virgin hand disarm'd. |
This brand she quenched in a cool well by, |
Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual, |
Growing a bath and healthful remedy |
For men diseas'd; but I, my mistress' thrall, |
Came there for cure, and this by that I prove, |
Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.
A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

From off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
A plaintful story from a sistering vale,
My spirits to attend this double voice accorded,
And down I slid to list the sad-tun'd tale;
Ere long espied a sable maid full pale,
Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain,
Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortify'd her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw
The carcass of a beauty spent and done.
Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quitt; but, spite of Heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd
Oft did she heave her napkin to her eye,
Which ornament'd her conceited characters,
Laund'ring the silken figures in the brine
That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe,
In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage ride;
As they did battery to the spheres intend;
Sometimes diverted their poor balls are tied
To th' orb'd earth: sometimes they do extend
Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
To every place at once, and nowhere fix'd,
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose, nor tied in formal plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride;
For some, untuck'd, descended her sheav'd hat,
Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside;
Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
And, true to bondage, would not break from thence,
Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of bedded jet,
Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margin she was set;
Like usury, applying wet to wet,
Or monarch's hands, that let not bounty fall
We've want cries 'some,' but where excess begs all

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood;
Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
Found yet no letters sadly penn'd in blood,
With sleided silk feat and affectedly
Enswath'd, and seal'd to curious secrisy.

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often gave to tear;
Cried, 'O false blood, thou register of lies,
What unapprov'd witness dost thou bear!
Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here!'
This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle hight,
Sometimes a blusterer, that the ruffle knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swiftest hours, observed as they flew,
Towards this afflicted fancy hastily drew:
And, privilieg'd by age, desires to know
In brief, the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat,
And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be aught applied
Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
'Tis promis'd in the charity of age.

'Father,' she says, 'though in me you behold
The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let not your judgment I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as well have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself, and to no love beside.

'But woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit (it was to gain my grace)
Of one by nature's outwards so commend'd,
That maiden's eyes stuck over all his face:
Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place;
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was now loath'd and newly dif'ried.
A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

And his browny locks did hang in crooked curls;
And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurl.
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find:
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind;
For on his visage was in little drawn,
What largeness thinks in paradise was sawn.

Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
His phoenix dawn began but to appear,
Like unshorn velvet, on that tarmless skin,
Whose bare out-bragg'd the web it seem'd to wear;
Yet show'd his visage by that cost more dear;
And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best 'twere as it was, or best without.

His qualities were beauteous as his form,
For maiden-tongued he was, and thereof free;
Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, untruly though they
His rudeness so with his authoriz'd youth
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.

Well could he ride, and often men would say
That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
Proud of subjection, noble by the sway,
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he makes!
And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

But quickly on this side the verdict went;
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appertainings and to ornament,
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case:
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Can for additions; yet their purpos'd trim
Piec'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by him.

So on the tip of his subduing tongue
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laughers weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will;

That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old; and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunted:
Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have grant'd;
And dialogued for him what he would say,
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like fools that in the imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd;
And labouring in no pleasures to bestow them,
Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe them:

So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his heart.
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own fee-simple, (not in part)
What with his heart in youth, and youth inart,
Threw my affections in his charmed power,
Reserv'd the stalk, and gave him all my flower.

Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor being desired yielded;
Finding myself in honour so forbid,
With safest distance I mine honour shielded:
Experience for me many bulwarks builded
Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the foil
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

But ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destin'i'll she must herself assay?
Or force'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-pass'd perils in her way?
Counsel may stop a while what will not stay;
For when we rage, advice is often seen
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof,
To be forbid the sweets that seem so good,
For fear of harms that preach in our behoof.
O appetite, from judgment stand aloof!
The one a palate hath that needs will taste,
Though reason weep, and cry It is thy last.

For further I could say, This man's untrue,
And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew,
Saw how deceit's were gild'd in his smiling;
Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling;
Thought characters and words, merely but art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

And long upon these terms I held my city,
Till thus he g'an besiege me: Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid:
That's to you sworn, to none was ever said;
For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite, nor never vow.
A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

All my offences that abroad you see
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind;
Love made them not; with acture they may be,

Where neither party is nor true nor kind:
They sought their shame that so their shame did find;
And so much less of shame in me remains,
By how much of me their reproach contains.

Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
Not one whose flame my heart so much as warm'd,
On my affection put to the smallest teen,
Or any of my pleasures ever charm'd:
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harm'd;
Kept hearts in liverys, but mine own was free,
And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.

Look here what tributes wounded fancies sent me,
Of paled pearls, and rubies red as blood;
Figuring that they their passions likewise lent me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood
In bloodless white and the encrison'd mood;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

And lo! behold the talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously impleach'd,
I have receiv'd from many a several fair,
(Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd,) With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd,
And deep-brain'd sonnets that did amplify
Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

The diamond, why 'twas beautiful and hard,
Where'to his invis'd properties did tend;
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard
Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend;
The heaven-hued sapphire and the opal blend
With objects manifold; each several stone,
With wit well blazon'd, smil'd or made some moan.

Lo! all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensiv'd and subdued desires the tender,
Nature hath charg'd me that I heard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render,
That is, to you, my origin and ender:
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

O then advance of yours that phraseless hand,
Whose white bears down the airy scale of praise;

Take all these similes to your own command,
Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise;
What me your minister, for you obeys,
Works under you; and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums.

Lo! this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified of holiest note:
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote;
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

But O, my sweet, what labour is't to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not strives?
Paling the place which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves:
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle 'scapeth by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

O pardon me, in that my boast is true;
The accident which brought me to her eye,
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly:
Religious love put out religion's eye:
Not to be tempted, would she be immur'd,
And now, to tempt all, liberty procur'd.

How mighty then you are, O hear me tell: The broken bosoms that to me belong
I have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among:
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong,
Must for your victory as all congest,
As compound love to physic your cold breast.

My parts had power to charm a sacred sun,
Who, disciplin'd and dieted in grace,
Believ'd her eyes when they to assail begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place.
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

When thou impressest, what are precepts worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth,
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame!
Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense,
'gainst shame,
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aloe of all forces, shocks, and fears.
Now all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine,
And supplicant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you make ’gainst mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath,
That shall preter and undertake my troth.

This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were levell’d on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward flow’d apace:
O how the channel to the stream gave grace!
Who, glaz’d with crystal, gat the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue encloses.

O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear!
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here?
O cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extinc’ture hath!

For lo! his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolv’d my reason into tears;
There my white stole of chastity I daff’d,
Shook off my sober guards, and civil fears;
Appear to him, as he to me appears, [bore.
All melting; though our drops this difference
His poison’d me, and mine did him restore.

In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes or of weeping water,
Or swooning paleness; and he takes and leaves,
In either’s aptness, as it best decrees,
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white and swoon at tragic shows;

That not a heart which in his level came
Could scape the hail of his all-hurting aim,
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame;
And, veil’d in them, did win whom he would maim:
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim;
When he most burn’d in heart-wish’d luxury,
He preach’d pure maid, and prais’d cold chastity.

Thus merely with the garment of a Grace
The naked and concealed fiend he cover’d,
That the unexperienc’d gave the tempter place,
Which, like a cherubin, above them hover’d.
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover’d?
Ah me! I fell; and yet do question make
What I should do again for such a sake.

O, that infected moisture of his eye,
O, that false fire which in his cheek so glow’d,
O, that fore’d thunder from his heart did fly,
O, that sad breath his spongy lungs bestow’d,
O, all that borrow’d motion, seeming ow’d,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray’d,
And new pervert a reconciled maid?
THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM.

I.

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument,
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me.

My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is;
Then, thou fair sun, that on this earth doth shine,
Exhale this vapour vow: in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
To lose an oath, to win a paradise?

II.

Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green,
Did court the lad with many a lovely look,
Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.
She told him stories to delight his ear;
She show'd him favours to allure his eye;
To win his heart, she touch'd him here and there:
Touches so soft still conquer chastity.
But whether unripe years did want conceit,
Or he refused to take her figure's proffer,
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer:
Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward;
He rose and ran away; ah, fool too froward!

III.

If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
O never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd:
Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove;
Osiers bow'd.
Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes,
Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend.
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice;
Well learned is that tongue that well can thee
All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;

Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts
Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,

Which (not to anger bent) is music and sweet
Celestial as thou art, O do not love that wrong,
To sing the heavens' praise with such an earthly tongue.

IV.

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,
When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
A longing tarriance for Adonis made,
Under an osier growing by a brook,
A brook where Adon used to cool his spleen.
Hot was the day; she hotter that did look
For his approach, that often there had been Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim;
The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye,
Yet not so wistly as this queen on him:
He, spying her, bauce'd in, whereas he stood;
O Jove, quoth she, why was not I a flood?

V.

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle;
Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty:
A lily pale, with damask die to grace her,
None fairer, nor none falser to deface her.

Her lips to mine how often hath she join'd,
Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!

How many tales to please me hath she coin'd,
Dreading my love, the loss thereof still fearing!
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth,
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out burneth;

She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the
She bade love last, and yet she fell a turning.
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether?
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.
VI.

If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
Then must the love be great 'twixt thee and me,
Because thou lovest the one, and I the other.
Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense;
Spencer to me, whose deep conceit is such,
As, passing all conceit, needs no defence.
Thou lovest to hear the sweet melodious sound
That Phoebus' lute, the queen of music, makes;
And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd.
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.
One god is god of both, as poets feign;
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

VII.

Fair was the morn, when the fair queen of love,

Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adon's sake, a younger proud and wild;
Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill;
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds:
She, silly queen, with more than love's good will,
Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds;
Once, quoth she, did I see a fair youth
Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a boar,
Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth!
See in my thigh, quoth she, here was the sore:
She showed hers; he saw more wounds than one,
And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

VIII.

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon vaded,
Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alas! too timely shaded!
Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!
Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, through wind, before the fall should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why? thou left'st me nothing in thy will.
And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave;
For why? I craved nothing of thee still:
O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thee;
Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

IX.

Venus, with Adonis sitting by her,
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him:
She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,
And as he fell to her, she fell to him.
Even thus, quoth she, the warlike god embrac'd me;
And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms:
Even thus, quoth she, the warlike god unlace'd me;
As if the boy should use like loving charms.
Even thus, quoth she, he seized on my lips,
And with her lips on his did act the seizure;
And as she fetched breath, away he skips,
And would not take her meaning nor her pleasure.
Ah! that I had my lady at this lay,
To kiss and clip me till I run away!

X.

Crabbed age and youth
Cannot live together;
Youth is full of pleasance,
Age is full of care;
Youth like summer morn,
Age like winter weather;
Youth like summer brave,
Age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport,
Age's breath is short,
Youth is nimble, age is lame:
Youth is hot and bold,
Age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame.
Age, I do abhor thee,
Youth, I do adore thee;
O, my love, my love is young!
Age, I do defy thee;
O sweet shepherd, hie thee,
For methinks thou stay'st too long.

XI.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good,
A shining glose, that vaded suddenly;
A flower that dies, when first it gins to bud;
A brittle glass, that's broken presently;
A doubtful good, a glose, a glass, a flower,
Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.

And as goods lost are sold or never found,
As vaded gloss no rubbing will refresh,
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress,
So beauty, blemish'd once, for ever's lost.
In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost.
Good night, good rest  Ah! neither be my share:
She bade good night, that kept my rest away;
And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descant on the doubts of my decay.
Farewell, quoth she, and come again to-morrow;
Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow.

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
In scorn or friendship, nil I construe whether:
'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
'T may be, again to make me wander thither:
Wander, a word for shadows like myself,
As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east!
My heart doth charge the watch; the morning rise

XII.

Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest.
Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,
While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark;
And wish her lays were tuned like the lark;

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,
And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night:
The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty;
I heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight;
Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow;
For why? she sigh'd, and bade me come to-morrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon;
But now are minutes added to the hours;
To spite me now, each minute seems a moon;
Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!
Pack night, peep day; good day, of night now borrow;

XIII.

Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight;

Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow;
For why? she sigh'd, and bade me come to-morrow.

SONNETS TO SUNDRY NOTES OF MUSIC.

I.

It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three,
That liked of her master as well as well might Till looking on an Englishman, the fairest that eye could see,
Her fancy fell a turning.
Long was the combat doubtful, that love with love did fight,
To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant
To put in practice either, alas it was a spite Unto the silly damsel.

But one must be refused, more mickle was the
That nothing could be used, to turn them both to gain,
For of the two the trusty knight was wounded
Alas, she could not help it!
Thus art, with arms contending, was victor of
Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away;
Then lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay;
For now my song is ended.

II.

On a day (alack the day!),
Love, whose month was ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alas, my hand hath sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack, for youth unmeet,
Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet,
Thou for whom Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiop were:
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.

Love is dying,
Faith's defying,
Heart's denying,
Causer of this.
All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
All my lady's love is lost, God wot:
Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love
There a ray is plac'd without remove.
One silly cross
Wrought all my loss:
O frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame
For now I see,
Inconstancy
More in women than in men remain.

In black mourn I,
All fears scorn I,
Love hath forlorn me,
Living in thrall;
Heart is bleeding,
All help needing,
(O cruel speeding!)
Fraughted with gall.
My shepherd's pipe can sound no deat,
My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
My curtail dog, that wont to have play'd,
Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
With sighs so deep,
Procures to weep,
In howling-wise, to see my doleful plight.
How sighs resound
Through heartless ground,
Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody

Clear wells spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not
Forth; they die:
Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully.
All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled,
All our love is lost, for Love is dead.
Farewell, sweet lass,
Thy like ne'er was
For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan.
Poor Coridon
Must live alone,
Other help for him I see that there is none.

IV.
Whenas thine eye hath chose the dame,
And stall'd the deer that thou shoulds't strike,
Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as fancy, partial might:
Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young, nor yet unwed.

And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with idle talk,
Lest she some subtle practice smell;
(A cripple soon can find a halt:)
But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
And set her person forth to sell.

What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will calm ere night;
And then too late she will repent,
That thus dissembled her delight;
And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and brawl, and say thee nay,
Her feeble force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say:
'Had women been so strong as men,
In faith you had not had it then.'

And to her will frame all thy ways;
Spare not to spend,—and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ringing in thy lady's ear:
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble, true;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Press never thou to choose anew:
When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee back.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know.
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought?

Think women still to strive with men,
To sin, and never for to saint:

There is no heaven, by holy then,
When time with age shall them attain.
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

But soft; enough,—too much I fear,
Lest that my mistress hear my song;
She 'll not stick to round me i' th' ear,
To teach my tongue to be so long:
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

V.
Live with me, and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
And all the craggy mountains yields.

There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks,
By shallow rivers, by whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.

There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies,
A cap of flowers and a kirtle
Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.

A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs:
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then live with me, and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER.
If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move
To live with thee and be thy love.

VI.
As it fell upon a day,
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap, and birds did sing,
Trees did grow, and plants did spring:
Everything did banish moan,
Save the nightingale alone:
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Lean'd her breast up till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefull'st Citty
That to hear it was great pity:
Fie, fie, fie, now would she cry,
Teru, Teru, by and by:
That to hear her so complain,
Scarce I could from tears refrain;
For her griefs so lively shown,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
They have him at commandment;
None will supply thy want.

Bountiful they will call:
But if store of crowns be scant,
If thou sorrow, he will weep;
Use his company no more.

None take pity on thy pain;
None will pity thy pain;
If thou wakè, he cannot sleep:
If thou wakè, he cannot sleep:

And with such-like flattering
As fickle fortune smièd,
Whist as fickle fortune smièd,
If he be addicte to vice,
Thus of every grief in heart
He will help thee in thy need;
If he be addicte to vice,
If he be addicte to vice,
Faithful friend from flattering,
He will help thee in thy need;
Thou and I were both begiin'd.

None alive will pity me.
They that fawnd on him before,
He that is thy friend indeed;
Use his company no more.

But thou, that was thine own.
All thy fellow birds do sing,
King Pandion, he is dead;
Quickly him they will entice;

Of thy sorrowing.
Careless of thy sorrowing.
Thou mourn'st in vain;
Bountiful they will call:
None will pity thy pain;

All thy friends are lap'd in lead;
All thy friends are lap'd in lead;
Pity but he were a king.
And with such-like flattering

Senseless trees, they cannot hear thee;
Till fortune once do frown.
And with such-like flattering
If he be addicted to vice,
He that is thy friend indeed;

Every one that flatters thee
Careless of thy sorrowing.
Every one that flatters thee
He will help thee in thy need;
These are certain signs to know
Wordes are easy like the wind;
These are certain signs to know
Faithful friend from flattering,
If he be addicte to vice,

Crown of fortune fall'd on him;
These are certain signs to know
If those trees they cannot hear thee;

Careless of thy sorrowing.
Careless of thy sorrowing.

Even so, poor bird, like thee,
Even so, poor bird, like thee,

If he be addicted to vice,
He that is thy friend indeed;

He that is thy friend indeed;
Use his company no more.

He that is thy friend indeed;
Use his company no more.

These of every grief in heart
He with thee doth bear a part.

Thus of every grief in heart
He with thee doth bear a part.

This of every grief in heart
He with thee doth bear a part.

For her griefs so lively shown,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will call:
None will supply thy want.

Bountiful they will call:
But if store of crowns be scant,
If thou sorrow, he will weep;
Use his company no more.

THE PHŒNIX AND THE TURTLE.

Let the bird of loudest lay,
On the sole Arabian tree,
Herald sad and trumpet be,
To whose sound chaste wings obey.

But thou, shrieking harbinger,
Foul pre-currer of the fiend,
Augur of the fever's end,
To this troop come thou not near.

From this session interdict
Every fowl of tyrant wing,
Save the eagle, feather'd king:
Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou, treble-dated crow,
That thy sable gender mak'st
With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st,
'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence:
Love and constancy is dead;
Phœnix and the turtle fled
In a mutual flame from hence.

So they lov'd, as love in twain
Had the essence but in one;
Two distincts, division none:
Number there in love was slain.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder;
Distance, and no space was seen
'Twixt the turtle and his queen;
But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine,
That the turtle saw his right

Flaming in the phœnix' sight:
Either was the other's mine.

Property was thus appall'd,
That the self was not the same;
Single nature's double name
Neither two nor one was call'd.

Reason, in itself confounded,
Saw division grow together;
To themselves yet either-neither,
Simple were so well compounded.

That it cried how true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one!
Love hath reason, reason none
If what parts can so remain.

Whereupon it made this threne
To the phœnix and the dove,
Co-supremes and stars of love;
As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOS.

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,
Here enclos'd in cinders lie.

Death is now the phœnix nest:
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest,

Leaving no posterity:—
'Twas not their infirmity.
It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be:
Beauty brag, but 'tis not she;
Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair:
For these dead birds sigh a prayer.
